The Printer to the Reader.

HEre preſent vnto thy viewe, Chriſtian reader, thoſe bookes compiled into one ſumme, which this worthy man of God, firſt deliuered by word of mouth vnto his Auditors, afterward publiſhed by hand-writing vnto all, willing to profite both by tongue and pen, both at home and abroade, both aliue and dead, endeauouring as S. Paul ſpeaketh, to become all vnto all, that he might gaine ſome vnto Chriſt. Other writings there are of his beſides theſe, vnſeen as yet by the eyes of the world, which ſo ſoone as they ſhall come vnto my hands, I purpoſe not to wrappe vp in a napkin, and bury them within the walls of mine owne houſe: but ſet them like a candle vpon the table, or rather as a beacon on a hill to direct ignorant paſſengers to their heauenly country. I know nothing can bee ſo well meant or ſincerely purpoſed, but that the malicious conſtruction of ſome (like infected eyes that infect colours) will be ready to poiſon it and to peruert it: yet if euer any other worke ſet forth by any other man was of force to purchaſe the loue of ſuch as are forward, or to deſerue the entertainement and free paſſport of the indifferent, or if euer any was mighty enough to ſhake off the cenſures and ſnarlings of the humerous as the great Apoſtle did the viper from his hand, I ſuppoſe (without any offence let it be ſpoken) this worthy man, is no whit inferiour vnto them. But ſome perhaps will rather expect the printing of thoſe workes yet vnpubliſhed, which I mentioned before, then ſet vpon this as but a Moitie of the whole. Let them vnderſtand that the printing of thoſe (when it ſhall pleaſe God to giue leaue that they be printed) ſhal be nothing preiudicial to the entireneſſe and abſolutneſſe of this worke. For each of them I determine ſhall be printed by themſelues nothing euer hereafter added to this, which is growne alreadie greater then I looked for. Thus in ſhort, deſirous to fulfill the deſire of that bleſſed ſpirit, who nowe raigneth in bliſſe with the holy ſpirits & Saints of God, deſirous alſo to further thy vertuous endeauours whoſoeuer thou art courteous Reader, that willingly delighteſt herein, by publiſhing theſe his works, which long Exemplified by his life, he hath now ſealed with his death, to the end that euen the children yet vnborne, may reape the fruit & benefit of him vnknowne, I committe thee to the protection of the Almightie.

To the Christian Reader.

CHristian Reader, there are at this day foure seuerall opinions of the order of Gods predestination. The first is of the olde and new Pelagians; who place the causes of Gods predestination in man; in that they hold, that God did ordaine men either to life or death, according as he did foresee, that they would by their naturall free-will, either reiect or receiue grace offered. The second of them, who (of some) are tearmed Lutherans; which teach, that God foreseeing, how all mankinde beeing shutte vp vnder vnbeleefe, would therefore reiect grace offered, did hereupon, purpose to choose some to saluation of his meere mercie, without any respect of their faith or good workes, and the rest to reiect, being moued to do this, because he did eternally foresee that they would reiect his grace offered them in the Gospell. The third Semipelagian Papists, which ascribe Gods predestination, partly to mercie, and partly to mens foreseene preparations & meritorious workes. The fourth, of such as teach, that the cause of the execution of Gods predestination, is his mercy in Christ, in them which are saued; and in them which perish, the fall and corruption of man: yet so, as that the decree and eternall counsell of God, concerning them both, hath not any cause beside his will and pleasure. Of these foure opinions, the three former I labour to oppugne, as erronious, and to maintaine the last, as being trueth, which will beare waight in the ballance of the Sanctuarie.

A further discourse wherof, here I make bold to offer to thy godly consideration: in reading whereof, regard not so much the thing it selfe, penned very slenderly, as mine intent and affection: who desire among the rest, to cast my mite into the treasurie of the Church of England, and for want of gold, pearle, and pretious stone to bring a Rammes skinne or twaine, and a little Goates haire, to the building of the Lords tabernacle. Exod. 35. 23.

The father of our Lord Iesus Christ grant, that according to the riches of his glorie, thou maiest be strengthened by his spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in thy heart by faith; to the end that thou being rooted and grounded in loue, maiest be able to comprehend with all Saints, what is the breadth, and length, and height thereof; and to know the loue of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that thou maiest be filled with all fulnesse of God. Amen. Farewell. Iulie 23. the yeare of the last patience of Saints. 1592.

CHAP. I

Of the bodie of Scripture and Theologie.

The body of Scripture is a doctrine ſufficient to liue well.

It comprehendeth many holy ſciences, whereof one is principall, others are handmaids or retainers.

The principall ſcience is Theologie.

Theologie, is the ſcience of liuing bleſſedly for euer. Bleſſed life conſiſteth in the knowledge of God. Iohn. 17.3. This is life eternall, that they know thee to bee the onely very God, and whom thou haſt ſent Chriſt Ieſus. Iſa. 53. 11. By his knowledge ſhall my righteous ſeruant (viz. Chriſt) iuſtifie many. And therefore it conſiſteth likewiſe in the knowledge of our ſelues, becauſe wee know God by looking into our ſelues.

Theologie hath two partes: the firſt of God, the ſecond of his workes.

CHAP. II.

Of God, and the nature of God.

THat there is a God, it is euident: 1. by the courſe of nature: 2. by the nature of the ſoule of man: 3. by the diſtinction of things honeſt and diſhoneſt: 4. by the terrour of conſcience: 5. by the regiment of ciuill ſocieties: 6. the order of all cauſes hauing euer recourſe to ſome former beginning: 7. the determination of all thinges to their ſeuerall endes: 8. the conſent of all men well in their wits.

God is Iehouah Elohim. Exodus. 6. 2. And Elohim ſpake vnto Moſes, and ſaid vnto him, I am Iehouah: and I appeared vnto Abraham, to Iſaac, and to Iacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name Iehouah was I not knowne vnto them. Exod. 3. 13. If they ſay vnto me, What is his name? What ſhall I ſay vnto them? And God anſwered Moſes, I am that I am: Alſo he ſaid, Thus ſhalt thou ſay vnto the children of Iſarell, I am hath ſent mee vnto you. And God ſpake further to Moſes, Thus ſhalt thou ſay vnto the children of Iſrael, Iehouah Elohim. &c. hath ſent me vnto you. In theſe words, the firſt title of God, declareth his Nature, the ſecond his Perſons.

The nature of God, is his moſt liuely & moſt perfect eſſence.

The perfection of the nature of God, is his abſolute conſtitution, by the which he is wholly complete within him ſelfe. Exod. 3. 13. I am that I am Act. 17. 24. God that made the world, and all things that are therein, ſeeing that he is the Lord of heauen and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands, neither is worſhipped with mens hands, as though he needed any thing, ſeeing he giueth to all life and breath and all things.

The perfection of his Nature, is either Simplenes, or the Infinitenes thereof.

The Simpleneſſe of his nature, is that by which he is void of all Logicall relation. He hath not in him, ſubiect or adiunct. Iohn. 5. 26. As the father hath life in himſelfe, ſo hath he giuen to the Sonne to haue life in himſelfe: conferred with Iohn. 14. 6, I am the way, the truth, and the life. 1 Iohn. 1. 7. But if wee walke in his light, as he is light: conferred with v. 5. God is light, and in him is no darkeneſſe. Hence it is manifeſt, that to haue Life, and to be Life: to be in Light, and to be Light, in God are all one. Neither is God ſubiect to generality, or ſpecialty: whole, or parts: matter, or that which is made of matter: for ſo there ſhould bee in God diuers thinges, and one more perfect then an other. Therefore, whatſoeuer is in God, is his eſſence, and all that he is, he is by eſſence. The ſaying of Auguſtine in his 6. booke and 4. chap. of the Trinity, is fit to proue this: In God (ſaith he) to be, and to be iuſt, or mighty, are all one: but in the mind of man, it is not all one to be, and to be mighty, or iuſt: for the minde may bee deſtitute of theſe vertues, and yet a minde.

Hence it is manifeſt, that the nature of God is immutable and Spirituall.

Gods immutabilitie of nature, is that by which he is voide of all compoſition, diuiſion, and change. Iam. 1. 17. With God there is no variableneſſe nor ſhadowe of changing. Mal. 3. 6. I am the Lord and am not changed. Where it is ſaid, that God repenteth, &c. Gen. 6. 6. the meaning is, that God chaungeth the action, as men doe that repent, therefore repentance, it ſignifieth not any mutation in God, but in his actions, and ſuch things as are made and changed by him.

Gods Nature, is ſpirituall in that it is incorporall, and therefore inuiſible, Iohn. 4. 24. God is a ſpirit. 2. Cor. 3. 17. The Lord is the ſpirit. 1. Tim. 1. 17. To the King eternall, immortall, inuiſible, onely wiſe God, be glory and honour for euer and euer. Col. 1. 15. Who is the image of the inuiſible God.

The infinitenes of God, is two folde: his Eternity, and exceeding greatnes.

Gods eternity, is that by which he is without beginning and ending. Pſal 90. 2. Before the mountaines were made, and before thou hadſt formed the earth and the round world, euen from euerlaſting to euerlaſting, thou art our God. Reuel. 1. 8. I am Alpha and Omega, that is, the beginning and ending, ſaith the Lord: Which is, Which was, and Which is to come.

Gods exceeding greatneſſe, is that by which his incomprehenſible nature is euery where preſent, both within and without the world. Pſal. 145. 3. Great is the Lord, and worthy to be prayſed, and his greatneſſe is incomprehenſible. 1. King. 8. 27. Is it true indeede that God will dwell on the earth? behold the heauens, and the heauens of heauens are not able to containe thee: how much leſſe is this houſe that I haue built? Ier. 23. 24. Doe not I fill the heauen and earth, ſaith the Lord? Hence it is plaine.

Firſt, that he is onely one, and that indiuiſible, not many. Eph. 4. 5. One Lord, one faith, one baptiſme, one God and father of all. Deut. 4. 35. Vnto thee it was ſhewed, that thou mighteſt know that the Lord he is God, & that there is none but he alone: 1. Cor. 8. 4. We know that an idoll is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one. And there can be but one thing infinite in nature.

Secondly, that God is the knower of the heart. For nothing is hidden from that nature, which is within all things, and without all things, which is included in nothing, nor excluded from any thing. Becauſe 1. King. 8. 39. The Lord ſearcheth all hearts, and vnderſtandeth euery worke of the minde. Pſal. 139. 1. 2. Thou knoweſt my ſitting downe, and my riſing vp, thou vnderſtandeſt my cogitation afarre off.

CHAP. III.

Of the life of God.

HItherto we haue ſpoken of the perfection of Gods nature. Now followeth the life of GOD, by which the Diuine Nature is in perpetuall action, liuing, and moouing in it ſelfe. Pſal. 42. 2. My ſoule thirſteth for God, euen for the liuing God, whē ſhall I come and appeare before the preſence of God? Heb. 3. 12. See there be not at any time in any of you an euill heart to depart from the liuing God.

The diuine Nature, is eſpecially in perpetuall operation by three attributes, the which doe manifeſt the operation of God towards his creatures. Theſe are his Wiſdome, Will, and Omnipotencie.

The wiſdome or knowledge of God, is that by the which God doth not by certaine notions abſtracted from the thinges themſelues, but by his owne eſſence, not ſucceſſiuely and by diſcourſe of reaſon, but by one eternall and immutable acte of vnderſtanding, diſtinctly & perfectly know himſelfe, and all other things, though infinit, whether they haue beene or not. Mat. 11. 27. Now man knoweth the ſonne but the father, nor the father but the ſonne, and hee to whom the ſonne will reueale him. Heb. 4. 13. There is nothing created, which is not manifeſt in his ſight: but all things are naked and open to his eies, with whome we haue to doe. Pſal. 147. 5. His wiſdome is infinite.

Gods wiſdom hath theſe parts: his foreknowledge, and his councell.

The foreknowledge of God, is that by which hee moſt aſſuredly foreſeeth all things that are to come. Act. 2. 23. Him haue ye taken by the hands of the wicked, beeing deliuered by the determinate counſell and foreknowledge of God, and haue crucified and ſlaine. Rom. 8. Thoſe things which hee knewe before, he alſo predeſtinated to be made like to the image of his ſonne. This is not properly ſpoken of God, but by reaſon of men, to whom things are paſt or to come.

The councel of God, is that by the which hee doth moſt ſtraightly perceiue the beſt reaſon of all things that are. Prou. 8. 14. I haue counſell and wiſdome, I am vnderſtanding, and I haue ſtrength.

The will of God, is that by the which he both moſt freely and iuſtly with one acte willeth all things. Rom. 9. 18. He hath mercie on whom he will, and whom hee will hee hardeneth. Eph. 1. 5. Who hath predeſtinate vs to be adopted through Ieſus Chriſt vnto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will. Iam. 4. 15. For that which you ſhould ſay, If the Lord will, and we liue, we will doe this or that.

God willeth that wich is good, by approouing prooving it, that which is euill, in as much as it is euill, by diſallowing and forſaking it. And yet hee voluntarily doth permite euill: becauſe it is good that there ſhould be euill. Act. 14. 16. Who in time paſt ſuffered all the Gentiles to walke in their own waies. Pſal. 81. 12. So I gaue them vp to the hardneſſe of their heart, & they haue walked in their owne counſels.

The will of God, by reaſon of diuers obiects, hath diuers Names, and is either called Loue and Hatred, or Grace and Iuſtice.

The Loue of God is that, by the which God approoueth firſt himſelfe and then all his creatures, without their deſert, and in them doth take delight. 1 Ioh. 4. 16. God is loue, and who ſo remaineth in loue, remaineth in God, and God in him Ioh 3. 16. So God loued the world, that hee gaue his onely begotten ſonne, &c. Rom 5. 8. God ſetteth out his loue towards vs, ſeeing that while wee were yet ſinners, Chriſt died for vs,

The Hatred of God, is that by the which he diſliketh and deteſteth his creature offending, for his fault. 1. Cor. 10. 5. But many of them the Lord miſliked, for they periſhed in the wilderneſſe. Pſal. 5. 5. Thou hateſt all the workers of iniquitie. Pſal. 44. 8. Thou haſt loued iuſtice and hated iniquitie.

The Grace of God, is that by which hee freely declareth his fauour to his creatures. Rom. 11. 6. If it be of grace, it is no more of workes: otherwiſe grace is not grace, but if it be of workes, it is no more grace. Tit 2. 11. The ſauing grace of God ſhined to all men, teaching vs to denie impietie, &c.

The Grace of God, is either his goodnes, or his mercie.

The Goodneſſe of God, is that by which hee beeing in himſelfe abſolutely good, doeth freely exerciſe his liberalitie vpon his creatures. Math. 19. 17. Why calleſt thou mee good? there is none good but one, euen God. Math. 5. 45. He maketh his ſunne to ſhine vpon the good and bad, and he raineth vpon the iuſt and vniuſt.

Gods mercie, is that by which hee freely aſſiſteth all his creatures in their miſeries. Eſai. 30. 18. Yet will the Lord waite, that hee may haue mercy vpon you. Lament. 3. 22. It is the Lords mercies that wee are not conſumed becauſe his compaſſions faile not. Exod. 33. 19. I take pittie on whom I take pittie, and am mercifull on whom I am mercifull.

Gods Iuſtice, is that by which hee in all things willeth that which is iuſt. Pſal. 10. The iuſt Lord loueth iuſtice. Pſalm. 5. 4. For thou art not a God that loueth wickedneſſe.

Gods iuſtice is inword or deed.

Iuſtice in worde, is that trueth by which he conſtantly, & indeed willeth that which he hath ſaid. Rom. 3. 4. Let God be true, and euery man a liar. Math. 24. 15. Heauen and earth ſhall paſſe away, but my word ſhall not paſſe away. Hence it is, that God is iuſt in keeping his promiſe. 1. Ioh. 1. 9. If wee confeſſe our ſinnes, God is faithfull and iuſt to forgiue our ſinnes. 2. Tim 4. 8. Henceforth is laid vp for mee the crowne of righteouſneſſe, which the Lord the righteous Iudge ſhall giue mee at that day.

Iuſtice indeed, is that by which hee either diſpoſeth or rewardeth.

Gods diſpoſing iuſtice, is that by which hee, as a moſt free Lord ordereth rightly all things in his actions. Pſal. 145. 17. The Lord is righteous in all his waies.

Gods rewarding iuſtice, is that by which he rendreth to his creature according to his worke. 2. Theſſ. 1. 6. It is iuſtice with God, to render affliction to ſuch as afflict you, but to you which are afflicted, releaſing with vs, 1. Pet. 1. 17. Therefore if you call him Father, which without reſpect of perſon iudgeth according to euery worke, paſſe the time of your dwelling here in feare. Ierem. 51. 56. The Lord that recompenſeth ſhall ſurely recompence.

The Iuſtice of God is either his Gentleneſſe or Anger.

Gods Gentleneſſe, is that by which hee freely beſtoweth vpon his creature a reward. 2. Theſſ. 1. 5. Which is a token of the righteous iudgement of God, that yee may bee counted worthy the kingdome of God, for the which ye alſo ſuffer. Math. 10. 41. 42. He that receiueth a prophet in the name of a prophet, ſhall haue a prophets reward: and hee that receiueth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, ſhall haue the reward of a righteous man. And whoſoeuer ſhall giue vnto one of theſe little ones to drinke a cup of cold water onely in the name of a Diſciple, verely I ſay vnto you, he ſhall not looſe his reward.

Gods Anger, is that by which hee puniſheth the tranſgreſſion of his creature. Rom. 1. 18. For the wrath of God is reuealed from heauen againſt all vngodlineſſe, and vnrighteouſneſſe of men, which withhold the truth in vnrighteouſneſſe. Ioh. 3. 36. He that obeyeth not the ſonne, ſhall not ſee life, but the wrath of of God abideth on him.

Thus much concerning the will of GOD. Now followeth his omnipotency.

Gods omnipotencie, is that by which he is most able to performe euery worke. Math. 19.29. With men this is impossible, with God all things are possible.

Some things notwithstanding are here to bee excepted. First, those things whose action argueth an impotencie, as to lie, to denie his word. Titus, 1.2. Which God, that cannot lie, hath promised. 2. Tim. 2.13. He cannot denie himselfe. Secondly, such thinges as are contrarie to the nature of God, as to destroy himselfe, & not to beget his sonne from eternitie. Thirdly, such things as imploy contradiction. For God cannot make a trueth false, or that which is, when it is not to be.

Gods power, may be distinguished into an absolute and actuall power.

Gods absolute power, is that by which he can doe more, then hee either doth, or will doe Math. 3.9. I say vnto you, God is able of these stones to raise vp children to Abraham. Philip. 3.21. According to the working, whereby hee is able to subdue euen all thinges vnto himselfe.

Gods actuall power, is that by which hee causeth all things to bee, which hee freely will. Psal. 135.6. All things which God will, those he doth in heauen and in earth, and in all depths.

CHAP. IV.

Of Gods glorie, and blessednes.

OVt of the former attributes, by which the true Iehouah is distinguished from a fained God, and from idols, arise the glorie of God, and his blessednes.

Gods glorie or maiestie, is the infinite excellencie of his most simple and most holy divine Nature. Hebr. 1.3. Who beeing the brightnesse of his glorie, & the ingraued forme of his person, &c. Dan. 3. Thou art onely God, and glorious vpon the earth.

By this we see, that God onely can know himself perfectly. Ioh. 6.46. Not that any man hath seene the Father, saue he which is of God, he hath seene the Father. 1. Tim. 6.16. Who onely hath immortalitie, and dwelleth in the light, that none can attaine vnto, whome neuer man saw, neither can see. Exod. 33.18. Thou canst not see my face.

Notwithstanding there is a certaine manifestation of Gods glorie: partly more obscure, partly more apparant.

The more obscure manifestation, is the vision of Gods maiestie in this life by the eyes of the minde, through the helpe of things perceiued by the outward senses. Isai. 6.1. I saw the Lord sitting vpon an high throwne, and lifted vp, and the lower parts thereof filled the temple. Exod. 33.22. And while my glorie passeth by, I will put thee in a cleft of the rocke, and will couer thee with my hand whiles I passe by: after I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my backe parts, but my face shal not be seene. 1. Cor. 13.12. Now we see through a glasse darkely.

The more apparant manifestation of God, is the contemplation of him in heauen face to face. 1. Cor. 13.12. But then shall wee see face to face. Dan. 7.9.10. I beheld till the thrones were set vp, and the ancient of daies did sit, whose garment was white as snow, &c. Math. 19.16.

Gods blessednes, is that by which God is in himselfe, and of himselfe all sufficient. Gen. 17.1. I am God all-sufficient, walke before me, and be thou vpright. Col. 2.2.9. For in him dwelleth all the fulnesse of the god-head bodily. 1. Tim. 5.6. Which in due time he shall shew, that is blessed and Prince onely.

CHAP. V.

Concerning the persons of the Godhead.

THe persons are they, which subsisting in one Godhead, are distinguished by incommunicable properties. 1. Ioh. 5.7. There are three that beare record in heauen, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost, and these three are one. Gen. 19.24. Then Iehouah raigned vpon Sodom and vpon Gomorrah, brimstone, and fire from Iehouah in heauen. Ioh. 1.1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and that Word was God.

They therefore are coequall, and are distinguished not by degree, but by order.

The Constitution of a person is, when as a personall propriety, or the proper manner of substing is adioyned to the Dietie, or one divine nature.

Distinction of persons, is that, which albeit euery person is one and the same perfect God, yet the Father is not the Sonne or the holy Ghost, but the Father alone; and the holy Ghost is not the Father or the Sonne, but the holy Ghost alone: neither can they be deuided, by reason of the infinitenes of their most simple essence, which is all one in number, and the same in the Father, the same in the Sonne, and the same in the holy Ghost: so that in these there is diuersitie of persons,

but vnitie in eſſence.

The communion of the perſons, or rather vnion, is that by which each one is in the reſt, and with the reſt, by reaſon of the vnitie of the Godhead: and therefore euery each one doth poſſeſſe, loue, and glorifie another, and worke the ſame thing. Ioh. 14.10. Beleeueſt thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father is in me? the words that I ſpeake vnto you, I ſpeake not of my ſelfe, but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the works. Prov. 8.22. The Lord hath poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way: I was before the works of old. And, verſ. 20. Then was I with him as a nourisher, and I was daily his delight, reioycing alway before him. Ioh. 1.1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and that Word was God, and chap. 5.19. The Sonne can doe nothing of himſelfe, ſaue that he ſeeth the father doe: for whatſoeuer things he doth, the ſame doth the Sonne alſo.

There be three perſons: the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, Math. 3.16, 17. And Ieſus when he was baptized, came ſtraight out of the water, and lo, the heauens were opened vnto him, and I ſhon ſaw the Spirit of God deſcending like a doue, and lighting vpon him: and loe, a voyce came from heauen, ſaying, This is my beloued Sonne, in whom I am well pleaſed.

The Father, is a perſon without beginning, who from al eternitie begate the Son, Heb. 1.3. Who beeing the brightnes of the glorie, and the ingraued forme of his perſon. Pſal. 2.7. Thou art my Sonne, this day haue I begotten thee

In the generation of the Sonne, theſe properties muſt be noted: I. He that begetteth, and he that is begotten are togither, and not one before an other in time. II. Hee that begetteth doth communicate with him that is begotten, not ſome one part, but his whole eſſence. III. The Father begot the Sonne not out of himſelfe, but within himſelfe.

The incommunicable property of the Father, is to be vnbegotten, to bee a Father and to beget. He is the beginning of actions, becauſe he beginneth euery action of himſelfe, effecting it by the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt. 1. Cor. 8. 6. Yet vnto vs, there is but one God, which is the Father of whom are all things and we in him, and one Lord Ieſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and wee by him. Rom. 11. 36. For of him, and through him, and for him, are all things.

The other two perſons haue the Godhead, or the whole diuine eſſence, of the Father by cõmunication, namely, the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt.

The Sonne is the ſecond perſon, begotten of the Father from all eternitie. Hebr. 1.5. For vnto which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my Sonne, this day begate I thee? Coloſſ. 1.15. Who is the image of the inviſible GOD, the firſt borne of euery creature. Iohn. 1.14. And we ſaw the glory thereof as the glory of the onely begotten ſonne of the father. Rom. 8.32. Hee who ſpared not his owne ſonne.

For this cauſe hee is ſaid to be ſent from the Father. Iohn. 8.42. I proceeded forth and came from God, neither came I of my ſelfe, but he ſent me. This ſending taketh not away the equality of eſſence and power, but declareth the order of the perſons. Iohn. 5.18. Therefore the Iewes ſought the more to kil him, not onely becauſe he had broken the Sabboath: but ſaid alſo that God was his Father, and made himſelfe equall with God. Phil. 2.6. Who beeing in the forme of God, thought is no robbery to be equall with God.

Although the Sonne bee begotten of his Father, yet neuertheleſſe he is of & by himſelfe very God: for he muſt bee conſidered either according to his eſſence, or according to his filiation or Sonneſhip. In regard of his eſſence, he is (αὐτόθεος) that is, of and by himſelfe very God: for the Deity which is common to al the three perſons, is not begotten. But as he is a perſon, and the ſonne of the father, he is not of himſelfe, but from an other: for he is the eternall ſonne of his father. And thus he is truely ſaid to bee very God of very God.

For this cauſe alſo he is the WORD of the Father, not a vaniſhing, but an eſſentiall word; becauſe as a word is, as it were, begotten of the Father, and alſo, becauſe he bringeth glad tidings from the boſome of his Father. Nazian. in his Oration of the Sonne. Baſil. in his preface before Iohns Goſpell.

The property of the Sonne, is to bee begotten.

His proper manner of working, is to execute actions from the Father, by the holy Ghoſt. 1. Cor. 8.6. Our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and we by him. Ioh. 5.19. Whatſoeuer things he doth, the ſame doth the Sonne alſo.

The holy Ghoſt, is the third perſon, proceeding from the Father and the Sonne. Iohn. 15.26. But when the Comforter ſhall come, whom I will send vnto you from the Father, euen the spirit of trueth, which proceedeth of the Father, he shall testifie of me. Roman. 8. 9. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, seeing the spirit of God dwelleth in you. But if there bee any that hath not the spirit of Christ he is not his. Ioh. 16. 13. 14. But when the Spirit of truth shall come: he shall conduct you into all trueth: for he shall not speake of himselfe, but whatsoeuer he heareth, he shall speake, and shal declare vnto you such things as are to come. He shall glorifie me, for he shall receiue of mine, and shew it vnto you.

What may be the essentiall difference betwixt proceeding, and begetting, neither the Scriptures determine, nor the Church knoweth.

The incommunicable property of the holy Ghost, is to proceede.

His proper manner of working is to finish an action, effecting it, as from the father and the Sonne.

And albeit the Father, and the Sonne are two distinct persons, yet are they both but one beginning of the holy Ghost.

CHAP. VI.

Of Gods workes, and his decree.

THus farre concerning the first part of Theologie: the second followeth, of the workes of God.

The workes of God, are all those, which he doth out of himselfe, that is, out of his diuine essence.

These are cõmon to the Trinity, alwaies reserued the peculiar maner of working to euery person.

The end of all these, is the manifestation of the glorie of God. Rom. 11. 36. For him are all things, to him be glory for euer.

The worke, or action of God, is either his decree, or the execution of his decree.

The decree of God, is that by which God in himselfe, hath necessarily, and yet freely, from al eternity determined al things. Eph. 1. 11. In whom also we are chosen when we were predestinate, according to the purpose of him, which worketh all things after the counsell of his owne will. and vers. 4. As he hath chosen vs in him before the foundation of the worlde. Math. 10. 29. Are not two sparrowes sold for a farthing, and not one of them falleth on the ground without your father? Rom. 9. 21. Hath not the potter power on the clay, to make of the same lumpe one vessell to dishonor, and an other to honour.

Therefore the Lord, according to his good pleasure, hath most certainly decreed euery both thing and action, whether past, present, or to come, together with their circumstances of place, time, meanes, and ende.

Yea, he hath most iustly decreede the wicked workes of the wicked. For if it had not so pleased him they had neuer bene at all. And albeit they of their owne nature, are and remaine wicked; yet in respect of Gods decree, they are to be accounted good. For there is not any thing absolutely euill. 1. Pet. 3. 17. For it is better (if the will of God be so) that ye suffer for well doing, then for euill doing.

The thing which in the own nature is euill, in Gods eternall counsell comes in the place of a good thing; in that it is some occasion & way to manifest the glory of God in his iustice, and his mercy.

God his foreknowledge, is conioyned with his decree, and indeede is in nature before it: yet not in regard of God, but vs; because knowledge goeth before the will & the effecting of a worke. For wee doe nothing, but those things that we haue before willed neither doe we will any thing which we know not before.

God his foreknowledge in it selfe, is not a cause why thinges are, but as it is conioyned with his decree. For thinges doe not therefore come to passe, because that God did foreknowe them; but because hee decreed and willed them, therefore they come to passe.

The execution of Gods decree is that by which all things in their time are accomplished which were foreknown or decreed, and that euen as they were foreknowne and decreed.

The same decree of GOD, is the first & principall working cause of al things which also is in order, and time before all other causes. For with Gods decree is alwaies his will anexed, by the which hee can willingly effect that hee hath decreed. And it were a signe of impotencie, to decree any thing which hee could not willingly compasse. And with Gods will is conioyned an effectuall power, by which the Lord can bring to passe, whatsoeuer hee hath freely decreede.

This first and principall cause, howbeit in it selfe it bee necessary, yet it doth not take away freedome of will in election, or the nature and property of second causes, but onely brings them into a certaine order, that is, it directeth them to the determinate minate ende: whereupon the effects and euents of things are contingent or neceſſarie, as the nature of the ſecond cauſe is. So Chriſt according to his Fathers decree died neceſſarily, Act. 17. 3. but yet willingly, Math, 25. 39. And if wee reſpect the temperature of Chriſts body, he might haue prolonged his life; and therefore in this reſpect may be ſaid to haue died contingently.

The execution of Gods decree, hath two branches; his operation, and his operatiue permiſſion.

Gods operation, is his effectuall producing of all good thinges, which either haue beeing or mooning or which are done.

Gods operatiue permiſſion, is that by which he onely permitteth one & the ſame worke to be done of others, as it is euill; but as it is good, he effectually worketh the ſam. Gen. 50. 20. You indeede had purpoſed euill againſt me, but God decreed that for good, that he might, as hee hath done this day, preſerue his people aliue. And Ge. 45. 7. God hath ſent me before you to preſerue your poſterity in this land Eſay. 10. 5, 6, 7 Woe vnto Aſſhur, the rod of my wrath, and the ſtaffe in their hands is mine indignation. I will ſende him to a diſſembling nation, & I wil giue him a charge againſt the people of my wrath to take the ſpoile, and to take the pray, and to tread them vnder feete like the mire in the ſtreete. But hee thinketh not ſo, neither doeth his heart eſteeme it ſo: but he imagineth to deſtroy, and to cut off not a few nations.

God permitteth euill, by a certaine voluntary permiſſion, in that hee forſaketh the ſecond cauſe in working euill. And hee forſaketh his creature, either by detracting the grace it had, or not beſtowing that which it wanteth Rom. 1. 26. For this cauſe God gaue them vp vnto vile affections. 2. Tim. 2. 25, 26. Inſtructing them with meekeneſſe that are contrary minded, proouing if God at any time will giue them repentance, that they may knowe the truth, and that they may come to amendment out of the ſnare of the deuill, which are taken of him at his will.

Neither muſt we thinke God vniuſt, who is indebted to none. Rom. 9. 15. I will haue mercie on him to whom I will ſhew mercie. Yea it is in Gods pleaſure to beſtowe how much grace and vpon whom he will. Math. 20. 15. Is it not lawfull for me to do as I will with mine owne?

That which is euill, hath ſome reſpect of goodneſſe with GOD: firſt, in that it is the puniſhment of ſinne: and puniſhment is accounted a morall good, in that it is the part of a iuſt iudge to puniſh ſinne. Secondly, as it is a meere action or act. Thirdly, as it is a chaſtiſement, a triall of ones faith, martyrdome, propitiation for ſinne, as the death and paſſion of Chriſt. Act. 2. 23. and 4. 24. And if we obſerue theſe caueats God is not onely a bare permiſſiue agent in an euill worke, but a powerful effectour of the ſame, yet ſo, as he neither inſtilleth an aberration into the action, nor yet ſupporteth, or intendeth the ſame. but that hee moſt freely ſuffereth euill, and beſt diſpoſeth of it to his owne glory. The like we may ſee in this ſimilitude: Let a man ſpurre forward a lame horſe; in that hee mooueth forward, the rider is the cauſe; but that he halteth, he himſelfe is the cauſe. And againe, we ſee the ſunne beames gathering themſelues into a Sunne glaſſe, they burne ſuch thinges as they light vpon: now, that they burne, the cauſe is not in the Sun, but in the glaſſe. The like may be ſaid of Gods action in an euill ſubiect.

CHAP. VII.

Of Predeſtination and creation.

GOds decree, in as much as it concerneth man, is called Predeſtination: which is the decree of God, by the which he hath ordained all men to a certaine and euerlaſting eſtate: that is, either to ſaluation or condemnation, for his owne glory. 1. Theſſ. 4. 9. For God hath not appointed vs vnto wrath, but to obtaine ſaluation by the meanes of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt Rom. 9. 13. As it is written, I haue loued Iacob, and hated Eſau, and verſ. 22. What and if God would, to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power knowne ſuffer with long patience the veſſels of wrath prepared to deſtruction, and that hee might declare the riches of his glory vpon the veſſels of mercy, which hee hath prepared vnto glorie?

The meanes of accomp'iſhing Gods Predeſtination are twofold.

The creation, and the fall.

The creation, is that by which GOD made all things very good, of nothing, that is, of no matter which was before the creation. Gen. 1. 1. In the beginning God created the heauen, &c. to the ende of the chapter.

Gods manner of creating, as alſo of gouerning, is ſuch, as that by his word alone, he without any inſtruments, meanes, aſſiſtance, or motion produced all ſorts of things. For to will any thinge with God, is both to be able and to performe it. Hebr. 11.3. By faith wee vnderstand, that the worlde was ordained by the word of God, so that the thinges which wee see, are not made of thinges which did appeare. Psal. 148.5. Let them praise the name of the Lord, for he commanded and they were created.

The goodnesse of the creature, is a kind of excellency, by which it was voide of all sinne, that is, free from punishment & transgression.

The creation, is of the world, or inhabitants in the world.

The world, is a most beautifull pallace, framed out of a deformed substance, and fit to be inhabited.

The parts of the world, are the heauens and earth.

The heauens are threefold: the first is the aire, the second the skie, the third an inuisible and incorporall essence, created to be the seat of all the blessed, both men, and angels. The third heauen is called Paradise. 2. Cor. 12.4.

The inhabitours of the world, are reasonable creatures made according to Gods owne Image, they are either angels or men. Gen. 1.26. Furthermore, God said, Let vs make man in our owne image, according to our likenesse. Iob. 1.6. When the children of God came and stood before the Lord, Satan came also among them.

The Image of God, is the integrity of the reasonable creature, resembling God in holinesse. Eph. 4.24. And put on the newe man which after God is created in righteousnesse & true holinesse.

CHAP. VIII.

Of Angels.

THe Angels each of them beeing created in the beginning, were setled in an vpright estate. In whom these thinges are to be noted. First, their nature. Angels are spirituall & incomporall essences. Hebr. 2.16. For he in no sort tooke the angels, but hee tooke the seede of Abraham. Hebr. 1.7. And of the Angels, he saith, hee maketh the spirits his messengers and his ministers a flame of fire.

Secondly, their qualities, First, they are wise, 2. Sam. 14.18. My Lord the king is euen as an angel of God in hearing good & bad. 2. They are of great might, 2. Thess. 1.7. When the Lord Iesus shall shewe himselfe from heauen with his mighty angells. 2. Sam. 24. Dauid saw the Angell that smote the people. 2. King. 19.35. The same night the Angell of the Lord went out and smote in the campe of Ashur, an hundreth, fourescore, and fiue thousand. 3. They are swift and of great agility, Esay, 6.6. Then flewe one of the Seraphins vnto mee with an hotte cole in his hande. Dan. 9.21. The man Gabriell whom I had seene before in a vision, came flying and touched me. This is the reason why the Cherubins in the tabernacle were painted with wings.

Thirdly, they are innumerable, Gen. 3.2. Now Iacob went forth on his iourney, and the angell of God met him. Dan. 10.7. Thousand thousands ministred vnto him, & ten thousand thousands stood before him. Math. 26.35. Thinkest thou I cannot pray to my father, and he will giue me more then twelue legions of Angels? Hebr. 12.22. To the companie of innumerable angels.

Fourthly, they are in the highest heauen, where they euer attend vpon God, & haue society with him, Mark. 18.10. In heauen their angels alwaies beholde the face of my father which is in heauen. Psal. 68.17. The chariots of God are twenty thousand thousand angels, and the Lord is among them. Marke, 12.25. But are as angels in heauen.

Fiftly, their degree. That there are degrees of Angels, it is most plaine. Colos. 1 16. By him were all thinges created which are in heauen and in earth, things visible and inuisible: whether they bee thrones or Dominions, or principalities, or powers. Rom. 8.38. Neither angels, nor principalities, nor powers, &c. 1. Thess. 4.16. The Lord shall descend with the voice of the Archangell, and with the trumpet of God. But it is not for vs to search who, or howe many bee of each order, neither ought wee curiously to inquire howe they are distinguished, whether in essence or qualityes. Colos. 2.18. Let no man at his pleasure beare rule ouer you by humblenesse of minde, and worshipping of Angels, aduancing himselfe in those things which hee neuer saw.

Sixtly, their office. Their office is partly to magnifie God, and partly to performe his commaundements. Psal. 103.20.21. Praise the Lord, ye his Angells that excell in strength, that doe his commandement in obeying the voice of his word. Praise the Lord, all ye his hostes, ye his seruants that doe his pleasure.

Seuenthly: The establing of some Angels in that integrity, in which they were created.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

Of man, and the estate of Innocencie.

MAn, after he was created of God, was established in an excellēt estate of innocencie. In this estate seauen thinges are cheifly to be regarded.

I. The place. The garden of Heden, that most pleasant garden. Gen. 2. 15. Then the Lord tooke the man and put him into the garden of Heden.

II. The integritie of mans nature. Which was Eph. 4. 24. created in righteousnesse and true holinesse. This integritie hath two parts.

The first is wisdome which is true and perfect knowledge of God, and of his will, in as much as it is to bee performed of man, yea, and of the counsell of God in all his creatures. Colos. 3. 10. And haue put on the newe man, which is renewed in knoweledge, after the image of him that created him. Gen. 2. 19. When the Lord God had formed on the earth euery beast of the field, and euery foule of the heauen, hee brought them vnto the man, to see how hee would call them: for howsoeuer the man called the liuing creature, so was the name thereof.

The second is Iustice, which is a conformitie of the will, affections, & powers of the bodie to the will of God.

III. Mans dignitie, consisting of foure parts. First, his communion with God, by which as God reioyced in his owne image, so likewise man was incensed to loue God: this is apparent by Gods familiar conference with Adam, Gen. 1. 29. And God said, Behold, I haue giuen vnto you euery herb bearing seed, &c. that shall bee to you for meat. Secondly, his dominion ouer all the creatures of the earth, Gen. 2. 19. Psal. 8. 6. Thou hast made him Lord ouer the workes of thine handes, and hast set all thinges vnder his feete, &c. Thirdly, the decencie, and dignitie of the bodie, in which, though naked, as nothing was vnseemely, so was there in it imprinted a princely maiestie. Psal. 8. Thou hast made him little lower then God, & crowned him with glorie and worship. Gen. 2. 25. They were both naked, and neither ashamed. 1. Cor. 12. 23. Vpon those members of the bodie, which wee thinke most vnhoneste, put wee more honestie on: and our comely parts haue more comelinesse on. Fourthly labour of the bodie without paine or griefe. Gen. 3. 17, 19. Because thou hast obeyed the voice of thy wife, &c. cursed is the earth for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eate of it all the daies of thy life, &c.

IV. Subiection to God, whereby man was bound to performe obedience to the commaundements of God: which are two. The one was cōcerning the two trees: the other, the obseruation of the Sabboth.

Gods commaundement concerning the trees, was ordained to make examination and triall of mans obedience. It consisteth of two parts: the first, is the giuing of the tree of life, that as a signe, it might confirme to man his perpetuall abode in the garden of Heden, if still hee persisted in his obedience, Reuel. 2. 7. To him that ouercommeth, will I giue to eate of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God. Prou. 3. 18. Shee is a tree of life to them which lay hold on her: and blessed is hee that retaineth her. The second, is the prohibition to eate of the tree of the knowledge of good and euill, together with a commination of temporall & eternall death, after the transgression of this commaundement. Gen. 2. 17. Of the tree of the knowledge of good and euill, thou shalt not eate of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt die the death. This was a signe of death, and had his name of the euent, because the obseruation thereof would haue brought perpetuall happines, as the violation gaue experience of euill, that is, of all miserie, namely of punishment, and of guiltinesse of sinne.

Gods commandement concerning the obseruatiō of the Sabboth, is that, by which God ordained the sanctification of the Sabboth. Gen. 2. 3. God blessed the seauenth day, and sanctified it.

V. His calling, which is his seruice of God, in the obseruation of his commaundements, and the dressing of the garden of Heden. Prou. 16. 4. God made all thinges for himselfe. Gen. 2. 15. He placed him in the garden of Heden, to dresse and keepe it.

VI. His diet was the herbes of the earth, and fruit of euery tree, except the tree of the knowledge of good and euil. Gen. 1. 29. And God saide, behold, I haue giuen vnto you euery herb bearing seed, which vpon all the earth, and euery tree, wherein is the fruit of a tree bearing seed, that shal be to you for meate: & chap. 3. 17. But of the tree of knowledge of good and euill, thou shalt not eate.

VII. His free choice both to wil, & performe the commaundement concerning the two trees, and also to neglect & violate the same. Wherby we see that our first parents were indeed created perfect, but mutable: for so it pleased God to prepare a way to the execution of his decree.

CHAP. X.

Of ſinne, and the fall of Angels.

THe fall, is a reuolting of the reaſonable creature from obedience to ſinne.

Sinne, is the corruption, or rather depriuation of the firſt integritie. More plainely, it is a falling or turning from God, binding the offendour by the courſe of Gods iuſtice, to vndergoe the puniſhment.

Here a doubt may bee mooued, whethere ſinne be a thing exiſting, or not. The anſwere is this: Of things which are, ſome are poſitiue, other priuatiue. Things poſitiue, are all ſubſtances togither with thoſe their properties, effects, inclinations, and affections, which the Lord hath created and imprinted in their natures. The thing is called priuatiue which graunteth or preſuppoſeth the abſence of ſome ſuch thing, as ought to be in a thing. Such a thing is ſinne, the which properly and of it ſelfe is not any thing created, and exiſting; but rather the abſence of that good which ought to be in the creature.

Sinne hath two parts: A defect, or impotencie; and it is a confuſion or diſturbance of all the powers and actions of the creature.

Impotencie is nothing els, but the very want or loſſe of that good which God hath ingrafted in the nature of his creature.

The fall was effected on this manner. Firſt, God created his reaſonable creatures good indeede, but withall changeable, as we haue ſhewed before. For to be vnchangeable good is proper to God alone. Secondly, God tried their obedience in thoſe things about which they were conuerſant. Deut. 13.13. Thou ſhalt not hearken to the words of the Prophet, or vnto that dreamer of dreames: for the Lord your God prooueth you, to know whether you loue the Lord your God, with all your heart, and with all your ſoule. Thirdly, in this tria'l God doth not aſſiſt them with new grace to ſtand, but for iuſt cauſes forſaketh them. Laſtly, after God hath forſaken them, and left them to themſelues, they fall quite from God: no otherwiſe, then when a man ſtaying vp a ſtaffe from the ground, it ſtandeth vpright: but if he neuer ſo little withdraw his hand it falleth of it ſelfe.

The fall, is of men, and Angels.

The fall of Angels, is that by which the vnderſtanding, pointing at a more excellent eſtate, and of it owne accord approouing the ſame, together with the will making eſpeciall choiſe thereof, they, albeit they might freely by their integritie, haue choſen the cõtrarie, were the ſole inſtruments of their fall from God. 2. Pet. 2.4. If God ſpared not the angels which ſinned, but caſt them downe into hell, and deliuered them into chaines of darknes, to bee kept vnto damnation, &c. Iud. 6. The Angels which kept not their firſt eſtate, but left their owne habitation, he hath reſerued in euerlaſting chaines, &c. Ioh. 8.44. Hee was a murtherer from the beginning, and continued not in the truth: for there is no truth in him.

In the fall of Angels, conſider: First, their corruption, anſing from the fall; which is the deprauation of their nature, and is either that fearefull malice and hatred, by which they ſet themſelues againſt God, or their inſatiable deſire to deſtroy mankind; to the effecting whereof, they neglect neither force nor fraud. 1. Ioh. 3.8. He that committeth ſinne is of the deuill, becauſe the deuill ſinned from the beginning For this cauſe was the ſonne of God reuealed, to diſſolue the workes of the deuill. 1. Pet. 5 8. Your aduerſarie the deuill goeth about like a roaring lyon ſeeking whome hee may deuoure. Eph. 6. 12. You ſtriue not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt Principalities and powers, and worldly gouernours, the princes of darkeneſſe of this world, againſt ſpirituall wickednesſes, which are in ſupereeloſtiall things.

II. Their degree, and diuerſitie: for of theſe Angels, one is cheife, and the reſt attendants. The chiefe is Beelzebub, prince of the reſt of the deuils, and the world, far aboue them all in malice. Math. 25.41. Away from me yee curſed, into euerlaſting fire, prepared for the deuill & his Angels. 1. Cor. 4. 4. Whoſe mindes the God of this world hath blinded. Reu. 12.7. And there was warre in heauen, Michaell, and his angels fought with the dragon, and the dragon and his angels fought.

Miniſtring angels, are ſuch as waite vpon the deuill, in accompliſhing his wickedneſſe.

III. Their puniſhment. God, after their fall, gaue them ouer to perpetuall torments, without any hope of pardon. Iude, verſ. 6. 2. Pet. 2.4. God ſpared not the angels that had ſinned, but caſt them downe into hell, and deliuered them into chaines of darkenes, to be kept vnto damnation. This hee did: firſt, to admoniſh men, what great puniſhment they deſerued. Secondly, to ſhew that grieuous ſinnes muſt more grieuouſly ſly be puniſhed.

The fall of Angels was the more grieuous, becauſe both their nature was more able to reſiſt, and the deuil was the firſt founder of ſinne.

Their puniſhment is eaſier, or more grieuous.

Their eaſier puniſhment is double. The firſt, is their deiection from heauen. 2. Pet. 2. 4. God caſt the Angels that ſinned into hell. The ſecond, is the abridging, and limitation of their power, Iob. 1, 12. The Lord ſaid vnto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thine hand, onely vpon him lay not thine hand.

The more grieuous paine, is that torment in the deepe, which is endleſſe and infinite, in time and meaſure. Luk. 8. 31, And they beſought him, that he would not command them to goe downe into the deepe.

CHAP. XI.

Of mans fall and diſobedience.

ADams fall, was his willing reuolting to diſobedience by eating the forbidden fruit. In Adams fall, we may note the manner, greatneſſe, and fruit of it.

I. The manner of Adams fall, was on this ſort. Firſt, the Deuill, hauing immediately before fallen himſelfe, inſinuateth vnto our firſt parents, that both the puniſhment for eating the forbidden fruite was vncertaine, and that God was not true in his word vnto them. Secondly, by this his legerdemaine, hee blinded the eyes of their vnderſtanding. Thirdly, beeing thus blinded, they begin to diſtruſt GOD, and to doubt of Gods fauour. Fourthly, they thus doubting, are mooued to beholde the forbidden fruit. Fifthly, they no ſooner ſee the beauty thereof, but they deſire it. Sixtly, that they may ſatisfie their deſire, they eate of the fruite, which by the hands of the woman, was taken from the tree: by which act they become vtterly diſloyall to God. Gen. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

Thus without conſtraint, they willingly fal from their integrity, God vpō iuſt cauſes leauing them to themſelues, and freely ſuffering them to fall. For we muſt not thinke that mans fall was either by chaunce, or God not knowing it; or barely winking at it, or by his bare permiſſion, or againſt his will: but rather miraculouſly, not without the will of God, but yet without all approbation of it.

II. The greatneſſe of this tranſgreſſion muſt be eſteemed, not by the externall obiect, or the baſeneſſe of an apple, but by the offence it containeth againſt Gods maieſty. This offence appeareth by many treſpaſſes committed in that actiō. The 1. is doubting of Gods worde: 2. want of faith. For they beleeue not Gods threatning, (In that day ye eate thereof you ſhall dye the death:) But being bewitched with the Deuills promiſe, (ye ſhal be like Gods) they ceaſe to feare Gods puniſhment, and are inflamed with a deſire of greater dignity. 3. Their curioſity, in forſaking Gods word, and ſeeking other wiſedome. 4. Their pride, in ſeeking to magnifie themſelues, and to become like God. 5. Contempt of God, in tranſgreſſing his commaundements againſt their owne conſcience. 6. In that they preferre the Deuill before God. 7. Ingratitude, who, in as much as in them lyeth, expell Gods ſpirit dwelling in them, and deſpiſe that bleſſed vnion. 8. The murther both themſelues and their progeny.

III. The fruit or effects. Out of this corrupt eſtate of our firſt parents, aroſe the eſtate of infidelity or vnbeliefe, whereby God hath included all men vnder ſinne, that he might manifeſt his mercie in the ſaluation of ſome, and his iuſtice in condemnation of others. Rom. 11. 32. God hath ſhut vp all men in vnbeleefe, that he might haue mercy on all. Gal. 3. 22. The Scripture hath concluded all vnder ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt ſhould be giuen to them that beleeue.

In this eſtate, wee muſt conſider ſinne, and the puniſhment of ſinne. Sinne is threefold.

The firſt, is the participation of Adams both tranſgreſſion and guiltineſſe: whereby in his ſinne, all his poſterity ſinned. Rom. 5. 12. As by one man ſinne entered into the world, and by ſinne death: ſo death entred vpon all men, in that all men haue ſinned. The reaſon of this is ready. Adam was not then a priuate man, but repreſented all mankinde, and therefore looke what good he receaued from God, or euill elſewhere, both were cōmon to others with him. 1. Cor. 15. 22. As in Adam all men die, ſo in Chriſt all men riſe againe.

Againe, when Adam offended, his poſterity was in his loynes, from whom they ſhould by the courſe of nature, iſſue: and therefore take part of the guiltineſſe with him. Hebr. 7. 9, 10. And to ſay as the thinge is, Leui &c. payed tythes to Melchiſedec: for hee was yet in the loynes of his father Abra- ham.

Abraham, when Melchisedec met him.

CHAP. XII.

Of Originall sinne.

OVt of the former transgression ariseth another, namely Original sinne, which is corruption ingendered in our first conception, whereby euery faculty of soule and body is prone and disposed to euill. Psal. 51. 1. I was borne in iniquity, and in sinne hath my mother conceiued me. Gen. 6.5. Tit. 3.3. We our selues were in times past vnwise, disobedient, deceiued, seruing the lusts and diuers pleasures, liuing in maliciousnesse and enuie, hatefull; and hating one another. Heb. 12. 1. Let vs cast away euery thing that presseth downe, and the sinne that hangeth so fast on.

By this we see, that sinne is not a corruption of mans substance, but onely of faculties: otherwise neither could mens soules be immortall, nor Christ take vpon him mans nature.

All Adams posterity is equally partaker of this corruption: the reason why it sheweth not it selfe equally in all, is because some haue the spirit of sanctification, some the spirit, onely to bridle corruption, some neither.

The propagation of sinne, from the parents to the children, is either because the soule is infected by the contagion of the body, as a good ointment by a fustie vessell; or because God, in the very moment of creation and infusion of soules into infants, doth vtterly forsake them. For as Adam receiued the image of God, both for himselfe and others: so did he loose it for himselfe and others.

But whereas the propagation of sinne is as a common fire in a towne, men are not so much to search how it came, as to be carefull how to extinguish it.

That we may the better know originall sinne in the seueral faculties of mans nature, three circumstances must be considered.

1. How much of Gods image we yet attaine. 2. How much sinne man receiued from Adam. 3. The increase thereof afterward.

I. In the minde. The remnant of Gods image, is certain notions concerning good and euill: as, that there is a God, and that the same God punisheth transgressions: that there is an euerlasting life: that wee must reuerence our superiours, and not harme our neighbours. But euen these notions, they are both generall and corrupt, and haue none other vse, but to bereaue man of all excuse before Gods iudgement seat. Rom. 1. 19. 20. That which may be known concerning God, is manifest in them: for God hath shewed it vnto them. For the inuisible things of him, that is, his eternall power and Godhead, are seene by the creation of the world, beeing considered in his workes, to the intent they should be without excuse.

Mens mindes receiued from Adam: 1. Ignorance, namely, a want, or rather a depriuation of knowledge in the thinges of God, whether they concerne his sincere worship, or eternall happinesse. 1. Cor. 2. 14. The naturall man perceiueth not the thinges of the spirit of God, for they are foolishnesse vnto him, neither can he knowe them, because they are spiritually discerned. Rom. 8.7. The wisedome of the flesh is enimity to God, for it is not subiect to the lawe of God, neither indeed can be.

II. Impotencie, whereby the minde of it selfe is vnable to vnderstand spirituall thinges, though they be taught. Luke 24. 45. Then opened he their vnderstanding, that they might vnderstand the scriptures. 2. Cor. 3.5. Not that we are sufficient of our selues, to thinke any thinge as of our selues: but our sufficiency is of God.

III. Vanity, in that the minde thinketh falshood trueth, and trueth falsehood. Eph. 4. 7. Walke noe more as other Gentiles, in the vanity of your vnderstanding. 1. Cor. 1. 21. It pleased God by the foolishnesse of preaching, to saue those which beleeue. 23. Wee preach Christ crucified, to the Iewes a stumbling blocke, but to the Grecians foolishnesse. Prou. 14. 12. There is a way which seemeth good in the eyes of men, but the ende thereof is death.

IV. A naturall inclination onely to conceiue and deuise the thing which is euill. Gen. 6.5. The Lord saw that the wickednesse of men was great vpon earth, and all the imaginations of the thoughts of the heart were onely euill continually. Ierem. 4. 22. They are wise to doe euill, but to doe well they haue noe knowledge.

Hence it is apparent, that the originall, and as I may say, the matter of all heresies, is naturally ingrafted in mans nature. This is worthy the obseruation of students in diuinity.

The increase of sinne in the vnderstanding, is 1. a reprobate sense, when GOD withdraweth the light of nature. John, 12. 40. He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their hearts, leaſt they ſhould ſee with their eies, and vnderſtand with their hearts, and I ſhould heale them, and they be conuerted. Ro. 1.28. As they regarded not to knowe God, ſo God deliuered them vp vnto a reprobate minde, to doe thoſe thinges which are not conuenient. 2. The ſpirit of ſlumber. Rom. 11.8. God hath giuen them the ſpirit of ſlumber, &c. 3. A ſpirituall drunkenneſſe, Eſay 29.9. They are drunkē, but not with wine, they ſtagger, but not with ſtrong drinke. 4. Strong illuſions. 2. Theſſ. 2.11. God ſhall ſend them ſtrong illuſions, and they ſhall beleeue lies.

their

The remnant of Gods image in the conſcience, is an obſeruing and watchfull power, like the eye of a keeper, reſerued in man, partly to reproue, partly to repreſſe the vnbridled courſe of his affections. Roman. 2.15. Which ſhew the effect of the lawe written in their hearts, their conſcience alſo bearing witneſſe, and their thoughts accuſing one an other or excuſing.

That which the conſcience hath receiued of Adam, is the impurenes thereof. Tit. 1.15. To them, that are defiled & vnbeleeuing nothing is pure, but euen their mindes and conſciences are defiled. This impuritie hath three effects: the firſt, is to excuſe ſinne; as, if a man ſerue God outwardly, he wil excuſe and cloake his inward impiety. Mark. 10.19,20. Thou knoweſt the commādements, Thou ſhalt not, &c. Then he anſwered, and ſaid, Maſter, all theſe thinges haue I obſerued from my youth. Againe, it excuſeth intents not warranted in Gods worde. 1. Chr. 13.9. When they came to the threſhing floore of Chidon, Uzza put forth his hand to hold the Arke, for the oxe did ſhake it.

The ſecond, is to accuſe and terrifie for doing good. This wee may ſee in ſuperſtitious idolators, who are grieued whē they omit to performe counterfeit and idolatrous worſhip to their gods. Coloſſ. 2.21, 22. Touch not, taſt not, handle not, which all periſh with vſing, and are after the commandements and doctrines of men. Eſai. 29.13. And their feare toward me was taught them by the precepts of men.

The third, is to accuſe and terrifie for ſinne. Gen. 50.15. When Ioſephs brethren ſaw that their father was dead, they ſaid, It may bee that Ioſeph will hate vs, and will pay vs againe all the euill, which we did vnto him. Ioh. 8.9. And when they heard it, being accuſed by their own conſciences, they went out one by one. 1. Ioh. 3.20. If our heart condemne vs, God is greater then our heart. Though the conſcience ſhall accuſe a man truely, yet that will not argue any holineſſe in it: which appeareth, in that Adam in his innocencie had a God, yet no accuſing conſcience.

Impurenes increaſed in the conſcience, is firſt ſuch a ſenſles numneſſe, as that it can hardly accuſe a man of ſinne. Eph. 4.19. Who being paſt feeling haue giuen themſelues to wantonnes, to worke all vncleannes, euen with greedineſſe. 1. Tim. 4.2. Hauing their cōſciences burned with an hot yron. This ſenſleſnes ſpringeth from a cuſtom in ſinning. 1. Sam. 25.37. Then in the morning when the wine was gone out of Nabal, his wife told him thoſe words, and his heart died within him, and he was like a ſtone.

II. Some grieuous horror, and terrour of the conſcience. Gen. 4.14. Behould thou haſt caſt me this day from the earth, and from thy face ſhall I be hid. and v. 13. My puniſhment is greater, then I can beare. The Symptomes of this diſeaſe, are blaſphemies, trēbling of bodie, feareful dreames. Act. 24.26. And as hee diſputed of righteouſnes, and temperance, and the iudgement to come, Felix trembled &c. Dan. 5.9. Then the Kings countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, ſo that the ioynts of his loynes were looſed, and his knees ſmote one againſt the other.

In the will, the remnant of Gods image, is a free choice. Firſt, in euery naturall action, belonging to each liuing creature, as to nouriſh, to engender, to mooue, to perceiue. Secondly, in euery humane action, that is, ſuch as belong to all men; and therfore man hath freewil in outward actions, whether they concerne manners, a family, or the commonwealth, albeit both in the choice and refuſall of them it bee very weake. Rom. 2.14. The Gentiles which haue not the law, by nature doe thoſe things which are of the law.

The will receiued. I. An impotencie, whereby it cannot will, or ſo much as luſt after that, which is indeede good, that is, which may pleaſe and bee acceptable to God. 1. Cor. 2.14. The naturall man perceiueth not the thinges of the ſpirit of God, for they are fooliſhnes vnto him: nether can hee know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. Rom. 5.6. Chriſt, when we were yet of no ſtrength, at his time died for the vngodly. 2. Tim. 2.26. Phil. 2.13. It is God which worketh in you both the will and the deede, euen of his good pleaſure.

II. An inward rebellion, whereby it vtterly abhorreth that which is good desiring and willing that alone which is euill.

By this it appeareth, that the wil is no agent, but a meere patient in the first act of conuersion to God, and that by it selfe it can neither begin that conuersion, or any other inward and sound obedience due to Gods law.

That which the affections receiue, is a disorder by which they therefore are not well affected, because they eschew that which is good, and pursue that which is euill. Gal. 5.24. They that are Christs, haue crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts thereof. Rom. 1.26. Therfore God gaue them ouer to filthie lusts. 1. King. 22.8. The king of Israel said vnto Iehosaphat, Yet is there one of whome thou maist take counsell, but him I hate, &c. and, 21.4. Therefore Achab came home to his house discontented and angrie for the word which Naboth spake vnto him, & he laid himselfe on his bed, turning away his face least he should eate meate.

That which the bodie hath receiued, is I. fitnesse to begin sinne. This doth the bodie in transporting al obiects and occasions of sinne to the soule. Gen. 3. 6. The woman seeing that the tree was good for meat, and pleasant to the eyes, &c. tooke of the fruit thereof, and did eate. II. A fitnesse to execut sinne, so soone as the heart hath begun it. Rom. 6. Neither giue your members as weapons of iniustice to sinne. and vers. 19. As you haue giuen your members as seruants to vncleannes and iniquitie, to commit iniquitie, &c.

CHAP. XIII.

Of actuall sinne.

After original sinne in Adams posteritie, actual transgressiō taketh place. It is either inward or outward. Inward, is of the minde, will, and affections.

The actuall sinne of the minde is the euill thought or intent thereof, contrarie to Gods law. Examples of euill thoughts God (the onely knower of the heart) hath in diuers places set downe in his word. I. That there is no God, Psal. 10.4. The wicked is so proud, that hee seeketh not for God, he thinketh alwaies there is no God. Psal. 14. 1. The foole saith in his heart, there is no God. II. That there is neither prouidence nor presence of God in this world. Psal. 10.11. Hee hath in his heart, God hath forgotten: thee hideth away his face and will neuer see. vers. 13. Wherfore doth the wicked contemne God? hee saith in his heart, thou wilt not regard. III. It imagineth safegard to it selfe from all perils. Psal. 10.6. Hee saith in his heart, I shall neuer bee moued nor bee in danger. Reuel. 18.7. Shee saith in her heart, I sit beeing a Queene, and am no widow, and shall see no mourning. IV. It esteemeth it selfe more excellent then other. Apoc. 18. 7. I sit as a Queene. Luk. 18.11. The Pharisie standing thus, praied to himselfe, I thanke thee, O God, that I am not as other men, extortioners, vniust, adulterers, nor yet as this Publican. vers. 12. I fast twise in the weeke, and giue tythe of all my possessions. V. That the Gospel of Gods kingdome is meere foolishnesse. 1. Cor. 2.14. The naturall man perceiueth not the things of the spirit of God, for they are foolishnesse vnto him. VI. To thinke vncharitably and maliciously of such as serue God sincerely. Math. 12.24. When the Pharisies heard that, they said, Hee casteth not out deuils but by the prince of deuil. Psal. 74.2. They said in their hearts, Let vs destroy them altogither. VII. To thinke the day of death farre off. Esai. 18.15. Yee haue said, wee haue made a couenant with death, & with hel we are at agreemēt, though a scourge run ouer vs & passe through, it shall not come at vs. VIII. That the paines of hell may be eschewed, in the place before mentioned, they say, With hel haue we made agreement. IX. That God will deferre his both particular and last general comming to iudgement. Luk 12.19. I will say vnto my soule, Soule thou hast much goods laid vp for many yeares. and vers. 45. If that seruant say in his heart, My maister will deferre his comming, &c.

Many carnall men pretend their good meaning: but when God openeth their eies, they shal see these rebellious thoughts rising in their mindes, as sparkles out of a chimney.

The actuall sinne of both will and affection, is euery wicked motion, inclination, and desire. Gal. 5. The flesh lusteth against the spirit.

An actuall outward sinne, is that, to the committing whereof, the members of the bodie doe, together with the faculties of the soule, concurre. Such sinnes as these are infinite. Psal. 40. 12. Innumerable troubles haue compassed me, my sinnes haue taken such hold vpon me, that I am not able to looke vp: yea, they are more in number then the haires of mine head.

Actuall sinne, is of omission or commission. Againe, both these are in words or deedes.

In

In the ſinne of commiſſion, obſerue theſe two points. The degrees in committing a ſinne, & the difference of ſinnes committed.

The degrees, are in number foure. Iam. 1. 14, 15. Euery man is tempted, when hee is drawne away by his owne concupiſcence, and is entiſed: Then whē luſt hath conceiued, it bringeth forth ſinne, and ſin when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth death.

The firſt degred, is temptation, whereby man is allured to ſinne. This doth Satan by offering to the mind that which is euill. Ioh. 13.2. The deuill had now put into the heart of Iudas Iſcariot Simons ſonne to betray him. Act. 5.3. Peter ſaid to Ananias, Why hath Satan filled thine heart that thou ſhouldeſt lie? &c. 1. Chr. 21.1. And Satan ſtoode vp againſt Iſraell, and prouoked Dauid to number Iſraell. This alſo is effected vpon occaſion of ſome externall obiect, which the ſenſes perceiue. Iob. 31.1. I haue made a couenant with mine eyes, why then ſhould I looke vpon a maide?

Tentation hath two parts: abſtraction, & ineſcation.

Abſtraction, is the firſt cogitation of committing ſinne, whereby the minde is with-drawne from Gods ſeruice, to the which it ſhould be always readie preſt. Luk. 10.27. Thou ſhalt loue the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and all thy ſoule, with all thy thought.

Ineſcation is that wherby an euill thought conceiued, & for a time retained in the mind by delighting the will and affections, doth as it were, lay a baite for them to draw them to conſent.

The ſecond degree, is conception, which is nothing els but a conſent and reſolution to commit ſinne. Pſal. 7.14. Hee ſhall trauell with wickednes, heehath conceiued miſchiefe, but he ſhall bring forth a lie.

The third degree, is the birth of ſinne, namely, the committing of ſinne, by the aſſiſtance both of the faculties of the ſoule, & the powers of the bodie.

The fourth degree, is perfection, when ſinne being by cuſtome perfect, & is it were ripe, the ſinner reapeth death, that is, damnation.

This appeareth in the example of Pharaoh: wherfore cuſtom in any ſinne is fearefull.

Sinne actually committed, hath fiue differences.

Firſt, to conſent with an offendour, and not actually to commit ſinne. Eph. 5.11. Haue no fellowſhip with the vnfruitful works of darknes, but reproone them rather. This is done three manner of waies.

I. When as a man in iudgement ſomewhat alloweth the ſinne of an other. Num. 20.6.10. Moſes and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rocke, and Moſes ſaid vnto them, Heare now yee rebels: ſhall wee bring you water out of the rocke? v. 12. The Lord ſpake to Moſes and Aaron, becauſe yee beleeued mee not, to ſanctifie me in the preſence of the children of Iſraell into the land which I haue giuen them.

II. When the heart approoueth in affection and conſent. Hither may we referre both the Miniſters and the Magiſtrates concealing and winking at offences. 1. Sam. 2.23. Eli ſaid, Why doe yee ſuch things? for of all this people I heare euill of you. Doe no more my ſonnes, &c. Now that Elies will agreeth with his ſonnes ſinnes, it is manifeſt, verſ. 29. Thou honoureſt thy children aboue me.

III. In deede, by counſell, preſence, entiſement, Rom. 1.31. They doe not onely doe the ſame, but alſo fauour them that doe them. Mark. 6.25, 26. Shee ſaid vnto her mother, What ſhall I aske: and ſhee ſaid, Iohn Baptiſts head, &c. Act. 22.30. When the blood of thy Martyr Stenen was ſhed, I alſo ſtood by, and conſented vnto his death, and kept the clothes of them that ſlue him.

The ſecond difference, is to ſinne ignorantly, as when a man doth not expreſſely and diſtinctly knowe whether that which he doth, bee a ſinne or not, or if he knewe it, did not acknowledge and marke it. 1. Tim. 1.23. I before was a blaſphemer, and a perſecutor, and an oppreſſour: but I was receiued to mercie, for I did it ignorantly through vnbeleefe. Numb. 35.22.23.24. If hee puſhed him vnaduiſedly and not of hatred, or caſt vpon him any thing without laying of waite, or any ſtone (whereby he might bee ſlaine) and ſaw him not, or cauſed it to fall vpon him, and bee die, and was not his enemie, neither ſought him any harme: then the congregation ſhall iudge betweene the ſlayer and the auenger of blood, according to theſe lawes. 1. Cor. 4.4. I knowe nothing by my ſelfe, yet am I not thereby iuſtified. Pſal. 19.13. Cleanſe mee from my ſecret ſinnes.

The third difference, is to ſinne vpon knowledge, but of infirmitie, as when a man fearing ſome imminent danger, or amazed at the horrour of death, doth againſt his knowledge denie that truth, which otherwiſe hee would acknowledge and embrace. Such was Peters fall, ariſing from the ouer much raſhnes of the minde, mingled with ſome feare.

Thus all men offend, when the fleſh, and inordinate deſires ſo ouerrule the will and euery good endeauour, that they prouoke man to that, which hee from his heart deteſteth. Rom.7.19. I doe not the thinge which I would, but the euill which I would not, that doe I.

The fourth difference, is preſumptuous ſinning vpon knowledge. Pſal. 19.13. Keepe thy ſeruant from preſumptuous ſinnes: let them not raigne ouer me. Hitherto belongeth, 1. euery ſinne committed with an high hand, that is, in ſome contempt of God. Numb. 15.30. The perſon that doth preſumptuouſly, &c. ſhall bee cut off from amongſt his people: becauſe hee hath diſpiſed the worde of the Lord, and hath broken his commaundement. II. Preſumption of Gods mercie in doing euill. Eccles.8.11. Becauſe ſentence againſt an euil worke is not executed ſpeedily, therefore the heart of the children of men is fully ſet in them to doe euil. Rom.2.4. Deſpiſeſt thou the riches of his bountifulneſſe, &c. not knowing that the bountifulneſſe of God leadeth thee to repentance, &c.

The fifth difference, is to ſinne vpon knowledge and ſet malice againſt God, and to this is the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt referred.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the puniſhment of ſinne.

HItherto wee haue intreated of ſinne, wherewith all mankind is infected: in the next place ſuccedeth the puniſhment of ſinne, which is threefold. The firſt is in this life, and that diuers waies. The firſt concerneth the bodie, either in the prouiſion with trouble for the things of this life, Gen. 3.17. or a proneſſe to diſeaſe, Math. 9.2. Sonne bee of good comfort, thy ſinnes bee forgiuen thee. Ioh. 5.14. Beehold, thou art made whole, ſinne no more, leaſt a worſe thinge fall vpon thee. Deut.28.21,22. The Lorde ſhall make the peſtilence cleaue vnto thee, vntill hee hath conſumed thee from the land, &c. Or ſhame of nakedneſſe, Gen.3.7. Or in womens paines in childbirth, Gen.3.16. Vnto the woman he ſaid, I will greatly encreaſe thy ſorrowes, and conceptions: in ſorrow ſhalt thou bring forth children.

II. The ſoule is puniſhed with trembling of conſcience, care, trouble, hardneſſe of heart, and madneſſe. Deut.28.28. The Lord ſhall ſmite thee with madneſſe, and with blindnes, and with aſtonying of heart.

III. The whole man is puniſhed, 1. with fearefull ſubiection to the regiment of Satan. Col.1.13. Which freed vs from the power of darkeneſſe, and tranſlated vs into the kingdome of his beeloued Sonne. Hebr.2.14. He alſo himſelfe tooke part with them, that hee might deſtroy through death, him that had power of death, that is, the deuill. 2. A ſeparation from the fellowſhip of God, and trembling at his preſence. Eph.4.18. Hauing their cogitation darkned, & beeing ſtrangers from the life of God. Gen.3.10. I heard thy voice in the garden, and was afraid, becauſe I was naked, therefore I hid my ſelfe. 3. Vpon a mans goods, diuers calamities and dammages. Deut.28.29. Thou ſhalt euer bee oppreſſed with wrong, & be pouled, and no man ſhall ſuccour thee, &c. to the end of the chapter. To this place may bee referred diſtinction of Lordſhips: and of this commeth a care to enlarge them, and bargaining with all manner of ciuill ſeruitudes. 4. The loſſe of that Lordly authoritie, which man had ouer all creatures; alſo their vanitie, which is not onely a weakning, but alſo a corrupting of that excellencie of the vertues and powers which God at the firſt put into them. Rom.8.20,21. The creature is ſubiect to vanitie, not of it owne will, but by reaſon of him, which hath ſubdued it vnder hope, &c. 5. In a mans name, infamie and ignominie ſometimes after his death. Ier. 24.9.

The ſecond, is at the laſt gaſpe, namely death, or a change like vnto death. Rom.6.23. The wages of ſinne is death.

The third is, after this life, euen eternall deſtruction from Gods preſence, & his exceeding glorie. 2.Theſſ.1.9. Who ſhal be puniſhed with euerlaſting perdition, from the preſence of God, and the glorie of his power,

CHAP. XV.

Of Election, and of Ieſus Chriſt the foundation thereof.

PRedeſtination hath two parts: Election, and Reprobation. 1. Theſſ.5.9. God hath not appointed vs to wrath, but to obtaine ſaluation by the meanes of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Election, is Gods decree, whereby on his owne free wil, he hath ordained certaine men to ſaluation, to the praiſe of the glorie of his grace. Eph.1.4,5,6. Hee hath choſen vs in him, before the foundation of the worlde, according to the good pleaſure of his will, to the praiſe praiſe of the glorie of his grace.

This decree is that booke of life, wherin are written the names of the Elect. Reu. 20.12. Another booke was opened, which is the booke of life, and the dead were iudged of thoſe things, that were written in the bookes according to their workes. 2. Tim. 2.19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeale, The Lord knoweth who are his.

The execution of this decree, is an action, by which God, euen as he purpoſed with himſelfe, worketh all thoſe thinges, which he decreede for the ſaluation of the Elect. For they whom God elected to this ende, that they ſhould inherit eternall life, were alſo elected to thoſe ſubordinate meanes, wherby, as by ſteppes, they might attaine this ende, & without which, it were impoſſible to obtaine it. Rom. 8.29.30. Thoſe which hee knew before, he alſo predeſtinate to be made like to the image of his Sonne, that he might be the firſt borne amongſt many brethren: Moreouer, whom he predeſtinate, them he called, whome hee called, them he iuſtified, and whome hee iuſtified, them alſo hee glorified.

There appertaine three things to the execution of this decree. Firſt the foundation. Secondly, the meanes. Thirdly, the degrees.

The foundation is Chriſt Ieſus, called of his father from all eternitie, to performe the office of the Mediator, that in him all thoſe which ſhould bee ſaued, might bee choſen Heb. 5.5. Chriſt tooke not to himſelfe this honour, to be made the high Prieſt, but he that ſaid vnto him, Thou art my Sonne, this day begate I thee, gaue it him, &c. Eſa. 42.1. Behold my ſeruant: I will ſtay vpon him, mine elect, in whome my ſoule delighteth: I haue put my ſpirit vpon him, he ſhall bring forth iudgement to the Gentiles. Eph. 1.4. He hath choſen vs in him, meaning Chriſt.

Queſtion. How can Chriſt be ſubordinate vnto Gods election, ſeeing hee together with the Father decreed all thinges? Anſw. Chriſt as he is Mediatour, is not ſubordinate to the very decree it ſelfe of election, but to the execution thereof onely. 1. Pet. 1.20. Chriſt was ordained before the foundation of the world. Auguſtine in his booke of the Predeſtination of the Saints, chap. 5. Chriſt was predeſtinate that he might be our head.

In Chriſt, wee muſt eſpecially obſerue two things, his Incarnation, and his Office.

To the working of his Incarnation, concurre: firſt, both his Natures: ſecondly, their Vnion: thirdly, their diſtinction.

Chriſts firſt Nature, is the Godhead, in as much as it belongeth to the Son, whereby he is God. Phil. 2. 6. Who being in the forme of God, thought it no robbery to bee equall with God. Iohn. 1.1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, & that Word was God.

It was requiſite for the Mediatour to be God; 1. That he might the better ſuſtaine that great miſery, wherewith mankinde was ouerwhelmed; the greatnes whereof, theſe foure things declare: I. The grieuouſneſſe of ſinne, wherewith Gods maieſtie was infinitely offended. II. Gods infinite anger againſt this ſinne. III. The fearefull power of death. IV. The deuils tyranny who is prince of this world. 2. That he might make his humane nature both of plentifull merit and alſo of ſufficient efficacy, for the worke of mans redēption. 3. That hee might inſtill into all the Elect eternall life, and holineſſe. Eſa. 43.12. I am the Lord, and there is none beſides me a Sauiour, I haue declared, and I haue ſaued, and I haue ſhewed, when there was no ſtrange God among you: therfore yee are my witneſſes, ſaith the Lord, that I am God.

I ſay the Godhead, in as much as it is the Godhead of the Sonne, is Chriſts diuine Nature: not as it is the Godhead of the Father, or the holy Ghoſt: for it is the office of the Sonne, to haue the adminiſtration of euery outward action of the Trinitie, frō the Father to the holy Ghoſt. 1. Cor. 6.8. And he beeing by nature the Sonne of the Father, beſtoweth this priuiledge on thoſe that beleeue, that they are the ſonnes of God by adoption. Ioh. 1.12. As many as receiued him, to them he gaue to be the ſonnes of God.

If either the Father or the holy Ghoſt, ſhould haue beene incarnate, the title of Sonne ſhould haue beene giuen to one of them, who was not the ſonne by eternall generation; and ſo there ſhould bee more ſonnes then one.

Chriſts other nature, is his humanity, whereby he, the Mediatour, is very man. 1. Tim. 2. 5. One God, and one Mediatour betweene God and man, the man Chriſt Ieſus.

It was neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould bee man. Firſt, that God might bee pacified in that nature, wherein he was offended. Secondly, that he might vndergoe puniſhment due to ſinne, the which the Godhead could not, being void & free frō all paſſiō.

Furthermore, Chriſt, as he is man, is like vnto vs in all thinges, ſinne onely excepted. Heb. 2, 17. In all thinges it became him to be made like vnto his brethren. 1. Corin. 15. 34.

Chriſt therefore is a perfect man, conſiſting of an eſſentiall and true ſoule & body, whereunto are ioyned ſuch faculties and properties, as are eſſential vnto both. In his ſoule, is vnderſtanding, memory, will, and ſuch like: in his body, length, breadth, and thicknes: yea, it is comprehended in one onely place, viſible, ſubiect to feeling, neither is there any thing wanting in him, which may either adorne or make for the beeing of mans nature.

Againe, Chriſt in his humanity, was ſubiect to the infirmities of mans nature, which are theſe: I. to be tempted. Math. 4. 1. Ieſus was caried by the ſpirit into the deſart, to be tempted of the deuill. II. To feare. Heb. 5. 7. Who in the dayes of his fleſh did offer vp prayers and ſupplications with ſtrong crying and teares, vnto him that was able to ſaue him from death, & was alſo heard in that which he feared. III. To bee angrie. Mark. 3. 5. Then he looked round about on them angerly, mourning alſo for the hardneſſe of their hearts, and ſaid vnto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. IV. Forgetfulnes of his office impoſed vpon him, by reaſon of the agonie aſtoniſhing his ſenſes. Math. 26. 39. He went a little further, and fell on his face, and prayed, ſaying, O Father, if it be poſſible, let this cuppe paſſe from me: neuertheleſſe, not as I will, but as thou wilt.

We muſt hold theſe things concerning Chriſts infiniteneſſe; I. They were ſuch qualities, as did onely affect his humane nature, and not at all conſtitute the ſame: and therefore might be left of Chriſt. II. They were ſuch as were common to all men; as to thirſt, to be weary, and to die: and not perſonall, as are agues, conſumptions, the leproſie, blindneſſe, &c. III. He was ſubiect to theſe infirmities, not by neceſſity of his humane nature, but by his free wil and pleaſure, pitying mankinde: therefore in him, ſuch infirmities were not the puniſhment of his owne ſinne, as they are in vs, but rather part of that his humiliation which he did willingly vndergoe for our ſakes.

CHAP. XVI.

Of the Vnion of the two natures in Chriſt.

Now followeth the Vnion of the two natures in Chriſt, which eſpecially concerneth his Mediation, for by it his humanity did ſuffer death vpō the croſſe in ſuch ſort as he could neither be ouercome, nor perpetually ouerwhelmed by it. Three things belong to this vniting of Natures.

I. Conception, by which his humane nature was by the wonderfull power and operation of God, both immediatly, that is, without mans helpe, and miraculouſly framed of the ſubſtance of the virgin Mary. Luke. 1. 35. The holy Ghoſt ſhall come vpon thee, and the power of the moſt high ſhall ouerſhadow thee.

The holy Ghoſt cannot be ſaide to be the father of Chriſt, becauſe he did miniſter no matter to the making of the humanity, but did onely faſhion and frame it of the ſubſtance of the virgin Mary.

II. Sanctification, whereby the ſame humane nature was purified, that is, altogether ſeuered by the power of the holy Ghoſt, from the leaſt ſtaine of ſinne, to the ende that it might be holy and be made fit to die for others. Luk. 1, 35. That holy thing which ſhal be borne of thee ſhall be called the Sonne of God. 1. Pet. 3. 18. Chriſt hath once ſuffered for ſinnes, the iuſt for the vniuſt. 1. Pet. 2. 22. Who did not ſinne, neither was there guile found in his mouth

III. Aſſumption, whereby the Word, that is, the ſecond perſon in Trinity, tooke vpon him fleſh, & the ſeede of Abraham, namely that his humane Nature, to the ende that it being deſtitute of a proper and perſonall ſubſiſtence, might in the perſon of the Word obtaine it: ſubſiſting, and, as it were, being ſupported of the word for euer. Ioh. 1. 14. That word was made fleſh. Heb. 2. 16. He tooke not vpon him the nature of Angels, but the ſeede of Abraham.

In the aſſumption, we haue three things to conſider: I. The difference of the two natures in Chriſt. For the diuine nature, as it is limited to the perſon of the Sonne is perfect and actually ſubſiſting in it ſelfe: the other not. II. The manner of vnion. The perſon of the Sonne did by aſſuming the humane Nature, create it, and by creating, aſſume it. III. The product of the Vnion. Whole Chriſt, God and man, was not made a new perſon of the two natures, as of partes compounding a new thing; but remained ſtill the ſame perſon. Now whereas the ancient Fathers tearmed Chriſt a compound perſon, wee muſt vnderſtand them not properly, but by proportion. For as the parts are vnited in the whole, ſo theſe two natures doe concurre togither in one perſon, which is the ſonne of God.

By this wee may ſee that Chriſt is one onely ſonne of God, not two: yet in two reſpects hee is one. As hee is the eternall Word, he is by nature the ſonne of the Father. As he is man, the ſame ſonne alſo, yet not by nature, or by adoption, but onely by perſonall vnion, Luke, 1.35. Math. 3. 17. This is my beloued ſonne, &c.

The phraſe in Scripture agreeing to this Vnion, is the communion of properties, concerning which, obſerue two rules.

I. Of thoſe things, which are ſpoken or attributed to Chriſt, ſome are onely vnderſtood of his diuine nature. As that Ioh. 8.58. Before Abraham was, I am. And that, Coloſſ. 1.15. Who is the image of the inuiſible God, the firſt borne of euery creature. Some againe agree only to his humanity, as borne, ſuffered, dead, buried, &c. Luke. 2.52. And Ieſus increaſed in wiſedome, and ſtature, and in fauour with God and man. Laſtly, other things are vnderſtood, onely of both natures vnited togither. As Math. 17.5. This is my beloued ſonne, in whome onely I am well pleaſed, heare him. Eph. 1.22. He hath made ſubiect all things vnder his feete, and hath appointed him ouer all things to bee the head to the Church.

II. Some things are ſpoken of Chriſt, as he is God, which muſt be interpreted according to his humane nature. Act. 20. 28. To feede the Church of God, that is, Chriſt, which he (according to his manhood) hath purchaſed with his owne blood. 1. Cor. 2.8. If they had knowne this, they would neuer haue crucified the Lord of glorie. Contrarily, ſome things are mentioned of Chriſt, as he is man, which onely are vnderſtood of his diuine nature. Ioh. 3.13. No man aſcended vp to heauen, but hee that hath deſcended from heauen, the ſonne of man which is in heauen. This is ſpoken of his manhood, whereas wee muſt vnderſtand, that onely his Deitie came downe from heauen. Ioh. 6.62. What if ye ſhould ſee the ſonne of man, (vz. Chriſts humane nature) aſcend vp, where he (vz his deitie) was before.

Laſtly, by reaſon of this Vnion, Chriſt, as he is man, is exalted aboue euery name; yea, hee is adored, and hath ſuch a great (though not infinite) meaſure of gifts, as farre ſurpaſſe the gifts of all Saints and angels. Eph. 1.21. And ſet him at his right hand in heauenly places, farre aboue all principalitie, and power, and might, and domination, and euery name that is named, not in this world onely, but in that alſo that is to come. Heb. 1. 6. When he bringeth his firſt begotten ſonne into the world, he ſaith, And let all the angels of God worſhip him. Coloſſ. 2.3. In whome all the treaſures of wiſdome and knowledge are hidden. Phil. 2.9, 10. Therefore God exalted him on hie, and gaue him a name aboue all names, that at the name of Ieſus euery knee ſhould bowe (namely, worſhip, and be ſubiect to him) both of things in heauē, & things in earth, and things vnder the earth.

CHAP. XVII.

Of the diſtinction of both Natures.

THe diſtinction of both natures, is that, whereby they, with their properties and effects, remaine, without compoſition, mingling, or conuerſion, diſtinct, Ioh. 10. 17, 18. Therefore doth my father loue me, becauſe I lay downe my life, that I may take it againe. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it downe of my ſelfe, I haue power to lay it down, and haue power to take it againe. Ioh. 13.31, 32. Nowe is the ſonne of man glorified, & God is glorified in him. If God bee glorified in him, God ſhall alſo glorifie him in himſelfe. Here wee may obſerue, that there is one will in Chriſt, as God: another, as man. Math. 26. 39. Not as I will but as thou wilt. This alſo approoueth that ſentence of the Chalcedon Creed. Wee confeſſe, that one and the ſame Chriſt Ieſus, both Sonne, Lord, onely begotten, is knowne and preached to be in two natures without confuſion, mutation, diſtinction, or ſeparation.

Laſtly, hereby it is manifeſt, that Chriſt, when hee became that which he was not (namely man) continued ſtill that which he was (very God.)

CHAP. XVIII.

Of Chriſts Natiuitie and Office.

THus much concerning Chriſts incarnation, the cleere declaration thereof was by his natiuitie.

The natiuitie of Chriſt, is that whereby Mary a Virgin, did after the courſe of nature, & the cuſtome of women, bring forth Chriſt that Word of the Father, & the ſon of Dauid: ſo that thoſe are much deceiued, which are of opiniō that Chriſt, after a miraculous manner, came into the world, the womb of the virgin being ſhut, Luk 2.23.

Euery

Euery mã child which first openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord. The which place of scripture is applyed to Mary and our sauiour Christ. Hence is it, that the Virgin Mary is said (θεοτόκος) to bring forth albeit shee is not any way mother of the God godhead. For Christ as hee is God, is without mother, & asmã, without Father.

It is couenient to be thought, that Mary continued a virgin vntill her dying day, albeit we make not this opinion any article of our beleefe. I. Christ being nowe to depart the world, committed his mother to the tuition and custodie of his disciple Iohn, which it is like hee would not haue done, if she had had any children, by whõ as custome was, shee might haue beene prouided for. Iohn. 19.26. II. It is likely that shee who was with child by the holy Ghost, would not after knowe any man. III. It is agreed of by the Church in all ages.

Christ beeing now borne, was circumcised the eight daie, that he might fulfil all the righteousnes of the law & being thirtie yeares of age, he was baptized, that hee beeing publikely and solemnely inuested into the office of his Mediatorship, might take vpon him the guilt of our sinnes. Hee was both circumcised & baptised; that we might learne: I. That the whole efficacie of the Sacraments, depend alone & wholly vpon him. II. That hee was Mediatour of mankind, both before and after the law, as also vnder grace. III. That hee is the knot and bound of both couenants.

His office followeth, to the perfect accomplishing wherof, he was annointed of his father, that is, he was sufficiently furnished with both gifts and authoritie. Hebr. 1.9. Therefore God, euen thy God annointed thee with the oyle of gladnesse aboue thy fellowes. Esaie, 61.1. The spirit of the Lord was vpon me, therfore he annointed me. Ioh. 3.34. God giueth him not the spirit by measure.

If any man inforce this as a reason, that Christ could not performe the office of a Mediatour, beeing not the meane or middle betwixt God and man, but the partie offended, and so one of the extreames: wee must knowe that Christ is two waies said to be the middle or meane. I. Betwixt God and all men: for beeing both God and man, hee doeth participate with both extreames. II. Betwixt God and the faithfull onely: first, according to his humanitie, whereby hee receiued the spirit without measure. Secondly, according to his diuine nature, namely, as he is the Word. Nowe the Word is middle, betwixt the father, & the faithfull: 1. In regard of order, because the Word was begotten of the Father, and by it wee haue accesse vnto the Father. This subordination, which is of the Sonne to the Father, is not in the diuine essence, seuerally and distinctly considered, but in the relation or manner of hauing the essence. And after this manner those thinges which are subordinate, cannot bee vnequal, if they haue one and the same singular essence. II. In regard of his office, the which beeing imposed on him, by his Father, he did willingly vndergoe, and of his owne accord.

Christ doeth exercise this office according to both natures vnited in one person, and according to each nature distinct one from the other. For in reconciling God & man together, the flesh performeth some things distinctly, & the Word other things distinctly. Againe, some other things are done not by the Word or flesh alone, but by both together.

This office is so appropriate to Christ, that neither in whole, or in part, can it bee translated to any other. Heb. 7.24. This mã because he endureth for euer, hath an euerlasting priesthood, or a priesthood that cannot passe from one man to another.

Therfore Christ, as he is God, hath vnder him, Emperours, Kings, Princes, to bee his Vicegerents; who therefore are called Gods. Psal. 82.1. But as he is Mediatour, that is, a Priest, a Prophet, and King of the Church, hee hath no Vicegerent, Vicar, or Lieuetenant, who, in his either Kingly or Priestly office, in both, or but one, can bee in his stead.

Christs office is threefold, Priestly, Propheticall, Regall, Psal. 110. 1,2,3,4. Esai, 42.1.

Christs Priesthood, is an office of his, whereby he performed all those things to God, whereby is obtained eternall life. Heb. 5.9. And beeing consecrate, was made the author of eternall saluation, vnto all them that obey him: and is called of God an high Priest for euer after the order of Melchisedec. Chap. 7.24.25. This man because he endureth for euer, hath an euerlasting Priesthood, wherefore hee is able also perfectly to saue all them that come vnto God by him.

His priesthood, consisteth of two parts. Satisfaction, and Intercession.

Satisfaction is that, whereby Christ is a full propitiation to his Father for the Elect. Iob. 33.23. If there bee a meſſenger with him, or an interpreter, one of a thouſand, to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe, then will he haue mercie vpon him, and will ſay, Deliuer him that hee goe not downe into the pit, for I haue found a reconciliation. Rom. 3.24. And are iuſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Chriſt Ieſus. v 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a reconciliatio through faith in his blood. 1. Iohn. 2.2. He is a propitiation for our ſinnes.

Chriſt ſatisfied Gods anger for mans offence, according to his humanitie, by performing perfect obedience to the will of God, according to his Deitie, by miniſtring ſuch eſpeciall dignitie to his perfect obedience, as was both full of merit and efficacie before God, for the ſaluation of the elect. Ioh. 17.19. For their ſakes ſanctifie I my ſelfe, that they alſo may bee ſanctified thorough the trueth. Act. 20.28. To feede the flocke of God, which hee hath purchaſed with his owne blood. 2. Cor. 5.19. God was in Chriſt, and reconciled the worlde to himſelfe, not imputing their ſinnes vnto them.

Satisfaction, comprehendeth his paſſion, and fulfilling the Lawe.

His paſſion, is the firſt part of ſatisfaction, by which he hauing vndergon the puniſhment of ſinne, ſatisfied Gods iuſtice, & appeaſed his anger for the ſins of the faithfull. His paſſion was on this manner.

[a] Somewhat before his death, partly feare ariſing from the ſenſe of Gods wrath imminent vpon him, partly greife poſſeſſing, as it were, each part of him, ſo diſturbed his ſacred minde, [b] that inwardly for a while it ſtroke into him a ſtrange kinde of aſtoniſhment, or rather obliuion of his dutie impoſed vpon him: and outwardly [c] made him pray vnto his Father (if hee would) to remooue that cup from him, the which hee did expreſſe with no ſmall crie, many teares, and a bloodie ſweate, [d] trickling from his bodie vnto the ground. But when hee came againe vnto himſelfe, [e] hee freely yeelded himſelfe vnto his Father to ſatisfie vpon the croſſe for the tranſgreſſiō of man. After this his agonie was ouerpaſſed, [f] by Iudas his trecherie Chriſt is apprehended, and [g] firſt he is brought to Annas, after to Caiaphas, where Peter denieth him: [h] from Caiaphas hee is lead bound to Pilate, [i] Pilate poſteth him ouer to Herod, [k] hee tranſpoſteth him backe againe to Pilate, [l] who acknowledgeth his innocencie, and yet condemneth him as an offendour. This innocent thus condemned, is [m] pitifully ſcourged, crowned with thornes, ſcoffed, ſpitted at, ſpitefully adiudged to the death of the croſſe: [n] on which his handes and feete are faſtened with nailes. Here ſtaied not his paſſions, but after all theſe [o] hee became accurſed to God the father, that is God poured vpon him, being thus innocent, ſuch a ſea of his wrath, as was equiualent to the ſinnes of the whole world. [p] Hee now beeing vnder this curſe, through the ſenſe and feeling of this ſtrange terrour, complaineth to his Father that hee is forſaken: who notwithſtanding, encountring then with Satan and his angels, did vtterly vanquiſh [q] and ouercome them. When this was ended, his heart [r] was pierced with a ſpeare, till the blood guſhed out from his ſides, & he gaue vp [s] the Ghoſt: and [t] commended his ſpirit to his Fathers protection, the which immediatly went into Paradiſe. His body, [u] whereof not one bone was broken, was buryed, & three daies was [x] igminiouſly captiuated of death. [a] Marke 4. 32. Math. 26.38. [b] Iohn. 12.27. Marke. 14. 35. [c] Math. 26.37.42. In this deſcription of Chriſts paſſion, wee may note fiue circumſtances eſpecially.

I. His Agony, namely, a vehement anguiſh, ariſing vpon the conflict of two contrary deſires in him: The firſt, was to be obedient to his father. The ſecond, to auoid the horror of death, Luke. 22.44. Being in an agony, he prayed more earneſtly, and his ſweat was like drops of blood, trickling downe to the ground. Heb. 5.7. In the dayes of his fleſh did offer vp prayers & ſupplications with ſtrong crying and teares vnto him, that was able to ſaue him from death, and was alſo heard in that which he feared.

II. His Sacrifice, which is an action of Chriſts offring himſelfe to God the Father, as a ranſome for the ſinnes of the elect. Heb. 9. 26. Now in the end of the world hath he appeared once to put away ſinne, by the ſacrifice of himſelfe.

In this ſacrifice the oblation was Chriſt, as he was man. Heb. 10.10. By the which will we are ſanctified, euen by the offering of Ieſus Chriſt once made.

The

The altar alſo was Chriſt, as he was God, Heb.13.10. Wee haue an Altar, whereof they haue no authoritie to eate which ſerue in the Tabernacle. Heb.9.14. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, which through the eternall ſpirit offered himſelfe without ſpotte to God, purge your conſcience from dead works, to ſerue the liuing God? Hence it is that Chriſt is ſaid to ſanctifie himſefe; as hee is man, Ioh. 17.19. For their ſakes, ſanctifie I my ſelfe. Math 23.17. As the altar, the gift, and the temple, the gold, Math.23.17.

Chriſt is the prieſt, as he is God and man. Heb.5.6. Thou art a prieſt for euer after the order of Melchiſedec. 1. Tim.2.5,6. One Mediatour betweene God and man, the man Chriſt Ieſus, who gaue himſelfe a ranſome for all men, to be a teſtimonie in due time.

III. God the fathers acceptation of that his ſacrifice, in which he was well pleaſed. For, had it beene that God had not allowed of it, Chriſts ſuffering had beene in vaine, Math.3.17. This is my beloued ſonne, in whome I am well pleaſed. Eph.5.1. Euen as Chriſt loued vs and gaue himſelfe for vs to bee an offering and a ſacrifice of a ſweete ſmelling ſauour to God.

IV. Imputation of mans ſinne to Chriſt, whereby his Father accounted him as a tranſgreſſour, hauing tranſlated the burden of mans ſinnes to his ſhoulders. Eſai,53.4. He hath borne our infirmities, and caried our ſorrowes: yet we did iudge him as plagued and ſmitten of God, and humbled: but he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, hee was broken for our iniquities, &c. and v.12. Hee was counted with the tranſgreſſours, and hee bare the ſinnes of many. 2, Cor. 5.21. Hee hath made him to be ſinne for vs, which knewe no ſinne, that wee ſhould bee made the righteouſneſſe of God in him.

V. His wonderfull humiliation conſiſting of two parts: I. In that he made himſelfe of ſmall or no reputation in reſpect of his Deitie, Phil. 2.7.8. He made himſelfe of no reputation, &c. hee humbled himſelfe, and became obedient vnto the death, euen the death of the croſſe.

Wee may not thinke, that this debaſing of Chriſt came becauſe his diuine nature was either waſted or weakened, but becauſe his Deitie did, as it were, lay aſide, and conceale his power and maieſtie for a ſeaſon. And as Irenæus ſaith, The Word reſted, that the humane nature might be crucified, & dead.

II. In that he became execrable, which is, by the law, accurſed for vs. Gal. 3.10. Curſed is euery one that remaineth not in all thinges written in the booke of the lawe to doe them.

This accurſedneſſe, is either inward or outward.

Inward is the ſenſe of Gods fearefull anger vpon the croſſe. Reuel.19.15. Hee it is that treadeth the winepreſſe of the fiercenes and wrath of Almightie God. Eſai,53.5. Hee is grieued for our tranſgreſſions, the chaſtiſement of our peace was vpon him, and with his ſtripes wee were healed. This appeared by thoſe drops of blood, which iſſued from him, by his cryings to his Father vpon the croſſe, and by ſending of angels to comfort him. Hence was it, that hee ſo much feared death, which many Martyrs entertained moſt willingly.

His outward accurſedneſſe, ſtandeth in three degrees. I. Death vpon the croſſe, which was not imaginarie, but true, becauſe blood and water iſſued from his heart. For ſeeing that water and blood guſhed forth together, it is very like, the caſket or coat which inueſteth the heart called Pericardion, was peirced. As Columbus obſerueth in his Anatomie, 7. booke. Ioh. 19.24.

His death was neceſſarie, that hee might confirme to vs the Teſtament, or Couenant of grace promiſed for our ſakes, Heb. 19.15,16. For this cauſe he is the Mediatour of the newe Teſtament, that through death, &c. they which were called, might receiue the promiſe of eternall inheritance: for where a Teſtament is, there muſt bee the death of him that made the teſtament, &c. ver.17.

II. Buriall, to ratifie the certentie of his death.

III. Deſcending into hell, which wee muſt not vnderſtand that hee went locally into the place of the damned, but that for the time of his abode in the graue he was vnder the ignominious dominion of death. Act. 2.24. Whome God hath raiſed vp and looſed the ſorrowes of death, becauſe it was impoſſible that he ſhould bee holden of it. Eph. 4.9. In that hee aſcended, what was it but that he alſo deſcended firſt into the loweſt part of the earth?

It was neceſſarie that Chriſt ſhould bee captiuated of death, that he might aboliſh the ſting, that is the power thereof. 1. Cor. 15.55. O death where is thy ſting! O hel where is thy victorie!

Thus wee haue heard of Chriſts maruelous paſſion, whereby he hath aboliſhed both the firſt and ſecond death, due vnto vs for our ſinns, the which (as we may further obſerue) is a perfect ranſome for the ſinnes of all and euery one of the elect. 1. Tim. 2. 6. Who gaue himſelfe a ranſome for all men. For it was more, that Chriſt the only begotten ſonne of God, yea, God himſelfe for a ſmall while ſhould beare the curſe of the lawe, then if the whole world ſhould haue ſuffered eternall puniſhment.

This alſo is worthy our meditation, that then a man is well grounded in the doctrine of Chriſts paſſion, when his heart ceaſeth to ſinne, and is pricked with the griefe of thoſe ſinnes, whereby, as with ſpeares he pierced the ſide of the immaculate lambe of God, 1. Ioh. 3. 6. Who ſo ſinneth, neither hath ſeene him, nor knowne him. Zach. 12. 10. And they ſhall looke vpon him, whome they haue pierced, and they ſhall lamẽt for him, as one lamenteth for his onely ſonne, and be ſorie for him, as one is ſorie for his firſt borne.

After Chriſts paſſion, followeth the fulfilling of the Law, by which he ſatiſfied Gods iuſtice in fulfilling the whole Law, Rom. 8. 3. 4. God ſent his owne ſonne, that the righteouſneſſe of the law might be fulfilled by vs.

He fulfilled the Law, partly by the holineſſe of his humane nature, and partly by obedience in the works of the Law. Rom. 8. 2. The Lawe of the ſpirit of life, which is in Chriſt Ieſus, hath freed me from the Lawe of ſinne, and of death. Math. 3 15. It becommeth vs to fulfil all righteouſneſſe, &c. Iohn. 17. 19.

Nowe ſucceedeth the ſecond part of Chriſts prieſthood, namely, interceſſion, whereby Chriſt is an Aduocate, and intreater of God the father for the faithfull. Rom. 8. 34. Chriſt is at the right hand of God, and maketh requeſt for vs. Chriſts interceſſion is directed immediately to God the father. 1. Ioh. 2. 1. If any man ſinne, we haue an aduocate with the father, euen Ieſus Chriſt the iuſt. Nowe as the Father is firſt of the Trinitie in order, ſo if he be appeaſed, the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt are appeaſed alſo. For there is one and the ſame agreement and will of all the perſons of the Trinitie.

Chriſt maketh interceſſion according to both natures. Firſt according to his humanitie, partly by appearing before his Father in heauen, partly by deſiring the ſaluation of the Elect. Heb. 9. 24. Chriſt is entred into very heauen to appeare nowe in the ſight of God for vs. And chap. 7. 25. He is able perfectly to ſaue them that come to God by him, ſeeing he euer liueth to make interceſſion for them. Secondly, according to his Deitie, partly by applying the merit of his death; partly by making requeſt by his holy ſpirit, in the hearts of the Elect, with ſighes vnſpeakable. 1. Pet. 1. 2. Elect according to the foreknowledge of the Father to the ſanctification of the ſpirit. Rom. 8. 26. The ſpirit helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what to pray as we ought, but the ſpirit it ſelfe maketh requeſt for vs with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed.

We are not therefore to imagine or ſurmiſe, that Chriſt proſtrateth himſelfe vpõ his knees before his Fathers throne for vs, neither is it neceſſarie, ſeeing his very preſence before his father, hath in it the force of an humble petition.

The ende of Chriſts interceſſion is, that ſuch as are iuſtified by his merits, ſhould by this meanes continue in the ſtate of grace. Now Chriſts interceſſion preſerueth the elect in couering their continuall ſlips, infirmities, and imperfect actions, by an eſpeciall and continuall application of his merits. That by this meanes mans perſon may remaine iuſt, and mans workes acceptable to God. 1. Ioh. 2. 2. He is a reconciliation for our ſinnes, and not for ours onely, but for the ſins of the whole world. 1. Pet. 2. 5. Ye as liuely ſtones, be made a ſpirituall houſe and holy prieſthood, to offer vp ſpirituall ſacrifices acceptable to God by Ieſus Chriſt. Reuel. 8. 3. 4. And another angel came & ſtood before the altar, hauing a golden cenſer, and much odours was giuen vnto him that he ſhould offer with the prayers of all Saints vpon the golden altar, which is before the throne, and the ſmoake of the odours with the prayers of the Saints, went vp before God out of the Angels hand.

His Propheticall office, is that, wherby he immediately from his Father, reuealeth his word and all the meanes of ſaluation compriſed in the ſame. Ioh. 1. 18. The Son, which is in the boſome of his Father, he hath declared vnto you. Ioh. 8. 26. Thoſe things which I heare of my father, I ſpeake to the world. Deut. 18. 18. I will raiſe them vp a Prophet, &c.

The word was firſt reuealed, partly by viſiõs, by dreams, by ſpeech; partly by the inſtinct & motion of the holy ghoſt. Heb. 1. 1. At ſundry times, & in diuers maners, God ſpake in old time to our fathers the Prophets:

in

in theſe laſt daies hee hath ſpoken to vs by his ſonne. 2. Pet. 1. 21. Prophecie came not in olde time by the will of man, but holy men of GOD ſpake as they were mooued by the holy Ghoſt.

The like is done ordinarily onely by the preaching of the word, where the holy ghoſt doth inwardly illuminate the vnderſtanding. Luk. 24. 45. Then opened he their vnderſtanding that they might vnderſtād the ſcriptures. v. 21. 15. I will giue you a mouth & wiſedome, where againſt all your aduerſaries ſhall not be able to ſpeake, nor reſiſt. Act. 16. 14. Whoſe heart the Lord opened that ſhe attended on the things that Paul ſpake. For this cauſe, Chriſt is called the Doctour, Lawegiuer, and Counſellour of his church. Mat. 23. 10. Be ye not called Doctours, for one is your Doctour, Ieſus Chriſt. Iam. 4. 12. There is one Lawgiuer which is able to ſaue and to deſtroy. Eſay. 9. 6. He ſhal call his name Counſellour. &c. Yea, hee is the Apoſtle of our profeſſion. Heb. 3. 1. The angel of the couenant. Malac. 3. 1. And the Mediatour of the newe couenant. Heb. 9. 15. Therefore the ſoueraigne authority of expounding the Scripture, onely belonges to Chriſt: & the Church hath onely the miniſtery of iudgment and interpretation committed vnto her.

Chriſts Regall office, is that; wherby he diſtributeth his gifts, & diſpoſeth al things for the benefit of the elect. Pſal. 2. & 110. 31. 2. The Lord ſaid vnto my Lord, ſit thou on my right hand til I make thine enemies thy foteſtoole.

The execution of Chriſts Regall office, comprehendeth his exaltation.

Chriſts exaltation is that, by which he, after his humiliation: was by little & little exalted to glory; & that in ſundry reſpects according to both his natures.

The exaltation of his diuine nature, is an apparent declaratiō of his diuine properties in his humane nature, without the leaſt alteration thereof. Rom. 1. 4. Declared mightily to be the ſonne of God, touching the ſpirit of ſanctification by the reſurrection frō the dead. Act. 2. 36. God hath made him both Lord and Chriſt, whom ye haue crucified.

The exaltation of his humanity, is the putting off from him his ſeruile condition & al infirmities, and the putting on of ſuch habituall gifts; which albeit they are created and finite, yet they haue ſo great and ſo marueilous perfection, as poſſibly can be aſcribed to any creature. The gifts of his minde, are wiſedome, knowledge, ioy, and other vnſpeakeable vertues of his bodie, immortality, ſtrength, agility, brightneſſe, Phil. 3. 21. Who ſhall change our vile bodies, that it may bee faſhioned like vnto his glorious body. Math. 17. 2. He was tranſfigured before them, and his face did ſhine as the ſunne, and his cloathes were as white as the light. Heb. 1. 9. God euen thy God hath annointed thee with the oyle of gladneſſe aboue thy fellowes. Eph. 1. 20, 22.

Chriſts body, although, it be thus glorified, yet is it ſtill of a ſoilde ſubſtance, cōpaſſed about, viſible, palpaple, and ſhall perpetually remain in ſome certain place, Luk. 24. 39. Behold my hands, and my feete, it is euen I, touch me, and ſee: a ſpirit hath no fleſh and bones, as ye ſee me haue

There be three degrees of Chriſts exaltation.

I. His reſurrection, wherein by his diuine power he ſubdued death, and raiſed vp himſelfe to eternall life, 2. Cor. 13. 4. Though he was crucified concerning his infirmity, yet liueth he through the power of God. Mat. 28. 6. He is not here for he is riſen, as hee ſaide, Come ſee the place where the Lord was laid.

The ende of Chriſts reſurrection, was to ſhew that his ſatisfaction, by his paſſiō and death, was fully abſolute. For one only ſinne would haue detained the Mediatour, vnder the dominiō of death, though he had fully ſatisfied for all the reſt. 1. Cor. 15. 17. If Chriſt be not raiſed, your faith is in vaine: ye are yet in your ſinnes. Rom. 4. 25. Who was deliuered to death for our ſinnes, & is riſen againe for our iuſtification.

II. His aſcenſion into heauen, which is a true, locall, and viſible tranſlation of Chriſts humane nature from earth into the higheſt heauē of the bleſſed, by the vertue & power of his deity, Act. 1. 9. Whē he had ſpoken theſe things, while they beheld, he was taken vp: for a cloude tooke him out of their ſight: and while they looked ſtedfaſtly towards heauen, as he went, behold two men ſtood by them in white apparell: which alſo ſaid, Ye mē of Galile, why ſtand ye gazing into heauē? This Ieſus which is taken vp from you into heauen, ſhall come as ye haue ſeene him goe into heauen. Eph. 4. 10. He aſcended farre aboue al the heauens.

The ende of Chriſts aſcenſion was, that he might prepare a place for the faithfull, giue them the holy Ghoſt, and their eternall glory. Ioh. 14. 2. In my fathers houſe are many manſions: if it were not ſo, I would haue told you: I goe to prepare a place for you. c. 16. 7. If I goe not away, the Comforter will not eome vnto you: but if I depart, I will ſend him vnto you.

III. His ſitting at the right hand of God the Father, which metaphorically ſignifieth that Chriſt hath in the higheſt heauens actually all glory, power, and dominion, Heb. 1. 3. By himſelfe hee hath purged our ſinnes, and ſitteth at the right hand of the maieſty in the higheſt places. Pſal. 110. 1. The Lord ſaid to my Lord ſit thou at my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footeſtoole. 1. Cor. 15. 25. He muſt raigne til he hath put all his enemies vnder his feete. Act. 7. 55. He beeing full of the holy Ghoſt, looked ſtedfaſtly into heauen, and ſaw the glory of God, and Ieſus ſtanding at the right hand of God. Mark. 20. 22.

His regall office hath two parts: The firſt is, his regiment of the kingdome of heauen, part whereof is in heauen, part vpon earth, namely, the congregation of the faithfull.

In the gouernement of his Church, hee exerciſeth two prerogatiues royall. The firſt is, to make lawes. Iam. 4. 12. There is one Lawgiuer which is able to ſaue and to deſtroy. The ſecõd is to ordaine his miniſters. Eph. 4. 11. He gaue ſome to be Apoſtles, others Prophets, others Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtours and teachers, &c. 1. Cor. 12. 28. God hath ordained ſome in the Church, as firſt, Apoſtles ſecondly, Prophets, thirdly teachers, then thẽ that do miracles, after that, the gifts of healing, helpers, gouernours, diuerſity of tongues.

Chriſts gouernement of the Church, is either by collection of it out of the world, or conſeruation beeing collected. Eph. 4. 12. Pſal. 110.

The ſecond part of this Regall office, is the deſtruction of the kingdome of darkenes. Col. 1. 13. Who hath deliuered vs from the kingdome of darkneſſe. Pſal. 2. 9. Thou ſhalt cruſh them with a ſcepter of yron, and breake them in peeces like a potters veſſell. Luke. 19. 27. Thoſe mine enemies, that would not that I ſhould raigne ouer them, bringe hither, and ſlay them before me.

The kingdome of darkeneſſe, is the whole company of Chriſts enemies.

The Prince of this kingdome, and of all the members thereof, is the deuil. Eph. 2. 2. Ye walked once according to the counſell of the world, and after the prince that ruleth in the aire, euen the prince that now worketh in the children of diſobedience. 2. Cor. 4. 4. The God of this world hath blinded the eyes of the infidels. 2. Cor. 6. 15. What concord hath Chriſt with Belial, or what part hath the beleeuer with the infidell?

The members of this kingdome, and ſubiects to Satan, are his angels, and vnbeleeuers, among whome, the principall members are Atheiſts, who ſay in their heart, their is no God. Pſal. 14. 1. And Magitians, who bargaine with the deuil, to accompliſh their deſires. 1. Sam. 28. 7. Pſal. 58. 5. Idolatours, who either adore falſe gods, or the true God in an idoll. 1. Cor. 10. 7, 20. Turkes and Iewes are of this bunch; ſo are Hereticks, who are ſuch as erre with pertinacie in the foundation of religion. 2. Tim. 2. 18. Apoſtates, or reuolters from faith in Chriſt Ieſus. Heb. 6. 6. Falſe Chriſts, who beare men in hand, they are true Chriſts. Math. 24. 26. There were many ſuch about the time of our Sauiour Chriſt his firſt comming, as Ioſephus witneſſeth, booke 20. of Iewiſh antiquities, the 11, 12, and 14, chapters. Laſtly, that Antichriſt, who, as it is now apparant, can be none other but the Pope of Rome. 2. Theſſ. 2. 3. Let no man deceiue you by any meanes, for that day ſhall not come, except there come a departing firſt, & that that man of ſinne be diſcloſed, euen the ſonne of perdition, which is an aduerſarie, and exalteth himſelfe againſt all that is called God, or that is worſhipped: ſo that he doth ſit as God in the temple of God, ſhewing himſelfe that hee is God. Reuel. 13. 11. And I beheld another beaſt cõming out of the earth, which had two hornes like the Lambe, but hee ſpake like the dragon: And he did all that the firſt beaſt could doe before him, and he cauſed the earth, and them that dwell therein, to worſhip the beaſt, whoſe deadly wound was healed.

There were then, firſt, Antichriſts at Rome, when the Biſhops thereof woulde be entitled vniuerſall, or ſupreame gouernours of the whole world; but then were they complete, when they, togither with Eccleſiaſticall cenſure vſurped ciuill authoritie.

After that Chriſt hath ſubdued al his enemies, theſe two things ſhall enſue: I. The ſurrendering ouer of his kingdome to God the Father, as concerning the regiment: for at that time ſhall ceaſe both that ciuill regiment, and ſpirituall pollicie, conſiſting in word and ſpirit togither. II. The ſubiection of Chriſt, onely in regard of his humane nature, which then is, when the ſon of God ſhall moſt fully manifeſt his maieſtie, which before was obſcured by the fleſh as a vaile, ſo that the ſame fleſh remaining both glorious & vnited to the ſon of God, may by infinite degrees appeare inferiour.

We may not therfore imagine, that the subiection of Christ, consisteth in diminishing the glory of the humanity, but in manifesting most fully the maiesty of the Word.

CHAP. XIX.

CONCERNING THE OVTward meanes of executing the decree of Election, and of the Decalogue.

AFter the foundation of election, which hath hitherto beene deliuered, it followeth, that wee should intreat of the outward meanes of the same.

The meanes are Gods Couenant, and the seale thereof.

Gods couenant, is his contract with man, concerning life eternall, vpon certaine conditions.

This couenant consisteth of two parts: Gods promise to man, Mans promise to God.

Gods promise to man, is that, whereby he bindeth himselfe to man to bee his God, if he breake not the condition.

Mans promise to God, is that whereby he voweth his allegiance vnto his Lord, & to performe the condition betweene thē.

Againe, there are two kindes of this couenant. The couenant of workes, and the couenant of grace. Ierem. 31. 31. 42. 43. Behold the daies come, saith the Lord, that I wil make a new couenant with the house of Israell, and with the house of Iudah, not according to the couenant I made with their fathers when I tooke them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; the which my couenant they brake, although I was an husband to them, saith the Lord. But this shall be the couenant, that I will make with the house of Israell: after those daies, saith the Lord, I will put my lawe in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they shal be my people.

The couenant of workes, is Gods conant, made with condition of perfect obedience, and is expressed in the morall law.

The Morall Law, is that part of Gods word, which commandeth perfect obedience vnto man, as wel in his nature, as in his actions, and forbiddeth the contrary. Rom. 10. 5. Moses thus describeth the righteousnes which is of the law, That the man, which doth these things, shall liue thereby. 1. Tim. 1. 5. The end of the commandement, is loue out of a pure heart, & of a good cōscience, & faith vnfained. Luk. 16. 27. Thou shalt loue the Lord thy God, with all thine heart, with al thy soule, and with all thy strength. Rom. 7. We knowe that the lawe is spirituall.

The Lawe hath two parts. The Edict, commanding obedience, and the condition binding to obedience. The condition is eternall life to such as fulfill the lawe, but to transgressours, euerlasting death.

The Decalogue or ten commandements is an abridgement of the whole lawe, and the couenant of workes. Exod. 34, 27. And the Lord said vnto Moses, Write thou these words, for after the tenour of these words, I haue made a couenant with thee, and with Israell. And he was there with the Lord fourtie daies and fourtie nights, and did neither eate bread, nor drinke water, and hee wrote in the tables the words of the couenant, euen the ten commandemēts. 1. King. 8. 9. Nothing was in the Arke, saue the two tables of stone, which Moses had put there at Horeb, where the lord made a couenant with the children of Israell, when hee brought them out of the land of Egypt. Math. 22. 40. On these two commaundements hangeth the whole law & the prophets.

The true interpretation of the Decalogue, must be according to these rules.

I. In the negatiue, the affirmatiue must be vnderstood: and in the affirmatiue, the negatiue.

II. The negatiue bindeth at all times, and to all times: and the affirmatiue, bindeth at all times, but not to all times: and therefore negatiues are of more force.

III. Vnder one vice expressly forbidden, are comprehended all of that kind, yea the least cause, occasion, or enticement thereto, is as well forbidden, as that 1. Ioh. 3. 15. Whosoeuer hateth his brother is a manslaier. Math. 5. 21. to the end. Euill thoughts are condemned, as wel as euill actions.

IV. The smallest sinnes are entituled with the same names, that that sin is, which is expresly forbidden in that commandement, to which they appertaine. As in the former places, hatred is named murther, & to looke after a woman with a lusting eie is adulterie.

V. Wee must vnderstand euery commandemēt of the law so, as that we annexe this condition: vnlesse God command the cōtrarie. For God beeing an absolute Lord, and so aboue the law, may command that which which his law forbiddeth: ſo he commanded Iſaac to be offered, the Egyptians to be ſpoiled, the braſen Serpent to be erected which was a figure of Chriſt, &c.

The Decalogue, is deſcribed in two tables.

The ſumme of the firſt table, is, that we loue God with our minde, memorie, affections, and all our ſtrength. Math. 22.37. This is the firſt, (to wit, in nature and order) & great commandement (namely, in excellencie, and dignitie.)

CHAP. XX.

Of the firſt commaundement.

THe firſt table hath foure commandements.

The firſt, teacheth vs to haue and chooſe the true God for our God. The wordes are theſe.

I am Iehouah thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, and out of the houſe of bondage. Thou ſhalt haue none other God but me.

The Reſolution.

I am. If any man rather iudge, that theſe words are a preface to all the commandements, then a part of the firſt, I hinder him not: neuertheleſſe, it is like, that they are a perſwaſion to the keeping of the firſt commandement: and that they are ſet before it, to make way vnto it: as being more hard to be receiued, then the reſt. And this may appeare, in that the three commande ments next following haue their ſeuerall reaſons.

Iehouah. This word ſignifieth three things: I. Him who of himſelfe, and in himſelfe, was from all eternitie. Reuel. 1.8. Who is, who was, & who is to come. II. Him which giueth being to all things, when they were not, partly by creating, partly by preſeruing them: III. Him which mightily cauſeth that thoſe things which he hath promiſed, ſhould both be made, and continued. Exod. 6 1. Rom. 4.17.

Here beginneth the firſt reaſon of the firſt commãdement, taken from the name of God: it is thus framed.

He that is Iehouah, muſt alone be thy God.
But I am Iehouah:
Therefore I alone muſt be thy God.

This propoſitiõ is wanting: the aſſumption is in theſe words (I am Iehouah) the concluſion is the commaundement.

Thy God. Theſe are the words of the couenant of grace, Ierem. 32.33. whereby the Lord promiſeth to his people, remiſſion of ſinnes, and eternall life. Yea theſe words are as a ſecond reaſon of the commaundements, drawne from the equalitie of that relation, which is betweene God, & his people.

If I be thy God, thou againe muſt bee my people, and take me alone for thy God.

But I am thy God:

Therefore thou muſt be my people, and take me alone for thy God.

The aſſumption, or ſecond part of this reaſon, is confirmed by an argument takẽ from Gods effects, when he deliuered his people out of Egypt, as it were, from the ſeruitude of a moſt tyranous maſter. This deliuerie was not appropriate only to the Iſraelites, but in ſome ſort to the church of God in all ages; in that it was a type of a moſt ſurpaſſing deliuerie from the fearfull kingdome of darkeneſſe, 1. Cor. 10.1,2. I would not haue you ignorant, brethren, that al our fathers were vnder the cloud, and all paſſed through the red ſea, and were all baptiſed vnto Moſes in the cloud, and in the ſea. Col. 1.13. Who hath deliuered vs from the power of darkeneſſe, and tranſlated vs into the kingdome of his deare ſonne.

Other Gods or ſtrange Gods. They are ſo called, not that they by nature are ſuch, or can be, but becauſe the corrupt, and more then deuilliſh heart of carnall man eſteemeth ſo of them. Phil. 3. 19 Whoſe god is their bellie. 1. Cor. 4.4. Whoſe mindes the God of this world hath bewitched.

Before my face. That is, (figuratiuely) in my ſight or preſence, to whome the ſecret imaginations of the heart are knowne: & this is the third reaſon of the firſt commãdement, as if he ſhould ſay. If thou in my preſence reiect me, it is an heinous offẽce: ſee therefore thou doe it not. After the ſame manner reaſoneth the Lord. Gen. 17. 1. I am God almightie, therefore walke vpright.

The affirmatiue part.

Make choice of Iehouah to be thy God.

The duties here commanded, are theſe:

I. To acknowledge God, that is, to knowe and confeſſe him to be ſuch a god, as hee hath reuealed himſelfe to be in his word, and creatures, Col. 1.10. Increaſing in the knowledge of God. Ierem. 24.7. And I will giue them an heart to know me, that I am the Lord, and they ſhall be my people, and I wil bee their God: for they ſhall returne vnto me with their whole heart. In this knowledg of God muſt we glorie, Ierem. 9. 24. Let him that glorieth, glorie in this, that he vnderstandeth & knoweth me: for I am the Lord which shew mercy, iudgemẽt & righteousnes in the earth.

II. An vnion with God, whereby man is knit in heart with God, Iosh.23.8. Sticke fast vnto the Lord your God, as ye haue done vnto this daie. Act.11.23. Hee exhorted all, that with purpose of heart, they would cleaue to the Lord. Man cleaueth vnto God three manner of waies: in affiance, in loue, and feare of God.

Affiance, is that, wherby a man acknowledging the power and mercie of God, & in him, against all assaults whatsoeuer, doth stedfastly rest himselfe. 2. Chro.20.20. Put your trust in the Lord your God, and ye shal be assured, beleeue his Prophets and ye shall prosper. Psal.27.1. God is my light, & my saluation, whome should I feare? God is the strength of my life, of whom should I be afraid? v.3. Though an hoast pitched against me, mine heart should not be afraid: though warre bee raised against me, I will be secure.

Hence riseth patience, and alacritie in present perils. Psal.39.19. I should haue bin dumb, and not opened my mouth, because thou didst it. 2. Sam.16.10. the king said, What haue I to doe with you, yee sonnes of Zeruiah? If he cursed, because the Lord said, Curse Dauid, what is he that dare say, why doest thou so? Gen.45.5. Bee not sad, neither grieued with your selues, that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you for your preseruation. v.8. Nowe then, you sent me not, but God himselfe. 2. King.6.16. Feare not, for they that be with vs, are moe, then they that be with them.

This affiance engendreth hope, which is a patient expectation of Gods presence & assistance in all things that are to come. Psal.37.5. Commit thy way vnto the Lord, & trust in him, and he shall bring it to passe. ver.7. Waite patiently vpon the Lord, and hope in him. Prou.16.3. Commit thy worke vnto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be directed.

The loue of God, is that, whereby man acknowledging Gods goodnesse and fauour towards him, doeth againe loue him aboue all things, Deut.6.5. Thou shalt loue the Lord thy God with all thine heart, with al thy soule, and with all thy strength.

The markes of the true loue of God are these: I. To heare willingly his word. II. To speake often to him. III. To thinke often of him. IV. To doe his will without irksomnesse. V. To giue bodie, and all for his cause. VI. To desire his presence aboue all, and to bewaile his absence. VII. To embrace all such things as appertaine to him. VIII. To loue and hate that which he loueth & hateth. IX. In al things to seeke to please him X. To drawe others vnto the loue of him. XI. To esteeme highly of such gifts and graces, as he bestoweth. XII. To stay our selues vpon his counsels reuealed in his word. Lastly to call vpon his name with affiance.

The feare of God, is that whereby man, acknowledging Gods both mercie & iustice, doth as it were a capitall crime, feare to displease God. Psal.103.3. With thee is mercie, that thou maist be feared. Habak.3.16. When I heard it, my belly trembled, my lips shooke at the voice: rottennesse entred into my bones, and I trembled in my selfe, that I might rest in the day of trouble, when he commeth vp against the people to destroy them. Psal.4.4. Tremble, and sinne not.

Hence ariseth the Godly mans desire, to approoue himselfe in al things to his God, Gen.5.22. And Henoch walked with God, after that, &c. Gen.17.1. God said to him, I am al-sufficient, walke before me, and be thou perfect.

Out of these three former vertues, proceedeth humilitie, wherby a man acknowledging Gods free bountie, and prostrating himselfe before him, doth ascribe vnto him all praise and glorie. 1. Cor.1.31. Let him that glorieth, glorie in the Lord. 1. Pet.5.5. Decke your selues inwardly with lowlinesse of mind: for God resisteth the proud, and giueth grace to the humble. v.6. Humble your selues therefore vnder the mightie hand of God, that hee may exalt you in due time. 1. Ch.29.10,11. & Dauid said, Blessed be thou O Lord God of Israel our father for euer, and thine, O Lord, is greatnesse and power, and glorie, and victorie, and praise: for all that is in heauen, and in earth is thine, &c. and v.14. But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer willingly on this sort: for all things come of thee, and of thine own hand we haue giuen thee, &c.

The negatiue part.

Account not that as God, which is by nature no God.

In this place are these sinnes forbidden:

I. Ignorance of the true God and his will, which is not onely not to knowe, but also to doubt of such things, as God hath reuealed in his word, Ierem.4.22. My people is foolish, they haue not knowne me: they are foolish children, and haue none vnderstanding: they are wise to do euil, but to do wel they haue no knowledge. Ierem.9.3. They proceede from euill euill to worſe, and haue not knowne me, ſaith the Lord.

II. Atheiſme, when the heart denieth either God, or his attributes: as, his Iuſtice, Wiſdome, prouidence, Preſence. Pſal. 14. 1. The foole hath ſaid in his heart there is no God. Eph. 2. 12. Yee had not hope, and were without God in the world. Malach. 1. 2. I loue you, ſaith the Lord, yet ye ſay, wherein haue we ſpoken againſt thee? v. 14. Ye haue ſaid, it is in vaine to ſerue God: and what profit is it, that we haue kept his commandements, & that we walked humbly before the Lord of hoſts?

III. Errours concerning God, the perſons of the Deity, or the attributes. Here is to be reproued Helleniſme, which is the acknowledging and adoring of a multiplicitie of Gods. Auguſt. in his 6. booke of the City of God. chap. 7.

Againe, Iudaiſme is here condemned, which worſhippeth one GOD without Chriſt.

The like may be ſaid of the hereſies of the Maniches, and Marcian, who denied God the father: of Sabellius, denying the diſtinction of three perſons: and Arrius, who ſaith, that Chriſt the ſonne of God, is not very God.

IV. To withdrawe, and remoue the affections of the heart, from the Lord, & ſet them vpon other things. Eſay, 29. 13. The Lord ſaid, this people draweth neere me with their mouth, and honour me with their lippes, but their heart is farre from me. Ierem. 12. 2. Thou art neere in their mouth, and farre from their reynes. The heart is many waies withdrawne from God.

I. By diſtruſt in God, Heb. 10. 38. The iuſt ſhall liue by faith, but if any withdrawe himſelfe, my ſoule ſhall haue no pleaſure in him. From this diffidence ariſe, I. Impatience in ſuffering afflictions, Ierem. 20. 14. Curſed be the day wherein I was borne, and let not the day wherein my mother bare me, be bleſſed. v. 13. Curſed be the man, that ſhewed my father, ſaying, a man child is borne vnto thee, and comforted him. v. 18. How is it that I came forth of the wombe, to ſee labour and ſorrow, that my dayes ſhould be conſumed with ſhame? II. Tempting of God, when ſuch as diſtruſt, or rather contemne him, ſeeke ſignes of Gods trueth and power. Math. 4. 7. Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God. 1. Cor. 10. 6. Neither let vs tempt God, as they tempted him, and were deſtroyed by ſerpents. v. 10. Neither murmure ye, as ſome of them murmured, and were deſtroyed of the deſtroyer. III. Deſperation, Gen. 4. 13. Mine iniquity is greater then can bee pardoned. 1. Theſſ. 4. 13. Sorrow ye not, as they which haue no hope. IV. Doubtfulneſſe, concerning the trueth of Gods benefites preſent, or to come. Pſal. 116. 11. I ſaid in my haſte al men are lyars.

II. Confidence in creatures, whether it be in their ſtrength, as Ierem. 17. 5. Curſed is the man that hath his confidence in man, & maketh fleſh his arme, but his heart ſlideth from the Lord. Or riches, Math. 6. 24. Ye cannot ſerue God and riches. Epheſ. 5. 6. Noe couetous perſon, which is an Idolater, hath inheritance in the kingdome of Chriſt and of God. Or defenced places. Ierem. 49. 16. Thy feare, and the pride of thine heart hath deceiued thee, that thou dwelleſt in the clefts of the Rocke, and keepeſt the height of the hil: though thou ſhouldeſt make thy neaſt as high as the Eagle, I will bring thee downe from thence, ſaith the Lord. Or pleaſure, and dainties: to ſuch their belly is their God, Phil. 3. 14. Or in Phyſitians, 2. Cor. 6. 12. And Aſa in the nine and thirteth yeare of his raigne, was diſeaſed in his feet, and his diſeaſe was extreame, yet he ſought not the Lord in his diſeaſe, but to the Phyſitians. Briefly, to this place principally may be adioyned that diuelliſh confidence, which Magitians, & all ſuch as take aduiſe at them, doe put in the deuill and his workes. Leuit. 20. 6. If any turne after ſuch as worke with ſpirits, and after ſoothſayers, to goe a whoring after them, then will I ſet my face againſt that perſon, and will cutte him off from among this people.

III. The loue of the creature, aboue the loue of God, Math. 10. 37. Hee that loueth father or mother more then me, is not worthy of me, and he that loueth ſon or daughter more then me, is not worthy of me. Iohn. 12. 43. They loued the praiſe of man, more then the praiſe of God. To this belongeth ſelfe-loue, 2. Tim. 3. 2.

IV. Hatred and contempt of GOD, when man flieth from God & his wrath, when he puniſheth offences, Rom. 8. 7. The wiſedome of the fleſh, is enmity with God, Romans 1. 30. Haters of GOD, doers of wrong.

V. Want of the feare of God, Pſalm. 36. 1. Wickednes ſaith to the wicked man, euen in mine heart, that there is no feare of God before their eyes.

VI. Feare of the creature, more then the Creator, Reu. 21. 8. The fearefull and vnbeleeuing, ſhall haue their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimſtone.

Math.10.28. Feare not them which kill the bodie, but feare them that can caſt both body & ſoule into hell fire. Ierē.10.2. Be not afraid of the ſignes of heauen, though the heathen be afraid of ſuch.

VII. Hardneſſe of heart, or carnall ſeruice, when a man, neither acknowledging Gods iudgements, nor his owne ſinns, dreameth he is ſafe from Gods vengeance, and ſuch perils, as ariſe from ſinne. Rom. 2.5. Thou after thine hardneſſe, and heart that can not repent, heapeſt to thy ſelfe wrath againſt the day of wrath. Luk.21.34. Take heede to your ſelues, leaſt at any time, your hearts be oppreſſed with ſurfetting, and drunkenneſſe, and cares of this life, and leaſt that day come on you as vnawares.

Theſe all doe ioyntly ingender pride, whereby man aſcribeth all he hath that is good, not to God, but to his owne merit, and induſtrie, referring and diſpoſing thē wholly vnto his own proper credit. 1.Cor. 4.6. That ye might learne by vs, that no man preſume aboue that which is written, that one ſwell not againſt another, for any mans cauſe. v.7. For who ſeparateth thee? or what haſt thou, that thou haſt not receiued? if thou haſt receiued it, why reioyceſt thou, as though thou hadſt not receiued it? Gen.3.5. God doeth knowe, that when yee ſhall eate thereof, your eyes ſhall be opened, and yee ſhall be as Gods, knowing good and euill. The higheſt ſtayre of prides ladder, is that fearefull preſumption, by which many clime raſhly into Gods ſeat of maieſtie, as if they were gods. Act.12.22.23. The people gaue a ſhoute, ſaying, The voice of God, and not of man: but immediately the Angel of the Lord ſmote him, becauſe he gaue not glory vnto God, ſo that he was eaten vp of worms, and gaue vp the ghoſt. 2.Theſſ.2.4. Which is an aduerſarie, and exalteth himſelfe againſt all that is called God, or that is worſhipped: ſo that he doth ſit as God in the temple of God, ſhewing himſelfe that he is God.

CHAP. XXI.

Of the ſecond commandement.

HItherto haue we entreated of the firſt commandement, teaching vs to entertaine in our hearts, and to make choice of one onely God. The other three of the firſt table, concerne that holy profeſſion, which we muſt make towards the ſame God. For firſt, it is neceſſarie to make choice of the true God. Secondly, to make profeſſion of the ſame God.

In the profeſſion of God, we are to conſider the parts thereof, and the time appointed for this profeſſion.

The parts are two: The ſolemne worſhip of God, and the glorifying of him.

The ſecond Commandement, deſcribeth ſuch holy and ſolemne worſhip, as is due vnto God. The words of the commandement are theſe:

Thou ſhalt make thee no grauen image, neither any ſimilitude of things which are in heauen aboue, neither that are in the earth beneath, nor that are in the waters vnder the earth: thou ſhalt not bowe downe to them, neither ſerue them; for I am the Lord thy God, a iealous God, viſiting the iniquity of the fathers vpon the children, vpon the third generation, and vpon the fourth of them that hate me, and ſhew mercy vnto thouſands vpon them that loue me and keepe my commandements.

The Reſolution.

Thou ſhalt not make] This is the firſt part of the commandement, forbidding to make an idol: Now an idol is not onely a certaine repreſentation, & image of ſome fained God, but alſo of the true Iehouah. The which may be prooued againſt the Papiſts by theſe arguments. The firſt is, Deut.4.15.16. Take therefore good heed vnto your ſelues: for yee ſaw no image in the day that the Lord ſpake vnto you in Horeb, out of the middeſt of the fire, that ye corrupt not your ſelues, and make you a grauen image or repreſentation of any figure: whether it be the likeneſſe of male or female. Out of the words vttered by Moſes, a reaſon may be framed thus.

If yee ſaw no image (namely God) yee ſhall make none.

But yee ſaw no image, onely heard a voice:

Therefore yee ſhall make no image of God.

The ſecond reaſon: That idolatrie which the Iſraelites committed, the very ſame is prohibited in this commandemēt.

But the Iſraelites idolatrie was the worſhip of God in an image, Hoſ.2.16. At that day, ſaith the Lord, thou ſhalt call me no more Baali, but ſhalt call me Iſhi.

The golden calfe was an image of God: for when it was finiſhed, Aaron proclaimed that to morrow ſhould be a feaſt to Iehouah. Exod.32.5. And the ſame calfe is termed an idol. Act.7.41.

Therefore the worſhipping of God in an image, is here prohibited.

Any grauen image] Here the more ſpeciall is put for the more generall, namely, a grauen image for all counterfeit means of Gods worſhip.

The

The firſt part of the commandement is here illuſtrated, by a double diſtribution. The firſt is drawne from the cauſes. Thou ſhalt not make thee any idole, whether it be engrauen in wood, or ſtone: or whether it bee painted in a table. The ſecond, is taken from the place. Thou ſhalt not make thee an idol of things in heauen, as ſtarres and birds: or in the earth, as of man, woman, beaſte: or vnder the earth, as fiſhes.

This place is ſo exponnded by Moſes, Deut. 4. 14. to the 20. verſe.

Thou ſhalt not bow downe to them] This is the ſecond part of the commandement, forbidding al men to fal downe before an idol. In this word Bow downe, is againe the ſpeciall put for the generall: for in it is inhibited all fained worſhip of God.

For I] Theſe words are a confirmation of this commandement, perſwading to obedience, by foure reaſons.

The Lord] (which is ſtrong) The firſt reaſon. God is ſtrong, and ſo able to reuenge idolatrie. Heb. 10. 31.

A iealous God] This ſpeech is taken from the eſtate of wedlocke: for God is called the husband of his Church. Eſai 54. 5. Eph. 5. 26. 27. And our ſpirituall worſhip, is as it were, a certain marriage of our ſoules, conſecrated vnto the Lord. Ier. 2. 2. I remēber thee with the kindnes of thy youth and the loue of thy marriage, when thou wenteſt after me in the wildernes, in a land that was not ſowne. Here is an other argument drawne from a compariſon of things that be like. Gods people muſt alone worſhip him, becauſe they are linked to him, as a wife to her husband, vnto whom alone ſhee is bound: therefore if his people forſake him, and betroth themſelues vnto idols, he will vndoubtedly giue them a bill of diuorcement, and they ſhal be no more eſpouſed vnto him.

Viſiting] To viſit, is not onely to puniſh the children for the fathers offences, but to make notice. & apprehend them in the ſame faults, by reaſon they are giuen ouer to commit their fathers tranſgreſſiōs, that for them they be puniſhed. And this is the third reaſon drawne from the effects of Gods anger.

Hate me] It may be, this is a ſecret anſwer, the obiection whereof is not here in expreſſe words ſet down, but may be thus framed. What if we vſe Idols to inflame and excite in vs a loue and remembrance of thee? The anſwer is this by the contrarie: You may think that your vſe of idols kindleth to you a loue of me, but it is ſo far from that, that all ſuch as vſe them cannot chooſe but hate me.

Shew mercie] The fourth reaſon deriued from the effects of Gods mercie to ſuch as obſerue this commandement. Here may we firſt obſerue, that gods mercy exceedeth his iuſtice. Pſal. 103. 8. The Lord is full of compaſſion and mercy, ſlowe to anger, and of great kindnes. v. 17. The louing kindnes of the Lord, endureth for euer. verſ. 9. He will not alway chide, neither keepe his anger for euer. Secondly, wee may not ſurmiſe, that this excellent promiſe is made to euery one particularly, who is borne of faithfull parents. For godly Iſaak had godleſſe Eſau to his ſonne; and godleſſe Saul, had godly Ionathan.

The negatiue part.

Thou ſhalt neither worſhip falſe gods, nor the true God with falſe worſhip.

Many things are here forbidden:

I. The repreſentation of God, by an image. For it is a lye. Habak. 2. 18. What profiteth the image? for the maker thereof hath made it an image and a teacher of lies. Zach. 10. 2. The idols haue ſpoken vanity. Ierem. 10. 8. The ſtocke is a doctrine of vanity. The Eliber Councel in 39. canon hath this edict. We thought it not meete to haue images in Churches, leaſt that which is worſhipped & adored, ſhould be painted vpon walls. Clem. booke 5. ad Iacob. Dom. That ſerpent by others is wont to ſpeake theſe wordes: We in honour of the inuiſible God, are accuſtomed to adore viſible images, the which out of all controuerſie is very falſe. Auguſt in his treatiſe vpon the 113. pſalme.

The image alſo of the croſſe and Chriſt crucified, ought to bee aboliſhed out of churches, as the braſen ſerpent was. 2. Kin. 18. 4. Hezekiah is commended for breaking in peices the braſen ſerpent to which the children of Iſraell did then burne incenſe. This did Hezekiah, albeit at the firſt this ſerpent was made by the Lords appointment. Numb. 21. 8. and was a tipe of Chriſts paſſion, Ioh. 3. 14. Origen in his 7. booke againſt Celſus. We permit not any to adore Ieſus vpon the altars in images, or vpon Church walls: becauſe it is written, Thou ſhalt haue none other gods but me.

Epiphanius, in that epiſtle which hee wrote to Iohn biſhop of Ieruſalem, ſaith, It is againſt the cuſtome of the Church, to ſee any image hanging in the church, whether it be of Chriſt, or any other ſaint, and therefore euen with his own hands rent he aſunder the vaile, wherein ſuch an image was painted.

Some

Some obiect the figure or signe, which appeared to Constantine, wherein hee should ouercome: but it was not the signe of the crosse (as the Papists doe triflingly imagine) but of Christs name: for the thing was made of these two Greeke letters ☧ P conioyned together. Euseb. in the life of Constant. booke 1. chap. 22. 25.

Neither serue the Cherubims, which Salomō placed in the temple, for the defence of images: for they were onely in the holy of holiest, where the people could not see them. And they were types of the glorie of the Messiah, vnto whome the very Angles were subiect: the which we haue now verified in Christ.

If any man replie, that they worship not the image, but God in the image: let him know, that the creature cannot comprehend the image of the Creator; and if it could, yet God would not be worshipped in it, because it is a dead thing: yea, the worke of mans hands, not of God: and therfore is more base then the smallest liuing creature, of the which we may lawfully say, it is the worke of God. This euinceth, that no kinde of diuine worship belongeth to an image, either simply or by relatiō, whatsoeuer the sophisticall schoolemen iangle to the contrarie.

If any man be yet desirous of images, he may haue at hand the preaching of the Gospell, a liuely image of Christ crucified. Gal. 3. 1. O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that yee should not obey the truth, to whome Iesus Christ before was described in your sight, and among you crucified? The like may be said of the two Sacraments. And that saying of Clemens is true, in his fifth booke of Recognit. If you will truely adore the image of God, doe good vnto man, and yee shall worship his true image: for man is the image of God.

II. The least approbation of idolatrie: Hos. 13. 2. They say one to an other whilest they sacrifice a man, let them kisse the calues. Now a kisse, is an externall signe of some allowance of a thing. Gen. 48. 11.

Therefore it is vnlawfull to be present at Masse or any idolatrous seruice, though our mindes be absent. 1. Cor. 6. 20. Ye are bought with a price, therefore glorifie God in your bodie, and in your spirits, which are Gods. Rom. 11. 4. What saith the Scripture? I haue reserued vnto my selfe seauen thousand men, which haue not bowed their knee to Baal. Euseb. 3. booke. The Martyrs, when they were haled vnto the temple of idols, cried out, and with a loud voice in the middest of their tortures testified that they were not idolatrous sacrificers, but professed and constant Christians, reioycing greatly that they might make such a confession.

That which may be obiected of Naaman the Syrian, who worshipped in the temple of Rimmon, is thus answered; that he did it not with purpose to commit idolatrie, but to performe that ciuil obeisance which hee was wont to exhibit to the kinges maiestie. 2. King. 5. 17. 18.

And for this cause, are vtterly forbidden all such processions, playes, & such feasts, as are consecrated to the memoriall, and honour of idols. Exod. 32. 6. They rose vp the next day in the morning, and offered burnt offrings, and brought peace offerings: also the people sate them downe to eate and drinke, & rose vp to play. 1. Cor. 10. 7. Neither bee yee idolaters as some of them were, as it is written, &c. And Paul (1. Cor. 8. 4. to the end) earnestly dehorteth the Corinthians from sitting at table in the idols temple; albeit they know that an idol is nothing in the world. Tripartite history, booke 6. chap. 30. Certaine Souldiers refused to adore, as the custome was, the banner of Iulian, in which were painted the images of Iupiter, Mercury, and Mars: others bring againe the rewards, which they, after they had burned incense on an altar in the Emperours presence, had receiued: crying, that they were Christians, and would liue and die in that profession: and as for their former fact, it was of ignorance: yea though they had polluted hands with idolatry of the Painyms, yet they kept their conscience cleane.

III. All reliques and monuments of idols: for these, after the idols themselues are once abolished, must be raised out of al memory. Exod. 23. 13. Ye shall make noe mention of the name of other gods, neither shal it be heard out of thy mouth. Esai. 30. 22. And ye shal pollute the couering of the image of siluer, and the rich ornament of the images of gold, & cast them away as a menstruous cloth, and thou shalt say vnto it, Get thee hence.

IV. Society with infidels, is here vnlawful, serueth not onely to maintaine concord, but also to ioyne men in brotherlie loue. Of this society there are many branches.

The first, is marriage with infidels. Gen. 6. 2. The sonnes of God saw the daughters of men that they were faire, and they tooke them wiues of all that they liked. Mal. 2. 11. Iudah hath transgressed, & an abhomination is committed in Israell, and in Ierusalem: for Iudah hath defiled the holines of the Lord, which he loued, and hath married the daughters of a ſtrange god. Ezr. 9. 14. Should we returne to breake thy commandements, and ioyne in affinity with the people of ſuch abomination? 2. King. 8. 18. He walked in the waies of the Kings of Iſraell, as did the houſe of Ahab: for the daughter of Ahab was his wife: and he did euill in the ſight of the Lord.

hath

The ſecond, is the league in war: namely a mutual confederacy to aſſiſt one another in the ſame war, and to haue one and the ſame enemies. This is ſundry waies impious: I. If it be vnlawfull to craue aſſiſtance of Gods enemies, it is likewiſe vnlawful to indent with them, that we wil aſſiſt them. II. It obſcureth Gods glory, as though he himſelfe, either would not, or could not aide his Church. III. It is a thouſand to one leaſt we be infected with their idolatry, and other impieties. IV. It endaungereth vs to be made partakers of their puniſhments. 2. Chron. 19. 2. And Iehu the ſonne of Hanani the Seer, went out to meete him, and ſaid to king Iehoſaphat, Wouldeſt thou helpe the wicked, & loue them that hate the Lord? therefore for this thing is the wrath of the Lord vpon thee.

The third, is Traffique: as when a man wittingly and willingly, doth, in hope to enrich himſelfe, make ſale of ſuch things as he knoweth muſt ſerue to an idolatrous vſe. This condemneth al thoſe marchants, which tranſport wares to idolatours, and ſell them frankincenſe, waxe, cloath, or other ſuch things as helpe them in the ſeruice of their idols.

The fourth, is tryall of ſuits in law before Iudges which are infidels, when Chriſtian courts may be frequented: but if they cannot, & we haue to deale with infidels, we may appeale to infidels. 1. Corin. 9. 6. Brother goeth to law with brother, and that vnder infidels. Act. 25. 11. Paul appealeth to Caſar.

The fifth, is the worſhipping of the beaſt, and receiuing his marke. Reu 14. 9. If any man worſhip the beaſt, and his image, and receiue the marke in his forehead, or in his hand. verſ. 10. The ſame ſhal drinke of the wine of the wrath of God. This beaſt is the Church of Rome, I meane not that old, but this new Rome, nowe no better then an hereticall and apoſtaticall Synagogue.

VI. Will-worſhip, when God is worſhipped with a naked and bare good intention, not warranted by the word of God. Coloſſ. 2. 23. Which things indeede haue a ſhew of wiſedome in voluntary religion, and humbleneſſe of minde, and in not ſparing the body: neither haue they it in eſtimation to ſatisfie the fleſh. 1. Sam. 13. 9. 10. And Saul ſaid, Bring a burnt offering to me, and peace offrings: and he offered a burnt offring. And as ſoone as he had made an end of offring the burnt offring, behold, Samuel came, and verſ. 13 ſaid to Saul, Thou haſt done fooliſhly, thou haſt not kept the commandement of the Lord thy God, which he commanded thee. Hitherto may we adde popiſh ſuperſtitions in ſacrifices, meates, holidayes, apparell, temporarie and bead-ridden prayers, indulgences, auſtere life, whipping, ceremonies, geſtures, gate, conuerſation, pilgrimage, building of altars, pictures, Churches, and all other of that rabble.

To theſe may be added conſort in muſicke in diuine ſeruice, feeding the eares, not edefying the minde. 1. Corin. 14. 15. What is it then? I will pray with the ſpirite, but I will pray with the vnderſtanding alſo. I will ſing with the ſpirit, but I will ſing with the vnderſtanding alſo. Iuſtinus Martir in his booke of Chriſtian queſtions & Anſ. 107. It is not the cuſtome of the Churches, to ſing their meeters with any ſuch kinde of inſtruments, &c. but their manner is only to vſe plaine-ſong.

Laſtly, monaſticall vowes, which, I. repugne the law of God: as that vnchaſt vowe of ſingle life, and proud promiſe of pouerty doe plainly euince: for he that laboureth not, muſt not eate, ſaith Paul: And it is better to marry, then to burne in luſt, ſaith the ſame Paul. II. They are greater then mans nature can performe: as in a ſingle life, to liue perpetually chaſt. III. They diſanul Chriſtian libertie, and make ſuch things neceſſary, as are indifferēt, IV. They renue Iudaiſme. V. They are Idolatrous, becauſe they make them partes of Gods worſhip, & eſteeme them as meritorious. VI. Hypocriſie, which giueth to God painted-worſhip, that is, if you regard outward behauiour, great ſincerity: if the inward and hearty affections, none at al. Mat. 15. 7. Hypocrites, wel hath Eſaias prophecied of you, ſaying: This people commeth neere me with their mouth, and honour me with their lippes, but their heart is far from me. Pſal. 10. 4. The wicked man is ſo proude, that he ſeeketh not for God.

The effects of hypocriſie are theſe: 1. To ſeeke the pompe and glory of the world, and by all meanes to enrich it ſelfe, not-notwithſtanding it make a glorious ſhew of the ſeruice of God. 2. It is ſharpe ſighted, and hath eagels eyes to obſerue other mens behauiour, when in the regarding its own, it is as blind as a beetle. 3. To be more curious in the obſeruatiō of ancient traditions, then the ſtatutes & cōmandements of almighty God. 4. To ſtumble at a ſtraw, and skip ouer a blocke, that is, to omit ſerious affaires, and hunt after trifles, Math. 23.4.5. To do all things that they may be ſeene of men, Math. 6,5.

Popiſh faſting, is meere hypocriſie: becauſe it ſtandeth in the diſtinction of meates, and it is vſed with an opinion of merit.

External abſtinence from meates, without internall and ſpirituall faſting from ſinne, and vnlawfull deſires. Eſai. 58.5.6. Is this ſuch a faſt as I haue choſen, that a man ſhould afflict his ſoule for a day, & bow downe his head to a bulruſh, and lie downe in ſackecloth and aſhes? wilt thou call this a faſting, or an acceptable day vnto the Lord? Is not this the faſting that I haue choſen, to looſe the bandes of wickednesse, to take off the heauy burdens, and to let the oppreſſed goe free, and that ye breake euery yoke?

VII. Contempt, neglect, and intermiſſion of Gods ſeruice. Reu. 3.15.16. I knowe thy workes, that thou art neither cold, nor hot: I would thou wereſt cold or hote. Therefore becauſe thou art luke warme, and neither cold nor hote, it will come to paſſe, that I ſhall ſpew thee out of my mouth.

VIII. Corrupting of Gods worſhip, and that order of gouernment, which he hath ordained for his Church: the which is don when any thing is added, detracted, or any way, againſt his preſcript, mangled. Deut. 12.32. Euery thing which I commaund you, that doe: neither adde to it, nor detract from it. This condemneth that popiſh eleuation of bread in the Lords Supper, and the adminiſtration of it alone to the people without wine, together with that fearfull abomination of the Maſſe.

By this we may learne to reiect all popiſh traditions. Math. 15.9. In vaine doe they worſhip me, teaching for doctrines, mens precepts. Now it is manifeſt, that all popiſh traditions, they eyther on their owne nature, or others abuſing of them, ſerue as well to ſuperſtition and falſe worſhip, as to enrich that couetous & proud Hierarchie: whereas the Scriptures contained in the old and New Teſtament, are al-ſufficient, not only to confirme doctrines, but alſo to reforme manners. 2. Tim. 3.16. The whole Scripture is giuen by inſpiration of God, and is profitable to teach, to improue, and to correct, and to inſtruct in righteouſneſſe: that the man of God may be abſolute, beeing made perfect vnto all good workes.

The Romiſh Hierarchie is here alſo condemned, from the parratour to the Pope: the gouernment whereof, is an expreſſe image of the old Romane Empire, whether we conſider the regiment it ſelfe, or the place of the Empire, or the large circuit of that gouernment. Reu. 13.15. And it was permitted to him, to giue a ſpirit to the image of the beaſt, ſo that the image of the beaſt ſhould ſpeake, and ſhould cauſe that as many as would not worſhippe the image of the beaſt, ſhould be killed.

IX. A religious reuerence of the creature, as when we attribute more vnto it, then we ought. Reuel. 22.8. When I had heard and ſeene I fell downe to worſhip before the feete of the Angel, which ſhewed me theſe thinges. But he ſaid vnto me, See thou doe it not: for I am thy fellow ſeruant. Act. 10.25. As Peter came in, Cornelius met him, and fell downe at his feete, and worſhipped him. But Peter tooke him vp ſaying, Stand vp, for euen I my ſelfe am a man.

If then it be ſo hainous a thing, to reuerence the creature much more to pray vnto it: whether it be Saint or Angel. Rom. 10.14. How ſhall they call vpon him in whom they haue not beleeued. Math. 4.10. Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerue.

Neither may we pray vnto Chriſt, as he is onely man, but as he is God and man: for we direct not our prayers vnto the humanitie, but to the Deity, to which the humanity is knit by an hypoſtaticall vnion.

This teacheth vs plainely, that inuocation of any creature is vnlawful: for we muſt pray to them, that are able to know the ſecrets of the heart, and diſcerne the wiſdome of the ſpirit: now none is able to do that, but ſuch a nature as is omnipotēt. Rom. 8,27. Hee that ſearcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the meaning of the ſpirit: for he maketh requeſt for the Saints, according to the will of God.

Neuertheleſſe ſuch as are Saints indeed are to be honoured by an approbation of Gods gifts in them, & by an honourable mention of them, and alſo by imitation of their manners & liues, beeing as patterns for vs to walke after.

X. Worſhipp of deuills: I. Magique, which which is a miſchieuous art, accompliſhing wonders by Satans aſſiſtance. For it is appropriate to God to do miracles; for hee alone both beyond, and againſt the courſe of nature, doth wonderfull things. Nowe the inſtrumentes which God vſeth in producing miracles, are onely they, who doe in the true Church of God, make profeſſion of the faith.

Albeit the deuils cannot worke miracles, yet may they effect marualles or wonders, and that, not by making a new thing, which before was not at all: but rather by mouing, tranſporting, and applying naturall things diuerſly, by cauſing a thinne body, as the ayre, to be thick and foggie, and alſo by bewitching the ſenſes of men.

The foundation of Magique, is a couenant with Satan.

A couenant with Satan, is ſuch a contract, by which Magitians haue mutually to doe with the Deuill. In this obſerue:

The originall of this mutuall contract: I. Satan maketh choice of ſuch men to be his ſeruants, as are by nature either notorious bad perſons, or very ſilly ſoules. II. He offereth vnto them diuers meanes, either by other Magitians, or by ſome bookes written by ſuch: Satanicall meanes, I call thoſe, which are vſed in the producing of ſuch an effect, to the which they neither by any expreſſe rule out of Gods word, nor of their owne nature were euer ordained. Such are concealed ſpeeches, words of the Scripture wreſted, and abuſed, to the great contumely and diſgrace of the Lord God; holy, or rather vnholy water, ſieues, ſeales, glaſſes, images, bowings of the knee, and ſuch like diuers geſtures. III. When the wicked ſee theſe meanes offered vnto thē, they preſently are not a little glad, and aſſuredly beleeue, that in thoſe things there is vertue to worke wonders by. IV. They declare this their ſatanicall confidence, by their earneſt deſire, practiſing, and abuſing the meanes. V. Then the deuill is at their elbowes, beeing thus affected, that he may both aſſiſt them, and in them ſhew diuers tricks of his legerdemaine: becauſe he alone doth by meanes voide of al ſuch vertue, effect that, which his wicked inſtrument intended.

Againe, obſerue Satans counterfeiting of God. He is Gods ape, and taketh vpon him, as though he were God. I. As God hath his word, his Sacraments, and faith due vnto him; ſo hath the deuill his word: and to ſeale it vnto the wicked, he annexeth certaine ſignes, namely characters, geſtures, ſacrifices, &c. as it were ſacraments, that both hee may ſignifie his deuilliſh pleaſure to his Magitians, and they againe teſtifie their ſatanicall both obedience & confidence to him. II. As God heareth ſuch as call vpon, truſt in, & obey him: ſo the deuill is greatly delighted with magicall ceremonies and inuocations, becauſe by them God is diſhonoured, and he magnified: therefore, if God cut him not ſhort, he is ready preſt to aſſiſt ſuch, as ſhall vſe ſuch ceremonies or inuocations.

The couenant is either Secret, or Expreſſe.

Secret, or implicite, when one doth not expreſſely compact with Satan, yet in his heart alloweth of his meanes, aſſuredly & vpon knowledge beleeuing, that if ſuch meanes were vſed, there might indeed that great wonder bee wrought which hee deſired.

Expreſſe, when one doth not only put his confidence in Satan, but couenanteth with him vpon conditions, that he, giuing himſelfe wholly ouer to the deuill, may againe, by obſeruing certaine ceremonies, accompliſh his deſire.

Magique, is either coniecturall, or operatiue.

Coniecturall, whereby things are by Satans direction propheſied of before. Of propheſies, ſome are done with meanes; others without.

Propheſies done with meanes, are theſe.

I. Soothſaying, diuination by the flying of birds. Deut. 18. 11.

II. The kind of diuination, which is, by looking into beaſts entrails. Ezech. 21. 21. The king of Babel. &c. conſulted with idols, and looked in the liuer.

III. Necromancie, or conuring: by which the deuil, in the forme of ſome dead man, is ſought vnto for counſell. 1. Sam. 28. 11. Then ſaid the woman, Whome wilt thou I call vp vnto thee? And he ſaid, Call vp Samuel vnto me. verſ. 13. Then ſaid hee vnto her, Feare not, but what ſeeſt thou? And the woman ſaid vnto Saul, I ſaw gods aſcending out of the earth. v. 14. Then ſaid he vnto her, What faſhion is he of? and ſhee anſwered, An old man commeth vp lapped in a mantle. And Saul knew that it was Samuel, & he enclined his face to the groūd, & bowed himſelfe. And Samuel ſaid to Saul, Why haſt thou diſquieted me, to bring me vp? Thē Saul answered, I am in great distresse: for the Philistims make warre against me, &c. This Samuel, was not that true Prophet of GOD, who annointed Saul king ouer Israell: for 1. the soules of the Saintes departed, are farre from the deuills clawes and dominion. 2. That good Samuell, if it had beene he indeede, would neuer haue permitted Saul to worship him. 3. He saith to wicked Saul, to morrow shalt thou be with me, v. 14. Neither could this be a bare illusion, and, as I may say, legerdemaine of the witch, for he plainly foretold Sauls destruction, which an ignorant woman could not know, much lesse durst she constantly auouch any such matter to the king: it remaineth then, that this Samuel, was a mere illusion of Satan.

Diuining without meanes is, when such as are possessed with an vncleane spirit, vse immediatly the helpe of the same spirit, to reueale secrets. Act. 16. 16. A certaine maid hauing a spirit of diuination, met vs, which gat her master much vantage with diuining. Esay 94. Thy voice shall bee out of the ground, like him that hath a spirit of diuination, and thy talking shall whisper out of the dust.

Magique operatiue, hath two parts: Iuggling, and Inchantments.

Iugling, whereby, through the deuills conueiance, many great & very hard matters, are in shew effected. Exod. 7. 10. 11. 12. Aaron cast forth his rod before Pharaoh, and before his seruants, and it was turned into a serpent: then Pharaoh called also for the wisemen, and sorcerers, and those charmers also of Egypt did in like manner with their enchantments: for they cast downe euery man his rod, and they were turned into serpents: but Aarons rod deuoured their rods.

Enchantment, or charming is that, whereby beasts, but especially yong children, and men of riper yeares, are by Gods permission infected, poisoned, hurt, bounden, killed, & otherwise molested: or contrarily, sometimes cured of Satan, by mubling vp some few words making certain characters and figures, framing circles, hanging annulets about the neck, or other parts, by hearbes medicines. and such like trumpery, that thereby the punishment of the faithlesse may be augmented, in reposing their strength vpon such rotten staues, & the faithful may be tried whether they will commit the like abomination, Psal. 58. 4. Their poyson is euen like the poyson of a serpent: like the deafe adder that stoppeth his eare, which heareth not the voice of the enchanter, though he bee most expert in charming Eccles. 10. 11. If the serpent bite when he is charmed, &c.

Thus haue we heard Magique described out of Gods worde, the which, how as yet, common it is, in those especially which are without God in the world, and whom Satan by all meanes strongly deludeth, the lamentable experience which many men, and most places haue thereof, can sufficiently proue vnto vs. And surely, if a man will but take a view of all popery, he shall easily see, that the most part is meere Magique.

They which spread abroad by their writing, or otherwise, that witches are nothing els, but melancholike doting women, who through the Deuils delusion, suppose that they themselues doe that, which indeede the Deuill doth alone: albeit they endeauour cunningly to cloake this sinne, yet by the same meanes they may defend murther, adultery, and what other sinne so euer.

III. Those which dot consult with Magitians, they do also worship the deuill: for they reuolt from God to the Deuill, howsoeuer they plaster vp their impiety with vntempered morter, that they seeke Gods helpe, though by the meanes of Magitians. 1. Sam. 28. 13. The woman said to Saul, I saw gods ascending from the earth. Leuit. 20. 6. If any turne after such as worke with spirits, and after soothsayers, to goe a whoring after them, then will I set my face against that person, and will cut him off from among his people. Esay. 8. 19. 20. When they shall say to you, Enquire at them which haue a spirit of diuination, and at the soothsayers, which whisper and murmure. Should not a people enquire at their God? from the liuing to the dead? to the law and to the testimonie.

The affirmatiue part.

Thou shalt worship God in spirit and truth. Ioh. 4. 24. God is a spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and truth. For so soone as any man beginneth to worship God after an ouerthwart and vnlawfull manner, he then adoreth an idoll, howsoeuer he seemeth to colour his impiety. Paul therefore Rom. 1. 23. saith, that they thus, worshipped the creature, and turned the glory of the incorruptible God, to the similitude of a corruptible man, did forsake the Creator vers. 25. and 1. Cor. 10. 20. Those things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to deuils, and not vnto God.

To this part therefore appertaine such things, things, as reſpect the holy and ſolemne ſeruice of God.

I. The true and ordinarie meanes of Gods worſhip, as calling vpon the name of the Lord by humble ſupplication, and heartie thankſgiuing: and the miniſterie of the Word and Sacraments. Act. 2. 41, 42. They that gladly receiued his word, were baptized: and the ſame day there were added to the Church about three thouſand ſoules. And they continued in the Apoſtles doctrine, and fellowſhip, and breaking of bread, and of prayers. 1. Tim. 2. 1. I exhort you eſpecially, that praiers and ſupplications be made for all men, for Kings, and all in authoritie. Act. 20. 7. The firſt day of the weeke, the Diſciples beeing come together to breake bread, Paul preached vnto them, readie to depart on the morrow, and continued the preaching vnto midnight. Tertul. Apolog. chap. 39. Wee come into the aſſembly and congregation, that with our prayers, as with an armie, we might compaſſe God. This kind of violence offered to God, is acceptable to him. If any man ſo offend, that he muſt be ſuſpended from the publike place of prayer, and holy meetings, all ancient men, that bee of any account, beare rule, beeing aduanced to this honour, not by bribes, but by their good report, &c. read the reſt.

II. An holy vſe of the meanes. Firſt, in the miniſters, who ought to adminiſter al things belonging to Gods worſhip, according to his word. Math. 28. 20. Teaching them to obſerue all things, which I haue commanded. 1. Cor. 11. 23. I haue receiued of the Lord that, which alſo I haue deliuered. Secondly, in the reſt of the aſſemblie: whoſe dutie is in praying vnto God, in hearing the word preached and read, and in receiuing the Sacraments to behaue themſelues outwardly in modeſtie, and without offence. 1. Cor. 14. 40. Let all things be done honeſtly and by order. Inwardly, they muſt take heede, that their hearts bee well prepared to ſerue God. Eccles. 4. 17. Take heede to both thy feete, when thou entreſt into the houſe of God, &c. and chap. 5. 1. Bee not raſh with thy mouth, nor let thine heart bee haſtie to vtter a thing before God. Againe, wee muſt looke that we approch neere God in confidence of his mercy, together with a contrite and repentant heart for all our ſinnes. Hebr. 4. 2. The word that they heard profited not, becauſe it was not mixed with faith in thoſe that heard it. Pſalm. 26. 6. I will waſh mine hands in innocencie, O Lord, and ſo come before thine altar.

III. The helps and furtherances of the true worſhip, are two; Vowes, and Faſting: and they are not to be taken, as the worſhip of God it ſelfe. For we may not obtrude any thing to God, as good ſeruice, and as though it did bind the conſcience, except he haue ordained it for that end and purpoſe.

A vow, in the New Teſtament, is a promiſe to God, with a full intent to obſerue ſome corporal and externall duties, which a Chriſtian hath on his own accord, without iniunction, impoſed vpon himſelfe, that he may thereby the better be excited vnto repentance, meditation, ſobrietie, abſtinence, patience, and thankfulneſſe towardes God. Gen. 28. 20. Then Iaakob vowed a vow, ſaying, If God will be with mee, and will keepe me in this iourney, which I goe, and will giue me bread to eate, and cloathes to put on, ſo that I come againe to my fathers houſe in ſafetie: then ſhall the Lord bee my God, & this ſtone which I haue ſet vp as a pillar, ſhall bee Gods houſe, and of all that thou ſhalt giue me, I will giue the tenth to thee.

In vowing, We haue theſe things to obſerue: 1. We muſt not vow that which is vnlawfull. 2. We ought not to vowe the performance of that, which is contrarie to our vocation. 3. Vowes muſt be of that which we can doe. 4. They muſt be farre from ſo much as a cõceit of merit, or worſhip of God. 5. Wee muſt ſo performe our vowes, as that they encroch not vpon Chriſtian libertie, giuen vs in Chriſt: for we are bounden to pay our vowes, no longer then the cauſes thereof either remaine, or are taken away. Dent. 23. 18. Thou ſhalt neither bring the hire of a whore, nor the price of a dogge, into the houſe of the Lord thy God, for any vow. v. 21. When thou ſhalt vow a vow vnto the Lord thy God, thou ſhalt not be ſlacke to pay it: for the Lord thy God will ſurely require it of thee: but when thou abſtaineſt from vowing, it ſhall be no ſinne vnto thee, &c. v. 23. Pſal. 66. 14. I will pay thee my vowes which my lippes haue promiſed.

Faſting, is when a man perceiuing the want of ſome bleſſing, or ſuſpecting and ſeeing ſome imminent calamity vpõ himſelfe, or other, abſtaineth not onely from fleſh for a ſeaſon but alſo from all delights and ſuſtenance, that he thereby may make a more diligent ſearch into his own ſinnes, or offer moſt humble prayers vnto God, that hee would withhold that, which his anger threatned: or beſtow vpon vs ſome ſuch good things as we want. Matth. 9. 15.

Can the children of the marriage chamber mourne, so long as the bridegroome is with them? 1.Cor.7.5. Defraud not one another, except for a time, that ye may the better fast & pray. Ioel.2.12. Wherefore euen now, saith the Lord, be ye turned vnto me, with all your heart, with fasting and prayer. vers.13. Rent your hearts, and not your garments, and turne vnto the Lord your God: for he is gracious and merciful, long suffering, and of great kindnes, that he might repent him of this euil. vers.15. Blow the trumpet in Sion, sanctifie a fast, cal a solemne assembly. v.16. Gather the people, sanctifie the congregation, gather the Elders, assemble the children, and those that sucke the breasts. Let the bridegrome goe forth of his chāber, & the bride out of her bride chāber. v.17. Let the Priests the ministers of the Lord weepe betweene the porch & the altar, & let them say, Spare thy people O God. &c.

A fast, is sometime priuate, sometimes publike. 2. Chron.20.3. Iehosaphat feared, and set himselfe to seeke the Lord, and proclaimed a fast throughout all Iudah. Hest.4.16. Fast ye for me, and neither eate nor drinke for the space of three daies and nights. I also and my maids will fast.

A fast is either for one day alone, or for many daies together. Each of thē is as occasion serueth, an abstinence from meat at dinner alone, or supper alone, or both dinner and supper. Iud.20.23. The children of Israell had gone vp and wept before the Lord vnto the euening, &c. Dan.10.3. I Daniel was in heauines for three weekes of daies, I eate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth. &c.

IV. Leagues of amity among such as feare God according to his word, are lawfull: as, contracts in matrimony, league in warre, especially if the warre be lawful, & without confidence in the power of man. 2.Chr.19.2. Mal.2.1.

To these may be added, that couenant which the magistrate and people make among themselues, and with God, for the preseruation of Christian religion. 2. Chr. 15.12. And they made a couenant to seeke the Lord God of their fathers with all their heart, and with all their soule, &c. v.14. And they sware vnto the Lord with a loud voyce, and with shouting, and with trumpets, & with cornets.

CHAP. XXII.

Of the third Commandement.

THe third commandement concerneth the glorifying of GOD in the affaires of our life, without the solemne seruice of God.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vaine: for the Lord will not holde him guiltlesse that taketh his name in vaine.

The Resolution.

Name] This word properly signifieth Gods title: here figuratiuely it is vsed for any thing, wherby God may be knowne, as men are by their names: so it is vsed for his word, workes, iudgements. Act.9.15. He is an elect vessell, to conuey my Name among the Gentiles. Psal.8.1. O Lord our GOD, how great is thy Name through al the world! which setteſt thy glory aboue the heauens.

Take] That is, vsurpe: this word is trāslated from precious thinges, which may not be touched without license. And in trueth, men, which are no better then wormes creeping on the earth, are vtterly vnworthy to take, or, as I may say, touch the sacred name of God with minde, or mouth: neuertheleſſe God of his infinite kindnes permitteth vs so to doe.

In vaine] Namely, for no cause, any matter, and vpon each light and fond occasion.

For] The reason of this commandement is taken from the penalty annexed. He that abuseth Gods name, is guilty of sinne before Gods iudgement seat: and therefore is most miserable. Psal.32.1.2. Blessed is the man whose iniquity is forgiuen, and whose sinne is couered, blessed is the man to whom God imputeth not sinne.

Guiltlesse] That is he shal not be vnpunished.

The negatiue part.

Thou shalt not bereaue God of that honour that is due vnto him.

Here is included each seuerall abuse of any thing, that is vsed in the course of our liues, out of the solemne seruice of God.

I. Periury, when a man performeth not that, which he on his owne accord sware to doe. Math.5.33. Thou shalt not forsweare thy selfe, but performe thine oath to the Lord.

Periury containeth in it foure capitall sins. 1. Lying. 2. False inuocation on Gods name, because a forswearer calleth on God to confirme a lie. 3. Cōtempt of Gods threatnings, that he will most grieuously punish periury. 4. A lie in his couenant with God: for the forswearer bindeth himselfe to God, and lieth vnto God.

II. To sweare that which is false. This is to make God and the deuill both alike. Ioh. 8.44. Ye are of your father the deuil, &c. when he ſpeaketh a lie, he ſpeaketh of himſelf, becauſe he is a liar, & the father of lyes. Zac. 5.4. It ſhall enter into the houſe of him, that ſweareth falſely by my name.

III. To ſweare in common talke. Mat. 5.37. Let your communication be yea, yea, & nay, nay: for whatſoeuer is more then theſe commeth of euill.

IV. To ſweare by that which is noe God. Math. 5.34.35. But I ſay vnto you, ſweare not at all, neither by heauen, for it is Gods throne: neither by the earth, for it is his footeſtoole: neither by Hieruſalem, for it is the citty of the great king. 1. King. 19.2. Ieſabel ſent a meſſenger to Elias, ſaying, Thus doe the Gods, and ſo let them deale with me, if I by to morrow this time, make not thy life, as is the life of euery one of them. Ierem. 12.16. They taught my people to ſweare by Baal. Ier. 5.7. Thy ſonnes forſake me, and ſweare by them which are no Gods.

This place condemneth that vſuall ſwearing by the maſſe, faith, and ſuch like. Math. 23.22. He that ſweareth by heauen, ſweareth by Gods throne, and him that ſitteth therevon.

But for a man to ſweare by Chriſts death, wounds, blood, and other parts of his, is moſt horrible: and is as much, as to crucifie Chriſt againe with the Iewes, or accoũt Chriſts members, as God himſelfe.

V. Blaſphemy, which is a reproth againſt God; and the leaſt ſpeech, that ſauoureth of contempt to his maieſtie. Leu. 24.15.16. Whoſoeuer curſeth his God, ſhall beare his ſinnes. And he that blaſphemeth the name of the Lord, ſhall be put to death. 2 kin. 19.10. So ſhall ye ſay to the king of Iudah: let not thy God deceiue thee, in whom thou truſteſt, ſaying, Ieruſalem ſhall not be giuen into the hand of the king of Aſſur. Aiax in the Tragedie, hath this blaſphemous ſpeach, that euery coward may ouercome, if hee haue God on his ſide: as for him, he can get the victory without Gods aſſiſtance. that ſlie taunt of the Pope is likewiſe blaſphemous, wherein he calleth himſelfe the ſeruant of all Gods ſeruants: when as in truth, he maketh himſelfe Lord of Lords, and God ſubiect to his vaine fantaſie.

VI. Curſing our enemies: as, Goe with a vengeance: or, the deuill goe with thee. Or, our ſelues; as, I would I might neuer ſhrue: or, as God ſhall iudge my ſoule, &c. To this place we may referre the execrations of Iob. 3. Ier. 15.

VII. To vſe the name of God careleſly in our common talke: as, when wee ſay, Good God! good Lord! O Ieſus! or, Ieſus God! &c. Phil. 2.10. At the name of Ieſus, ſhall euery knee bowe, of things in heauen, thinges in earth, and thinges vnder the earth. Eſai. 45.23. Euery knee ſhall bow vnto me, and euery tongue ſhall ſweare by me.

VIII. Abuſing God creatures: as, when we either deride the workemanſhip of God, or the manner of working: againe, when wee debaſe the excellencie of the worke, obſcure Gods gifts in our brother, or diſcommend ſuch meates as God hath ſent vs to eate: finally, when as we in the contemplation of any of Gods creatures, giue not him the due praiſe and glorie. 1. Cor. 10.31. Whether yee eate or drinke, or whatſoeuer ye doe els, ſee that ye doe all to the glorie of God. Pſal. 19.1. The heauens declare the glorie of God, and the firmament ſheweth his handie worke.

IX. Lots, as when we ſearch what muſt be (as they ſay) our fortune, by dice, bones, bookes, or ſuch like. For we are not to vſe lots, but with great reuerence: in that the diſpoſition of them immediatly commeth from the Lord, and their proper vſe is to decide great controuerſies. Prou. 16.33. The Lot is caſt into the lappe, but the whole diſpoſition thereof is in the Lord. Prou. 18.18. The lot cauſeth contentions to ceaſe, and maketh a partition among the mightie. For this cauſe the land of Canaan was deuided by lots. Ioſh. 14. and 15. chap. By which alſo both the high Prieſts, & the Kings were elected: as Saul, 1 Sam. 10. & Matthias into the place of Iudas Iſcariot. Act. 1.23.

X. Superſtition, which is an opinion conceiued of the workes of Gods prouidence: the reaſon whereof, can neither be drawne out of the word of God, nor the whole courſe of nature. As for example: that it is vnluckie for one in the morning to put on his ſhooe awrie, or to put the left ſhooe on the right foote; to ſneeze in drawing on his ſhooes; to haue ſalt fall toward him; to haue an hare croſſe him; to bleed ſome few drops of blood; to burne on the right eare. Againe, that it is contrarily good lucke to finde old yron, to haue drinke ſpilled on hum. for the left eare to burne, to pare our nayles on ſome one day of the weeke, to dreame of ſome certaine things. The like ſuperſtition is to ſurmiſe that beaſts may bee tamed by verſes, praiers, or the like; that the repetition of the Creede or the Lords prayer, can infuſe into hearbs a faculty of healing diſeaſes. Deut. 18.11. Here alſo is Palmeſtrie condemned, when by the inſpection of the hand, our fortune is foretold.

Theſe and ſuch like, albeit they haue true euents, yet are we not to giue credence vnto them: for God permitteth them to haue ſuch ſucceſſe, that they which ſee and heare ſuch things, may be tried, and it may appeare what confidence they haue in God. Deut. 13.

XI. Aſtrologie, whether it bee in caſting of natiuities, or making of Prognoſtications. This counterfeit art is nothing els, but a meere abuſe of the heauens, and of the ſtarres. 1. The twelue houſes, which are the ground of all figures, are made of the fained ſignes of a ſuppoſed Zodiacke, in the higheſt ſpheare commonly called the firſt Mooueable: and therefore to theſe houſes a man cannot truly aſcribe any influence or vertue. 2. This art ariſeth not from experience, becauſe it neuer happeneth that the ſame poſition of all ſtarres is twiſe togither obſerued: and if it were, yet could there not certen ground ariſe from thence, in that the efficacie and influence of the ſtarres is confuſedly mixed both in the aire and in the earth, as if all hearbs were mingled togither in one veſſell. 3. This art withdraweth mens minds from the contemplation of Gods prouidence, when as they heare, that all things fall out by the motion, and diſpoſition of the ſtarres. 4. Starres were not ordained to foretell things to come, but to diſtinguiſh daies, months, and yeares. Gen. 1.14. Let there bee lights in the firmament of the heauen, to ſeparate the day from the night: and let them bee for ſignes and for ſeaſons, and for daies and for yeares. Eſai. 47. 13. Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counſells: let now the Aſtrologers, the ſtarre gazers, and Prognoſticators ſtand vp and ſaue thee from theſe things, that ſhall come vpon thee. verſ. 14. Behold, they ſhall be as ſtubble: the fire ſhall burne them, &c. Dan. 2.2. The King commanded to call the Inchanters, Aſtrologers, Sorcerers, and Chaldeans, to ſhew the King his dreames. Act. 19. 19. Many of them which vſed curious artes, brought their bookes and burned them before all men. 5. Aſtrologicall predictions are conuerſant about ſuch things, which either ſimply depend on the meere will and diſpoſition of God, and not on the ſtarres: or els ſuch, as depending vpon mans free-will, are altogither contingent: and therefore can neither be foreſeene, nor foretold. 6. It is impoſſible by the bare knowledge of ſuch a cauſe, as is both common to many, and farre diſtãt from ſuch things as it worketh in, preciſely to ſet downe particular effects: but the ſtarres are ſuch cauſes as are both common to many, and farre diſtant from all things done vpon earth: and therfore a man can no more ſurely foretell what ſhall enſue by the contemplation of the ſtarres, then hee which ſeeth an henne ſitting, can tell what kind of chickens ſhal be in euery egge.

Queſt. Haue then the ſtarres no force in inferiour things?

Anſwer. Yes vndoubtedly, the ſtarres haue a very great force, yet ſuch as manifeſteth it ſelfe onely in that operatiõ which it hath in the foure principall qualities of naturall things, namely in heate, colde, moyſture, and drineſſe: and therefore in altering the ſtate, and diſpoſition of the ayre, and in diuerſly affecting compound bodies, the ſtarres haue no ſmall effect. But they are ſo farre from enforcing the will to doe any thing, that they can not ſo much as giue vnto it the leaſt inclination. Now to define how great force the ſtarres haue, it is beyond any mans reach. For albeit the effects of the Sunne, in the conſtitution of the foure parts of the yeare, are apparant to all, and the operation of the Moone not very obſcure; yet the force and nature both of planets and fixed ſtars, which are to vs innumerable, are not ſo manifeſt. Therefore ſeeing man knoweth onely ſome ſtarres, and their onely operation, and not all, with their forces: it can not be that he ſhould certenly foretell future things, although they did depend on the ſtarres. For what if the poſition of ſuch and ſuch certaine ſtarres, doe demonſtrate ſuch an effect to enſue? may not the aſpects of ſuch as thou yet knoweſt not hinder that, and produce the contrarie?

Queſt. Is then the vſe of Aſtrology vtterly impious?

Anſw. That part of Aſtrologie, which concerneth the alteration of the ayre, is almoſt all both falſe and friuolous; and therefore in a maner al predictions grounded vpon that doctrine are mere toyes, by which the ſillie and ignorant people are notably deluded. As for that other part of Aſtrologie, concerning natiuities, reuolutions, progreſſions, and directions of natiuities, as alſo that which concerneth election of times, and the finding againe of things things loſt, it is very wicked; and it is probable, that it is of the ſame brood with implicite and cloſe Magique. My reaſons are theſe: I. The word of God reckoning Aſtrologers amongſt Magitians, adiudgeth them both to one and the ſame puniſhment. II. But the Aſtrologer ſaith, he foretelleth many things, which, as he ſaid, come ſo to paſſe: be it ſo: But how, I demand? and by what meanes? He ſaith by art: but that I deny. For the precepts of his art will appeare to ſuch as read them not with a praudicate affection, very ridiculous. Whence then, I pray you, doth this curious diuiner foreſhew the truth, but by an inward and ſecret inſtinct from the deuill? This is Auguſtines opinion in his 5. booke and 7. chapter of the Cittie of God. If we aaigh all thoſe things, ſaith he, wee will not without cauſe beleeue, that Aſtrologers, wen they do wōderfully declare many truths, yrke by ſome ſecret inſtinct of euill ſpirites, which deſire to fill mens braines with erronious and dangerous opinions of ſtarry deſtinies, and not by any art, derined from the inſpection and conſideration of the Horoſcope, which indeede is none.

IV. An oth, in which we muſt regard: 1. How an oth is to be taken. 2. How it is to be performed. In taking an oth, foure circumſtances muſt be obſerued.

I. The matter or partes of an oth: the parts are in number foure. 1. Confirmation of a tryeth. 2. Inuocation of God alone, as a witnesse of the truth, & a reuenger of a lie. 3. Confession that God punisheth periurie, when he is brought in as a false witnesse. 4. An obligation, that we wil vndergoe the punishment at Gods hand, if we performe not the condition.

II. The forme. We must sweare 1. truly, least we forsweare. 2. Iustly, least we cõmit impiety. 3. In iudgement, for feare of rashnes. Ier. 4. 2. Thou shalt sweare the Lord liueth, in truth, in iudgement, and righteousnesse, Esa. 48. 1. Which sweare by the name of the Lord, and make mention of the God of Israel, but not in truth nor in righteousnes, &c. Therefore the oth of drunken, furious, and franticke men, also othes of children, they doe not impose an obseruation of them, but by law are no othes.

III. The ende, namely to confirme some necessary truth in question. Heb. 6. 16. Men sweare by him that is greater then themselues: and an oth for confirmation, is among them an end of all strife. I call that a necessarie truth, when some doubt, which must necessarily bee decided, can none other way be determined then by an oth: as when Gods glory, our neighbours body or goods, or the credit of the party for whom the oth is ministred, are necessarily called into question. Rom 1. 9. God is my witnesse (whom I serue in my spirit in the Gospell of his Sonne) that without ceasing I make mention of you. 2. Cor. 1. 23. I call God for a record vnto my soule, that to spare you, I came not as yet vnto Corinth.

IV. The diuers kinds or sorts of othes. An oth is publike or priuate.

Publike, when the Magistrate, without any perill to him that sweareth, doth vpon iust cause exact a testimony together with an oth.

A priuate oth is, which two or more take priuatly. This, so that it be sparingly, and warily vsed, is lawfull. For if in serious affaires, and matters of great importance, it be lawfull in priuate to admit God as a Iudge, why should he not as well be called to witnesse? Againe, the examples of holy men shew the practise of priuate othes, as not vnlawfull. Iacob and Laban confirmed their couenant one with another by oth; the like did Booz in his contract with Ruth.

To this place may be added an assseueration, the which albeit it be like an oth, yet indeede is none: and is nothing else, but a constant assertion of our minde, intersetting sometimes the name of a creature. Such was Christs assertion, Verily, verily, I say vnto you. And Pauls, I call God to record in my spirit. Where is both an oth and asseueration. 1. Cor. 15. 31. By our reioycing which I haue in Iesus Christ, I die dayly. 1. Sam. 20. 3. Indeede, as the Lord liueth and as my soule liueth, there is but a steppe betweene me and death. And surely in such a kinde of asseueration there is great equitie: for albeit it bee vnlawfull to sweare by creatures, least Gods honour & power should be attributed vnto them: yet thus farre may we vse them in an oth, as to make pledges, & as it were cognisance of Gods glory.

The performance of an oth, is on this manner. If the oth made be of a awfull thing, it must be performed, be it of much difficulty, great dammage, and extorted by force of him that made it. Psal. 15. 4. He that sweareth to his hinderance and changeth not, he shall dwell in Gods tabernacle. Yea may the Magistrate, as it shall seeme right & conuenient, either annihilate or moderate such othes.

Contrarily, if a man sweare to performe things vnlawfull, and that by ignorance, errour, or infirmity, or any other way, his oth is to be recalled. For we may not adde sinne vnto sinne. 1. Sam. 25. 21. And Dauid said, Indeede I haue kept all in vaine, that this fellow had in the wildernes, &c. vers. 22. So and more also doe God vnto the enemies of Dauid: for surely I will not leaue of all that he hath, by the dawning of the day, any that pisseth against the wall. vers. 33. Dauid said, Blessed be thy counsell, and blessed be thou, which hast kept me this day from comming to shedde blood, and that mine hand hath not saued me. 2. Sam. 19. 23. Dauid promiseth that Shimei should not die: but 1. king. 2. 8. 9. Dauid saith to Salomon, Though I sware so, yet thou shalt not count him innocent, but cause his hoare head to goe downe to the graue with blood.

V. Sanctification of Gods creatures & ordinances, the which is a seperation of them to an holy vse. Thus ought we to sanctifie our meates & drinkes, the works of our calling, and marriage.

The meanes of this sanctification are two: Gods word, and prayer. 1. Tim. 4. 4. All which God hath created is good, and nothing must be reiected, if it be receiued with thanksgiuing: for it is sanctified by the worde and praier.

By the word we are instructed; first, whether God alloweth the vse of such things, things, or not: ſecondly, we learne after what holy manner, in what place at what time, with what affection, & to what end we muſt vſe them. Heb. 11.6. Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. Pſal. 119.24. Thy teſtimonies are my delight, they are my counſellers. Ioſh. 22.19. 29. 1 Sam. 15.23.

Prayer, which ſanctifieth, is petition and thankegiuing.

By petition, we obtaine of Gods maieſtie, aſſiſtance by his grace, to make an holy vſe of his creatures, & ordinances. Col. 3.17. Whatſoeuer ye ſhal doe in word or deed, doe all in the name of the Lord Ieſus, giuing thankes to God euen the father by him. 1. Sam. 17.45. Then ſaid Dauid to the Philiſtim, Thou commeſt to me with a ſword, and with a ſpeare, and with a ſhield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of Hoſts, the God of the hoſt of Iſrael, whom thou haſt railed vpon. Mich. 4.5. we muſt walke in the name of the Lord our God, for euer and euer. Here may we obſerue praier made vpon particular occaſion. 1. For a proſperous iourney. Act. 21.5. When the daies were ended, we departed, and went our waie, and they all accompanied vs with their wiues and children, euen out of the cittie: and we kneeling downe on the ſhore praied, &c. 2. For a bleſſing vpon meats at the table. Ioh. 6.11. Then Ieſus tooke the bread, and when he had giuen thankes, he gaue it to his Diſciples, & his Diſciples to them that were ſet downe: and likewiſe of the fiſhes as much as they would. Act. 27.35. He tooke bread and gaue thankes to God, in preſence of them all, and brake it and began to eate. 3. For iſſue in childbirth. This did Anna, 1. Sam. 1.14. And Zacharie, Luk. 1.13. 4. For good ſucceſſe in buſineſſe, Gen. 24. 12. Abrahams ſeruant praied.

Thanksgiuing is the magnifying of Gods name, euen the Father through Chriſt, for his grace, aide, and bleſſing in the lawfull vſe of the creatures. Phil. 4.6. In all things let your requeſts be ſhewed vnto god in praier, and ſupplication, & giuing of thanks. 1. Theſſ. 5.18. In all things giue thankes: for this is the will of God, in Chriſt towards you. This we may reade vſed. 1. after meate, Deut. 8.10. When thou haſt eaten and filled thy ſelfe, thou ſhalt bleſſe the Lord thy God, for the good land which he hath giuen thee. 2. After the loſſe of outward wealth. Iob. 1. 21. And Iob ſaid, Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked ſhall I returne againe: the Lord hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the name of the Lord for euermore. 3. For deliuerance out of ſeruitude. Exod. 18.10. Iethro ſaid, Bleſſed be the Lord, who hath deliuered you out of the hands of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who alſo hath deliuered the people from vnder the hand of the Egyptians. 4. For children, Gen. 29.35. Shee conceiued againe and bare a ſonne, ſaying, now will I praiſe the Lord: therefore ſhe called his name Iudah. 5. For victorie, 2. Sam. 22.1. And Dauid ſpake the words of this ſong vnto the Lord, what time the Lord had deliuered him out of the hands of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul, and ſaid, The Lord is my rocke, and thy fortreſſe, &c. 6. For good ſucceſſe in domeſtical affaires, Abrahams ſeruant, Gen. 24.12. Bleſſed the Lord of his maſter Abraham.

CHAP. XXIII.

Of the fourth commandement.

THe fourth commaundement concerneth the Sabboth: namely, that holy time conſecrated to the worſhip and glorifying of God. The words are theſe:

Remember the Sabboth to keepe it: ſixe daies ſhalt thou labour, and doe all thy worke: but the ſeaueneth daie is the Sabboth of the Lord thy God, in it thou ſhalt doe no maner of worke, thou, nor thy ſonne, nor thy daughter, thy man ſeruant, nor thy maide, nor thy beaſt, nor thy ſtranger that is within thy gates. For in ſixe daies the Lord made the heauen and the earth, the ſea, and all that in them is, and reſted the ſeaueneth daie: therefore the Lord bleſſed the ſeaueneth day, and hallowed it.

The Reſolution.

Remember] This clauſe doth inſinuate, that in times paſt there was great neglect in the obſeruation of the Sabboth: and would that al degrees & conditiõs of men ſhould prepare themſelues to ſanctifie the ſame: eſpecially thoſe that be gouernours of families, incorporations, and cities, to whome this commaundement is directed.

To keepe it holy, or to ſanctifie it] To ſanctifie it, is to ſeuer a thing from common vſe, and to conſecrate the ſame to the ſeruice of God. Here are deſcribed the two parts of this commaundement: the firſt whereof, is reſt from labour: the ſecond, ſanctification of that reſt.

Sixe daies] Theſe words containe a cloſe anſwere to this obiection. It is much to ceaſe from our callings one whole daie. The anſwere (togither with a firſt reaſon to inforce the ſanctification of the Sabboth) is in theſe words, which is taken frō the greater to the leſſe, If I permit thee to follow thy calling, ſixe Whole daies, thou maiſt well, and muſt leaue one onely to ſerue me.

to

But the firſt is true. Therefore the ſecond.

The firſt propoſition is wanting: the ſecond, or aſſumption are theſe words, Sixe daies, &c. The concluſiou is the commandement it ſelfe.

Here may we ſee, that God hath giuen vs free libertie to worke all the ſixe daies. The which freedome no man can annihilate. Neuertheleſſe, vpon extraordinarie occaſions, the church of God is permitted to ſeparate one day or more of the ſeauen, as need is, either to faſting, or for a ſolemn day of reioicing, for ſome benefit rebeiued Ioel. 2. 15.

The ſeuenth day] The ſecond reaſon of this commandement is taken from the end thereof.

If the Sabboth were conſecrated to God: & his ſeruice, we muſt that day abſtaine from our labours.

But it was conſecrated to God, and his ſeruice.

Therefore we muſt then abſtaine from our labours.

The aſſumption is in theſe words, (the ſeauenth day, &c.) where we muſt note, that God alone hath this priuiledge, to haue a Sabboth conſecrated vnto him: & therefore al holy daies dedicated to whatſoeuer either Angel or Saint, are vnlawfull: howſoeuer the Church of Rome haue impoſed the obſeruation of them vpon many people.

In it thou ſhalt doe] This is the conclſion of the ſecond reaſon, illuſtrated by a diſtribution from the cauſes. Thou, thy ſon, thy daughter, thy ſeruant, thy cattel, thy ſtranger, ſhall ceaſe that day from your labours.

Any worke] That is, any ordinarie worke of your callings, and ſuch as may be done the daie before, or left well vndone till the daie after. Yet for all this we are not forbidden to performe ſuch workes euen on this daye, as are both holy, and of preſent neceſſitie.

Such are thoſe workes, which doe vpon that day perſerue & maintaine the ſeruice and glorie of God, as I. a Sabbath daies iourney. Act. 1. 12. Which is nowe Hieruſalem, containing a Sabbath daies iourney. II. The killing & dreſſing of ſacrificed beaſts in the time of the law. Math. 12. 5. Haue ye not read in the lawe, howe that on the Sabbath daies the Prieſts in the Temple breake the Sabbath, and are blameleſſe? III. Iourneyes vnto the prophets, and places appointed vnto the worſhip of God. 2. King. 4. 23. He ſaid, Why wilt thou goe to him this day? it is neither newe moone, nor Sabbath daie. Pſal. 84. 7. They goe from ſtrength to ſtrength, till euery one appeare before God in Zion.

Such alſo are the workes of mercy, whereby the ſafetie of life or goods is procured: as that which Paul did. Act. 20. 9. As Paul was long preaching, Eutychus ouercome with ſleepe, fell down from the third loft and was taken vp dead: but Paul went downe and laide himſelfe vpō him, & imbraced him, ſaying, Trouble not your ſelues: for his life is in him. v. 12. And they brought the boy aliue, & they were not a little comforted. II. To helpe a beaſt out of a pit. Luk. 14. 5. Which of you ſhall haue an oxe, or an aſſe fallen into a pit, & will not ſtraightway pull him out on the Sabboth daie? III. Prouiſion of meate and drinke, Math. 12. 1. Ieſus went through the corne on a Sabboth daie, and his diſciples were an hungred, and began to plucke the eares of corne, & to eate. In prouiſion we muſt take heede that our cookes, and houſhold ſeruants breake not the Sabboth. The reaſon of this is framed frō the leſſer to the greater, out of that place, 2. Sam. 23. 15. Dauid longed and ſaid, Oh that one would giue me to drinke of the water of the wel of Bethle-hem, which is by the gate. verſ. 16. Then the three mightie brake into the hoſt of the Philiſtims, and drew water out of the well of Bethelehem that was by the gate, and tooke and brought it to Dauid, who would not drinke thereof, but poured it for an offering vnto the Lord. v. 17. And ſaid, O Lord, be it farre from me that I ſhould doe this: is not this the blood of the men that went in ieopardie of their liues? therefore would he not drinke. The reaſon ſtandeth thus. If Dauid would not haue his ſeruants aduenture their corporal liues for his prouiſion, nor drinke the water whē they had prouided it, much leſſe ought we for our meates to aduenture the liues of our ſeruants. IV. Watering of cattell. Math. 12. 11. The Lord anſwered and ſaid, Thou Hipocrite, will not any of you on the Sabboth daies, looſe his oxe or aſſe out of the ſtable, and bring him to the water? Vpon the like preſent & holy neceſſitie, Phiſitians, vpon the Sabboth day, may take a iourney to viſite the diſeaſed, Marriners their voyage, Shepheards may tend their flocke, and Midwiues may help women with child, Mark.

2.27. The Sabboth was made for man, & not man for the Sabboth.

Within thy gates] This word gate, ſignifieth by a figure iuriſdiction and authoritie. Math. 16. 18. The gates of hell ſhall not ouercome it. Let this be a looking glaſſe, wherein all Inholders, and intertainers of ſtrangers may looke into theſelues, & behold what is their dutie.

For in ſixe daies] The third reaſon of this commaundement from the like example.

That which I did thou alſo muſt doe.

But I reſted the ſeauenth daie and hallowed it.

Therefore thou muſt doe the like.

God ſanctified the Sabboth when hee did conſecrate it to his ſeruice; men ſanctifie it when they worſhip God in it. In this place we are to conſider the Sabboth, how farre forth it is ceremonial, and howe farre forth Morall.

The Sabboth is ceremoniall, in reſpect of the ſtrict obſeruation therof, which was a type of the internall ſanctification of the people of God, and that is, as it were, a cõtinual reſting from the worke of ſin. Exod. 31.13. Speake thou alſo vnto the children of Iſrael, and ſay, Notwithſtanding keepe ye my Sabboth: for it is a ſigne betweene me and you in your generation, that yee may knowe that I the Lord doe ſanctifie you. The ſame is recorded, Ezech. 20.12.

It ſignified alſo that bleſſed reſt of the faithfull, in the kingdome of heauen. Eſai. 66.23. From moneth to moneth, and from ſabboth to ſabboth, ſhall all fleſh come to worſhip before mee, ſaith the Lord. Heb. 4. 8, 9, 10. If Ieſus had giuen them a reſt, &c.

The Sabboth is likewiſe ceremoniall, in that it was obſerued the ſeauenth day after the creation of the world, and was then ſolemnized with ſuch ceremonies. Numb. 28.9. But on the Sabboth daie yee ſhall offer two lambes of a yeare olde without ſpot, and two tenth deales of fine floure for a meate offering, mingled with oyle, & the drinke offering thereof. 10. This is the burnt offering of euery Sabboth, beſide the continuall burnt offering and drinke offering thereof.

But nowe in the light of the goſpell, and the Churches profeſſing the ſame, the ceremonie of the Sabboth is ceaſed. Col. 2. 16. Let no man condemne you in meate and drinke, or in reſpect of an holy daie, or of the newmoone, or of the Sabboth: 17. which are but ſhadows of things to come, but the bodie is Chriſt. The obſeruation of the Sabboth was tranſlated by the Apoſtles from the ſeauenth day, to the daie following. Act. 20.7. The firſt day of the weeke, the Diſciples beeing come together to breake bread, Paul preached to them 1. Cor. 16. 1, 2. Concerning the gathering for the Saints, as I haue ordained in the Churches of Galatia, ſo doe ye alſo euery firſt day of the weeke, let euery one of you put aſide by himſelfe, and lay vp as God hath proſpered him, that then there bee no gatherings when I come. This day, by reaſon that our Sauiour did vpon it riſe againe, is called the Lords day. Reuel. 1.10. I was rauiſhed in the ſpirit on the Lords day.

The obſeruation of the Sabboth thus conſtituted by the Apoſtles, was neuertheleſſe neglected of thoſe Churches, which ſucceeded them, but after was reuiued and eſtabliſhed by Chriſtian Emperours, as a day moſt apt to celebrate the memory of the creation of the world, and to the ſerious meditation of the redemption of mankind. Leo and Anton. Edict. of holy daies.

The obſeruation of the ſabboth is moral, in as much as it is a certain ſeuẽth day, which preſerueth & conſerueth the miniſtery of the word, and the ſolemne worſhip of God, eſpecially in the aſſemblies of the Church. And in this reſpect we are vpon this day, as well inioyned a reſt from our vocations, as the Iewes were. Eſai. 58. 13. If thou turne away thy foote from the ſabboth, from doing thy will on mine holy day: & call my Sabboth a delight, to conſecrate it, as glorious to the Lord, and ſhalt honour him, not doing thine own waies, &c.

Finally it is morall, in that it freeth ſeruants and cattel from their labours, which on other daies do ſeruice to their owners.

The affirmatiue part.

Keepe holy the Sabboth day. This we do, if we ceaſe from the workes of ſin, & our ordinary calling: performing thoſe ſpirituall works which we are commanded in the ſecond and third commandement.

I. To ariſe early in the morning, that ſo we may prepare our ſelues to the better ſanctifying of the Sabboth enſuing. This preparation conſiſteth in priuate prayers & taking account of our ſeueral ſins. Mar. 1.35. In the morning very early before day, Ieſus aroſe and went into a ſolitary place, and there prayed. The day following was the Sabboth, when he preached in the Synagogues. 39. Exodus, 32.5.6. Aaron proclaimed, ſaying, To morrowe ſhall bee the holy daie of the Lord: ſo they roſe vp the next day earely in the morning. Eccleſiaſt. 4. verſ. laſt.

Take

Take heede to thy feete when thou entreſt into the houſe of God.

II. To be preſent at publike aſſemblies, at ordinary houres, there to heare reuerently and attentiuely the word preached and read, to receiue the Lords ſupper, and publikely with the congregation, call vpon and celebrate the name of the Lord. 1.Tim.1.2.3. Act.20.7. 2.King.4.22.23. Act.13, 14.15. When they departed from Perga, they came to Antiochia a cittie of Piſidia, and went into the Synagogue on the Sabboth day and ſate downe. And after the lecture of the lawe and Prophets, the rulers of the Synagogue ſent vnto them, ſaying, ye men and brethren, if ye haue any word of exhortation for the people ſay on.

III. When Publike meetings are diſſolued to ſpend the reſt of the Sabboth in the meditation of Gods worde, and his creatures. Pſal.29. from the beginning to the ending. Act.17.11. Theſe were alſo more noble men, then they which were at Theſſalonica, which receiued the word with all readineſſe, and ſearched the ſcriptures dayly whether thoſe things were ſo. We muſt alſo exerciſe then the workes of charity, as to viſit the ſick, giue almes to the needy admoniſh ſuch as fall, reconcile ſuch as are at iarre & diſcord amongeſt themſelues. &c. Nehem. 8.12. Then all the people went to eate and to drinke, and to ſend away part, and to make great ioy.

The negatiue part.

Pollute not the Sabboth of the Lord.

This is a grieuous ſinne, Math.24.20. Pray that your flight bee not in winter, nor on the Sabboth day. Lament.1.7. The aduerſaries ſaw her, and did mocke at her Sabboths. Leuit.19.30. Ye ſhall keepe my ſabboths, and reuerence my ſanctuary, I am the Lord. In this part are theſe things forbidden.

I. The workes of our calling, wherein if we do ought, it muſt be altogither in regard of charity, and not in regard of our owne priuate commodity.

II. Vnneceſſary iourneyes, Exod.16. 29. Tarrie euery man in his place, let noe man goe out of his place the ſeauenth day. By this reaſon, the maſter of the family muſt that day remaine at home, to ſanctifie the Sabboth with his houſhold.

III. Faires vpon the Sabboth day, Nehem.3.19. When the gates of Hieruſalem began to be darke before the ſabboth, I commanded to ſhut the gates, and charged that they ſhould not bee opened till after the Sabboth, and ſome of my ſeruants ſet I at the gate that there ſhould no burden bee brought in on the Sabboth day, read v.15.26.17.18.

IV. All kind of husbandrie, as plowing, ſowing, reaping, mowing, bringing home haruеſt, & other the like. Exod.34. 21. In the ſeauenth day ſhalt thou reſt, both in earing time, and in haruеſt ſhalt thou reſt.

V. To vſe ieſts, ſports, banqueating, or any other thing whatſoeuer which is a meanes to hinder, or withdrawe the mind from that ſerious attention, which ought to be in Gods ſeruice: for if the workes of our calling muſt not be exerciſed, much leſſe theſe, whereby the minde is as well diſtracted from Gods ſeruice as by the greateſt labour.

VI. An externall obſeruation of the Sabboth, without an internall regard of godlineſſe. Eſay 1.14,15. My ſoule hateth your new moones, and your appointed feaſtes, they are a burde vnto me, I am weary to beare them: and when you ſhal ſtretch forth your hands, I will hide mine eies from you, and though you make many prayers, I will not heare: for your hands are full of blood. 2.Tim. 3.5. Which haue a ſhewe of godlineſſe, but denie the force thereof ſuch therefore auoid.

VII. The manifeſt prophanation of the Sabboth, in pampering the belly, ſurfetting, adultery, and other like prophaneneſſe, which is nothing els, but to celebrate a Sabboth to the deuill, and not to God.

CHAP. XXIV.

Of the fifth Commandement.

HItherto we haue ſpoken of the Commandements of the firſt Table: now followeth the ſecond table, which concerneth the loue of our neighbour. Rom. 13. 9. Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie, thou ſhalt not kill, thou ſhalt not ſteale, thou ſhalt not beare falſe witneſſe, thou ſhalt not couet: and if there be any other commandement, it is briefly comprehended in this ſaying, namely, thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour as thy ſelfe.

Our neighbour is euery one, which is of our owne fleſh. Eſa. 58.7. When thou ſeeſt the naked, couer him, and hide not thy ſelfe from thine owne fleſh.

The manner of louing, is ſo to loue our neighbour as our ſelues, to wit truly, and ſincerely, when as contrarilie the true manner of louing God, is to loue God without meaſure.

The ſecond table containeth ſixe commandements: wherof the firſt, and, in the order order of the tenne commaundements, the firſt, concerneth the preſeruatiō of the dignitie and excellencie of our neighbour.

The words are theſe:

Honour thy Father and thy mother, that they may prolong thy daies in the Land, which thy Lord thy God giueth thee.

The Reſolution.

Honour] This Word, by a figure, ſignifieth all that dutie, whereby our neighbours dignitie is preſerued, but eſpecially our Superiours. This dignitie proceedeth of this, that euery mā beareth in him ſome part of the image of God, if we reſpect the outward order and decencie, which is obſerued in the Church & common wealth. In the Magiſtrate there is a certaine image of the power and glorie of God. Dan. 2 37. O King, thou art a King of kings, for the God of heauen hath giuen thee a kingdom, power, and ſtrength, and glorie. Hence is it, that Magiſtrates are called Gods, Pſal. 82. 1. In an old man is the ſimilitude of the eternitie of God: in a father, the likeneſſe of his fatherhood. Math. 23. 9. And call no man your father vpon the earth: for there is but one, your Father which is in heauen. In a man is the image of Gods prouidence and authoritie. 1. Cor. 11. 7. For a man ought not to couer his head, becauſe hee is the image of the glorie of God: but the woman is the glorie of her husband. Finally, in a learned man, is the likeneſſe of the knowledge and wiſedome of God. Nowe therefore that perſon, in whome euen the leaſt title of the image of God appeareth, is to be honoured and reuerenced.

Thy father] By a figure, wee muſt here vnderſtand, all thoſe that are our ſuperiours: as, Parents, and ſuch like of our kindred, or alliance which are to vs in ſtead of parents: Magiſtrates, Miniſters, our Elders, and thoſe that doe excell vs in any gifts whatſoeuer. The kings of Gerar were called Abimelech, my father the king, Gen. 20. 2 Gen. 45. 8. God hath made me a father vnto Pharoah, and Lord ouer all his houſe. 1 Cor. 4. 15. For though ye haue ten thouſand inſtructers in Chriſt, yet haue ye not many Fathers: for in Chriſt Ieſus I haue begotten you. 2 King. 5. 13. But his ſeruants came, & ſpake vnto him, and ſaid, Father, if the Prophet had commanded thee a great thing, wouldeſt thou not haue done it? 2. King. 2. 12. And Eliſha ſawe it, and he cried, My father, my father, my father, the chariot of Iſrael, and the horſemen thereof.

And thy mother] This is added, leaſt we ſhould deſpiſe our mothers, becauſe of their infirmities, Prou. 23. 22. Obey thy father which hath begotten thee, and deſpiſe not thy mother when ſhe is old.

Here wee are put in mind to performe due honour to our ſtepmothers, and fathers in lawe, as if they were our proper & naturall parents, Ruth. 3. 1. and 5. Afterward Naomi her mother in law ſaid vnto her, My daughter, ſhall not I ſeeke reſt for thee, that thou maieſt proſper? And ſhee anſwered her, All that thou biddeſt me, I will doe. Exod. 18. 17. But Moſes father in lawe ſaid vnto him, The thing which thou doeſt is not well. 19. Heare now my voice, I wil giue thee counſell, and God ſhall be with thee. 24. So Moſes obeyed the voice of his father in lawe, and did all that he had ſaid. Mich. 7. 6. For the ſonne reuileth the father, the daughter riſeth vp againſt her mother, the daughter in law againſt her mother in law.

That they may prolong] Parents are ſaid to prolong the liues of their children, becauſe they are Gods inſtruments, wherby their childrens liues are prolonged: for oftentimes the name of the action is attributed to the inſtrument, wherewith the action is wrought, Luk. 16. 9. Make you friends with the riches of iniquitie, that when ye ſhall want, they may receiue you into euerlaſting habitations. 1. Tim. 4. 16. For in doing ſo, thou ſhalt both ſaue thy ſelfe and them that heare thee.

But parents doe prolong the liues of their children in commaunding them to walke in the waies of the Lord, by exerciſing iuſtice and iudgement, Gen. 18. 19. For beeing become Godly, they haue the promiſe both of this life, and the life to come. 1. Tim. 4. 8.

Further, they effect the ſame thing by their prayers made in the behalfe of their children. Hereby it plainely appeareth, that the vſual cuſtome of children ſaluting their parents, to aske them their bleſſing is no light or vaine thing.

Moreouer, in theſe wordes, the reaſon to moouе vs to the obedience of this commandement, is drawn from the end, which reaſon is alſo a promiſe, yet a ſpeciall promiſe, Eph. 6. 2. Honour thy father and thy mother, which is the firſt commandement with promiſe, (I ſay, ſpeciall, becauſe the promiſe of the ſecond commandement is generall, and belongeth to all the reſt of the commandements.

And God promiſeth long life not abſolutely, but ſo farre as it is a bleſſing. Eph. 6. 3.

6.3. That it may be well with thee, and that thou maiest liue long on earth. For we muſt thinke that long life is not alwaie a bleſſing, but that ſometime it is better to die then to liue. Eſay, 57.1. The righteous periſheth, and no man conſidereth it in heart: and merciful men are taken away, and no man vnderſtandeth that the righteous is taken away from the euill to come.

But if at any time the Lord giueth a ſhort life to obedient children, he rewardeth them againe with eternall life in heauen, and ſo the promiſe faileth not, but changeth for the better.

The affirmatiue part.

Preſerue the dignitie of thy neighbour.

Vnder this part is commanded:

Firſt, reuerence towards all our ſuperiours: the actions wherof, are; reuerently to riſe vp before any man which paſſeth by vs. Leuit. 19. 32. Riſe vp before the hoare head, and honour the perſon of the olde man, and dread thy God: I am the Lord. To meete him that commeth towards vs. Gen. 18.2. And he lifted vp his eies, and looked: and loe, three men ſtood by him, and when he ſaw them he ranne to meete them from the tent doore. 1. King. 2.19. When Bethſheba came to ſpeake to king Salomon, the king roſe to meete her, & bowed himſelfe vnto her. To bow the knee, Mark. 10.17. And when hee was gone out of the waie, there came one running, and kneeled to him. Gen. 18.2. He ran to meete them, and bowed himſelfe to the ground. To ſtand by thoſe that ſit downe, Gen. 18.8. And hee tooke butter, and milke, and the calfe that he had prepared, and ſet before them, and ſtoode himſelfe by them vnder the tree, and they did eate. Exod. 18.13. Now on the morrow, when Moſes ſate to iudge the people, the people ſtood about Moſes from morning vnto euen. To giue the cheiſe ſeate, 1. King. 2.19. And hee ſate downe on his throne, and he cauſed a ſeate to be ſet for the Kings mother, and ſhee ſate downe at his right hand. Luk. 14.7,8,9. Hee ſpake alſo a parable vnto the gueſts, when hee marked howe they choſe out the cheiſe roomes, and ſaid vnto them, When thou ſhalt be bidden of any man to a wedding, ſet not thy ſelfe downe in the chiefeſt place, leaſt a more honourable man then thou bee bidden of him, and he that bade both him and thee, come & ſay to thee, Giue this man roome, and thou thē beginne with ſhame to take the loweſt roome. Gen. 43.33. So they ſate before him, the eldeſt according to his age, & the yongeſt according to his youth, and the men marualled among them-ſelues. To let our ſuperiours ſpeake before vs, Iob. 32,6,7,17. To keep ſilence in courts and iudgement places, vntill we be bidden to ſpeake, Act. 24.10. Then Paul after that the Gouernour had beckened vnto him that hee ſhould ſpeake, anſwered. To giue them ſuch their right and iuſt titles, as declare our reuerence when we ſpeake vnto them, 1. Pet. 3.6. As Sarah obeyed Abraham and called him Lord: whoſe daughters ye are, whiles yee doe well. Mark. 10.17. Good maſter, what ſhall I doe, that I may poſſeſſe eternal life? 20. Then he anſwered, and ſaid vnto him, Maſter, al theſe things haue I obſerued from my youth. 1. Sam. 1.14. 15. And Eli ſaid vnto her, Howe long wilt thou bee drunke? Put away thy drunkennеſſe from thee: then Hannah anſwered and ſaid, Nay my Lord, but I am a woman troubled in ſpirit: I haue drunke neither wine nor ſtrong drinke.

Secondly, towards thoſe that are our ſuperiours in authoritie: and firſt, obedience to their commandements. Rom. 13.1. Let euery ſoule be ſubiect to the higher power.

We are to be admoniſhed to obedience: becauſe euery higher power is the ordinance of God, and the obedience which we performe to him, God accepteth it as though it were done to himſelfe and to Chriſt, Rom. 13.2. Whoſoeuer therefore, reſiſteth the power, reſiſteth the ordinance of god, and they that reſiſt, ſhal receiue to themſelues iudgement, Col. 3.23. And whatſoeuer yee doe, doe it hartily, as vnto the Lord, and not vnto men. 24. Knowing that of the Lord yee ſhall receiue the reward of the inheritance: for ye ſerue the Lord Chriſt. Obedience is to be performed to our ſuperiours with diligence and faithfulneſſe. Gen. 24.2. Abraham ſaid vnto his eldeſt ſeruant of his houſe, which had the rule euer all that he had: put now thy hand vnder my thigh, and I wil make thee ſweare by the Lord God of heauen, and God of the earth, that thou ſhalt not take a wife vnto my ſon of the daughters of the Canaanites, amongſt whome I dwell. 10. So the ſeruant tooke ten Camels of his maſter, & departed. 12. And he ſaid, O Lord God of my maſter Abraham, I beſeech thee ſend me good ſpeed this day, and ſhewe mercie vnto my maſter Abraham. 33. Afterward the meate was ſet before him, but he ſaid, I will not eate, vntil I haue ſaid my meſſage: And Laban ſaid, Speake on, 56. But he ſaid, Hinder me not, ſeeing the Lord hath proſpered my iourney: ſend me away that I may goe to my maſter. Gen. 31. 38. This twentie yeares haue I bin with thee, thine ewes and thy goates haue not caſt

their yong,& the rammes of thy flocke haue I not eaten.39.Whatſoeuer was torne of beaſts I brought it not vnto thee,but made it good my ſelfe: of mine hand didſt thou require it, were it ſtolen by day, or ſtolen by night.40.I was in the day conſumed with heate,and with froſt in the night,and my ſleepe departed from mine eyes.

Furthermore we muſt yeeld obedience to our ſuperiours: yea, although they bee cruel and wicked, but not in wickedneſſe, 1.Pet.2.18.Seruants bee ſubiect to your maſters with all feare, not onely to the good and curteous,but alſo to the froward. Act.4.19. Whether it be right in the ſight of God, to obey you rather then God,iudge ye.

Subiection in ſuffering the puniſhments inflicted by our Superiours, Gen. 16.6.Then Abraham ſaid to Sarai, Behold thy maid is in thine hand,do with her as pleaſeth thee:then Sarai dealt roughly with her: wherefore ſhee fled from her.9.Then the angell of the Lord ſaid vnto her, Returne vnto thy dame, and humble thy ſelfe vnder her hands.

And although the puniſhment ſhould be vniuſt,yet muſt we ſuffer it, vntill wee can get ſome lawful remedy for the ſame. 1.Pet.2.19.For it is thanke-worthy,if a man for conſcience toward God endure griefe,ſuffering wrongfully. 20. For what praiſe is it,if when ye be buffeted for your faults,yee take it patiently?but and if,when ye doe well,ye ſuffer wrong, and take it patiently, this is acceptable to God.

III. Thankfulneſſe in our praiers,1. Tim.2.1, 2.I exhort you therefore, that firſt of all,ſupplications, praiers, interceſſions,and giuing of thankes be made for al mẽ,for kings, and for all that be in authoritie, that wee may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all Godlines and honeſtie. 1.Tim.5.17. Elders that rule well,are worthy of double honour Gen 45.9. Haſte you,& goe vp to my father,and tel him, Thus ſaith thy ſonne Ioſeph, God hath made me Lord ouer all Egypt, come downe to mee, tarrie not. 10. And thou ſhalt dwell in the land of Goſhen. 11. Alſo I will nouriſh thee there, for yet remaine fiue yeares of famine, leaſt thou periſh through pouertie, thou & thy houſhold,and all that thou haſt.

Thirdly,towards thoſe that excell vs in gifts:our dutie is to acknowledge the ſame gifts, and ſpeake of them to their praiſe, 1. Cor.8.22,23.

Fourthly,toward all our equals:to think reuerently of them.Phil.2.3.Let nothing be done through contention or vaine glorie, but in meekeneſſe of mind, let euery man eſteeme other better then himſelfe.

In giuing honour, to goe one before another,and not in receiuing it. Rom.12. 10. Submit your ſelues one to another in the feare of God. To ſalute one another with holy ſignes,wherby may appeare the loue which we haue one to another in Chriſt,1. Pet.5.14. Greete one another with the kiſſe of loue. Rom.16.16. Salute one another with an holy kiſſe. Exod.18.7. *And Moſes went out to meet his father in law, & did obeyſance and kiſſed him.*Ruth.2.4. And behold,Boaz came from Bethlehem, and ſaid vnto the Reapers, the Lord be with you. And they anſwered,The Lord bleſſe thee.

Fiftly, the duties of all Superiours towards their inferiours: to yeeld to them in good matters,as to their brethren. Deut. 17.20. *That his heart bee not lifted vp aboue his brethren, and that hee turne not from the commaundement, to the right hand or to the left.*Ioh.31.13. *If I did contemne the iudgement of my ſeruant,and of my maide.*2.King. 5.13. *And his ſeruant came and ſpake vnto him and ſaid.*14. Then he went downe, and waſhed himſelfe ſeauen times in Iordan, &c. To ſhine before their inferiours by an enſample of a blameleſſe life. Tit.2.2.*That the elder men be ſober, honeſt,diſcrete,ſound in faith,in loue,and in patience.*3.The elder women likewiſe,that they be in ſuch behauiour as becommeth holineſſe,not falſe accuſers,not giuen to much wine, but teachers of honeſt things. 1.Pet.5.3. Not as though yee were Lords ouer Gods heritage, but that ye may be enſamples to the flocke. Phil.4.9. To ſhewe forth grauity ioined with dignity, by their countenance,geſture, deedes and wordes. Tit.2.3,4.5,6,7. Iob.29.8.The young men ſawe me,and hid themſelues,the aged aroſe & ſtood vp.

Sixtly,towards inferiours in obedience, that is, towards their ſubiects. 1. To rule them in the Lord, that they do not offend. 1.Pet.2.13.Submit your ſelues vnto all manner of ordinance of man, for the Lords ſake, whether it bee vnto kings as vnto Superiours, 14.or vnto gouernours, as vnto them that are ſent of the King,for the puniſhment of euil doers, and for the praiſe of them that doe well. Deut.17.19.And it ſhall be with him(namely the booke of the lawe) and hee ſhall reade therein all the daies of his life, that hee may learne to feare the Lord his God, and to keepe al the words of this lawe, and thoſe ordinances to doe them. Col.4.1. Ye maſters doe vnto your ſeruants, that which is iuſt and equall:

knowing that ye also haue a maſter in heauen. 2. To prouide ſuch things as ſhal be to the good of their ſubiects, whether they belong to the bodie or to the ſoule, Rom. 13.4. For hee is the miniſter of God for thy wealth. Eſai 49.23. And kings ſhall bee thy nurſing Fathers, and Queenes ſhall bee thy nurſes. Pſal.132. 1. Lord remember David with all his troubles. 2. Who ſware vnto the Lord, and vowed vnto the mightie God of Iacob, ſaying, 3. I will not enter into the Tabernacle of mine houſe, nor come vpon my pallet or bed, 4. nor ſuffer mine eies to ſleep, nor mine eie lids to ſlumber, 5. vntill I find out a place for the Lord, an habitation for the mightie God of Iacob. 3. To puniſh their faults, the lighter by rebuking, the greater by correction, that is, by inflicting reall or bodily puniſhment.

There is an holy manner of puniſhing the guiltie, whereunto is required: I. After diligent and wiſe examination bee had, to be aſſured of the crime committed. II. To ſhewe forth of Gods word, the offence of the ſinne: that the conſcience of the offendour may be touched. III. It is conuenient to deferre or omit the puniſhment, if thereby any hope of amendment may appeare. Eccleſ.7.23. Giue not thy heart alſo to all the wordes that men ſpeake, leaſt thou doe heare thy ſeruant curſing thee. 24. For oftentimes alſo thine heart knoweth, that thou likewiſe haſt curſed others .1. Sam. 10.27. But the wicked men ſaid, How ſhall he ſaue vs? ſo they deſpiſed him, & brought him no preſents; but he held his tongue. IV. To inflict deſerued puniſhment, not in his own name, but in Gods name, adding the ſame holily and reuerently. Ioſh.7.19. Then Ioſhua ſaid vnto Achan, My ſonne, I beſeech thee, giue glorie to the Lord God of Iſrael, and make confeſſion vnto him, and ſhew me now what thou haſt done, hide it not from me. 20. And Achan anſwered vnto Ioſhua, and ſaid, Indeed I haue ſinned againſt the Lord God of Iſrael, & thus and thus haue I done. 25. And Ioſhua ſaid, In as much as thou haſt troubled vs, the Lord ſhall trouble thee this day: and al Iſrael threw ſtones at him, and burned them with fire, and ſtoned them with ſtones. V. and laſtly, When thou puniſheſt, aime at this one onely thing, that the euil may be purged and amended, & that the offendour by ſorrowing for his ſinne, may vnfainedly repent for the ſame. Prou.20.30. The plewneſſe of the wound ſerueth to purge euil, & the ſtripes within the bowels of the belly.

Seuenthly & laſtly, there is a certain duty of a man to be performed towarde himſelfe, which is, that a man ſhould preſerue and maintaine with modeſty, the dignity and worthineſſe, which is inherent in his owne perſon, Phil.4.8. Furthermore, brethren, whatſoeuer things are true, whatſoeuer things are honeſt, whatſoeuer things are iuſt, whatſoeuer things are pure, whatſoeuer things are pertaine to loue, whatſoeuer things are of good report, if there be any vertue, or if there be any praiſe, thinke on theſe things.

The negatiue part.

Diminiſh not the excellencie, or dignity which is in the perſon of thy neighbour.

Hither are referred theſe ſinnes:

Firſt, againſt our Superiours: I. Vnreuerent behauiour and contempt of them. The ſinnes hereof, are, deriding our ſuperiours. Gen.9.22. And when Ham the Father of Canaan ſaw the nakednes of his father, he told his two brethren without. Prou. 20.17. The eye that mocketh his father, and deſpiſeth the inſtruction of his mother, let the rauens of the valley picke it out, and the young Eagles eat it. To ſpeake euill of, or reuile our ſuperiours. Exod.21.17. And he that curſeth his father or his mother, ſhall die the death.

II. Diſobedience, whereby wee contemne their iuſt commandements, Rom. 1.30. Diſobedient to Parents. 2. Tim.3.3. No ſtriker, but gentle, no fighter. The ſinnes hereof, are, To make contracts of marriage, without the counſel & conſent of the parents. Gen.6.2. Then the ſonnes of GOD ſawe the daughters of men that they were faire, and they tooke them wiues of all that they liked. Gen.28.6.9. And Eſau ſeeing that the daughters of Canaan diſpleaſed Iſaac his father, then went Eſau to Iſhmael, and tooke vnto the wiues which he had, Mahalath the daughter of Iſhmaell, Abrahams ſonne, the ſiſter of Nabaioth, to be his wife. The eie-ſeruice of ſeruants. Coloſſ.3.22. Seruants be obedient to them that are your maſters according to the fleſh, in all things, not with eye ſeruice as men pleaſers, but in ſingleneſſe of heart, fearing God. Eph.6.6. Not with ſeruice to the eye, as men pleaſers. Anſweting againe, when they are reprehended. Tit.2. 9. Let ſeruants be ſubiect to their maſters; & pleaſe them in all things, not anſwering againe. Deceitfulneſſe and waſting their Maſters goods. Tit.2.10. Neither pickers, but that they ſhewe all good faithfulneſſe. To flie from the power of their ſuperior. Gen.16.6. Then Sarah dealt roughly with her, wherfore ſhe fled frō her. To reſiſt the the lawfull authoritie of their ſuperiours. 1.Pet.2.20. To obey them in things vnlawfull. Act.4.19. To extoll themſelues aboue their betters: this is the ſinne of Antichriſt. 2.Theſſ.2.3,4. Which (man of ſinne) exalteth himſelfe againſt al that is called god. Laſtly, the freedome of the Papiſts, whereby they free children from the gouernmēt of their parents: and ſubiects from the authoritie of their princes: ſo they make it lawefull for them to pretend and procure their death. 1.Sam.26.8,9. Then ſaid Abiſhai to Dauid, God hath cloſed thine enemie into thyne hand this daie: nowe therefore I pray thee, let me ſmite him once with a ſpeare to the earth, and I will not ſmite him againe: And Dauid ſaid to Abiſhai, Deſtroy him not: for who can laie his hand on the Lords annointed and be guiltleſſe?

III. Ingratitude, and want of a louing affection towards parents, Math.15.5,6. But ye ſay, whoſoeuer ſhall ſay to Father or mother, By the gift that is offered by me, thou maieſt haue profit, though he honor not his father or mother, ſhall be free. 1.Tim.5.4.

Secondly, we offend againſt our equals in preferring our ſelues before them, in talking or in ſitting down. Math.20.20. Thē came vnto him the mother of Zebedeus childrē, with her ſons, worſhipping him, & deſiring a certaine thing of him. 21. And he ſaid, What wouldſt thou? And ſhe ſaid to him, Graunt, that theſe my two ſonnes may ſit, the one at thy right hand, and the other at thy left hand, in thy kingdom. 24. And whē the other ten heard this, they diſdained at the two brethren.

Thirdly, toward our inferiours I. Thorough negligence in gouerning them, and prouiding for their good eſtate. Hag.1.4. Is it time for your ſelues to dwell in your ſieled houſes, and this houſe to lie waſte? Dan.3.28. This condemneth thoſe mothers, which put forth their children to bee nurſed, hauing both ſufficient ſtrength and ſtore of milke themſelues to nurſe them. 1.Tim.5.10. If ſhee haue nouriſhed her children. II. By too much gentleneſſe and lenitie in correcting them. 1.King.1.5. Then Adoniiah the ſonne of Haggith exalted himſelfe, ſaying, I will be king. 6. And his father would not diſpleaſe him from his childhood, to ſay why haſt thou done ſo? 1.Sam.2.22. So Eli was very old, and heard all that his ſonnes did vnto all Iſrael, and howe they lay with the women that aſſembled at the doore of the Tabernacle of the congregation. 23. And he ſaid vnto them: Why doe yee ſuch things? for of all this people I heare euill reports of you. 24. Doe no more, my ſonnes, for it is no good report that I heare, namely, that yee make the Lords people to treſpaſſe. 25. Notwithſtāding they obeyed not the voice of their father, becauſe the Lord would ſlay them. III. By ouermuch crueltie and threatnings, Eph.6.4. And yee fathers prouoke not your children to wrath. 9. And yee maſters doe the ſame things vnto thē, putting away threatnings.

Fourthly, and laſtly, a man offendeth againſt himſelfe, when through his naughtie behauiour, he doth obſcure and almoſt extinguiſh thoſe gifts which God hath giuen him. Math.25.2,16. Or contrarily, when hee is too wiſe in his owne conceit, Rom.12.3. For I ſay, through the grace that is giuen vnto mee, to euery one that is among you, that no man preſume to vnderſtand, aboue that which is meete to vnderſtand.

CHAP. XXV.

Concerning the ſixt commandement.

THou ſhalt not kill.

The Reſolution.

Kill.] The part is here ſet for the whole, by a Synecdoche: for killing ſignifieth any kind of endamaging the perſon of our neighbour.

The equitie of this commandement appeareth by this, that man was created after the likeneſſe of God, Gen.9.6. Hee that ſheddeth mans blood, by man ſhall his blood be ſhed: for in the image of God hath he made man. Againe, all men are the ſame fleſh. Eſai.58.7. When thou ſeeſt the naked couer him, and hide not thy face from thine owne fleſh.

Neither ought we to be ignorant of this alſo, that it is vnlawful for any priuate perſon, not called to that dutie, to kill another, but a publike officer may, that is, if he be warranted by a calling. So did Moſes, Exod.2.12. And hee looked round about, and when hee ſawe no man, he ſlewe the Egyptian, and hidde him in the ſand. Act.7.25. For hee ſuppoſed his brethren would haue vnderſtood, that God by his hand ſhould giue them deliuerance. And Phinehas. Numb.25.8. And he followed the man of Iſrael into the tent, and thruſt them both through (to wit, the man of Iſrael and the woman) through her bellie: ſo that the plague ceaſed from the children of Iſrael. 31. Phinehas the ſonne of Eleazar, hath turned mine anger away from the children of Iſrael, while hee was zealous for my ſake among them: therefore I haue not conſu- med the children in my iealousie. And Eliiah. 1. King. 18. 40. And Eliiah said vnto them, take the prophets of Baal, let not a man of thē escape: & they tooke them, & Eliiah brought thē to the land of Kishon, and slew them there. And souldiers in battels waged vpon iust causes, 1. Chro. 20. 15. Feare yee not, neither be afraid of this great multitude: for the battell is not yours, but Gods.

The negatiue part.

Thou shalt neither hurt, nor hinder either thine owne, or thy neighbours life.

The sinnes then that are referred to this part are such, as are committed against our neighbour, or our selues.

Against our neighbour, are these following: I. In heart; as, 1. Hatred against him, 1. Ioh. 3. 15. Who so hateth his brother, is a manslaier. 2. Vnadused anger, Math. 5. 22. I say vnto you, whosoeuer is angrie with his brother vnaduisedly, is in danger of iudgemēt. 3 Enuie, Rom. 1. 29. Ful of anger, murther, contention. 4. Grudges, Iam. 3. 14. If ye haue bitter enuying & strife in your hearts reioyce not. 5. Want of compassion, and sorrow at our neighbours calamities: Amos, 6. 5, 6. They sing to the sound of the Viole, &c. but no man is sorrie for the affliction of Ioseph. 6. Frowardnesse, when we will not be reconciled to our neighbour, Rom. 1. 30. Such as can neuer bee appeased, vnmercifull. 7. Desire of reuenge, Psal. 5. 6. The Lord wil abhorre the bloodie men and deceitfull.

II. In wordes: 1. Bitternesse in speaking, Prou. 12. 18. There is that speaketh wordes, like the prickings of a sword: but the tongue of wise men is health. 2. Reproches and railing, which is a casting of a mans sinnes in his teeth which he hath committed, or an obiecting vnto him some inherent infirmities, Matth. 5. 22. Whosoeuer saith vnto his brother, Raca, shall bee worthy to bee punished by the councell. And whosoeuer shall say, Foole, shall be worthy to be punished with hell fire. 2. Sam. 6. 16. As the Arke of the Lord cam into the cittie of Dauid, Michal Sauls daughter looked through a windowe, and sawe King Dauid leape and dance before the Lord, and shee despised him in heart. 20. And Michal the daughter of Saul came out to meete David, & said, O how glorious was the king of Israel this day, which was vncouered to day in the eies of the maidēs of his seruants, as a foole vncouereth himselfe. 3. Contentions, when two or more striue in speech one with another, for any kind of Superioritie. 4. Brawlings in any conference. 5. Crying, which is an vnseemely eleuation of the voice against ones aduersary. Gal. 5. 19. The workes of the flesh are manifest, which are, 20. emulations, contentions, seditions. Eph. 4. 31. Let all bitternesse, and anger, and wrath, crying, and euill speaking be put away from you, with all malitiousnesse. 32. Be curteous one to another. Gen. 16. 11. He (vz. Ismael) shall be a wilde man, his hand shall be against euery man, and euery mans hand against him. 6. Complaints to euery one of such as offer vs iniuries. Iam. 5. 9, Grudge not against one another, brethren, least ye be condemned.

III. In countenance and gesture, all such signes, as euidently decipher the malitious affections lurking in the heart, Gē. 4. 5. 6. His countenance fell downe: and the Lord said vnto Caine, Why art thou so wrath? Math 27. 39. They that passed by railed on him, nodding their heads.

Hence is it, that derision is tearmed persecution. Gen. 21. 9. Sarai saw the sonne of Hagar the Egyptian mocking, &c. Gal. 4. 29. He that was borne after the flesh, persecuted him that was borne after the spirit.

IV. In deedes: 1. To fight with, or to beat our neighbour, and to maime his body. Leuit. 24. 19. 20. If any man cause any blemish in his neighbour: as he hath done, so shall it be done to him, breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth. 2. To procure any way the death of our neighbour, whether it be by the sword, famine, or poyson, Gen. 4. 8. Caine rose vp against his brother, & slue him. 3. To exercise tyrannous cruelty in inflicting punishments, Deut. 25. 3. Forty stripes shall hee cause him to haue, and not past, least if he should exceede, and beat him aboue that with many stripes, thy brother should appeare despised in thy sight. 2. Cor. 11. 24. Of the Iewes I receiued fiue times forty stripes saue one. 4. To vse any of Gods creatures hardly, Prouerb. 12. 10. A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast, but the mercies of the wicked are cruell. Deut. 22. 6. If thou finde a birds neast in the way, in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young, or egges, and the damme sitting vpon the young, or vpon the egges, thou shalt not take the damme with the young, but shalt in any wise let the damme goe, and take the young to thee, that thou mayest prosper and prolong thy daies. 5. To take occasion by our neighbours infirmities, to vse him discurteously, and to make him our laughing stocke, or tanting recreation, Leuit. 19. 14. Thou shalt not curse the deafe, nor put a stum- ſtumbling blocke before the blind. 2. King. 2. 23. Little children came out of the Citie, & mocked him, and ſaid vnto him, Come vp thou baldhead, come vp thou baldhead. 6. To iniurie the impotent, feeble, poore, ſtrangers, fatherleſſe or widdowes. Exod. 22. 21. 22. Thou ſhalt not doe iniury to a ſtranger, neither oppreſſe him: for ye were ſtrangers in the land of Egypt. Ye ſhall not trouble any widow, or fatherleſſe child. 25. Thou ſhalt not be an vſurer vnto the poore. We then iniury theſe: 1. If wee pay not the labourer his hire. Deut. 24. 14. Thou ſhalt not oppreſſe an hired ſeruant that is needy and poore, neither of thy brethren, nor of the ſtranger that is within thy gates. 15. Thou ſhalt giue him his hire for his day: neither ſhall the ſunne goe downe vpon it: for he is poore, and therewith ſuſtaineth his life: leaſt he crie againſt thee to the Lord, & it be ſinne vnto thee. 2. If thou reſtore not the pledge of the poore. Exod. 22. 26. 27. If thou take thy neighbours raiment to pledge, thou ſhalt reſtore it vnto him before the ſunne goe downe: for that is his garment onely, & his couering for his skinne. 3. If we withdrawe corne from the poore. Prou. 11. 26. He that withdraweth the corne, the people will curſe him: but bleſſing ſhall be vpon the head of him that ſelleth corne.

Againe, this lawe is as well tranſgreſſed by not killing, when the lawe chargeth to kill, & by pardoning the puniſhment due vnto murther, as by killing whē we ſhould not. Numb. 35. 16. If one ſmite another with an inſtrument of yron, that he die, he is a murtherer, and the murderer ſhall die the death. 33. The land cannot be clenſed of the blood that is ſhed therein, but by the blood of him that ſhed it.

By this place alſo are combates of two men hand to hand, for deciding of controuerſies, vtterly vnlawfull. 1. Becauſe they are not equall meanes ordained of God to determine controuerſies. 2. In that it falleth out in ſuch combates that hee is conquerour before man, who indeed is guilty before God.

This alſo condemneth popiſh Sanctuaries, and places of priuiledge: as Churches, and the like, wherein murderers ſhelter & ſhroud themſelues from the danger of the lawe. For God expreſly commaundeth (Exod. 21. 14. that ſuch an one ſhall bee taken frō his altar, that he may die. And Ioab, 1. King. 2. 24. touching the hornes of the altar, was ſlaine in the temple.

Hitherto in like ſort belong ſuch things as concerne the ſoule of our neighbour. 1. To be a ſcandall or offence to the ſoule of our neighbor, either in life or doctrine, Math. 18. 7. Woe be to the world becauſe of offences: it is neceſſary that offences ſhould come: but woe be to them by whome they doe come.

2. To miniſter occaſions of ſtrife and diſcord. The which we then doe: 1. When we cannot be brought to remit ſomewhat of our owne right. 2. When we returne ſnappiſh and crooked anſwers. 3. When we interpret euery thing amiſſe, and take them in the worſt part. 1. Sam. 25. 25. Nabal is his name, and folly is with him. 2. Sam. 10. 3. And the Princes of the children of Ammon ſaid to Hanun their Lord. Thinkeſt thou that Dauid doeth honour thy father, that hee hath ſent comforters to thee? hath not Dauid rather ſent his ſeruants vnto thee, to ſearch the citie, to ſpie it out, and to ouerthrowe it? wherefore Hanun tooke Dauids ſeruants, and ſhaued off the halfe of their beards, and cut off the garments in the middle, euen to their buttocks, and ſent them away.

3. The Miniſters ſinne againſt their neighbours, is this, not to preach the word of God to their charge, that they thereby might be inſtructed in the waies of life. Prou. 29. 18. Where there is no viſion the people decay, but he that keepeth the lawe is bleſſed. Eſay, 56. 10. Their watchmen are all blinde, they haue no knowledge, they are all dumbe dogs, they cannot barke: they lye and ſleepe, and delight in ſleeping. And theſe greedy dogs can neuer haue enough, and theſe ſheapheards they cannot vnderſtand: for they all looke to their owne way, euery one for his aduantage, and for his owne purpoſe. Ezech. 3. 18. When I ſhall ſay to the wicked, Thou ſhalt ſurely die, & thou giueſt him not warning, the ſame wicked man ſhall die in his iniquity, but his blood will I require at thy hands.

And not onely not to preach at all, but to preach negligently, is vtterly condemned, Ier. 48. 10. Curſed be he that doeth the worke of the Lord negligently. Reuel. 3. 16. Becauſe thou art lukewarme, and neither hot nor cold: it will come to paſſe that I ſhall ſpew thee out of my mouth. This reproueth non-reſidency of miniſters, which is an ordinary abſence of the miniſter from his charge: namly, from that particular congregation committed vnto him. Eſay. 62. 6. I haue ſet watchmen vpon thy walls, O Ieruſalem, which all the day and all the night continually ſhall not ceaſe: yee that are mindfull of the Lord keepe not ſilence, & giue him no reſt, til he repaire, and till he ſet vp Hieruſalem the praiſe of the world. Act.20.28.29.30.31. Take heede therfore vnto your ſelues, and to all the flocke whereof the holy ghoſt hath made you ouerſeers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing, ſhall grieuous wolues enter in among you, not ſparing the flocke. Moreouer, of your ſelues ſhall men ariſe, ſpeaking peruerſe things to draw diſciples after them. Therefore watch and remember, that by the ſpace of three yeares, I ceaſed not to warne euery one night and day with teares. 1.Pet.5.2.3. Feede the flocke of GOD, which dependeth vpon you, caring for it, not by conſtraint but willingly: not for filthy lucre, but of a ready minde: not as though ye were Lords ouer Gods heritage, but that ye may be enſamples to the flocke. Ezech.34.4. and 33. The Councell of Antioch, the 17.Can. If any biſhop by impoſition of hands inducted into a charge, and appointed to gouerne a people, and he neglect to take vpon him that office, but delayeth to goe vnto the congregation, allotted vnto him: ſuch a one ſhall be prohibited from the Lords table, till hee be enforced to attend vpon that charge, or at the leaſt ſomewhat be determined by a complete aſſembly of the Miniſters of that prouince. The Councel of Sardice, the 14.Canon. We remember that our brethren in a former aſſembly decreed, that if any laie-man remaining three Sabboths or Lords daies, that is, three weekes in a citty, did not in the ſame citty frequent the Church aſſemblies, he ſhould be excommunicated: If then ſuch things are not allowable in lay-men, much leſſe in Miniſters, for whom it is neither lawfull nor conuenient, without vrgent neceſſity, to be abſent from his pariſh Church longer then the time aboue mentioned. To this decree there was not one non placet, but euery one ſaid, It liketh vs well. The Councel held at Conſt. in the 24.Canon decreed that miniſters ought not to haue their ſubſtitutes, or vicars, but in their owne perſons, with feare and cheerefullneſſe, performe al ſuch duties, as are required of them in the ſeruice of God. The Canon law doth conclude the ſame things, diſt.39.Canon ſi quis vult, debent indeſinenter, &c. The Biſhops (ſaith the Canon) ought to be continually reſident in Gods Tabernacle, that they may learne ſomewhat of God, and the people of them, whileſt they read often and meditate vpon Gods worke. Againe in the Canons intituled Pontifices, and ſi quis in clero. Epiſcopos, qui dominici gregis ſuſcipiunt curam, &c. The Biſhops which take vpon them to feede Gods flocke, ought not to depart from their dutie, leaſt they loſe that excellent talent which God hath beſtowed vpon them, but rather ſtriue with that one talent to get three more talents. And in the 80.Canon of thoſe which are termed the Canõs of the Apoſtles, there is expreſſe mandate, that ſuch, whether Biſhop or Senior, who attendeth not vpon their office in the Church, ſhal foorthwith be remooued from that place. The Chalcedon Councell, Canon, 10. Let no man be ordained miniſter of two Churches, in two ſeuerall citties, but let him remaine in that, vnto which he was firſt called. And if for vaine glory he ſhall afterward goe to a greater congregation, let him immediatly be recalled to his firſt charge, and in that onely exerciſe his miniſtery. But if one be called to another charge, let him ſimply giue ouer the former, and haue no intereſt in the ſame, &c. For this thing, looke to the decree of Damaſus, and the Councell of Trent, ſect.7. Can.8.

They are, notwithſtanding the former teſtimonies, ſome caſes, wherein it is permitted to the Miniſter that he may be abſent: if by his abſence the congregation be not endammaged: I. Sickneſſe: the Councell of Mentz, 25.Canon. If a Biſhop be not at home, or be ſicke, or vpon ſome exigent, cannot be preſent at his pariſh, let him procure one who vpon Sabboths and feſtinall daies, wil preach vnto his charge. Auguſtine teſtifieth epiſt.138. that he was abſent on the like occaſion.

II. Allowance of the Church, to bee abſent for a time vpon ſome neceſſary & publike commodity for the ſame. Coloſſ 1.7. Epaphras is their miniſter, but cap.4.12. he beeing abſent ſaluteth them. And Ambroſe though he were biſhop of Millaine, yet went hee twiſe Ambaſſadour into France to make agreement betwixt Maximus and Valentinian. Ambroſe.5.booke, and 27. Epiſt. to Valentinian the Emperour.

III. If by reaſon of perſecution he be enforced to flie, & ſee no hope to procure the ſafety of his people. This made Cyprian to be abſent from Carthage, as he teſtifieth in his epiſtles.

Thus much concerning ſinnes againſt our neighbour. Nowe followe ſuch ſinnes as a man committeth againſt his own perſon, as when a man doth hurt, kill, and endanger himſelfe, Math.16.24. If any man will follow me, let him denie himſelfe, take vp his Croſſe, and followe mee. Math.4.6. He ſaid vnto him, If thou be the ſonne of God, caſt thy ſelfe downe headlong: for it is written,

He

He ſhall giue his angels charge ouer thee, and with their hands they ſhall lift thee vp, leaſt at any time thou ſhouldeſt daſh thy foote againſt a ſtone. 7. Ieſus ſaid vnto him: It is written againe, Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God. Therefore for a man to be his owne executioner, though to eſcape a moſt ſhamefull death, is vtterly vnlawfull and vngodly.

The affirmatiue part.

Thou ſhalt preſerue the life of thy neighbour. Hitherto may we referre theſe duties:

I. Such as appertaine to the perſon of our neighbour, and concerne firſt his welfare both of body and minde; as, to reioyce with them that reioyce. Rom. 12. 15. Mark. 10. 20. Then he anſwered and ſaid vnto him, All theſe things I haue obſerued from my youth. And Ieſus beheld him, and loued him. Secondly, his miſeries, to be grieued with him for them. Rom. 12. 15. Mourne with thoſe that mourne. Eſai. 24. 16. And I ſaid, My leanneſſe, my leanneſſe, woe is mee, the tranſgreſſours haue offended, yea the tranſgreſſours haue grieuouſly offended. Pſal. 119. verſ. 136. Mine eyes guſh out with water, becauſe men obſerue not thy law. Againe, wee muſt helpe him as much as in vs lieth. Iob. 29. 15. I was as an eye to the blind, and a foote to the lame. 2. Cor. 8. 3. To their power, yea beyond their power, they were willing. And that we doe, we muſt doe ſpeedily. Prou. 3. 28. Say not to thy neighbour, Goe & come againe to morrow, and I will giue thee, if thou nowe haue it. Leuit. 19. 17. Thou ſhalt plainely rebuke thy neighbour, and not ſuffer him to ſinne.

Thirdly, concerning ſuch iniuries, as he offereth vnto thee: I. Thou ſhalt not bee angrie againſt him, vpon a ſmall occaſion. Nomb. 12. 3. Moſes was a meeke man aboue all that liued vpon the earth. Prou. 9. 11. The diſcretion of a man deferreth his anger, and his glorie is to paſſe by an offence. II. Thou muſt be ſlow to wrath, and neuer angrie, but for a moſt iuſt cauſe. Marke. 3. 5. Then he looked round about on them angerly, mourning alſo for the hardneſſe of their hearts. Prou. 14. 29. Hee that is ſlow to wrath, is of great wiſdome: but hee that is of an haſtie minde exalteth follie. III. Thine anger muſt be but for a while. Eph. 4. 26. Bee angrie and ſin not, let not the ſunne goe down vpon thy wrath. IV. Forgiue freely an iniurie, and reuenge it not. Eph. 4. 32. Bee yee courteous one to an other, and tender hearted, forgiuing one an other, euen as God for Chriſts ſake forgaue you.

Fourthly, his wants and infirmities: 1. Auoide occaſions whereby they may bee ſtirred and laid open. Gen. 13. 8. Then ſaid Abraham to Lot, Let there bee no ſtrife I pray thee, betweene thee and me, neither betweene thy heardſmen and mine: for wee are brethren. 9. Is not the whole land before thee? depart, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, I will take the right: or if thou goe to the right hand, I will take the left. Gen. 27. 44. And tarie with him a while vntill thy brothers fiercenеſſe bee aſſwaged, 45. And till thy brothers wrath turne away from thee, and he forget the things which thou haſt done to him. 2. Depart ſometimes from thine owne right. Math. 17. 25, 26. What thinkeſt thou Simon? of whom doe the kings of the earth take tribute, or poll money? of their children, or of ſtrangers? Peter ſaid vnto him, Of ſtrangers. Then ſaid Ieſus vnto him, Then are the children free. 27. Neuertheles, leaſt we ſhould offend them, goe to the ſea, and caſt in an angle, and take the firſt fiſh that commeth vp, and when thou haſt opened his mouth, thou ſhalt find a piece of twentie pence: that take and giue it vnto them for me and thee. 3. To appeaſe anger kindled: which is done, I. by ouercomming euil with goodnes. Rom. 12. 21. Be not ouercome of euill, but ouercome euill with goodnes. II. By following after peace. 1. Pet. 3. 11. Decline from euill, and doe good, ſeeke peace, and follow after it. III. By courteous anſwers. Prou. 15. 1. A ſoft anſwer putteth away wrath: but grieuous words ſtirre vp anger. 1. Sam. 1. 14. Eli ſaid vnto her, Howe long wilt thou bee drunken? put away thy drunkennes from thee. 15. Then Hannah anſwered, and ſaid, Nay my Lord, but I am a woman troubled in ſpirit: I haue drunke neither wine nor ſtrong drinke, but haue poured out my ſoule, before the Lord. Philem. v. 15. It may be that he therefore departed for a ſeaſon, that thou ſhouldeſt receiue him for euer. IV. By ouerpaſſing ſome wants and infirmities in mens words and deedes. Prou. 19. 11. It is a mans honour to paſſe by infirmities. V. By couering them with ſilence. 1. Pet 4. 8. Aboue all things haue feruent loue amongſt you, for loue couereth a multitude of ſinnes. Prou. 17. 9. He that couereth tranſgreſſion, ſeeketh loue: but hee that repeateth a matter ſeparateth the prince. VI. By taking euery thing (if it bee poſſible) in the beſt part. 1. Cor. 13. 5. Loue thinketh none euill.

This ſheweth the lawfulnes of truces, couenants, and other agreements concerning peace, beeing made to auoide iniu-ries, maintaine auncient bounds, procure ſecuritie in traffique, poſſeſſions, and iournies, ſet penſions, commons for cattell, liberties of hunting, fiſhing, or fouling, and getting fewel, or other neceſſaries for publike commodities, if there be no vnlawful conditions annexed vnto the ſame. And we may make this couenant not only with Chriſtians, but for the maintenance of peace, with infidels alſo. For that which is godly to be performed, is no leſſe godly to be promiſed. But it is a note of true Godlines, to be as much as may be, at peace with all men. Therefore to promiſe peace by couenant, is very Godly. We may ſee the experience of this in the liues of holy men. Gen. 21. 22. At that ſame time Abimelech and Pichol his chiefe captaine, ſpake vnto Abraham, ſaying, God is with thee in all that thou doeſt. 23. Now therefore ſweare vnto me here by God, that thou wilt not hurt me, nor my children, nor my childrens children, &c. 24. Then Abraham ſaid, I will ſweare. 27. Then Abraham tooke ſheepe and beeues, and gaue them vnto Abimelech: & they two made a couenant. Gen. 31. 44. Now therefore come and let vs make a couenant, I and thou, which may bee a witneſſe betweene mee and thee. 45. Then Laban ſaid to Iakob, Behold this heape, and behold the pillar, which I haue ſet vp betweene mee and thee. 53. The God of Abraham, and the Gods of Nahor, and the God of their father be iudge betweene vs: But Iaakob ſware by the feare of his father Izhak.

II. Concerning his bodie, we are to regard it aliue and dead. Beeing aliue, wee ought if neede bee: I. to miniſter vnto it food and raiment. Math. 25. 41, 42. Depart from me ye curſed into euerlaſting fire, which is prepared for the deuill and his angels. For I was an hungred, and yee gaue mee no meate, I thirſted, and ye gaue me no drinke, &c. 45. In as much as yee did it not to one of the leaſt of theſe, ye did it not to mee. II. To lend our helping hand, when our neighbours body is in any danger. 1. Ioh. 3. 16. Hereby we perceiued Ioue, that he laid downe his life for vs, therefore alſo ought wee to lay downe our liues for the brethren.

When a man is dead, we ought to commit the dead corps to the graue, as may appeare by theſe arguments: I. The inſtinct of Nature it ſelfe. II. The examples of the Patriarks, and other holy perſonages. Abraham buried Sarah, Gen. 23. 19. Iaakob is buried by his ſonnes, Gen. 50. 12. Steuen by religious, and deuout men, Act. 8. 2. III. The Lords owne approbation of buriall, in that he numbreth it amongſt his benefits. For the want thereof is a curſe. Ier. 22. 19. He (vz. Iehoiakim) ſhall be buried as an aſſe is buried, euen drawne and caſt forth without the gates of Ieruſalem. Therefore rather then Moſes ſhould be vnburied, the Lord himſelfe did burie him, Deut. 34. 5, 6. Moſes the ſeruant of the Lord died in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord. And he buried him in a valley, in the land of Moab, ouer againſt Beth-peor, but no man knoweth of his ſepulchre vnto this day. IV. There is no dead carkaſe ſo lothſome as man is, the which both argueth the neceſſitie of buriall, and how vgly we are in the ſight of God, by reaſon of ſinne. V. The body muſt riſe againe out of the earth, that it may bee made a perpetual manſiō houſe for the ſoule to dwell in. VI. The bodies of the faithfull are the temples of the holy Ghoſt, and therefore muſt riſe againe to glorie. VII. Buriall is a teſtimony of the loue and reuerence we beare to the deceaſed.

A funeral ought to be ſolemnized after an honeſt and ciuill manner: namely, agreeable to the nature, and credit as wel of thoſe which remaine aliue, as them which are dead. Concerning the liuing, they muſt ſee that I. their mourning bee moderate, and ſuch, as may well expreſſe their affection and loue to the partie departed. Ioh. 11. 34. He ſaid, Where haue ye laid him? they anſwered, Lord, come and ſee. 35. Then Ieſus wept. And (v. 36.) the Iewes ſaid, Behold how he loued him. II. They muſt auoide ſuperſtition, and not ſurmiſe that funeral ceremonies are auaileable to the dead. Such are the rites of the Church of Rome; as to bee buried in a Church, eſpecially vnder the altar, and in a fryars coole. III. They ought to take heede of ſuperfluous pomp and ſolemnities. For of all oſtentations of pride, that is moſt foliſh, to be boaſting of a loathſome and a deformed corps. Eſai. 22. 15, 16. Thus ſaith the Lord God of hoſts, Goe, get thee to that treaſurer, to Shebnah the ſteward of the houſe, and ſay, What haſt thou to doe here? and whome haſt thou here? that thou ſhouldeſt here hew thee out a ſepulchre, as he that heweth out his ſepulchre in an high place, or that graueth an habitation for himſelfe in a rocke.

To this commandement belongeth theſe duties: I. Before the vintage or harueſt, wee ought to permit any man, for the repreſſing of hunger, to gather grapes, or plucke off the eares of corne in the field.

Deut.

Deut. 23.24,25. When thou commeſt into thy neighbours vineyard, then thou maiſt eate grapes at thy pleaſure, as much as thou wilt: but thou ſhalt put none in thy veſſell. When thou commeſt into thy neighbours corne, thou maiſt pluck the eares with thine hād, but thou ſhalt not moone a ſickle to thy neighbors corne. Math. 12.1. Ieſus went on the Sabboth day through the corne, and his Diſciples were an hungred, and began to plucke the eares of the corne, and to eate, &c. II. In the vintage, and time of harueſt, wee ought neither to leaue the trees naked of grapes, nor rake vp after the reaping, eares of corne: but to leaue the after-gatherings for the poore. Leuit. 23. 22. When you reape the harueſt of your land, thou ſhalt not rid cleane the corners of thy field when thou reapeſt: neither ſhalt thou make any after-gathering of thy harueſt: but ſhalt leaue them vnto the poore, and to the ſtranger: I am the Lord your God. Ruth 2.8. Goe to none other field to gather, neither goe from hence, but abide here by my maidens. 9. So ſhee gleaned in the field vntill euening.

III. Concerning the ſoule of our neighbour: I. Wee muſt ſeeke all meanes to winne him to the profeſſion of Chriſtian religion. 1. Cor. 10.33. I pleaſe all men in all things, not ſeeking mine owne profit, but the profit of many, that they might be ſaued. Heb. 10. 24. Let vs conſider one an other, to prouoke vnto loue and to good workes. II. We muſt liue amongſt men without offence. 1. Cor. 10. 32. Giue no offence neither to the Iewes, nor to the Grecians, nor to the Church of God. 1. Cor. 8.13. If meate offend my brother, I will eate no fleſh while the world ſtandeth, that I may not offend my brother. III. The light of our good life, muſt bee as a lanterne to direct the waies of our neighbours. Act. 28.14. This I confeſſe vnto thee, that after the way (which they call hereſie) ſo worſhip I the God of my fathers, beleeuing all things which are written in the Lawe and the Prophets. 15. And haue hope towards God, that the reſurrection of the dead, which they themſelues looke for alſo, ſhall bee both of iuſt and vniuſt. 16. And herein I endeauour my ſelfe to haue alway a cleare conſcience toward God and toward men. IV. If our neighbour offend, we are to admoniſh him. 1. Theſſ. 5.14. We deſire you, brethren, admoniſh them that are vnruely: comfort the feeble minded: beare with the weake: bee patient towards all men. V. If our neighbour runne the waies of Gods commandement (as Dauid ſpeaketh) wee ought to incourage him in the ſame.

VI. We may referre ſuch things vnto this commandement, as appertaine to the peculiar preſeruation or euery ſeuerall mans life. 1. Recreation, which is an exerciſe ioyned with the feare of God, conuerſant in things indifferent, for the preſeruation of bodily ſtrength, and confirmation of the minde in holines. Eccles. 2.2. I ſaid of laughter, thou art madde, and of ioy, what is this that thou doeſt? Eſai. 5.12. The harpe, viol, timbrell, and pipe, and wine, are in their feaſts, but they regard not the worke of the Lord, neither conſider the worke of his hands. 1. Cor. 10.7. Neither be ye idolaters, as were ſome of them, as it is written: The people ſate downe to eate and drinke, and roſe vp to play. Luke 6.25. Woe be to you that laugh: for yee ſhall waile and weepe. Deut. 12.7. There yee ſhall eate before the Lord your God, and yee ſhall reioyce in all that you put your hands vnto, both yee and your houſholds, becauſe the Lord thy God hath bleſſed thee. To this ende hath the word of God permitted ſhooting. 2. Sam. 1. 18. He bad them teach the children of Iudah to ſhoote, as it is written in the booke of Iaſher. And muſicall conſort. Nehem. 7.67. Beſides their ſeruants and maides which were ſeuē thouſand, three hundreth, and ſeauen and thirtie: they had two hundreth and fiue and fourtie ſinging men, & ſinging women. And putting forth of riddles. Iudge. 14. 12. Samſon ſaid vnto them, I will now put forth a riddle vnto you, and if you can declare it mee within ſeauen daies of the feaſt, and finde it out, I will giue you thirtie ſheetes, and thirtie change of garment. 13. And they anſwered him, Put forth thy riddle that we may heare it. 14. And he ſaid vnto them, Out of the eater came meate, and out of the ſtrong came ſweetneſſe: and they could not in three daies expound the riddle. And hunting of wild beaſts. Can. 2.15. Take vs the foxes, the little foxes which deſtroy the vines: for our vines haue ſmall grapes. Laſtly, the ſearching out or the contemplation of the workes of God. 1. King. 4. 33. And hee ſpake of trees from the Cedar tree that is in Lebanon, euen vnto the hyſſope that ſpringeth out of the wall: hee ſpake alſo of beaſts, and of foules, and of creeping things, and of fiſhes. 2. Phyſicke, the vſe whereof is holy, if before the receit of it, a man craue remiſſion of his ſinnes, and repoſe his confidence onely vpon God, not vpon the meanes. Math. 9.2. And loe, they brought vnto him a man ſicke of the palſie, lying on a bedde. And Ieſus ſeeing their faith, ſaide to the ſicke of the palſie, Sonne, bee of good comfort, thy sinnes are forgiuen thee. 6. Then hee said to the sicke of the palsie, Arise, take vp thy bedde and walke to thine house. Ioh. 5. 5. A certaine man was there, which had bin diseased eight and thirty yeres. 8, Iesus said vnto him, Take vp thy bed and walke. 14. After that Iesus found him in the temple, and said vnto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sinne no more, least a worse thing come vnto thee. 2. Chr. 16. 12. And Asa in the nine and thirtieth yeare of his raigne was diseased in his feete, and his disease was extreame: yet he sought not to the Lord in his disease, but to the Phisitians. 3 Auoiding of an iniurie, offered by some priuate person: this, if it be against an vnruely & vnstaied aduersarie, and the defense be faultlesse, is very lawfull, and is so farre from priuate reuenge, that it is to be accounted a iust defence. The defence is then faultlesse, when a man doth so assault his aduersarie, as that he neither purposeth his own reuenge, or his enemies hurt, but onely his alone safetie from that imminent danger.

A doubt. Whether may a man flie in the plague time? Answer. Such as be hindered by their calling may not; as, Magistrates, and Pastours, hauing charge of soules: yet free men not bound by calling, may. Reasons. I. A man may prouide for his owne safetie, if it be not to the hinderance of an other. II. A man may flie warres, famine, flouds, fire, and other such dangers: therefore the plague. III. There is lesse danger of sickenesse, the more the multitude of people is diminished. Obiection. I To flie, is a token of distrust. Answer. This diffidence is no fault of the fact, but of the person. II. It is offensiue. Answer. The offence is taken, not giuen. III. To flie, is to forsake our neighbour against the rule of charitie. Answer. It is not, if kinsfolke and Magistrates be present. IV Men are to visit the sicke by Gods appointment. Answer. Lepers were excepted among the Iewes: and so likewise they in these daies which are infected with a disease, answerable to the leprosie, namely, if it be dangerously contagious.

CHAP. XXVI.

Of the seauenth Commandement.

THe seauenth Commandemēt sheweth how we may preserue the chastitie of our selues, and of our neighbour.

The words are these:

Thou shalt not commit adulterie.

The Resolution.

Adulterie] To commit adulterie, signifieth as much, as to doe any thing, what way soeuer, whereby the chastitie of our selues, or our neighbours may be stained. Math. 5. 28.

The negatiue part.

Thou shalt no way either hurt, or hinder thy neighbours chastitie.

In this place are prohibited:

I. The lust of the heart, or the euill concupiscence of the flesh. Math. 5. 28. I say vnto you, whosoeuer looketh on a woman to lust after her, he hath alreadie committed adulterie with her in his heart. Colos. 3. 5. Mortifie your members which are on earth: fornication, vncleannesse, the inordinate affection, euill concupiscence.

II. Burning in the flesh, which is an inward feruencie of lust, whereby the Godly motions of the heart are hindered, ouerwhelmed, and, as it were, with contrarie fire, burnt vp. 1. Cor. 7. 9. If they cannot abstaine, let them marrie: for it is better to marrie then to burne.

III. Strange pleasures about generation, prohibited in the word of God: the which are many.

I. With beasts. Leuit. 18. 23. Thou shalt not be with any beast, to bee defiled therewith, neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie downe thereto: for it is an abomination.

II. With the deuill, as witches doe by their own confession. For why should not a spirit as wel haue societie with a witch, as to eate meate?

III. With one of the same sexe. Leuit. 18. 22. Thou shalt not lie with the male as one lieth with a woman: for it is abomination. This is a sinne which they commit, whom God hath giuen ouer into a reprobate sense. Rom. 1. 26. For this cause God gaue them vp to vile affections: for euen their women did change their naturall vse, into that which is against nature. 27. And the men left the naturall vse of the woman, and burned in their lusts one toward an other, and man with man wrought filthinesse. It was the sinne of Sodome, Gen. 19. where it was so common, that to this day it is tearmed Sodomie.

IV. With such as bee within the degrees of consanguinitie or affinitie, prohibited in the word of God. Leuit. 18. 6. None shall come neere to any of the kindred of his flesh, to vncouer her shame, I am the Lord.

V. With vnmarried persons. This sinne ſinne is tearmed fornication. Deut. 22. 28. If any man find a maide that is not betrothed, and take her and lie with her, & they be found, 29. Then the man that lay with her, ſhal giue vnto the maides father fiftie ſhekels of ſiluer, and ſhe ſhall be his wife, becauſe he hath humbled her: hee cannot put her away all his life. 1. Cor. 10. 8. Neither let vs commit fornication, as ſome of them committed fornication, and fell in one day one and twentie thouſand.

VI. With thoſe, whereof one is married, or at the leaſt betrothed. This ſinne is called adulterie: & God hath inflicted by his word the ſame puniſhment vpon them, which commit this ſinne, after they be betrothed, as he doth vpon ſuch as are alreadie married. Deut. 22. 22. If a man bee found lying with a woman married to a man, then they ſhall die euen both twaine: to wit, the man that lay with the wife, and the wife: ſo thou ſhalt put away euill from Iſrael. 23. If a maid be betrothed to an huſband, and a man finde her in the towne and lie with her. 24. Then ſhall yee bring them both out vnto the gates of the ſame citie, and ſhall ſtone them to death with ſtones. This is a marueilous great ſinne, as may appeare in that it is the puniſhment of idolatrie. Rom. 1. 23. They turned the glorie of the vncorruptible God, to the ſimilitude of the image of a corruptible man, &c. v. 24. Wherefore God gaue them vp vnto their hearts luſts, vnto vncleanneſſe. Yea this ſinne is more hainous then theft. Prou. 6. 30. Men doe not deſpiſe a theefe, when he ſtealeth to ſatisfie his ſoule when he is hungrie. 32. But he that committeth adulterie with a woman, is deſtitute of vnderſtanding, he that doth it, deſtroyeth his owne ſoule. Againe, the adulterer breaketh the couenant of marriage, which is Gods couenāt. Prou. 2. 17. Which forſaketh the guide of her youth, and forgetteth the couenant of her God. Adulterers diſhoneſt their owne bodies. 1. Cor. 6. 18. Flee fornication, euery ſinne that a man doth, is without the bodie: but he that committeth fornication, ſinneth againſt his owne bodie. And bereaue their neighbours of a great and vnrecouerable benefit: namely of chaſtitie. As for the children which are begotten in this ſort, they are ſhut out from that preheminence, which they otherwiſe might obtaine in the congregation. Deut. 23. 2. A baſtard ſhall not enter into the Congregation of the Lord: euen to his tenth generation ſhall he not enter into the Congregation of the Lord. He maketh his familie a ſtewes, as appeareth in Dauid, whoſe adulterie was puniſhed by Abſoloms lying with his fathers concubines. 2. Sam. 16. 21. Achitophel ſaid to Abſolom, Goe to thy fathers concubines, which he hath left to keepe the houſe. Iob 31. 9. If mine heart haue beene deceiued by a woman, or if I haue laid waite at the doore of my neighbour: let my wife grind vnto another man: and let other men bowe downe vpon her. Mans poſteritie feeleth the ſmart of this ſinne. Iob 31. 12. This (adulterie) is a fire that ſhall deuoure to deſtruction, and which ſhall roote out all mine increaſe. To conclude, though this ſinne be committed neuer ſo cloſely, yet God will reueale it. Numb. 5. from the 12. verſe to the 23. And it vſually hath one of theſe two, as companions: namely, dulneſſe of heart, or a marueilous horrour of conſcience. Hoſ. 4. 11. Whoredome, and wine, take away their heart.

As for the Patriarks Polygamie or marrying of many wiues, albeit it cānot be defended, yet it may be excuſed: either becauſe it ſerued to the enlarging of the nūber of mankind, when there were but few: or at the leaſt, to the propagation of the Church of God.

VII. With man and wife. They abuſe their libertie, if they knowe each other ſo long as the woman is in her flowers. Ezech. 22. 10. In thee haue they diſcouered their fathers ſhame: in thee haue they vexed her that was polluted in her flowers. Leuit. 18. 19. Thou ſhalt not goe vnto a woman to vncouer her ſhame, as long as ſhee is put apart for her diſeaſe. Ezech. 8. 6. If a man hath not lien with a merſtruous woman. Ambroſ. lib. de Philoſ. which Auguſtine citeth, lib. 2. contra Iulian. ſaith, That hee committeth adulterie with his wife, who in the vſe of wedlocke hath neither regard of ſeemelineſſe nor honeſtie. Hierome in his 1. booke, contra Iulianum, ſaith: A wiſe man ought to rule his wife in iudgement, not in affection. He will not giue the bridle vnto headſtrōg pleaſure, nor headily company with his wife. Nothing (ſaith he) is more ſhameleſſe, then to make a ſtrumpet of his wife.

VIII. Nocturnall pollutions, which ariſe of immoderate diet, or vnchaſt cogitations, going before in the day. Deut. 23. 10. Onans ſinne (Gen. 38. 8:) was not much vnlike theſe.

IX. Effeminate wantonnes, whereby occaſions are ſought to ſtir vp luſt. Gal. 5. 19. The works of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are

are adulterie, fornication, vncleanneſſe, wantonneſſe. Of this kinde are, 1. eyes full of adultery. 2. Pet. 2. 14. Hauing eyes full of adultery, and that cannot ceaſſe to ſinne. 2. Idlenes. 2. Sam. 11. 2. When it was euening tide, Dauid aroſe out of his bed, and walked vpon the roofe of the Kings Pallace: and from the roofe he ſaw a woman waſhing her ſelfe: and the woman was very beautifull to looke vpon. 3. And Dauid ſent, and inquired what woman it was: and one ſaid, Is not this Bethſheba the daughter of Elian, wife to Uriah the Hittite? Then Dauid ſent meſſengers, and tooke her away: and ſhee came vnto him, and he lay with her. 3. Riotous and laſciuious attire. 1. Tim. 2. 9. The women ſhall array themſelues in comely apparell, with ſhamefaſtneſſe and modeſtie, not with broydered haire, or gold or pearles, or coſtly apparell, but (as becommeth womē that profeſſe the feare of God) with good workes. Eſai. 3. 16. Becauſe the daughters of Zion are hauty, and walke with ſtretched out necks, and with wandring eyes, walking and minſing as they goe, and making a tinckling with their feete. 17. Therefore ſhall the Lord make the heads of the daughters of Zion bald, and the Lord ſhall diſcouer their ſecret parts. 18. In that day ſhall the Lord take away the ornament of the ſlippers, and the caules, and the round tyers, 19. The ſweet balls, and the bracelets, and the bonets, 20. The tyers of the head, and the ſloppes, and the headbandes, and the tablets, and the earings, 21. The rings and the mufflers, 22. The coſtly apparell and the vailes, and the wimples, & the criſping pinnes, 23. And the glaſſes, and the fine linnen, and the hoodes, and the launes. And no maruaile if the Prophet bee ſo ſharpe againſt exceſſiue and wanton apparell: for this is, I. a lauiſh and prodigall waſting of the benefits of GOD, which might well be imployed vpon better vſes. II. It is a teſtimonie, and as it were, the cogniſance or enſigne of pride, wherby a man would haue himſelfe in greater reputation then an other. III. It is a note of great idlenes and ſlouthfulneſſe. For commonly ſuch as beſtow much time in tricking and trimming themſelues vp, doe quite neglect other buſineſſe, and of all things, can not away with paines. IV. It argueth leuity, in deuiſing euery day ſome new faſhiō, or imitating that which others deuiſe. V. It maketh a confuſion of ſuch degrees and callings as God hath ordained, when as men of inferiour degree and calling, cannot be by their attire, diſcerned from men of higher eſtate. 4. Fulneſſe of bread and meate, which prouoke luſt. Ezech. 16. 45. This was the iniquity of thy ſiſter Sodome, pride, fulneſſe of bread, & Idleneſſe was in her, and in her daughters. Luke 16. 19. There was a certaine rich man, which was cloathed in purple and fine linnen, & fared well and delicately euery day. Rom. 13. 13. Walke honeſtly, as in the day time, not in gluttony and drunkenneſſe, neither in chambring and wantonneſſe. 5. Corrupt, diſhoneſt, and vnſeemely talke. 1. Cor. 15. 35. Erre not, euil talke corrupteth good manners. Such are vaine loue-ſongs, ballads, enterludes, and amorous bookes. This is the thing we are carefully to ſhune in the reading of Poets, yet ſo, as marriners doe in nauigation, who forſake not the ſea, but decline and flie from the rockes. 6. Laſciuious repreſentations of loue matters, in Playes and Commedies. Eph. 5. 3. 4. Fornication and all vncleanneſſe, let it not once bee named among you, as it becōmeth Saints, neither filthineſſe, nor fooliſh talking, neither ieſting, which are things not comely. 7. Vndecent and vnſeemely pictures. 1. Theſſ. 5. 22. Abſtaine from all appearance of euill. 8. Laſciuious dauncing of man and woman together. Marke 6. 22. The daughter of the ſame Herodias came in and danced, and pleaſed Herod, &c. 9. Company with effeminate perſons. Prou. 7. 25, Let not thine heart decline to her waies: wander thou not in her paths.

V. To appoint ſome light or ſheete-puniſhment for adultery, ſuch as that Romiſh Synagogue doth. For this is nothing els, but to open a gappe for other lewd perſons, to runne headlong into the like impiety.

Thou ſhalt preſerue the chaſtity of thy neighbour.

Chaſtity is the purity of ſoule and body, as much as belongeth to generation. The minde is chaſt, when it is free, or at the leaſt, freed from fleſhly concupiſcence. The body is chaſt, when it putteth not in execution the concupiſcences of the fleſh. 1. Theſſ. 4. 3. This is the will of GOD, euen your ſanctification, and that ye ſhould abſtaine from fornication. 4. That euery one of you ſhould know how to poſſeſſe his veſſell in holineſſe and honour, 5. And not in the luſt of cōcupiſcence, euen as the Gentiles, which knowe not God. 1. Cor. 7. 34. The vnmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhe may be holy both in body and ſpirit.

There are two eſpeciall vertues which preſerue

preſerue chaſtitie, Modeſtie, and Sobrietie. Modeſtie is a vertue which keepeth in each work an holy decorum, or comelines: and it is ſeene, 1. in the countenance and eyes, namely, when they neither expreſſe, nor excite the concupiſcence of the heart. Iob 31. 1. I made a couenant with mine eye, why then ſhould I thinke on a maide? Gen. 24. 64. Rebekah lift vp her eyes, and when ſhee ſaw Izhak, ſhee lighted downe from the camel. 65. So ſhee tooke a vaile, and couered her face. Prou. 17. 13. Shee caught him, and kiſſed him, and with an impudent face ſaid vnto him, &c. II. In words: when a mans talke is decent, in ſpeaking of ſuch things, we cã not but be aſhamed of. Gen. 4. 1. Then Adam knew Heuah his wife: who, &c. Pſal. 51. 1. A Pſalme of Dauid, when the Prophet Nathan came vnto him, after hee had gone into Bethſheba. Eſai 7. 20. In that day ſhall the Lord ſhaue with a raſer that is hired, euen by them beyond the riuer, by the King of Aſhur, the head and the haire of the feete, and it ſhall conſume the beard. Iug. 3. 24. When he was gone out, his ſeruãts came: who ſeeing that the doores of the parlar were ſhut, they ſaid, Surely he couereth his feete, (that is, he doth his eaſement) in his ſummer chamber. Againe, a mans talke muſt be little and ſubmiſſe. Matth. 12. 19. Behold my ſeruant whome I haue choſen, hee ſhall not ſtriue, nor crie, neither ſhall any man heare his voyce in the ſtreetes. Prou. 10. 19. In many wordes there cannot want iniquitie: but hee that refraineth his lippes is wiſe. And it is a note of a ſtrumpet to bee a giglot, and loud tongued. Prou. 7. 11. Shee is babbling and loud. In apparell, wee muſt obſerue an holy comelineſſe. Tit. 2. 3. The elder women muſt be of ſuch behauiour, as becommeth holineſſe. Holy comelineſſe is that which expreſſeth to the eye the ſinceritie, that is, the Godlineſſe, temperance, and grauitie either of man or woman. This decencie will more plainely appeare, if we conſider the endes of apparell, which are in number fiue. 1. Neceſſitie, to the end that our bodies may be defended againſt the extremitie of parching heate, and pinching cold. 2. Honeſtie, that that deformitie of our naked bodies might be couered, which immediatly followed the tranſgreſſion of our firſt parents. 3. Commoditie, whereby men, as their calling, worke, and trade of life is different, ſo doe they apparell themſelues: and hence it is, that ſome apparell is more decent for certaine eſtates of men, then other. 4. Frugalitie, when a mans attire is proportionable to his abilitie and calling. 5. Diſtinctiõ of perſõs, as of ſexe, ages, offices, times, and actions. For a man hath his ſet attire, a woman hers, a young man apparelled on this faſhion, an old man on that. And therefore it is vnſeemely for a man to put on a womans apparell, or a woman the mans. Deut. 22. 5. The woman ſhall not weare that which pertaineth to the man; neither ſhall a man put on womans rayment: for all that doe ſo, are an abomination to the Lord thy God.

To ſet downe preciſely out of Gods word what apparel is decent, is very hard: wherfore in this caſe, the iudgment and practiſe of modeſt, graue, and ſincere men, in euery particular eſtate, is moſt to be followed, and men muſt rather keepe too much within the bounds of meaſure, then to ſteppe one foote without the precincts. Concerning the purging of excrements of nature, care muſt be had, that they muſt be caſt foorth into ſome ſeparate and cloſe place, and there alſo couered. Deut. 23. 12. Thou ſhalt haue a place without the hoſt, whither thou ſhalt reſort. 13. And thou ſhalt haue a paddle among thy weapons, and when thou wouldeſt ſit downe without, thou ſhalt digge therewith, and returning, thou ſhalt couer thine excrements. 14. For the Lord thy God walketh in the middeſt of the campe to deliuer thee: therfore thine hoſt ſhal be holy, that he ſee no filthy thing in thee, and turne away from thee. 1. Sam. 24. 4. And he came to the ſheep-coats by the way, where there was a caue, and Saul went in to couer his feete.

Sobriety is a vertue, which concerneth the vſage of our diet in holineſſe. For the better obſeruation therof, theſe rules may ſerue: I. The chiefeſt at the banket, let him conſecrate the meates to God, by ſaying grace. 1. Sam. 9. 13. The people will not eate, till he (that is, Samuell) come, becauſe he will bleſſe the ſacrifice: & then eate they, that be bidden to the feaſt. Mark. 6. 39. Hee commanded them to make them all ſit downe by companies vpon the graſſe, &c. 41. And hee tooke the fiue loaues and two fiſhes, and looked vp to heauen, and gaue thankes. Act. 27. 35. When he had thus ſaid, he (that is, Paul) gaue thankes in the preſence of them all, and when he had broken bread, hee began to eate. II. It is lawfull to furniſh a table with ſtore of diſhes, not onely for neceſſity, but alſo for the good entertainement of a friend, and for delight. Luke 5. 29. Leui made him (that is, Ieſus) a great feaſt in his owne houſe, where there was a great company of publicans, and of other that sate at table with him. Psal. 104.15. Hee giueth wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and oyle to make the face shine, and bread that strengtheneth mans heart. Ioh. 12.2. There they made him a supper, and Martha serued, but Lazarus was one of them that sate at table with him. 3. Then tooke Marie a pound of oyntment of Spikenard, very costly, and anointed Iesus feete. III. Choose the lower roome at a banquet, and rather then bee troublesome, sit as the master of the seate assigneth thee. Luk. 14.7. Hee spake a parable to the guests, when he marked how they chose out the chiefe roomes, and said, 8. When thou shalt bee bidden of any man to a wedding, set not thy selfe downe in the chiefest place, least a more honourable man then thou bee bidden of him. 9. And he that badde both him & thee, come and say, Giue this man roome. 10. But goe and sit downe in the lowest roome, that when hee that bad thee, commeth, he may say vnto thee, Friend, sit vp higher. Prou. 25.6. Stand not in the place of great men, &c. IV. Man must eate at due times, not at vnseasonable houres. Eccles. 10.16. Woe be to thee, O land, when thy Princes eate in the morning. 17. Blessed art thou, O land, when thy Princes eate in time. V. Man must eate and drinke moderately, so that the bodie may receiue strength therby, and the soule bee more fresh and liuely, to performe the actions of Godlinesse. Luke 21.34. Take heede to your selues, least at any time your hearts bee oppressed with surfetting and drunkennesse. Prou. 23.29. To whome is woe? &c. Euen to them that tarrie long at wine, to them that goe and seeke mixt wine. 30 Looke not thou vpon the wine when it is red, and when it sheweth his colour in the cup, and goeth downe pleasantly, &c. Prou. 25.16. If thou hast found honie, eate that is sufficient for thee, least thou be ouer full, and vomit. Prou. 31. 4. It is not for Kings to drinke wine, nor for Princes strong drinke. 5. Least he drinke & forget the decree, and change the iudgement of all the children of affliction. VI. Wee must then especially regard these things, when we eate at great mens tables. Prou. 23.1. When thou sittest to eate with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee. 2. Put the knife to thy throat, if thou be a man giuen to thine appetite. 3. Bee not desirous of his daintie meates: for it is a deceiueable meate. VII. Godly mirth at meate is tollerable. Act. 2.46. They did eate their meate together with gladnes and singlenes of heart. VIII. Table talke (according as occasiō of talke is offered) must be such as may edifie. Such was Christs talke at the Pharises table, Luk. 14. from the 1. verse to the 16. verse. IX. See that after the banquet ended, the broken meate be not lost, but reserued. Ioh. 6.12. When they were satisfied, he said vnto his Disciples, Gather vp the broken meat which remaineth, that nothing be lost. X. At a feast leaue somewhat. Ruth. 2.14. She did eate, and was sufficed, and left thereof.

Chastity is double: one of single life, another in wedlocke. They that are single must I. with great care keepe their affections and bodies in holinesse. Psal. 119.9. How shall a young man purge his wayes? by directing the same after thy word. 1. Iohn. 2. 13. I write vnto you fathers, because yee haue knowne him, that is from the beginning. I write vnto you young men, because ye haue ouercome that wicked one. 14. I write vnto you babes, because ye haue knowne the father. Eccles. 12.1. Remember thy Creatour in the daies of thy youth, whiles the euill daies come not, nor the yeares approch, wherein thou shalt say, I haue no pleasure in them. II. They must fast often. 1. Cor. 9.27. I beate downe my body, and bring it into subiection, least by any meanes, after I haue preached to others, I my selfe should be reprooued. III. They must take heede they burne not in lust: for, 1. Cor. 7.9. It is better to marrie then to burne.

Chastitie in wedlocke, is when the holy and pure vse of wedlock is obserued. Heb. 13.4. Marriage is honourable among all, and the bed vndefiled: but whoremungers and adulterers God will iudge. To preserue purity in wedlocke, these cautions are profitable: I. contracts must be in the Lord, and with the faithfull onely. Malach. 2.11 Iudah hath transgressed, and an abomination is committed in Israel, and in Hierusalem: for Iudah hath defiled the holinesse of the Lord, which he loued, and hath married the daughter of a strange god. 1. Cor. 7.39. If her husband be dead shee is at liberty to marrie with whom she will, onely in the Lord. II. Both parties must separate themselues in the time of a womans disease, and at appointed fasts. Ezech. 18. 6. 1. Cor. 7.5. Defraud not one another, except it bee with consent for a time, that ye may giue your selues to fasting and prayer, and againe come together, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinency. III. Wedlock must be vsed rather to suppresse, then to satisfie that corrupt concupiscence of the flesh, & especially to enlarge the Church of God. Rom. 13.14.

Put

Put on the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, & take not care of the fleſh to ſatisfie the luſts thereof. IV. It muſt be vſed with prayer and thankſgiuing. 1. Tim. 4. 3. 4.

CHAP. XXVII.

Of the eight commandement.

THis commandement concerneth the preſeruation of our neighbors goods. The wordes are theſe:

Thou ſhalt not ſteale.

The Reſolution.

Steale] To ſteale, is properly to conuey any thing cloſely from an other. Gen. 31. 20. Iaakob ſtole away the heart of Laban the Aramite. In this place it ſignifieth generally, to wiſh that which is an other mans, to get it by fraud, and any way to impaire his wealth.

The negatiue part.

Thou ſhalt neither be wanting to preſerue, nor a meanes to hinder or hurt thy neighbours goods.

In this place theſe ſinnes are forbidden: I. Inordinate liuing, whether it be in no ſet calling, or idlely, wherein by neglecting their duties, ſuch perſons miſpend their time, goodes, and reuenewes. 2. Theſſ. 2. 11. We here that there are ſome amõg you which walke inordinately, and worke not at all, but are buſie bodies. Gen. 3. 9. In the ſweat of thy browes ſhalt thou eate thy bread, till thou returne to the earth. 1. Tim. 5. 8. If there be any that prouideth not for his owne, eſpecially for them of his houſhold, he denyeth the faith, & is worſe then an infidel.

II. Vniuſt dealing, the which is either in heart, or deede. Vniuſt dealing in heart, is named couetouſneſſe. Mat. 15. 19. Out of the heart come euill thoughts, murthers, adulteries, fornications, thefts, &c. Couetouſneſſe is idolatry. Eph. 5. 5. We know that noe couetous perſon, which is an idolatour, ſhall enter into the kingdome of Chriſt and of God. Yea, it is the very roote of all euill. 1. Tim. 6. 9. The loue of money is the roote af all euill, which while ſome luſted after, they erred from the faith, & pierced themſelues through with many ſorrowes.

Vniuſt dealing indeede is, in bargaining, or out of bargaining. Vniuſt dealing in bargaining, hath many branches. 1. Theſſ. 4. 6. Let no man oppreſſe, or deceiue his neighbour in a bargaine: for God is the auenger of ſuch things.

I. To ſell, or bargaine for that which is not ſaleable. Of this kind, I. is the gift of the holy Ghoſt, which cannot be bought with money. Act. 8. 18. When Simon ſawe, that through laying on of the Apoſtles handes, the holy Ghoſt was giuen, he offered them money, 16. ſaying giue me alſo this power, that on whome ſoeuer I lay the hands, he may receiue the holy Ghoſt. 20. Then Peter ſaid vnto him, Thy money periſh with thee, becauſe thou thinkeſt that the giftes of God may be obtained with money. II. Church goodes are not ſaleable. Therefore it is not to bee allowed, for men to ſell or alienate them from the Church. Prou. 20. 25. It is deſtruction for a man to deuoure that which his ſanctified, and after the vowes to enquire. Mal. 3. 8. Church goodes are the poſſeſſion of the Lord. III. Whatſoeuer is vnprofitable either to the Church, or Commonweale, muſt not be ſold.

II. All couloured forgery and deceit in bargaining. Luk. 19. 8. Zacchens ſtood forth, & ſaid vnto the Lord, Behold, Lord, the halfe of my goods I giue to the poore: and if I haue taken ought from any man by forged cauillation, I reſtore it foure fold. This deceit is vſed, I. when men ſell that, which is counterfeit, for good: as copper for gold, and mingle any waies bad with good, making ſhew onely of the good. Amos 8. 4. 5. 6. Heare this, ye that ſwallow vp the poore, ſaying, when will the new moneth be gone, &c. that we may ſell the refuſe of the wheat. II. When men falſifie their meaſures and weights. Deut. 25. 13. Thou ſhalt not haue in thy bagge two manner of weights, a great and a ſmall. 14. But thou ſhalt haue a right and a iuſt weight: a perfect and a iuſt meaſure ſhalt thou haue. Leuit. 10. 35. Ye ſhall not doe vniuſtly in iudgement, in line, in weight, or in meaſure. 36. Ye ſhall haue iuſt balances, true weights a true Epha, and a true Hin. Amos 8. 4. Here this, ye that ſay, When wil the Sabbath be gone, that wee may ſell corne, & make the Epha ſmall, and the ſhekel great, and falſifie the weights by deceit?

III. When the buyer concealleth the goodnes of the thing or the ſeller the falts of it, & blindfoldeth the trueth with coũterfeit ſpeeches. Mat. 7. 12. Whatſoeuer ye would that men ſhould doe vnto you, euen ſo doe to them: for this is the law and the Prophets. Prou. 20. 14. It is naught, it is naught, ſaith the buier, but when he is gone apart, hee boaſteth.

IV. When in buying and ſelling the people are oppreſſed. And this is done, 1. when the iuſt price of things is raiſed. For in bargaining, it is not lawfull to purſe one penny, without the giuing of a penniworth. 2. Sale vpon a ſet day, which is, when day is giuen, that the price may be inhanced. For what is this, I pray you, but to ſell time, and to take more of our neighbour, then right? 3. To ingroſſe, which is to buy vp all of one commodity into thine own hands, that when no other hath any of the ſame, thou maiſt ſell it at thine owne price. 4. To become bankerupt, that thou maiſt be enriched by the damages, and goods of other men. 5. Not to reſtore that, which was lent to one, pledged to one, or found by him. Ezech. 18.7. Neiher hath oppreſſed any, but hath reſtored the pledge to his debter: he that hath ſpoyled none by violence, &c. 6. To delay any kinde of reſtitution from one day to an other. Prou. 3.28. Say not to thy neighbour, Depart, and come againe, to morrowe I will pay you, when thou maiſt doe it then. Pſal. 37.21. The wicked man borroweth, and payeth not againe, but the righteous is mercifull, and lendeth. 7. To practiſe vſury. Pſal. 15. 5. Which hath not put his money to vſury. Exod. 22. 25. If thou lendeſt money to my people, to the poore man which dwelleth with thee, bee not to him as an vſurer, lay not vſury vpon him.

Vſury is a gaine exacted by couenant, aboue the principall onely in lew, and recompence of the lending of it. Vſury beeing conſidered as it is thus deſcribed, is quite contrary to Gods word, & may very fitly be tearmed biting lucre. Exod. 22. 14. If any man hath borrowed any thing of an other, whatſoeuer is hurt or dieth, if the owner of the thing be not preſent, let him be recompenſed. 15. If he be preſent, recompence him not: if it bee hired for a price, it is ſold for the ſame price. Ezek. 18.8. He hath not giuen to vſury, neither hath taken increaſe. 2. Cor. 8.13. Neither is it that other men ſhould be eaſed, and you grieued, 14. But vpon like condition at this time, your abundance ſupplieth their lacke, that alſo their abundance may be for your lacke: that there may be equality.

And this vſury, poſitiue lawes doe not onely reſtraine, but not allow.

Queſt. Is it not lawfull to take at ſome time aboue the principall?

Anſw. Yes ſurely, with theſe conditions: I. If a man take heede that he exact nothing, but that which his a debter can get by good and lawfull meanes.

II. He may not take more then the gaine, nay not all the gaine, nor that part of the gaine which drinketh vp the liuing of him that vſeth the money.

III. He muſt ſometimes be ſo farre fro taking gaine, that he muſt not require the principall, if his debter be by ineuitable & iuſt caſualties brought behind, and it bee alſo plaine that he could not make, no not by great diligence, any commodity of the money borrowed.

The reaſons why a man may take ſomtimes aboue the principall, are, 1. That which the debter may giue, hauing himſelfe an honeſt gaine beſides, and no man any waies endamaged, that the creditour may ſafely receiue.

2. It is conuenient, that he which hath money lent him, and gaineth by it, ſhould ſhew all poſſible gratitude to him, by whoſe goodes he is inriched.

3. It is often for the benefit of the creditour, to haue the goodes in his owne hands which he lent.

Obiect. Money is not fruitfull, therefore it is vnlawfull to receiue more then we lent out.

Anſw. Albeit money in it ſelfe bee not fruitefull, yet it is made very fruitfull by the borrowers good vſe, as ground is, which is not fruitfull except it bee tilled.

Laſt of all, when a man detaineth the labourers wages. Iam. 5.4. Behold, the hire of the labourers (which haue reaped your fieldes, which is of you kept backe by fraud) cryeth, and the cries of them which haue reaped, are entred into the eares of the Lord of hoſts.

Vniuſt dealing out of bargaining, is likewiſe manifold: I. To pronounce falſe ſentence or iudgement for a reward, either proferred, or promiſed. Eſa. 1. 23. Thy Princes are rebellious, and companions of theeues: euery one loueth gifts, and followeth after rewards: they iudge not the fatherleſſe, neither doth the widowes cauſe come before them. This is the Lawyers and Iudges ſinne II. To feede, or clothe ſtoute and luſty rogues or beggers. 2. Theſſal. 3. 10. When we were with you inioyned you this, that if any would not labour, the ſame ſhould not eate. What then thinke you, muſt thoſe licenſed rogues and beggers by authoritie, I meane, all idle Monkes and Abbylubbers haue? Socrates in the Tripartite hiſtory, ſaith plainely, that that Monke which laboureth not with his hands, is no better then a theefe. III. Gaming for money and gaine. For thou maiſt not enrich thy ſelfe by impouerifhing thy brother. This gaming is worſe farre then vſury, and in a ſhort while will more inrich a man. IV. To get money by vnlawfull artes: ſuch are Magique, Iudiciall Aſtrologie, Stage-playes, and ſuch like. Eph. 4. 28. Let him that hath ſtollen, ſteale no more, but rather let him labour, working with his owne hands the thing that is good, that he may giue vnto him that hath neede. Deut. 18. 11. Eph. 5. 3. 1. Theſſ. 5. 22. Abſtaine from all appearance of euill. V. To filch or pilfer the leaſt pin, or point from an other. Mar. 10. 19. Thou ſhalt not ſteale, thou ſhalt not hurt any man. Rom. 3. 8. And (as we are blamed, and as ſome affirme that we ſay) why doe wee not euill, that good may come thereof? whoſe damnation is iuſt. VI. To remooue ancient bounds. Prou. 22. 28. Thou ſhalt not remooue the ancient bounds which thy fathers haue made. Hoſ. 5. 8. The Princes of Iudah are like them which remooue the bounds. VII. To ſteale other mens ſeruants, or children, to commit ſacriledge, or robberie. 1. Tim. 1. 10. To whoremongers, buggerers, and menſtealers. Ioſh. 7. 19. Achans theft. 1. Cor. 6. 10. Neither theeues, nor couetous perſons, nor robbers, &c. ſhall inherit the kingdome of God. For robberies, theſe ſorts of mē eſpecially are famous: Theeues by the Queenes high waies, Pyrats vpon the ſeas, Souldiours not content with their pay, & whoſoeuer they be, that by maine force take that which is none of their own Luk. 3. 14. The ſouldiers asked him ſaying, What ſhall we doe? he ſaid, Doe violence to noe man, neither accuſe any man falſely, & be content with your wages. VIII. To conſpire with a theefe whether by giuing aduice howe he may compaſſe his enterpriſe, or by concealing his fact, that he be not puniſhed. Prou. 29. 24. He that is partaker with a theefe, hateth himſelfe, and hee that heareth curſing, and diſcouereth it not.

The puniſhment of theft may at the diſcretion of the Iudge be ſometimes aggrauated, as he ſeeth the quality of the offence to be. Therefore theeues ſometimes are puniſhed with death.

Now if any man obiect, that the Iudiciall law of God, doth onely require the reſtitution thereof fourefoold for ſuch an offence? I anſwer, that the ciuill Magiſtrate, when he ſeeth ſome one, or many offences to increaſe, he may by his authority encreaſe the ciuill puniſhment due to that ſinne. Now it is manifeſt, that the ſinne of theft is farre more grieuous in our Commonweale, then it was among the Iewes. For firſt the inhabitants of this commonweale, are generally by many degrees, poorer then the Iewes were: therefore to ſteale a thing but of ſome ſmall value, frō one in this country, doeth more endammage him, then a thing of great value would haue done the Iewes.

Againe, the people of this countrey are of a more ſtirring and fierce diſpoſition: the which maketh theeues to be more outragious, with their robberies ioyning violence, and the diſturbance of the publike tranquility of the countrey whereof more regard ought to bee had, then of one priuate mans life.

Thou ſhalt preſerue & increaſe thy neighbours goods.

To this are required theſe that follow: I. A certaine calling: wherein euery man, according to that gift which GOD hath giuen him, muſt beſtow himſelfe honeſtly, to his owne and neighbours good. 1. Cor. 7. 24. Let euery man wherein hee was called, therein abide with God. Eph. 4. 28. 1. Pet. 4. 10. According as euery man hath receiued a gift, ſo let him adminiſter to another, that ye may bee good diſpencers of the manifold graces of God. Gal. 5. 13. In loue ſerue one an other.

II. The true vſe of riches, and all the goods a man hath: to which belong two vertues; Contentation and Thriftines.

Contentation is a vertue, whereby a man is well pleaſed with that eſtate, wherin he is placed. 1. Tim. 6. 6. Godlineſſe is great gaine with a contented minde: 7. For wee brought nothing into the world, neither ſhall we carry any thing out of the world. But, hauing foode and rayment let vs be content. Philip. 4. 11. I haue learned in whatſoeuer ſtate I am, therewith to be content. 12. I can be abaſed, and I can abound, euery where in all things I am inſtructed, both to be full, and to be hungry, & to abound, and to haue want. Math. 6. 11. Giue vs this day our dayly bread. Heb. 13. 5. Let your converſation be without couetouſneſſe, and be content with the things which you haue: for he ſaith, I will not forſake thee, nor leaue thee.

Thriftineſſe or frugality, is a vertue, wherby a man carefully keepeth his goods which he hath gotten, and imployeth thē to ſuch vſes, as are both neceſſary & profitable. Prou. 5. 15. Drinke the water of thy ceſterne, and of the riuers out of the middest of thine owne well. 16. Let thy fountaines flow forth, and the riuers of waters in the ſtreets. 17. Let them be thine owne, yea, thine only, & not the ſtrangers with thee. Prou. 21. 5. The thoughts of the diligent doe ſurely bring abundance. 17. He that loueth paſtime, ſhall be a poore man, and he that loueth wine and oile ſhall not be rich. Prou. 12. 27. The deceitfull man roſteth not that which he hath taken in hunting: but the riches of the diligent are pretious, Ioh. 6. 12.

III. To ſpeake the truth from the heart, and to vſe an harmeleſſe ſimplicitie in all affaires. Pſal. 15. 2. He that walketh vprightly, and worketh righteouſnes, he that ſpeaketh the truth in his heart. Gen. 23. 15. Ephron ſaid to Abraham, The land is worth foure hundreth ſhekels of ſiluer, what is that betweene me and thee? bury therfore thy dead. 18. So Abraham harkened to Ephron, & Abraham weighed to Ephron the ſiluer, which he had named in the audience of the Hittites, euen foure hundreth ſhekels of currant money among marchants. &c.

IV. Iuſt dealing. 1. Theſſ. 4. 6. Of this there are many kindes:

I. In buying and ſelling, in ſetting and hiring of Farmes, tenements, lands: in marchandize, and all manner of commodities, men muſt racke nothing, but keepe a iuſt price. A iuſt price is then obſerued, when as the things prized, and the price giuen for them, are made equall, as neere as may be. For the obſeruation of this equality, theſe foure rules are to be cõſidered: for by them all bargaines muſt be ordered. I. There muſt be a proportion and equality in all contracts: the which will then bee, whẽ as the ſeller doth not value the thing, onely according to his owne paines, and coſt beſtowed vpon it: but alſo ſeeth what profit it may be to the buyer, and in what neede he ſtandeth of it. Leuit. 25. 14. When thou ſelleſt ought to thy neighbour, or buieſt ought at his handes, ye ſhall not oppreſſe one an other. 15. But according to the number of the yeares after the Iubile, thou ſhalt buie of thy neighbour. Alſo according to the number of yeares of thy reuenewes, he ſhall ſell vnto thee. 16. According to the number of yeares thou ſhalt increaſe the price thereof: and according to the fewneſſe of yeares, thou ſhalt abate the price of it: for the number of fruites doth he ſell vnto thee. II. They muſt be squared according to the law of nature, the ſumme whereof Chriſt propoundeth in theſe words: Whatſoeuer ye would that men ſhould doe to you, doe the ſame vnto them. III. The bond of nature muſt bee kept, which bindeth him that receiueth a benefit, and maketh a lawfull gaine of another mans goods, that he being once enriched, ſhall make a proportionable and natural recompence, euen aboue the principall. IV. Men muſt communicate and make vſe of their goods, with that caueat which Paul giueth. 2. Corin. 8. 13. not ſo to beſtow them, as that others may be eaſed, and they grieued: or contrariwiſe.

II. Men muſt make ſale of ſuch things, as are in their kind ſubſtantiall, and profitable.

III. They muſt vſe iuſt waights and meaſures. Deut. 25. 13. Thou ſhalt not haue in thy bagge two manner of waights, a great and a ſmall: but thou ſhalt haue a right and iuſt waight, a perfect and iuſt meaſure ſhalt thou haue. Ezech. 55. 10. Te ſhall haue iuſt ballances, a true Ephah, and a true Bath. Micha. 6. 11. Shall I iuſtifie the wicked ballances, and the bagge of deceitfull waights?

IV. Hee that hireth any thing, muſt not only pay the appointed hire, but make that which he hired good, if ought but good come vnto it, by his default. Exod. 22. 14. 15. If a man borrow any thing of his neighbour, and it be hurt, he ſhall ſurely make it good, &c.

V. The pledge or pawne ought to be redeemed, and if it be of important neceſſity, as that which preſerueth the life of our neighbour, it muſt be reſtored to him incontinently. Exod. 22. 26. If thou take thy neighbours rayment to pledge, thou ſhalt reſtore it againe before the ſunne goe downe: for that is his couering onely. Deut. 24. 6. Noe man ſhall take the neather or vpper Milſtone to pledge, for this gage is his liuing. Neither may a man in a pledge be his owne caruer, but he muſt take ſuch an one as is offered. Deut. 24. 10. When thou ſhalt aske againe of thy neighbour any thing lent, thou ſhalt not goe into his houſe to feteh his pledge. 11. But thou ſhalt ſtand without, & the man that borrowed it of thee, ſhall bring the pledge out of the doores vnto thee. 12. Furthermore, if it be a poore body, thou ſhalt not ſleepe with his pledge, 13. But ſhalt reſtore him the pledge, &c.

VI. To become ſurety onely for men that are honeſt, and very well knowne: & that warily, with much deliberation. Prou. 11. 15. He ſhall be ſore vexed that is ſurety for a ſtranger. And he that hateth ſuretiſhip is ſure. Prou. 17. 18. A man deſtitute of vnderſtanding derſtanding toucheth the hand, and becommeth ſurety for his neighbour. Prou.22.26. But if it be ſo that a man hath intangled himſelfe by ſuretiſhip, the beſt way is to craue his creditours fauour, by his owne humble ſuit, and the inſtant requeſt of his friends. Prou.6.1. My ſon if thou be ſurety for thy neighbour, and haſt ſtriken hands with the ſtraunger: 2. Thou art ſnared with the words of thine owne mouth. 3. Do this nowe, my ſonne, and deliuer thy ſelfe, ſeeing thou art come vnto the hand of thy neighbour, goe, & humble thy ſelfe, and ſollicite thy friends. 4. Giue no ſleep to thine eies, nor ſlumber to thine eie lids. 5. Deliuer thy ſelfe, as a Doe from the hand of the hunter, and as a bird from the hād of the fouler.

VII. All iuſt conenants and promiſes, though they be to our hindrance, muſt be performed. For a promiſe doth binde, if it be lawefull, ſo farre forth as he will, vnto whome we make the promiſe. Pſal.15.4 Which ſweareth to his hurt and changeth not. Prou.25.14. A man that boaſteth and keepeth not promiſe, is like clouds and wind without raine. Iudg.1.24. The ſpies ſawe a man come out of the citie, and they ſaid vnto him, Shewe vs we pray thee, the way into the citty, and we will ſhewe thee mercie. 25. And when he had ſhewed them the way into the citty, they ſmote the citty with the edge of the ſword, but they let the man and all his houſhold depart. Therefore if after promiſe made, hee either ſee that he ſhal be endamaged therby, or hindred in the performance of his promiſe, he may craue releaſe, and if it bee granted accept of it.

VIII. To lend that we doe, freely, Luk.6.35. Lend, looking for nothing againe, and your reward ſhall be great. And when we borrowe, we muſt be carefull to make reſtitution, euen if need be with the ſale of our owne goods. 2 King.4.2.3.4.5.6.7. Here the wife of the ſonnes of the Prophets ſelleth her oyle which God ſent by the hand of Eliſha, to pay her creditour.

IX. To reſtore that which is committed to our cuſtody without delay. Matth. 21.41. He will deſtroy the euill husbandmen, and let out his vineyard to others, which ſhall deliuer him the fruitt in their ſeaſon. Prou.3.28. But if ſuch a thing be loſt, not by our default, we are not vrged to repay it, Exo. 22.9. If a man deliuer his neighbour money, or ſtuffe to keepe, and it be ſtollen out of his houſe, if the theefe be founde, he ſhall pay the double. 8. If the theefe be not found, then he maiſter of the houſe ſhall bee brought before the iudges, to ſweare whether he haue put his hand to his neighbours goodes or no.

X. That which a man findeth, is to be kept in his owne hand, if the true owner cannot be heard of, but if he be, hee muſt reſtore it. Deut. 22.1. Thou ſhalt not ſee thy brothers oxe, nor his ſheepe goe aſtray, and withdraw thy ſelfe from them, but ſhalt bring them againe vnto thy brother. 2. If he be not neere vnto thee, or thou knowe him not, then ſhalt bring it vnto thine houſe, and it ſhall remaine with thee, vntill thy brother ſeeke after it, then ſhalt thou deliuer it to him againe. 3. So ſhalt thou doe with all loſt things.

XI. To get our owne, we may, if wee cannot doe otherwiſe, ſue our neighbour in law. But we muſt follow our ſuites in an holy manner, and with theſe circumſtances. I. In all ſuites, we muſt not doe any thing, that may preiudice the profeſſion of Chriſtian religion. Therefore al ſuiters in lawe, offend, when they truſt more in man, then in God, and make their religion a ieſt to worldlings, partly by ſtriuing about things of ſmal importance: and partly by not admitting any conditions of reconciliation. 1.Cor.6.1. Dare any of you, hauing buſines againſt another, be iudged vnder the vniuſt, and not vnder the Saints? II. Lawe muſt be the laſt remedie, as a deſperate medicine is the laſt remedy the Phyſitian vſeth. We muſt aſſay al meanes poſſible, before we vſe this, eſpecially to a brother. 1.Cor.6.7. There is vtterly a fault among you, becauſe ye goe to law one with another; why rather ſuffer ye not wrong? why rather ſuſtaine ye not harme? III. In all ſuites of lawe, we muſt be mindeful of the law of charity, and not ſo much indeauour to maintaine our owne right, as to recall our brother, which erreth, into the right way.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Concerning the ninth Commandement.

THe ninth commandement belongeth to the preſeruation of our neighbours good name.

The wordes are theſe:

Thou ſhalt not beare falſe witneſſe againſt thy neighbour.

The Reſolution.

Thou ſhalt not beare] That is, anſwere when thou art asked before a iudge, Deut. 19.17.

10. 17. Then both the men which ſtrine togither, ſhall ſtand before the Lord, euen before the prieſts and the Iudges which ſhall bee in theſe daies. 18. And the Iudges ſhall make diligent inquiſition, and if the witneſſe bee found falſe, and hath giuen falſe witneſſe againſt his brother.

Witneſſe] By a figure ſignifieth euery word, whereby the credit and eſtimation of our neighbour is either impaired or diminiſhed.

The negatiue part.

Thou ſhalt not diminiſh or hurt the good name and eſtimation of thy neighbour.

Here is forbidden:

I. Enuie, diſdaine of others, deſire of a mans owne glorie, 1. Tim. 6.4. Hee is puft vp, and knoweth nothing, but doteth about queſtions, and ſtrife of words, whereof commeth enuie, ſtrife, railings, 1. Pet. 2.1. Wherfore laying aſide all maliciouſneſſe, and enuie, and all guile, and euill ſpeaking. Math. 21.15. But when the cheife Prieſts and Scribes ſawe the marualles that hee did, and the children crying in the Temple, and ſaying, Hoſanna the ſonne of Dauid, they diſdained.

II. Euill ſuſpitions, 1. Tim. 6.4. 1. Sam. 17.28. And Eliab his eldeſt brother heard when hee ſpake vnto the men, and Eliab was angrie with Dauid, and ſaid, Why cammeſt thou downe hither? and with whome haſt thou left thoſe fewe ſheep in the wilderneſſe? I know thy pride and the malice of thine heart. Act. 28.4. Nowe when the Barbarians ſawe the woame hang on his hand, they ſaid among thẽſelues, This man ſurely is a murderer, whome though he hath eſcaped the ſea, yet vengance hath not ſuffered him to liue. Here are condemned, heard cenſures & ſiniſter iudgements againſt our neighbour. Math. 7.1. Iudge not, that yee be not iudged. 2. For with what iudgement ye iudge, ye ſhal be iudged: & with what meaſure ye mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you againe. Theſe iudgements which Chriſt forbiddeth, are priuate & reprochfull or ſlanderous iudgements: namely, when either a good or an indifferent action is interpreted to the worſe part: or whẽ a light offence is made heinous through euill will, without all deſire either to amend or to couer the ſame, Act. 2.13. And other mocked and ſaid, they are full of new Wine. 14. But Peter ſtanding with the elenen, lift vp his voice, and ſaid vnto them, Ye men of Iudea, and all yee that inhabite Ieruſalem, be this knowne vnto you, and harken vnto my words: 15. For theſe are not drunken, as yee ſuppoſe, ſince it is but the third houre of the day. 1. Sa. 1.13. For Hannah ſpake in her heart, her lips did moone onely but her voice was not heard, therefore Elie thought ſhee had beene drunken. But wee muſt knowe that there are three kinds of iudgements which are not forbidden by this commaundement of Chriſt. The firſt is, the miniſterie of the goſpell, which iudgeth and reproueth ſinne. The ſecond is, the iudgement of the Magiſtrate. The third is, the iudgement of a friend admoniſhing vs: as when hee ſaith, Abſtaine from the company of ſuch a man for I knowe him to bee a drunkard, &c.

III. A relation of the bare words only, & not of the ſenſe and meaning of our neighbour, Math. 26.59. Nowe the chiefe of the Prieſts, and the elders, and all the whole Councell, ſought falſe witneſſes againſt Ieſus, to put him to death. 60. But they found none, and though many falſe witneſſes came, yet found they none: but at the laſt came two falſe witneſſes. 61. And ſaid, This man ſaid, I can deſtroy the Temple of God, and build it in three daies. Indeede Chriſt ſaid ſome ſuch thing in words, as appeareth, Ioh. 2.19. Ieſus anſwered and ſaid vnto them, Deſtroy this temple, and in three daies I will raiſe it vp againe.

IV. A lie, whereby euery falſhood with purpoſe to deceiue is ſignified, whether in words, or in deedes, or concealing the trueth, or any other way whatſoeuer; bee it for neuer ſo great a good to our neighbour.

V. To pronounce vniuſt ſentence in iudgement, to reſt in one witneſſe, to accuſe another wrongfully, to bewray a mãs cauſe by colluſion. 1. King. 21. 12. They proclaimed a faſt, and ſet Nabaoth among the chiefe of the people. 13. And there came two wickedmen, and ſate before him, and the wickedmen witneſſed againſt Nabaoth in the preſence of the people, ſaying, Nabaoth did blaſpheme God & the king: then they carried him away out of the cittie, and ſtoned him with ſtones that he died. Deut. 17.6. At the mouth of two or three witneſſes ſhall he that is worthy of death, die: but at the mouth of one witnes he ſhall not die.

VI. Openly to raiſe forged and hurtfull tales and reports of our neighbour, or priuily to deuiſe the ſame, Ro. 1.29. Whiſperers. 30. Backbiters, haters of God, proud, boaſters, inuenters of euill things. Leuit. 19. 16. Thou ſhalt not walke about with tales among thy people, thou ſhalt not ſtand againſt the blood of thy neighbour: I am the Lord. 1.

Tim.

Tim.5.13. And likewiſe alſo being idle, they learne to goe about from houſe to houſe: yea, they are not onely idle, but alſo pratlers and buſiebodies, ſpeaking things which are not comely. To ſpread abroad flying tales, or to faine and adde any thing vnto them. Prou. 26.20. Without the wood the fire is quenched, and without a tale-bearer ſtrife ceaſeth. 21. As a coale maketh burning coales, and wood a fire, ſo the contentious man is apt to kindle ſtrife. 22. The words of a tale-bearer are as flatterings, and they goe downe into the bowels of the bellie. 2.Cor.12.20. For I feare leaſt when I come, I ſhall not finde you ſuch as I would, and that I ſhall be found to you ſuch as I would not, and leaſt there be ſtrife, enuying, wrath, contentions, backbitings, whiſperings, ſwellings, and diſcord among you. To receiue or beleeue thoſe tales which we heare of others. Exod.23.1. Thou ſhalt not receiue a falſe tale, neither ſhalt thou put thine hand with the wicked, to be a falſe witneſſe. 1.Sam. 24.10. And Dauid ſaid to Saul, Wherefore giueſt thou an eare to mens words, that ſay, behold, Dauid ſeeketh euill againſt thee?

VII. To accuſe our neighbour, for that which is certaine and true, through hatred and with intent to hurt him. 1.Sam. 22.9. Then anſwered Doeg the Edomite (who was appointed ouer the Seruants of Saul) and ſayd, I ſawe the ſonne of Iſhai when he came to Nob, to Abimelech the ſonne of Ahitub, 10. Who asked counſell of the Lord for him, and gaue him victuals, and he gaue him alſo the ſword of Goliah the Philiſtim. Of this deede Dauid thus ſpeaketh. Pſal.52.1. Why boaſteſt thou thy ſelfe in thy wickedneſſe, O man of power? the louing kindneſſe of the Lord endureth for euer. 2. Thy tongue imagineth miſchiefe, and is like a ſharpe raſor, that cutteth deceitfully. 3. Thou doeſt loue euill more then good: and lyes, more then to ſpeake the trueth. 4. Thou loueſt all words that may deſtroy, O deceitfull tongue.

VIII. To open or declare our neighbours ſecrets to any man, eſpecially, if he did it of infirmitie. Math.18.15. Moreouer, if thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, goe & tell him his fault betweene thee and him alone: if he heare thee, thou haſt wonne thy brother. Prou.11.13. He that goeth about as a ſlaunderer, diſcouereth a ſecret: but he that is of a faithfull heart, concealeth a matter.

IX. All babling talke and bitter words, Eph.5.3. But fornication and all vncleanneſs, let it not be once named among you. 4. Neither filthineſſe, neither fooliſh talking, neither ieſting, which are not comely, but rather giuing of thanker. Ioh.9.34. They anſwered and ſaid vnto him, Thou art altogither borne in ſinnes, and doeſt thou teach vs? ſo they caſt him out. This ieſting, or as it is now tearmed, wit, which Ariſtotle the Philoſopher maketh a vertue, is by Paul the Apoſtle accounted a vice: and that not without cauſe; I. Such quips as ſting others, though they be a great pleaſure for ſome to heare, yet are they very offenſiue to ſuch as are ſo girded. II. It is very hard to make Chriſtian both godlineſſe and grauitie to agree with ſuch behauiour.

Obiect. But ſalt and tart ſpeeches are vſuall in the ſcriptures, 1.King.18.27. Eliah mocked the prieſts of Baal. Eſa.14.9.

Anſwer. Such ſpeeches are not ſpoken to pleaſe others, but are ſharply denounced againſt Gods enemies to his glorie.

X. Flatterie, whereby we praiſe our neighbour aboue that we know in him. Prou.27.6. The wounds of a louer are faithfull, but the kiſſes of an enemie are to be ſhunned. 14. He that praiſeth his friend with a loud voice, riſing early in the morning, it ſhall be counted to him as a curſe. Act.12.22. And the people gaue a ſhoute, ſaying, The voyce of God, and not of man. This is a grieuous ſinne in the miniſters of the word. 1.Theſſ.2.5. Neither did we euer vſe flattering words, as ye knowe, nor coloured couetouſneſſe, God is record. Ier.6.23. For from the leaſt of them, euen vnto the greateſt of them, euery one is giuen vnto couetouſneſſe, and from the Prophet, euen vnto the prieſt, they all deale falſely. 14. They haue healed alſo the hurt of the daughter of my people with ſweet wordes, ſaying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace. Rom.16.18. For they that are ſuch, ſerue not the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, but their owne bellies, and with faire ſpeech and flattering, deceiue the hearts of the ſimple.

XI. Fooliſh and ouer confident boaſting. Prou.27.1. Boaſt not thy ſelf of to morrow, for thou knowſt not what a day may bring forth. 2. Let another praiſe thee, and not thine owne mouth, a ſtranger, and not thine owne lips.

XII. To accuſe, or witneſſe againſt one falſely. 1.King.21.13. Naboth blaſphemed God and the King.

The affirmatiue part.

Preſerue the good name of thy neighbour. Eccle.7.3. A good name is better then a good oyntment.

Here is commanded:

I. A reioycing for the credit and good eſtimatiō of thy neighbour. Gal.5.22. But the fruite of the ſpirit, is loue, ioy, peace, gentleneſſe,

10. 17. Then both the men which ſtriue together, ſhall ſtand before the Lord, euen before the prieſts and the Iudges which ſhall bee in thoſe daies. 18. And the Iudges ſhall make diligent inquiſition, and if the witneſſe bee found falſe, and hath giuen falſe witneſſe againſt his brother.

Witneſſe] By a figure ſignifieth euery word, whereby the credit and eſtimation of our neighbour is either impaired or diminiſhed.

The negatiue part.

Thou ſhalt not diminiſh or hurt the good name and eſtimation of thy neighbour.

Here is forbidden:

I. Enuie, diſdaine of others, deſire of a mans owne glorie, 1. Tim. 6. 4. Hee is puft vp, and knoweth nothing, but doteth about queſtions, and ſtrife of words, wherof commeth enuie, ſtrife, railings, 1. Pet. 2. 1. Wherfore laying aſide all malicioufneſſe, and enuie, and all guile, and euill ſpeaking. Math. 21. 15. But when the cheife Prieſts and Scribes ſawe the marualles that hee did, and the children crying in the Temple, and ſaying, Hoſanna the ſonne of Dauid, they diſdained.

II. Euill ſuſpitions, 1. Tim. 6. 4. 1. Sam. 17. 28. And Eliab his eldeſt brother heard when hee ſpake vnto the men, and Eliab was angrie with Dauid, and ſaid, Why cammeſt thou downe hither? and with whome haſt thou left thoſe fewe ſheep in the wilderneſſe? I know thy pride and the malice of thine heart. Act. 28. 4. Nowe when the Barbarians ſawe the woame hang on his hand, they ſaid among theſelues, This man ſurely is a murderer, whome though he hath eſcaped the ſea, yet vengance hath not ſuffered him to liue. Here are condemned, heard cenſures & ſiniſter iudgements againſt our neighbour. Math. 7. 1. Iudge not, that yee be not iudged. 2. For with what iudgement ye iudge, ye ſhal be iudged: & with what meaſure ye mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you againe. Theſe iudgements which Chriſt forbiddeth, are priuate & reprochfull or ſlanderous iudgements: namely, when either a good or an indifferent action is interpreted to the worſe part: or whē a light offence is made heinous through euill will, without all deſire either to amend or to couer the ſame, Act. 2. 13. And other mocked and ſaid, they are full of new Wine. 14. But Peter ſtanding with the elenen, lift vp his voice, and ſaid vnto them, Ye men of Iudea, and all yee that inhabite Ieruſalem, be this knowne vnto you, and harken vnto my words: 15. For theſe are not drunken, as yee ſuppoſe, ſince it is but the third houre of the day. 1. Sa. 1. 13. For Hannah ſpake in her heart, her lips did moone onely but her voice was not heard, therefore Elie thought ſhee had beene drunken. But wee muſt knowe that there are three kinds of iudgements which are not forbidden by this commaundement of Chriſt. The firſt is, the miniſterie of the goſpell, which iudgeth and reproueth ſinne. The ſecond is, the iudgement of the Magiſtrate. The third is, the iudgement of a friend admoniſhing vs: as when hee ſaith, Abſtaine from the company of ſuch a man for I knowe him to bee a drunkard, &c.

III. A relation of the bare words only, & not of the ſenſe and meaning of our neighbour, Math. 26. 59. Nowe the chiefe of the Prieſts, and the elders, and all the whole Councell, ſought falſe witneſſes againſt Ieſus, to put him to death. 60. But they found none, and though many falſe witneſſes came, yet found they none: but at the laſt came two falſe witneſſes. 61. And ſaid, This man ſaid, I can deſtroy the Temple of God, and build it in three daies. Indeede Chriſt ſaid ſome ſuch thing in words, as appeareth, Ioh. 2. 19. Ieſus anſwered and ſaid vnto them, Deſtroy this temple, and in three daies I will raiſe it vp againe.

IV. A lie, whereby euery falſhood with purpoſe to deceiue is ſignified, whether in words, or in deedes, or concealing the trueth, or any other way whatſoeuer; bee it for neuer ſo great a good to our neighbour.

V. To pronounce vniuſt ſentence in iudgement, to reſt in one witneſſe, to accuſe another wrongfully, to bewray a mās cauſe by colluſion. 1. King. 21. 12. They proclaimed a faſt, and ſet Nabaoth among the chiefe of the people. 13. And there came two wickedmen, and ſate before him, and the wickedmen witneſſed againſt Nabaoth in the preſence of the people, ſaying, Nabaoth did blaſpheme God & the king: then they carried him away out of the cittie, and ſtoned him with ſtones that he died. Deut. 17. 6. At the mouth of two or three witneſſes ſhall he that is worthy of death, die: but at the mouth of one witnes he ſhall not die.

VI. Openly to raiſe forged and hurtfull tales and reports of our neighbour, or priuily to deuiſe the ſame, Ro. 1. 29. Whiſperers. 30. Backbiters, haters of God, proud, boaſters, inuenters of euill things. Leuit. 19. 16. Thou ſhalt not walke about with tales among thy people, thou ſhalt not ſtand againſt the blood of thy neighbour: I am the Lord. 1.

Tim.

Tim.5.13. And likewiſe alſo beeing idle, they learne to goe about from houſe to houſe: yea, they are not onely idle, but alſo pratlers and buſiebodies, ſpeaking things which are not comely. To ſpread abroad flying tales, or to faine and adde any thing vnto them. Prou. 26.20. Without the wood the fire is quenched, and without a tale-bearer ſtrife ceaſeth. 21. As a coale maketh burning coales, and wood a fire, ſo the contentious man is apt to kindle ſtrife. 22. The words of a tale-bearer are as flatterings, and they goe downe into the bowels of the bellie. 2.Cor.12.20. For I feare leaſt when I come, I ſhall not finde you ſuch as I would, and that I ſhall be found to you ſuch as I would not, and leaſt there be ſtrife, enuying, wrath, contentions, backbitings, whiſperings, ſwellings, and diſcord among you. To receiue or beleeue thoſe tales which we heare of others. Exod.23.1. Thou ſhalt not receiue a falſe tale, neither ſhalt thou put thine hand with the wicked, to be a falſe witneſſe. 1.Sam. 24.10. And Dauid ſaid to Saul, Wherefore gineſt thou an eare to mens words, that ſay, behold, Dauid ſeeketh euill againſt thee?

VII. To accuſe our neighbour, for that which is certaine and true, through hatred and with intent to hurt him. 1.Sam. 22.9. Then anſwered Doeg the Edomite (who was appointed ouer the Seruants of Saul) and ſayd, I ſawe the ſonne of Iſhai when he came to Nob, to Abimelech the ſonne of Ahitub, 10. Who aſked counſell of the Lord for him, and gaue him victuals, and he gaue him alſo the ſword of Goliah the Philiſtim. Of this deede Dauid thus ſpeaketh. Pſal.52.1. Why boaſteſt thou thy ſelfe in thy wickednesſe, O man of power? the louing kindneſſe of the Lord endureth for euer. 2. Thy tongue imagineth miſchiefe, and is like a ſharpe raſor, that cutteth deceitfully. 3. Thou doeſt loue euill more then good: and lyes, more then to ſpeake the trueth. 4. Thou loueſt all words that may deſtroy, O deceitfull tongue.

VIII. To open or declare our neighbours ſecrets to any man, eſpecially, if he did it of infirmitie. Math.18.15. Moreouer, if thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, goe & tell him his fault betweene thee and him alone: if he heare thee, thou haſt wonne thy brother. Prou.11.13. He that goeth about as a ſlaunderer, diſcouereth a ſecret: but he that is of a faithfull heart, concealeth a matter.

IX. All babling talke and bitter words, Eph.5.3. But fornication and all vncleannes, let it not be once named among you. 4. Neither filthineſſe, neither fooliſh talking, neither ieſting, which are not comely, but rather giuing of thankes. Ioh.9.34. They anſwered and ſaid vnto him, Thou art altogither borne in ſinnes, and doeſt thou teach vs? ſo they caſt him out. This ieſting, or as it is now tearmed, wit, which Ariſtotle the Philoſopher maketh a vertue, is by Paul the Apoſtle accounted a vice: and that not without cauſe; 1. Such quips as ſting others, though they be a great pleaſure for ſome to heare, yet are they very offenſiue to ſuch as are ſo girded. 11. It is very hard to make Chriſtian both godlineſſe and grauitie to agree with ſuch behauiour.

Obiect. But ſalt and tart ſpeeches are vſuall in the ſcriptures, 1.King.18.27. Eliah mocked the prieſts of Baal. Eſa.14.9.

Anſwer. Such ſpeeches are not ſpoken to pleaſe others, but are ſharply denounced againſt Gods enemies to his glorie.

X. Flatterie, whereby we praiſe our neighbour aboue that we know in him. Prou.27.6. The wounds of a louer are faithfull, but the kiſſes of an enemie are to be ſhunned. 14. He that praiſeth his friend with a loud voice, riſing early in the morning, it ſhall be counted to him as a curſe. Act.12.22. And the people gaue a ſhoute, ſaying, The voyce of God, and not of man. This is a grieuous ſinne in the miniſters of the word. 1.Theſſ.2.5. Neither did we euer vſe flattering words, as ye knowe, nor coloured couetouſneſſe, God is record. Ier.6.23. For from the leaſt of them, euen vnto the greateſt of them, euery one is giuen vnto couetouſneſſe, and from the Prophet, euen vnto the prieſt, they all deale falſely. 14. They haue healed alſo the hurt of the daughter of my people with ſweet wordes, ſaying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace. Rom.16.18. For they that are ſuch, ſerue not the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, but their owne bellies, and with faire ſpeech and flattering, deceiue the hearts of the ſimple.

XI. Fooliſh and ouer confident boaſting. Prou.27.1. Boaſt not thy ſelf of to morrow, for thou knowſt not what a day may bring forth. 2. Let another praiſe thee, and not thine owne mouth, a ſtranger, and not thine own lips.

XII. To accuſe, or witneſſe againſt one falſely. 1.King.21.13. Naboth blaſphemed God and the King.

The affirmatiue part.

Preſerue the good name of thy neighbour. Eccle.7.3. A good name is better then a good oyntment.

Here is commanded:

tleneſſe, Rom.1.8. Firſt I thanke my God through Ieſus Chriſt, for you all, becauſe your faith is publiſhed throughout the whole world.

II. Willingly to the acknowledge that goodneſſe we ſee in any man whatſoeuer, and onely to ſpeake of the ſame, Tit,3.2. That they ſpake euill of no man, that they bee no fighters, but ſoft, ſhewing all meekeneſſe to all men. Moreouer, we muſt with al deſire, receiue and beleeue reports of our neighbours good. Act.16.1. Thē came he to Derbe and Lyſtra, and behold, a certaine diſciple was there named Timotheus, a womans ſonne which was a Ieweſſe, and beleeued, but his Father was a Grecian. 2. Of whome the brethren which are at Lyſtra and Iconium, reported well. 3. Therefore Paul would that he ſhould goe forth with him, and tooke and circumciſed him. Notwithſtanding, this muſt ſo be performed of vs, that in no wiſe we proue and allowe of the vices and faultes of men. 2. Chron.25.2. And he did vprightly in the eies of the Lord, but not with a perfect heart. And chap.27.2. And he did vprightly in the ſight of the Lord, according to all that his father Uzziah did, ſaue that he entred not into the temple of the Lord, and the people did yet corrupt their waies.

III. To interpret a doubtful euill, to the better part. Cor.13.5. Loue thinketh not euill. 7. It beleeueth all thinges, it hopeth all things. Gen.37.31. And they tooke Ioſephs coate and killed a kidde of the goates, and dipped the coate in the blood. 32. So they ſent that parti-coloured coate, and they brought it to their father, and ſaid, This haue we found, ſee nowe, whether it be thy ſonnes coat or no. 33. Then he knewe it, and ſaid, It is my ſons coate, a wicked beaſt hath deuoured him, Ioſeph is ſurely torne in peeces.

And here obſerue the religion of that Ioſeph, which was betrothed to Mary, who when he ſawe that Mary was with child, was readier to conclude that before her betrothing ſhe was with child by cōmitting fornication, then after by committing adultery. Math.1.19. But for all this men muſt not be too too credulous or light of beleefe. Ioh.2.24. But Ieſus did not commit himſelfe vnto them becauſe he knewe them all.

IV. Not to beleeue an euill report, running abroad amongeſt the common people, by the whiſperings of talebearers, as it were by conduit pipes, Pſal.15.3. He that ſlandereth not with his tongue, nor doeth euill to his neighbour, nor receiueth a falſe report againſt his neighbour. Ierem.40.14. And they ſaid vnto him, Knoweſt thou not, that Baalis the king of the Ammonites, had ſent Iſhmael, the ſonne of Nethaniah, to ſlay thee? but Gedeliah the ſonne of Ahikam, beleeued him not. 16. But Gedeliah the ſonne of Ahikam, ſaid vnto Ionathan, the ſonne of Kareah, thou ſhalt not doe this thing, for thou ſpeakeſt falſely of Iſhmael. But we ought alſo to be angrie at ſuch whiſperings. Prou.25.23. As the North wind drieth away the raine, ſo doth an angrie countenance the ſlandering tongue.

V. To keepe ſecret the offence of our neighbour, except it muſt of neceſſitie be reuealed. Prou.10.12. Hatred ſtirreth vp contention: but loue couereth all treſpaſſes. Math.1.19. Then Ioſeph her husband beeing a iuſt man, and not willing to make her a publike example, was minded to put her away ſecretly.

A man would ſuppoſe, that by this meanes, we ſhould bee partakers of other mēs ſins. But we muſt know, that we ought to conceale our neighbours imperfectiōs, leaſt he ſhould be prouoked to offence: yet in the meane ſeaſon, hee muſt be admoniſhed that he may amend. Gal.6.1. Iam.5.19. Brethren, if any of you haue erred from the trueth, and ſome man hath conuerted him, 20. Let him knowe, that hee which hath conuerted the ſinner from going aſtraie out of his waie ſhall ſaue a ſoule from death, and ſhall hide a multitude of ſinnes.

But if the ſinne which is concealed, cānot thereby be taken away, then muſt we in loue and charitie, declare the ſame to thoſe, which may remooue and amend the ſame. Gen.37.2. When Ioſeph was ſeauenteen yeare old, he kept ſheepe with his bretheren, & the child was with the ſonnes of Bilhah, and with the ſonnes of Zilpah, his fathers wiues: and Ioſeph tolde vnto their father, their euill ſayings. 1.Cor.1.11. For it hath beene declared vnto me, my brethren, of you by them that are of the houſe of Cloe, that there are contentions amōg you. Math.18.18. But if he heare thee not, take with thee one or two, that by the mouth of two or three witneſſes, euery word may be confirmed.

To get a good name and eſtimation among men, and to keepe the ſame when we haue gotten it. Phil.4.8. Furthermore brethren, whatſoeuer things are true, whatſoeuer things are honeſt, whatſoeuer things are iuſt, whatſoeuer things are pure, whatſoeuer things pertaine to loue, whatſoeuer things are of good report, if there bee any vertue, if there be any praiſe, thinke on theſe things. A good name is gotten, I. If we, ſeeking the kingdome of God before all things, doe repent vs of al our ſinnes, and with an earneſt deſire, imbrace and followe after righteouſneſſe. Prou. 10.7. The memoriall of the iuſt ſhall bee bleſſed, but the name of the wicked ſhal rotte. Mark. 14.9. Verely I ſay vnto you, whereſoeuer this Goſpell ſhall bee preached throughout the whole world, this alſo, that ſhe hath done, ſhall bee ſpoken of in remembrance of her. 2. Wee muſt haue a care both to iudge, and ſpeake well of others. Math. 7. 2. With what iudgment yee iudge, ye ſhall bee iudged. Eccleſ. 7.23. Giue not thine heart alſo to all the words that men ſpeake, leaſt thou doe heare thy ſeruant curſing thee. 24. For oftentimes alſo thine heart knoweth, that thou likewiſe haſt curſed others. 3. We muſt abſtaine from all kinde of wickedneſſe: for one onely vice or ſinne doeth obſcure & darken a mans good name. Eccleſ. 10. 1. Dead flies cauſe to ſtinke, and putrifie the oyntment of the Apothecarie: ſo doeth a little follie him that is in eſtimation for wiſedome, and for glorie. 4. We muſt in all things earneſtly ſeeke for the glorie of God onely, and not our own, Math. 6. 5. And when thou praieſt, bee not as the hypocrites, for they loue to ſtand and pray in the Synagogues, and in the corners of the ſtreets, becauſe they would bee ſeene of men: verely I ſay vnto you, they haue their reward. 6. But when thou praieſt, enter into thy chamber, and when thou haſt ſhut thy doore, pray vnto thy father which is in ſecret, and thy father which ſeeth in ſecret ſhall reward thee openly.

But if when we ſeeke the glorie of god, honeſt and Godly men doe praiſe and teſtifie well of vs, wee muſt not deſpiſe this their teſtimonie and commendation: and although they neuer praiſe vs nor teſtifie of vs at al, yet muſt we take it in good part. 2. Cor. 1.12. For our reioycing is this, the teſtimonie of our conſcience, that in ſimplicitie & Godly pureneſſe, and not in fleſhly wiſedom, but by the grace of God, we haue had our conuerſation in the world, and moſt of all to youwards. And chap. 10.13. But we will not reioyce of things which are not within our meaſure, but according to the meaſure of the line, wher of God hath diſtributed to vs a meaſure, to attaine euen vnto you, Pſal. 16.5. The lord is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup: thou ſhalt maintaine my lotte. 6. The lines are fallen vnto mee in pleaſant places: yea, I haue a faire heritage. 1. Cor. 1. 31. Hee that reioyceth, let him reioyce in the Lord.

CHAP. XXIX.

Of the tenth commandement.

THe tenth Cõmandement concerneth concupiſcences, committed againſt our neighbour.

The words are theſe:

Thou ſhalt not couet thy neighbours houſe, thou ſhalt not couet thy neighbours wife, nor his ſeruant, nor his maide, nor his oxe, nor his aſſe, nor any thing thy neighbour hath.

The Reſolution.

Couet] The cogitation or motion of the heart, is of three ſortes. The firſt is, ſome glancing or ſuddaine thought, ſuggeſted to the minde by Sathan, which ſuddenly vaniſheth away, and is not receiued of the minde. This is no ſin. For it was in Chriſt, when he was tempted by the deuill. Math. 4.1. The ſecond is, a more permanent thought or motion, the which as it were, tickleth and inueighleth the minde with ſome inward ioy. The third is, a cogitation drawing from the will and affection, full aſſent to ſinne. Wee are to vnderſtand this commandement of the ſecond ſort of motions onely, not of the firſt, or of the laſt, to which the fiue former commandements doe belong.

Now then to couet, is to thinke inwardly, and alſo to deſire any thing, whereby our neighbor may be hindred, albeit, there enſue no aſſent of the will, to commit that euil. For the very Philoſophers condemne couetouſnes of the very heart, & Ciuilians diſallowe a purpoſe onely to doe euill, if it be conioyned with a manifeſt deliberatiõ. And as for the concupiſcence in this place forbidden, wee may well thinke it is more cloſe and ſecret, becauſe Saint Paul a doctour of the law was altogither ignorant of it. Rom. 7.7. I had not knowne luſt, except the Lawe had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not luſt. Againe, if that concupiſcence immediatly going before the conſent, were not prohibited in this place, there muſt be a great confuſion in the decalogue. For the ſeauenth commaundement forbiddeth ſome kinde of coueting of our neighboures wife.

Houſe] The commandement is illuſtrated by an argument drawne from the diſtribution of the obiects of concupiſcence; whence it is apparent, that onely euil concupiſcence is condemned in this place. Coloſſ. 3. 5. For there is a good concupiſcence or deſire: as of meate and drinke, and that of the ſpirit. Gal. 5.17. The ſpirit luſteth lusteth against the flesh.

The negatiue part.

Thou shalt not couet that which is thy neighbours.

Here are prohibited:

I. Concupiscence it selfe, namely, originall corruption, in as much as it is hurtfull to our neighbour, Iam. 1.14.

II. Each corrupt and sudden cogitation and passion of the heart, springing out of the bitter roote of concupiscence, Gal. 5.17. The flesh lusteth against the spirit. Luk. 10.27. Thou shalt loue the Lord with all thy soule. To this place appertaineth Satans suggestion, if after the first offer it bee entertained and receiued in the closet of the heart.

III. The least cogitation and motion, the which, though it procure not consent, delighteth and tickleth the heart. Of this kind are these foolish wishes: I would such an house were mine, such a lining, such a thing, &c. And hitherto may we referre al vnchast dreames, arising from concupiscence.

The affirmatiue part.

Couet that onely which is auaileable to thy neighbour.

Here are commended:

I. A pure heart towards our neighbour, 1. Tim. 1.5. The end of the commandement is loue, out of a pure heart, a good conscience, and faith vnfained.

II. Holy cogitations and motions of the spirit. Paul praieth, 1. Thess. 5.23. That the Thessalonians may be holy, not onely in bodie and soule, but also in spirit, Eph. 4.23.

III. A conflict against the euill affections and lusts of the flesh, Rom. 7. 22. I reioice in the lawe of God, in regard of the inward man. 23. But I see another lawe of my members, rebelling against the lawe of my mind, and making me captiue to the lawe of sinne, which is in my members. 24. Miserable man that I am, who shall deliuer me from this body of death? 2. Cor. 12.7,8,9.

CHAP. XXX.

Of the vse of the Lawe.

THe vse of the Lawe in vnregenerate persons, is threefold.

The first is, to lay open sinne, and make it knowne. Rom. 3.20. By the workes of the lawe shall no flesh be iustified in his sight: for by the law commeth the knowledge of sinne.

The secõd vse is accidentarily, to effect and augment sinne, by reason of the flesh, the which causeth man to decline from that which is commanded, and euer to encline to that which is prohibited. Rom. 7. 8. Sinne tooke occasion by the commandement, and wrought in mee all manner of concupiscence: for without the Law sin is dead. 9. For I once was aliue without the lawe, but when the commandement came, sinne reuiued. 10. But I died, and that commandement, which was ordained vnto life, was found to be vnto me vnto death.

The third vse is, to denounce eternall damnation for the least disobedience, without offering any hope of pardon. This sentence the lawe pronounceth against offendours, and by it, partly by threatning, partly by terrifying, it raigneth and ruleth ouer man. Rom. 3.19. We knowe that whatsoeuer the law saith, it saith to them which are vnder the lawe, that euery mouth may be stopped, and all the world be culpable before God. Gal. 3.10. As many as are of the workes of the lawe, are vnder the curse: for it is written, Cursed is euery one that continueth not in all that is written in the booke of the lawe to doe them. 2. Cor. 3.7. If the ministration of death written with letters, and ingraue with stones was glorious: 8, Howe shall not the ministration of the spirit be more glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation were glorious, &c.

The end why sinne raigneth in man, is to vrge sinners to flie vnto Christ, Galat. 3. 22. The scripture hath concluded all vnder sinne, that the promise by the faith of Iesus Christ should bee giuen to them that beleeue. 24. Wherefore the law was our schoolemaster to Christ. Heb. 12.18,19,20.

The continuance of this power of the lawe is perpetuall, vnlesse a sinner repent: and the very first act of repentance so freeth him, that he shal no more be vnder the law, but vnder grace. 1. Sam. 12.13. Then said Dauid to Nathan, I haue sinned against the Lord: wherefore Nathan said to Dauid, The Lord also hath forgiuen thy sinne, and thou shalt not die. Rom. 6.14. Sinne shall not haue dominion ouer you: for ye are not vnder the law, but vnder grace.

If therfore, thou desirest seriously eternall life: first take a narrow examinatiõ of thy selfe, and the course of thy life, by the square of Gods lawe: then set before thine eies the curse that is due vnto sinne, that thus bewailing thy miserie, and despairing vtterly of thine owne power, to attaine euerlasting happinesse, thou maiest renounce thy selfe and be prouoked to seek and and ſue vnto Chriſt Ieſus.

The vſe of the Lawe in ſuch as are regenerate is farre otherwiſe: for it guideth them to newe obedience in the whole courſe of their life, which obedience may be acceptable to God by Chriſt. Rom.3.31. Doe we therefore through faith make the law of none effect? God forbidde: nay we rather eſtabliſh the lawe. Pſal. 119.24. Thy teſtimonies are my delight, they are my counſellers. v. 105. Thy word is a lanthorne vnto my feete, & a light vnto my pathes.

CHAP. XXXI.

Of the Couenant of Grace.

HItherto concerning the couenant of workes, and of the Lawe, nowe followeth the couenant of grace.

The couenant of Grace, is that wherby God freely promiſing Chriſt, and his benefits, exacteth againe of man, that hee would by faith receiue Chriſt, and repent of his ſinnes. Hoſ. 2.18. In that daie will I make a couenant for them. &c. 19. And I wil marrie thee vnto me for euer: yea, I will marrie thee vnto me in righteouſneſſe, & in iudgment, and in mercy, and in compaſſion. v. 20. I will marrie thee vnto me in faithfulneſſe, and thou ſhalt know the Lord. Ezech. 36.25. I will powre cleane water vpon you, and yee ſhall bee cleane: yea from all your filthineſſe, & from al your Idols will I clenſe you. v. 26. And I will giue you a newe heart, and a newe ſpirit will I put within you. v. 27. And cauſe you to walke in my ſtatutes. Malach. 3.1. The Lord, whome ye ſeeke, ſhall ſpeedily come to his temple: euen the meſſenger of the couenant whome yee deſire: behold, hee ſhall come, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts.

This couenant is alſo named a Teſtament: for it hath partly the nature & properties of a teſtament or will. For it is confirmed by the death of the teſtatour. Heb. 9.16. Where a teſtament is, there muſt be the death of him that made the teſtament. 17. For the teſtamẽt is confirmed when men are dead: for it is yet of no force, ſo long as he that made it is aliue. Secondly, in this couenant we do not offer much, and promiſe ſmall to god, but in a manner doe onely receiue: euen as the laſt will and teſtament of a man, is not for the teſtatours, but the heires commoditie.

The Couenant, albeit it be one in ſubſtance, yet is it diſtinguiſhed into the olde and newe teſtament.

The old teſtament or couenant is that, which in types and ſhadowes prefigured Chriſt to come, and to be exhibited.

The now teſtament declareth Chriſt already come in the fleſh, and is apparantly ſhewed in the Goſpell.

The Goſpell is that part of Gods word which containeth a moſt worthy and welcome meſſage: namely, that mankind is fully redeemed by the blood of Ieſus Chriſt, the onely begotten ſonne of God, manifeſt in the fleſh. ſo that nowe for all ſuch as repent and beleeue in Chriſt Ieſus, there is prepared a full remiſſion of all their ſinnes, togither with ſaluation & life euerlaſting. Ioh. 3.14. As Moſes lifted vp the ſerpent in the wilderneſſe: ſo muſt the ſonne of man be lift vp. 15. That who ſo beleeueth in him, ſhould not periſh but haue euerlaſting life. Act. 10.43. To him alſo giue all the Prophets witneſſe, that through his name, all that beleeue in him, ſhall receiue remiſſion of ſinnes.

The ende and vſe of the Goſpell is, firſt to manifeſt that righteouſneſſe in Chriſt, whereby the whole lawe is fully ſatisfied, and ſaluation attained. Secondly, it is the inſtrument, and, as it were, the conduit pipe of the holy Ghoſt, to faſhion and deriue faith into the ſoule; by which faith, they which beleeue, doe as with an hand apprehend Chriſts righteouſnes. Rom.1.16. I am not aſhamed of the goſpell of Chriſt, for it is the power of god to ſaluation to as many as beleeue, to the Iewe firſt, and then to the Grecian. 17. For the iuſtice of God is reuealed by it from faith to faith. Ioh.6.33. It is the ſpirit which quickeneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing: the words which I ſpeake are ſpirit and life. 1.Cor.1.21. It pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſſe of preaching, to ſaue ſuch as beleeue.

The Goſpell preached is, in the flouriſhing eſtate of Chriſts Church, that ordinarie meanes to beget faith: but in the ruinous eſtate of the ſame, when as by apoſtaſie, the foundations thereof are ſhaken, and the cleere light of the worde is darkned, then this word read or repeated, yea the very ſound thereof beeing but once heard, is by the aſſiſtance of Gods ſpirit, extraordinarily effectuall, to them whome God will haue called out of that great darknes into his exceeding light. Rom.10.14. Howe ſhall they call on him, in whome they haue not beleeued? and how ſhall they beleeue in him, of whome they haue not heard? And how ſhall they heare without a preacher? Act. 11.19. And they which were ſcattered abroad because of the affliction that arose about Steuen walked throughout till they came to Phenice, and Cyprus, & Antiochia, preaching the word to no man, but to the Iewes onely. 20. Nowe some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which when they were come into Antiochia, spake vnto the Greccians and preached the Lord Iesus. 21. And the hand of the Lord was with them, so that a great number beleeued, and turned vnto the Lord. Ioh. 4. 28 The women that left her water pot, and went her way into the cittie, and said to the men, 29. Come, and see a man which hath tolde me all things that euer I did: Is not he the Christ? then they went out of the cittie, and came vnto him. 39. Now many of the Samaritans beleeued in him, for the saying of the woman which testified, He hath told me all things that euer I did. 41. And many moe beleeued, because of his owne word. 42. And they said vnto the woman, now we beleeue not because of thy saying: for we haue heard him our selues, and knowe that this is indeed the Christ the Sauiour of the world. Rom. 10. 18. I demaund, haue they not heard? no doubt their sound went out through all the earth, and their wordes into the ends of the world. Thus we may see, how many of our forefathers, and ancestours in the midst of popery obtained eternall life. Reuel. 12. 17. The dragon was wroth with the woman, and went & made warre with the remnant of her seede, which kept the commãdements of God, and haue the testimony of Iesus Christ. Rom. 11. 4. What saith the Diuine Oracles? I haue reserued to me seauen thousand men, which neuer bowed knee to Baal.

CHAP. XXXII.

Of the Sacraments.

THus much of the preaching of the word: nowe followe the appendants to the same: namely, the Sacraments.

A Sacrament is that, whereby Christ & his sauing graces are by certaine externall rites, signified, exhibited, and sealed to a Christian man. Romans. 4 11. Hee receiued the signe of circumcision, as the seule of the righteousnesse of the faith which he had, when he was circumcised. Gen. 17. 11. Ye shall circumcise the foreskin of your flesh, and it shall be a signe of the couenant betweene mee and you.

God alone is the author of a sacrament, for the signe cannot confirme any thinge at all, but by the consent and promise of him, at whose hands the benefit promised must be receiued. Therefore God it is alone which appointed signes of grace in whose alone power it is to bestowe grace.

And God did make a Sacrament by the Sacramentall word, as Augustine witnesseth, saying, Let the word come to the elemẽt and there is made a Sacrament. The Sacramentall word, is the word of institution, the which God after a seuerall manner, hath set downe in each Sacrament. Of the word there are two parts: the commandement & the promise. The commaundement is, by which Christ appoynteth the administration of the Sacraments, and the receiuing of the same. And in Baptisme, Goe into the whole world baptizing them in the name, &c. In the Lords Supper. Take eate, drinke, doe ye this. The promise is the other part of the institution, wherby God ordained elements, that they might be instrumentes and seales of his Grace. As in Baptisme, I baptize thee in the name of the father, of the sonne, and of the holy Ghost. In the Supper, This is my body giuen for you: & This is my blood of the newe Testament. Therfore this word in the administration of the Sacrament ought to be pronounced distinctly and aloud, yea, and as occasion serueth, explaned also: to the ende, that all they to whome the commandement and promise appertaineth, may know and vnderstand the same. And hence it is verye plaine, that the Ministers impiety, doeth not make a nullity of the Sacrament, neither doeth it any whit hinder a worthy receiuer: no more then the pietie of a good minister can profit an vnworthy receiuer: because, all the efficacy and worthinesse thereof dependeth onely vpon Gods institution, if so be that be obserued.

The parts of a Sacrament are, the signe, and the thing of the Sacrament.

The signe, is either the matter sensible, or the action conuersant about the same.

The matter sensible, is vsually called the signe.

The mutation of the signe, is not naturall, by changing the substance of the thing; but respectiue, that is, only in regard of the vse. For it is seuered from a common to an holy vse: Therefore there is not any such either force or efficacie of making vs holy, inherent, or tied vnto the externall signes, as there is naturally in bathes to purifie corrupt diseases: but al such efficacy is wholly appropriate to the holy spirit, yet so, as it is an inseperable companiõ

of true faith and repentance, and to ſuch as turne vnto the Lord, is, togither with the ſigne exhibited. Whence it commeth to paſſe, that by Gods ordinance, a certaine ſignification of grace, and ſealing thereof agreeth to the ſigne.

The thing of the Sacrament, is either Chriſt and his graces which concerne our ſaluation, or the action conuerſant about Chriſt.

I ſay, firſt Chriſt, and then his graces, becauſe noe man receiueth grace from Chriſt, vnleſſe he be made truely partaker of his very body & blood: euen as no man can by right reape any fruit of the ground, whereof firſt he hath no iuſt title and intereſt.

The action about Chriſt is ſpiritual, & is either the action of God, or of faith.

The actiō of God is either the offering, or the Application of Chriſt and his graces to the faithfull.

The action of faith is, the conſideratiō, deſire, apprehenſiō, & receiuing of Chriſt, in the lawfull vſe of the ſacrament.

Thus much of the parts of a ſacrament: now followeth the vnion of the partes.

This ſacramentall vnion, I. is not naturall according to the place: for there is no mutatiō of the ſigne into the thing ſigned; neither is the thing ſigned, either included in, or faſtned vpon the ſigne. But II. it is reſpectiue, becauſe there is a certaine agreement and proportion of the externall things with the internall, & of the actions of one with the actions of the other: whereby it commeth to paſſe, that the ſignes, as it were, certaine viſible wordes incurring into the externall ſenſes, do by a certaine proportionable reſemblance draw a chriſtiā mind to the conſideratiō of the things ſignified, and to be applyed.

This mutuall, and, as I may ſay, ſacramentall relation, is the cauſe of ſo many figuratiue ſpeeches and metonymies which are vſed: as, when one thing in the Sacrament is put for another. As,

I. The ſigne is vſed for the thing ſignified. Exod. 12.11. Ye ſhall eate it (namely the Lambe) in haſte, for it is the Lords Paſſeouer. Ioh. 6.51. I am the liuing bread, which came downe from heauen: if any eate of this bread, he ſhall liue for euer, and the bread which I will giue is my fleſh, which I will giue for the life of the world. 1. Cor. 5.7. Chriſt our Paſſeouer is ſacrificed for vs. 1. Cor. 10.17. we that are many, are one bread, & one body, becauſe we are all partakers of one bread.

II. The name of the thing ſignified is giuen to the ſigne: as, The bread is Chriſts body, the cup is Chriſts blood. 1. Cor. 11.24. Math. 26.28.

III. The effect of the thinge ſignified is giuen to the ſigne, as Circumciſion is a couenant, Gen 17.10. Act. 7.8. The cuppe is the newe Teſtament in Chriſts blood. Luk. 22.16. Baptiſme is the waſhing of the newe birth. Tit. 3.5.

IV. That which properly belongeth to the ſigne is attributed to the thing ſignified. Deut. 10.16. Circumciſe the foreskine of your hearts. Ioh. 6.53. Unleſſe ye eate the fleſh of the ſonne of man, & drinke his blood ye ſhal haue no life in you.

The ende why a Sacrament was ordained, is I. for the better confirmation of our faith: for by it as by certaine pledges giuē, God of his great mercy, doeth as it were, bind himſelfe vnto vs. Nowe a Sacrament doth confirme our faith, not by any inherent or proper power it hath in it ſelfe, as hath a ſoueraigne medicine receiued by a patiēt, the which, whether a man ſleepe or wake, it confirmeth his ſtrength: but rather by reaſoning, and vſing the ſignes, when the holy Ghoſt ſhall frame in our hearts ſuch a concluſion, as this:

All ſuch as are conuerted, rightly vſing the Sacraments, ſhall receiue Chriſt and his graces.

But I am conuerted, and either nowe doe, or before haue rightly vſed the Sacraments.

Therefore I ſhall receiue Chriſt and his graces.

II. That it may be a badge and note of that profeſſion by which the true Church of God is diſtinguiſhed from other congregations. III. That it might be a meane to preſerue, & ſpread abroad the doctrine of the Goſpell. IV. It ſerueth to binde the faithfull that they do continue both loyal, and gratefull to their Lord God. V. It is the bond of mutuall amity betwixt the faithfull.

Howe a Sacrament is neceſſary to ſaluation. The couenant of Grace is abſolutely neceſſary to ſaluation: for it comprehending Chriſt Ieſus the very ſubſtance of the Couenant, man muſt neceſſarily either receiue it, or periſh eternally: but a Sacrament is not abſolutely neceſſarie, but onely as it is a proppe and ſtay for faith to leane vpon. For it cannot entitle vs into the inheritance of the ſonnes of God, as the couenant doth, but onely by reaſon of faith going before, it doeth because of the affliction that arose about Steuen walked throughout till they came to Phenice, and Ciprus, & Antiochia, preaching the word to no man, but to the Iewes onely. 20. Nowe some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which when they were come into Antiochia, spake vnto the Greccians and preached the Lord Iesus. 21. And the hand of the Lord was with them, so that a great number beleeued, and turned vnto the Lord. Ioh. 4.28 The women that left her water pot, and went her way into the cittie, and said to the men, 29. Come, and see a man which hath tolde me all things that ever I did: Is not he the Christ? then they went out of the cittie, and came vnto him. 39. Now many of the Samaritans beleeued in him, for the saying of the woman which testified, He hath told me all things that ever I did. 41. And many moe beleeued, because of his owne word. 42. And they said vnto the woman, now we beleeue not because of thy saying: for we haue heard him our selues, and knowe that this is indeed the Christ the Sauiour of the world. Rom. 10.18. I demaund, haue they not heard? no doubt their sound went out through all the earth, and their wordes into the ends of the world. Thus we may see, how many of our forefathers, and ancestours in the midst of popery obtained eternall life. II. That it may be a badge and note of that profeſſion by which the true Church of God is diſtinguiſhed from other congregations. III. That it might be a meane to preſerue, & ſpread abroad the doctrine of the Goſpell. IV. It ſerueth to binde the faithfull that they do continue both loyal, and gratefull to their Lord God. V. It is the bond of mutuall amity betwixt the faithfull.

Howe a Sacrament is neceſſary to ſaluation. The couenant of Grace is abſolutely neceſſary to ſaluation: for it comprehending Chriſt Ieſus the very ſubſtance of the Couenant, man muſt neceſſarily either receiue it, or periſh eternally: but a Sacrament is not abſolutely neceſſarie, but onely as it is a proppe and ſtay for faith to leane vpon. For it cannot entitle vs into the inheritance of the ſonnes of God, as the couenant doth, but onely by reaſon of faith going before, it doeth ſeale that which before was beſtowed vpon vs. As we ſee in humane contracts the bond ariſeth from the mutuall conſent of the parties; but the inſtrument or bill, and the ſetting to of the ſeale, they doe not make, but rather confirme the bond mutually before made: the which mutuall conſēt remaining firme, the contract ſtandeth ſtill in force, though the inſtrument or ſeale be wanting.

Therefore the want of a ſacrament doth not condemne, but the contempt is that which wil condemne a man. The want of a Sacramēt is, when we are iuſtly hindred from the receiuing of the ſame; as when one is preuented by death, or liueth in ſuch a place where he cannot receiue the Sacramēt. And as for the neglect of a Sacrament, albeit it be a very grieuous ſinne, yet is it ſuch an one, as for which hee that is heartely penitent for the ſame, may well hope for pardon.

The holy vſe of a Sacrament is, when ſuch as are truly conuerted, doe vſe thoſe rites which God hath preſcribed vnto their true ends, in the receiuing of a Sacramēt. Therefore I. the reprobate, though God offer the whole Sacrament vnto thē, yet they receiue the ſignes alone without the things ſignified by the ſignes: becauſe the ſigne without the right vſe thereof, is not a Sacramēt to the receiuer of it. So Paul ſaith, Rom. 2. 25. Circumciſion verely is profitable if thou keepe the lawe: but if thou bee a tranſgreſſour of the Lawe: thy circumciſion is made vncircumciſion. And Auguſtine hath this ſaying, If thou receiue it carnally, yet ceaſeth it not to be ſpirituall, though to thee it be not ſo. II. The elect as yet not cōuerted to the Lord, do receiue in like manner the bare ſignes without the thing ſignified; yet ſo, as that, that Sacrament ſhal in them afterward haue his good effect. For the ſacrament receiued before a mans conuerſion, is afterward to the penitent both ratified, and becommeth profitable: and that vſe of the ſacrament which before was vterly vnlawfull, doeth then become very lawefull. III. The elect already conuerted, doe to their ſaluation receiue, both the ſigne and the thing ſignified togither; yet ſo, as that for their vnworthy receiuing thereof, the which commeth to paſſe by reaſon of their manifolde infirmities, and relapſes into ſinne, they are ſubiect vnto temporall puniſhments.

The difference betwixt a Sacrament & a Sacrifice, is, in a Sacrament God beſtoweth his graces vpon vs: but in a ſacrifice, we returne vnto God faith and obediēce.

There are many differences betwixt the Sacraments of the Olde Teſtament, and theſe of the Newe. I. They were many; theſe but few. II. They pointed at Chriſt to come; theſe ſhewe that he is come. III. They were appropriate vnto the poſterity of Abraham; but theſe are common to the whole Church culled out of the Iewes and Gentiles.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Of Baptiſme.

THere are two Sacraments. 1. Cor. 10. 1. I would not haue you ignorant, that all our Fathers were vnder the cloude, & all paſſed through the ſea. 2. And were al baptized vnto Moſes in the cloud, and in the ſea. 3. And did all eate the ſame ſpirituall meate, 4. And dranke all the ſame ſpirituall drinke: (for they dranke of the ſpirituall rocke that followed thē, which rocke was Chriſt) Tertul. 4 booke contra Marcion. Auguſt. de Symbol. ad Catechum. 4 booke, 6 chap.

The firſt Sacrament is that, whereby Chriſtians are initiated, and admitted into the Church of God: and this is Baptiſme.

The ſecond Sacrament whereby the Church is preſerued and nouriſhed is the Lords Supper.

Baptiſme is a Sacrament, by which ſuch as are within the couenāt are waſhed with water, in the name of the father, the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt: that beeing thus engrafted into Chriſt, they may haue perpetuall fellowſhippe with him. Math. 28. 19. Goe, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. Math. 16. 16. Hee that beleeueth and is baptiſed, ſhalbe ſaued: hee that beleeueth not, ſhall be condemned. 1. Cor. 1. 13. Is Chriſt deuided? was Paul crucified for you? either were ye baptized into the name of Paul? 14. I thanke God, I baptized none of you but Criſpus and Gaius. 15. Leaſt any ſhould ſay, I had baptized into mine owne name.

Within the couenant are all the ſeede of Abraham, or the ſeede of the faithfull. Theſe are either of riper yeares, or infants.

Thoſe of riper yeares, are all ſuch as adioyning themſelues to the viſible Church, doe

doe both teſtifie their repentance of their ſinnes, & holde the foundations of religion, taught in the ſame Church, Math. 3. 6. And they were baptized of him in Iorden, confeſſing their ſinnes. Act. 8. 36. As they went they came to a water, then the Eunuch ſaid, See, here is water, what hindreth me to be baptized? and Then Philip ſaid If thou be-

Adam did ſinne both for himſelfe and others: and as Parents in bargaines do couenant both for themſelues & their heires after them. Hence it is that Paul ſaith, that the parents are like vnto the firſt fruits which ſanctifie the whole lumpe. So then, the faith of the Parents maketh thoſe their ſonnes to be accounted in the couenant, beget their ſonnes the children of wrath. For the father begetteth a ſonne, not as he is a good man, but ſimply as a man; and therfore beeing impure, he muſt needs beget that which is impure. Secondly, wee muſt conſider the parents as they are the ſonnes of God, engraffed into the ſecond Adam. In this eſtate though they cannot deriue faith vnto their poſterity, (for the ſonnes of God are not made ſuch by naturall generation, but by the Adoption of God the Father) yet may they beleeue both for themſelues and others, according to the tenour of the couenant of grace: as zed one with that; the party thus defaced, was further baptized. the former beeing eſteemed of none effect. Niceph. hiſtor. 3 booke, 33 chapter.

The externall forme of baptiſme, is the Miniſters waſhing of the baptized, according to the preſcript rule of Gods word. Rom. 10. 14.

The auncient cuſtome of baptizing, was to dippe, and as it were to diue all the body of the baptized in the water, as may appeare in Paul. Rom. 6. and the Councels of Laodicea, and Neocæſarea: but now eſpecially in cold countries, the Church v-

I haue reſerued to me ſeauen thouſand men, which neuer bowed knee to Baal.*

CHAP. XXXII.

Of the Sacraments.

THus much of the preaching of the word: nowe followe the appendants to the ſame: namely, the Sacraments.

A Sacrament is that, whereby Chriſt & his ſauing graces are by certaine externall rites, ſignified, exhibited, and ſealed to a Chriſtian man. Romans. 4 11. Hee receiued the ſigne of circumciſion, as the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of the faith which he had, when he was circumciſed. Gen. 17.11. Ye ſhall circumciſe the foreskin of your fleſh, and it ſhall be a ſigne of the couenant betweene mee and you.

God alone is the author of a ſacrament, for the ſigne cannot confirme any thinge at all, but by the conſent and promiſe of him, at whoſe hands the benefit promiſed muſt be receiued. Therefore God it is alone which appointed ſignes of grace in whoſe alone power it is to beſtowe grace.

And God did make a Sacrament by the Sacramentall word, as Auguſtine witneſſeth, ſaying, Let the word come to the elemẽt and there is made a Sacrament. The Sacramentall word, is the word of inſtitution, the which God after a ſeuerall manner, hath ſet downe in each Sacrament. Of the word there are two parts: the commandement & the promiſe. The commaundement is, by which Chriſt appoynteth the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and the receiuing of the ſame. And in Baptiſme, Goe into the whole world baptizing them in the name, &c. In the Lords Supper. Take eate, drinke, doe ye this. The promiſe is the other part of the inſtitution, wherby God ordained elements, that they might be inſtrumentes and ſeales of his Grace. As in Baptiſme, I baptize thee in the name of the father, of the ſonne, and of the holy Ghoſt. In the Supper, This is my body giuen for you: & This is my blood of the newe Teſtament. Therfore this word in the adminiſtration of the Sacrament ought to be pronounced diſtinctly and aloud, yea, and as occaſion ſerueth, explaned alſo: to the ende, that all they to whome the commandement and promiſe appertaineth, may know and vnderſtand the ſame. And hence it is verye plaine, that the Miniſters impiety, doeth not make a nullity of the Sacrament, neither doeth it any whit hinder a worthy receiuer: no more then the pietie of a good miniſter can profit an vnworthy receiuer: becauſe all the efficacy and worthineſſe thereof dependeth onely vpon Gods inſtitution, if ſo be that be obſerued.

The parts of a Sacrament are, the ſigne, and the thing of the Sacrament.

The ſigne, is either the matter ſenſible, or the action conuerſant about the ſame.

The matter ſenſible, is vſually called the ſigne.

The mutation of the ſigne, is not naturall, by changing the ſubſtance of the thing: but reſpectiue, that is, only in regard of the vſe. For it is ſeuered from a common to an holy vſe: Therefore there is not any ſuch either force or efficacie of making vs holy, inherent, or tied vnto the externall ſignes, as there is naturally in bathes to purifie corrupt diſeaſes: but al ſuch efficacy is wholly appropriate to the holy ſpirit, yet ſo, as it is an inſeperable companiõ

of true faith and repentance, and to ſuch as turne vnto the Lord, is, togither with the ſigne exhibited. Whence it commeth to paſſe, that by Gods ordinance, a certaine ſignification of grace, and ſealing thereof agreeth to the ſigne.

The thing of the Sacrament, is either Chriſt and his graces which concerne our ſaluation, or the action conuerſant about Chriſt.

I ſay, firſt Chriſt, and then his graces, becauſe noe man receiueth grace from Chriſt, vnleſſe he be made truely partaker of his very body & blood: euen as no man can by right reape any fruit of the ground, whereof firſt he hath no iuſt title and intereſt.

The action about Chriſt is ſpiritual, & is either the action of God, or of faith.

The actiō of God is either the offering, or the Application of Chriſt and his graces to the faithfull.

Thus much of the parts of a ſacrament: now followeth the vnion of the partes.

This ſacramentall vnion, I. is not naturall according to the place: for there is no mutatiō of the ſigne into the thing ſigned; neither is the thing ſigned, either included in, or faſtned vpon the ſigne. But II. it is reſpectiue, becauſe there is a certaine agreement and proportion of the externall things with the internall, & of the actions of one with the actions of the other: wherby it commeth to paſſe, that the ſignes, as it were, certaine viſible wordes incurring into the externall ſenſes, do by a certaine proportionable reſemblance draw a chriſtiā mind to the conſideratiō of the things ſignified, and to be applyed.

This mutuall, and, as I may ſay, ſacramentall relation, is the cauſe of ſo many figuratiue ſpeeches and metonymies which are vſed: as, when one thing in the Sacrament is put for another. As,

I. The ſigne is vſed for the thing ſignified. Exod. 12.11. Ye ſhall eate it (namely the Lambe) in haſte, for it is the Lords Paſſeouer. Ioh. 6.51. I am the liuing bread, which came downe from heauen: if any eate of this bread, he ſhall liue for euer, and the bread which I will giue is my fleſh, which I will giue for the life of the world. 1. Cor. 5.7. Chriſt our Paſſeouer is ſacrificed for vs. 1. Cor. 10.17. we that are many, are one bread, & one body, becauſe we are all partakers of one bread.

II. The name of the thing ſignified is giuen to the ſigne: as, The bread is Chriſts body, the cup is Chriſts blood. 1. Cor. 11.24. Math. 26.28.

III. The effect of the thinge ſignified is giuen to the ſigne, as Circumciſion is a couenant, Gen 17.10. Act. 7.8. The cuppe is the newe Teſtament in Chriſts blood. Luk. 22.16. Baptiſme is the waſhing of the newe birth. Tit. 3.5.

IV. That which properly belongeth to the ſigne is attributed to the thing ſignified. Deut. 10.16. Circumciſe the foreskine of your hearts. Ioh. 6.53. Vnleſſe ye eate the fleſh of the ſonne of man, & drinke his blood, ye ſhal haue no life in you.

The ende why a Sacrament was ordained, is I. for the better confirmation of our faith: for by it as by certaine pledges giuē, God of his great mercy, doeth as it were, bind himſelfe vnto vs. Nowe a Sacrament doth confirme our faith, not by any inherent or proper power it hath in it ſelfe, as hath a ſoueraigne medicine receiued by a patiēt, the which, whether a man ſleepe or wake, it confirmeth his ſtrength: but rather by reaſoning, and vſing the ſignes, when the holy Ghoſt ſhall frame in our hearts ſuch a concluſion, as this:

All ſuch as are conuerted, rightly vſing the Sacraments, ſhall receiue Chriſt and his graces.

But I am conuerted, and either nowe doe, or before haue rightly vſed the Sacraments.

Therefore I ſhall receiue Chriſt and his graces.

II. That it may be a badge and note of that profeſſion by which the true Church of God is diſtinguiſhed from other congregations. III. That it might be a meane to preſerue, & ſpread abroad the doctrine of the Goſpell. IV. It ſerueth to binde the faithfull that they do continue both loyal, and gratefull to their Lord God. V. It is the bond of mutuall amity betwixt the faithfull.

Howe a Sacrament is neceſſary to ſaluation. The couenant of Grace is abſolutely neceſſary to ſaluation: for it comprehending Chriſt Ieſus the very ſubſtance of the Couenant, man muſt neceſſarily either receiue it, or periſh eternally: but a Sacrament is not abſolutely neceſſarie, but onely as it is a proppe and ſtay for faith to leane vpon. For it cannot entitle vs into the inheritance of the ſonnes of God, as the couenant doth, but onely by reaſon of faith going before, it doeth ſeale that which before was beſtowed vpon vs. As we ſee in humane contracts the bond ariſeth from the mutuall conſent of the parties; but the inſtrument or bill, and the ſetting to of the ſeale, they doe not make, but rather confirme the bond mutually before made: the which mutuall conſēt remaining firme, the contract ſtandeth ſtill in force, though the inſtrument or ſeale be wanting.

Therefore the want of a ſacrament doth not condemne, but the contempt is that which wil condemne a man. The want of a Sacramēt is, when we are iuſtly hindred from the receiuing of the ſame; as when one is preuented by death, or liueth in ſuch a place where he cannot receiue the Sacramēt. And as for the neglect of a Sacrament, albeit it be a very grieuous ſinne, yet is it ſuch an one, as for which hee that is heartely penitent for the ſame, may well hope for pardon.

The holy vſe of a Sacrament is, when ſuch as are truly conuerted, doe vſe thoſe rites which God hath preſcribed vnto their true ends, in the receiuing of a Sacramēt. Therefore I. the reprobate, though God offer the whole Sacrament vnto thē, yet they receiue the ſignes alone without the things ſignified by the ſignes: becauſe the ſigne without the right vſe thereof, is not a Sacramēt to the receiuer of it. So Paul ſaith, Rom. 2. 25. Circumciſion verely is profitable if thou keepe the lawe: but if thou bee a tranſgreſſour of the Lawe: thy circumciſion is made vncircumciſion. And Auguſtine hath this ſaying, If thou receiue it carnally, yet ceaſeth it not to be ſpirituall, though to thee it be not ſo. II. The elect as yet not cōuerted to the Lord, do receiue in like manner the bare ſignes without the thing ſignified; yet ſo, as that, that Sacrament ſhal in them afterward haue his good effect. For the ſacrament receiued before a mans conuerſion, is afterward to the penitent both ratified, and becommeth profitable: and that vſe of the ſacrament which before was vtterly vnlawfull. doeth then become very lawefull. III. The elect already conuerted, doe to their ſaluation receiue, both the ſigne and the thing ſignified togither; yet ſo, as that for their vnworthy receiuing thereof, the which commeth to paſſe by reaſon of their manifolde infirmities, and relapſes into ſinne, they are ſubiect vnto temporall puniſhments.

The difference betwixt a Sacrament & a Sacrifice, is, in a Sacrament God beſtoweth his graces vpon vs: but in a ſacrifice, we returne vnto God faith and obediēce.

There are many differences betwixt the Sacraments of the Olde Teſtament, and theſe of the Newe. I. They were many; theſe but few. II. They pointed at Chriſt to come; theſe ſhewe that he is come. III. They were appropriate vnto the poſterity of Abraham; but theſe are common to the whole Church culled out of the Iewes and Gentiles.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Of Baptiſme.

THere are two Sacraments. 1. Cor. 10. 1. I would not haue you ignorant, that all our Fathers were vnder the cloude, & all paſſed through the ſea. 2. And were al baptized vnto Moſes in the cloud, and in the ſea. 3. And did all eate the ſame ſpirituall meate, 4. And dranke all the ſame ſpirituall drinke: (for they dranke of the ſpirituall rocke that followed thē, which rocke was Chriſt) Tertul. 4. booke contra Marcion. Auguſt. de Symbol. ad Catechum. 4. booke, 6. chap.

The firſt Sacrament is that, whereby Chriſtians are initiated, and admitted into the Church of God: and this is Baptiſme.

The ſecond Sacrament whereby the Church is preſerued and nouriſhed is the Lords Supper.

Baptiſme is a Sacrament, by which ſuch as are within the couenāt are waſhed with water, in the name of the father, the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt: that beeing thus engraffed into Chriſt, they may haue perpetuall fellowſhippe with him. Math. 28. 19. Goe, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. Math. 16. 16, Hee that beleeueth and is baptiſed, ſhalbe ſaued: hee that beleeueth not, ſhall be condemned. 1. Cor. 1. 13. Is Chriſt deuided? was Paul crucified for you? either were ye baptized into the name of Paul? 14. I thanke God, I baptized none of you but Criſpus and Gaius. 15. Leaſt any ſhould ſay, I had baptized into mine owne name.

Within the couenant are all the ſeede of Abraham, or the ſeede of the faithfull. Theſe are either of riper yeares, or infants.

Thoſe of riper yeares, are all ſuch as adioyning themſelues to the viſible Church, doe

doe both teſtifie their repentance of their ſinnes, & holde the foundations of religion, taught in the ſame Church, Math. 3. 6. And they were baptized of him in Iorden, confeſſing their ſinnes. Act. 8. 36. As they went they came to a water, then the Eunuch ſaid, See, here is water, what hindreth me to be baptized? &c. Then Philip ſaid, If thou be-

Adam did ſinne both for himſelfe and others: and as Parents in bargaines do couenant both for themſelues & their heires after them. Hence it is that Paul ſaith, that the parents are like vnto the firſt fruits which ſanctifie the whole lumpe. So then, the faith of the Parents maketh thoſe their ſonnes to be accounted in the couenant, beget their ſonnes the children of wrath. For the father begetteth a ſonne, not as he is a good man, but ſimply as a man; and therfore beeing impure, he muſt needs beget that which is impure. Secondly, wee muſt conſider the parents as they are the ſonnes of God, engraffed into the ſecond Adam. In this eſtate though they cannot deriue faith vnto their poſterity, (for the ſonnes of God are not made ſuch by naturall generation, but by the Adoption of God the Father) yet may they beleeue both for themſelues and others, according to the tenour of the couenant of grace: as zed one with that; the party thus belauated, was further baptized, the former beeing eſteemed of none effect. Niceph. hiſtor. 3. booke, 33. chapter.

The externall forme of baptiſme, is the Miniſters waſhing of the baptized, according to the preſcript rule of Gods word. Rom. 10. 14.

The auncient cuſtome of baptizing, was to dippe, and as it were to diue all the body of the baptized in the water, as may appeare in Paul. Rom. 6. and the Councels of Laodicea, and Neocæſarea: but now eſpecially in cold countries, the Church v-

doe both teſtifie their repentance of their ſinnes, & holde the foundations of religion, taught in the ſame Church, Math. 3. 6. And they were baptized of him in Iorden, confeſſing their ſinnes. Act. 8. 36. As they went they came to a water, then the Eunuch ſaid, See, here is water, what hindreth me to be baptized? 37. Then Philip ſaid, If thou beleeue with al thine heart, thou maieſt: he ſaid, I beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is the Son of God. 38. And they went downe into the water, both Philip and the Eunuch, and he baptized him. Exod. 12. 48. If a ſtranger dwell with thee, and wil obſerue the Paſſeouer of the Lord, let him circumciſe al the males that belong vnto him, and then let him come and obſerue it, & then hee ſhall bee as one that is borne in the land: for none vncircumciſed perſon ſhall eate thereof.

Infants within the Couenant, are ſuch, as haue one at the leaſt of their Parents faithfull. 1. Cor. 7. 14. The vnbeleeuing husband is ſanctified by the wife, and the vnbeleeuing wife is ſanctified by the husband, els were your children vncleane, but nowe they are holy. Rom. 11. 16. If the firſt fruites be holy, ſo is the whole lumpe: and if the roote be holy, ſo are the branches. Gen. 17. 7. I will eſtabliſh my couenant betweene me and thee, and thy ſeed after thee, in their generatiõ for an euerlaſting couenant, to be God vnto thee, and thy ſeed after thee. 13. He that is borne in thine houſe, and he that is bought with money, muſt needes be circumciſed: ſo my couenant ſhal be in your fleſh, for an euerlaſting couenant. Act. 16. 31. They ſaid, beleeue in the Lord Ieſus, and thou ſhalt bee ſaued, and thy whole houſhold.

Queſt. How are the children of faithfull parents in the couenant.

Anſw. Holy parents are two waies to be conſidered. Firſt. as they were the ſons of the firſt Adam, and ſo are as yet partly carnall. In this eſtate they in like ſort doe beget their ſonnes the children of wrath. For the father begetteth a ſonne, not as he is a good man, but ſimply as a man; and therfore beeing impure, he muſt needs beget that which is impure. Secondly, wee muſt conſider the parents as they are the ſonnes of God, engraffed into the ſecond Adam. In this eſtate though they cannot deriue faith vnto their poſterity, (for the ſonnes of God are not made ſuch by naturall generation, but by the Adoption of God the Father) yet may they beleeue both for themſelues and others, according to the tenour of the couenant of grace: as Adam did ſinne both for himſelfe and others: and as Parents in bargaines do couenant both for themſelues & their heires after them. Hence it is that Paul ſaith, that the parents are like vnto the firſt fruits which ſanctifie the whole lumpe. So then, the faith of the Parents maketh thoſe their ſonnes to be accounted in the couenant, which by reaſon of their age doe not yet actually beleeue.

To bee baptized into the name of the Father, &c. after the receit of the outward ſigne of waſhing, is to be made one of Gods family, which is his Church, and to bee partaker of the priuiledges thereof. Gen. 48. 16. The angel which hath deliuered me from all euill, bleſſe the children, and let my name be named vpon them, and the name of my father, Abraham and Izhak, that they may grow as fiſh into multitude, in the middeſt of the earth. Eſai. 4. 1. In that day ſhall ſeauen women take hold of one man, ſaying, We will eate our owne bread, and we will weare our owne garments: onely let vs bee called by thy name, and take away our reproch.

By this it is manifeſt, that in this waſhing of Baptiſme, there is ſealed and propounded a marueilous ſolemne couenant and contract: firſt of God with the baptized, in that God the Father vouchſafed to receiue him into fauour, the ſonne to redeeme him, the holy Ghoſt to purifie and regenerate him: ſecondly, of the baptized with God, who promiſeth to acknowledge, inuocate, and worſhip none other God, but the true Iehouah, which is the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt.

The externall & viſible matter of baptiſme, is water: for the Miniſter may not baptiſe with any other liquour, but onely with naturall water.

This was the iudgement of the Primitiue Church. For when as a certaine miniſter, for want of water, tooke ſand, and baptized one with that; the party thus beſanded, was further baptized. the former beeing eſteemed of none effect. Niceph. hiſtor. 3. booke, 33. chapter.

The externall forme of baptiſme, is the Miniſters waſhing of the baptized, according to the preſcript rule of Gods word. Rom. 10. 14.

The auncient cuſtome of baptizing, was to dippe, and as it were to diue all the body of the baptized in the water, as may appeare in Paul. Rom. 6. and the Councels of Laodicea, and Neocæſarea: but now eſpecially in cold countries, the Church v-ſeth only to ſprinckle the baptized, by reaſō of childrens weaknes: for very few of ripe yeares are now a dayes baptized. We neede not much to maruaile at this alteration, ſeeing charity and neceſſity may diſpence with ceremonies, and mitigate in equitie the ſharpenes of them.

The Sacramentall vnion of the parts of baptiſme, is on this ſort.

The element of water whereby the vncleannes of the body is purified, by a moſt conuenient proportion ſhadoweth out the blood of Chriſt, and by the figure Synechdoche, taking the part for the whole, whole Chriſt. 1. Ioh. 1. 7. And the blood of Ieſus Chriſt cleanſeth vs from all ſinne.

The action of the Miniſter, is his waſhing of the party baptized with the Elemēt of water. This ſealeth and confirmeth a double action of God. I. the ingraffing or incorporating of the party baptized into Chriſt. Gal. 3. 27. As many as are baptized into Chriſt, haue put on Chriſt. 1. Cor. 12. 13. By one ſpirit we are all baptized into one body. II. Our ſpirituall regeneration. Tit. 3. 5. Not by the workes of righteouſneſſe which we had done, but according to his mercy he ſaued vs by the waſhing of the newe birth, and the renewing of the holy Ghoſt.

Of waſhing there be three parts. The putting into the water: the continuance in the water: and the comming out of the water.

The putting into, or the ſprinkling of water, doeth ratifie, I. the ſhedding of the blood of Chriſt for the remiſſion of al our ſinnes, & the imputation of his righteouſneſſe. Act. 22. 16. Ariſe and be baptized, & waſh away thy ſinnes in calling on the name of the Lord. 1. Cor. 6. 11. And ſuch were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, but yee are ſanctified, but ye are iuſtified in the name of the Lord Ieſus, and by the ſpirit of our God. II. The mortification of ſinne by the power of Chriſts death. Rom. 6. 3. Knowe ye not that all wee which haue beene baptized into Ieſus Chriſt haue beene baptized into his death? 6 Knowing this, that our olde man is crucified with him, that the body of ſinne might be deſtroyed, that henceforth wee ſhould not ſerue ſinne: for he that is dead is freed from ſinne.

The continuance in the water, noteth the buriall of ſinne; namely, a continual increaſe of mortification by the power both of Chriſt his death and buriall. Rom. 6. 4. We are buried then with him by baptiſme into his death.

The comming out of the water doeth confirme our ſpirituall viuificatiō to newneſſe of life in all holineſſe and iuſtice, the which we attaine vnto by the power of Chriſts reſurrection. Rom. 6. 4. Like as Chriſt was raiſed vp from the dead by the glory of the Father: ſo we alſo ſhould walke in newneſſe of life. 5. For if we be graffed with him to the ſimilitude of his death, euen ſo ſhall we be to the ſimilitude of the reſurrection.

The action of the party to be baptized, is two-fold.

The firſt is, to offer himſelfe to be baptized before the miniſter, and that in the preſence of the congregation. This ſignifieth that he doth cōſecrate himſelfe vnto the Lord, and that he vtterly renounceth the fleſh, the world, and the deuil. 1. Pet. 3. 21. To the which alſo the figure which nowe ſaueth vs, euen baptiſme agreeth, (not the putting away of the filth of the fleſh, but in that a good conſcience maketh requeſt vnto God) by the reſurrection of Ieſus Chriſt.

The ſecond is, to receiue the externall waſhing by water: this ſignifieth, that the party baptized doeth receiue the internall waſhing, which is by the blood of Chriſt, or at the leaſt that it is offered vnto him.

Rebaptizing is at no hand to be admitted: for as in naturall generation man is once only borne; ſo muſt he be in the ſpirituall generation. Therfore they that are baptized of a miniſter, which is an heretike, not yet degraded from that calling, (if the externall forme of adminiſtration be obſerued) muſt not be baptized againe of the Church of God: eſpecially, if after baptiſme they haue beene made partakers of the Lords ſupper: onely they ought to be inſtructed in the true faith. Euſeb. Eccleſ. hiſt. lib. 7. c. 8. ſaith, There was in our Prouince an antient profeſſour of the faith, yea before I was created Biſhoppe, nay before my predeceſſour Heraclas: who when hee was preſent at the baptiſme of ſome, and heard what queſtions they were asked, and what anſwer they returned. forthwith came weeping vnto me, and humbling himſelfe before mee, confeſſed that he was baptized by an heretike: yet in regard of that adminiſtration which he ſawe in our Church, hee accounted that not baptiſme, in that the confeſſion there vſed, was fraught with blaſphemies. This alſo he added, that he was for this offence ſo ſore grieued, that he durſt not ſo much as lift vp his eies to heauen: wherefore he moſt earneſtly beſought me, that he might be cleanſed and purified with

The which notwithſtanding, I durſt not preſume to adminiſter, but ſaid, it was ſufficient for him that he had bin ſo long a profeſſour amongſt vs, and that at the receit of the Lords ſupper, he anſwered, Amen. theſe things I told him were of force enough to purge him. And therefore I admoniſed him, to reſt himſelfe in his former faith and conſcience already ſufficiently purified, eſpecially in that he ſo long was partaker with vs in the Sacraments. Auguſt. lib. 3. c. 2. contra Petil. literas.

The right vſe of baptiſme is this. When inwardly in thine heart thou ſenſibly feeleſt, that through the heat of cõcupiſcence, thou art mooued to commit ſome ſinne, then begin to haue ſome holy meditation of that ſolemne vowe, which thou diddeſt make to God in baptiſme;

Againe, if through infirmity, thou falleſt once or often into ſome ſinne, ſtill haue recourſe vnto baptiſme, that there thou maiſt receiue courage to thy ſoule. For although baptiſme be but once onely adminiſtred, yet that once teſtifieth, that al mans ſinnes paſt, preſent, and to come, are waſhed away. 1. Pet. 3. 20. Eph. 5. 25. 26. 27. Therefore baptiſme may be truly tearmed the Sacrament of repentance, and as it were, a board to ſwimme vpon, when a man ſhall feare the ſhipp-wracke of his ſoule. Marke. 1. 4. 1. Tim. 1. 19. Rom. 6. v. 4. 6.

Laſt of all, ſee thou neuer reſt, till ſuch time as thou haue a feeling of that renewing power, ſignified in baptiſme: namely, the power of Chriſts death mortifying ſinne, and the vertue of his reſurrection, in the renouation of the Spirit.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Of the Lords Supper.

THe Lords Supper is a Sacrament, wherewith in the ſignes of bread and wine, ſuch as are engraffed into Chriſt, are in him dayly, in a ſpirituall manner, nouriſhed to eternall life. 1. Cor. 11. 23. 24. 25. Rom. 6. 5.

The proportion of the partes of the Lords Supper, is on this wiſe:

The Elements of bread and wine, are ſignes and ſeales of the body and blood of Chriſt.

The action of the Miniſter, is a note of Gods action.

The Miniſters action is foure-fold.

The firſt is, his taking the bread & wine into his owne hands: this doth ſeale the action of God the father, by which he from all eternitie, did ſeparate and elect his Son, to performe the dutie of a Mediatour betwixt God and man. Ioh. 6. 27. For him hath the Father ſealed.

The ſecond is, his bleſſing of it, whereby he, by the recitall of the promiſes, and praiers conceited to that ende, doth actually ſeparate the bread and wine receiued from their common vnto an holy vſe. This doth ſeale that action of God, by which he did in the fulneſſe of time, ſend Chriſt to performe the office of a Mediatour, vnto the which he was fore-ordained.

The third is, the breaking of the bread, and powring out of the wine: this doth ſeale the paſſiõ of Chriſt, by which he, verily vpon the croſſe was, both in ſoule and bodie, bruiſed for our tranſgreſſions.

The fourth is, his diſtributing of the bread and wine into the hands of the communicants. This ſealeth the action of God, offering Chriſt vnto all, yea, to the hypocrites; but giuing him indeede vnto the faithful, for the daily encreaſe of their faith, and repentance.

The action of the receiuer, is double.

The firſt is, his taking the bread & wine in his hand. This ſealeth a ſpirituall action of the receiuer, namely, his apprehenſion of Chriſt by the hand of faith. Ioh. 1. 12.

The ſecond is, his eating of the bread, and drinking of the wine, to the nouriſhment of his body. This ſealeth his application of Chriſt by faith, that the feeling of his true vnion & communion with Chriſt may daily be encreaſed. 1. Cor. 11. 16. The cuppe of bleſſing which we bleſſe, is it not the communion of the blood of Chriſt? the bread which wee breake, is it not the communion of the bodie of Chriſt?

That doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, which teacheth that the bread is turned into the very bodie of Chriſt and the wine into his blood, is a very fable: the reaſons why, are theſe: I. In the firſt inſtitution of the Supper, which was before Chriſt his paſſion, the bodie of Chriſt was then eaten as already crucified. Now, how the bodie of Chriſt crucified ſhould after a corporall manner be eaten, he himſelfe being not as yet crucified, it is impoſſible to imagine. II. The bread after the conſecration, is diſtributed into parts: but the whole bodie of Chriſt is receiued of euery ſingular com-communicant. III. The bread is the communion of Chriſts body: therefore not his very bodie. IV. By this meanes the bodie of Chriſt ſhould not onely be made of the ſubſtance of the virgin Marie, but alſo of the bakers bread. V. Let the bread and wine be kept for a time, and the bread will mould, and the wine turne to vineger after the conſecration, by which we may conclude, that there did remaine the ſubſtance of bread and wine. VI. This opinion quite ouerthroweth the ſacramental vnion, namely, the proportion which is betwixt the ſigne and the thing ſignified.

The like may be ſaid of the Lutherans Conſubſtantiation, whereby they beare men in hand that there is a coexiſtence, by which the body of Chriſt is either in, or with, or about the bread. Againſt this, theſe reaſons may ſuffice: I. The whole action of the Supper is done in remembrance of Chriſt: now what neede that, if the body of Chriſt were really preſent? II. Act. 3. 21. Whom the heauens muſt containe, vntil the time that al things muſt be reſtored. III. This is an eſſentiall property of euery magnitude, and therefore of the body of Chriſt, to be in one place, and circumſcribed or compaſſed of one place. IV. If that Chriſts body were eaten corporally, then ſhould the wicked as well as the faithfull bee partakers of the fleſh of Chriſt: but to eate his fleſh, is to beleeue in him, and to haue eternall life. V. It were very abſurd to thinke, that Chriſt ſitting amongſt his Diſciples, did with his owne handes take his owne body, and giue it wholly to each of his Diſciples.

Such as will in an holy ſort prepare themſelues to celebrate the Lords Supper, muſt haue.

Firſt, a knowledge of God and of mans fall, and of the promiſed reſtauration into the couenant by Chriſt. 1. Cor. 11. 26. So oft ſ'as ye ſhall eate this bread, and drinke of this cuppe, ye ſhew the death of the Lord til he com'. 29. And diſcerne his body.

Secondly, true faith in Chriſt: for euery man receiueth ſo much, as he beleeueth he receiueth. Hebr. 4. 2. For vnto vs was the Goſpell preached, as alſo vnto them: but the word, that they heard, profited not them, becauſe it was not mixed with faith in thoſe that heard it. Furthermore, true repentance of their ſinnes. Eſai. 66. 3. he that killeth a bullocke, as if he ſlue a man: he that ſacrificeth a ſheepe, as if he cut of a dogges necke: he that offreth an oblation, as if he offred ſwines bloud: he that remembreth incenſe, as if he bleſſed an idol: yea, they haue choſen their owne waies, & their ſoule delighteth in their abominations. Pſal. 26. 6, I waſh mine hands in innocencie, O Lord, and ſo come before thine altar.

Thirdly, renued faith and repentance, for daily and new ſinnes cõmitted vpon infirmitie: becauſe euery new ſinne requireth a new act, both of repentance & faith: and this renouation muſt be ſeene by our reconciliation of our ſelues to our neighbours, for iniuries and wrongs. Math. 5. 23. If thou bring thy gift to the alter, & there remembreſt thy brother hath ought againſt thee. 24. Leaue thy gift before the altar, and goe, firſt be reconciled to thy brother, then come and offer thy gift. If thou canſt come furniſhed with theſe things, abſtaine not from the Lords table, by reaſon of thy many infirmities.

If beeing thus prepared, thou feeleſt that thou haſt a corrupt and rebellious heart, know this: that then thou art wel diſpoſed to the Lords table, when thou art liuely touched with a ſenſe of thy crooked diſpoſition. Luk. 4. 18. The ſpirit of the Lord is vpon mee, becauſe hee hath annointed me, that I ſhould preach the Goſpell to the poore: he hath ſent me, that I ſhould heale the broken hearted, that I ſhould preach deliuerance to the captiues, and recouering of ſight to the blind, that I ſhould ſet at libertie them that are bruiſed. Math. 15. 24. Hee anſwered and ſaid, I am not ſent, but to the loſt ſheepe of the houſe of Iſrael. The Lords Supper is a medicine to the diſeaſed and languiſhing ſoule: and therfore men muſt as well ſeeke to purifie and heale their hearts in it, as to bring pure and ſound hearts vnto it.

If thou feele in thy ſelfe ſome great defect & want of faith, pray vnto God earneſtly, that he wil vouchſafe to increaſe it. Mark. 9. 24. The father of the child crying with teares, ſaid, Lord, I beleeue, helpe mine vnbeleefe.

If thou canſt not doe this thy ſelfe, vſe the aide of the faithful, which may by their faith carrie thee, as men did the ſicke of the palſie vpon their ſhoulders & laid him before Chriſt. Mark. 2. 3.

If thou come not furniſhed on this maner to the Lords table, thou ſhalt be adiudged guiltie of the body & blood of Chriſt: as he is guiltie of high treaſon, who doth coũterfeit or clip the Princes coine. 1. Cor. 11. 27. He that eateth this bread, & drinketh this cuppe vnworthily, ſhall bee guiltie of the bodie and blood of Chriſt.

But

But ſuch as feele not themſelues penitent, they neither can come to the Lords table without repentance, leaſt they eate and drinke their owne damnation, neither muſt they deferre repentance, by which they may come, leaſt they procure to thẽſelues finall deſtruction.

CHAP. XXXV.

Of the degrees of executing Gods decree of Election.

WE haue hitherto declared the outward meanes, wherby Gods decree is executed. Now follow the degrees of executing the ſame.

The degrees are in number two. The loue of God, and the declaration of his loue. Eph.1.6. *To the praiſe of the glorie of his grace, wherewith he hath made vs accepted in his blood.*9. And hath opened vnto vs the myſterie of his will, according to his good pleaſure, which he hath purpoſed in him.

Gods loue is that, whereby God doth freely loue all ſuch as are choſen in Chriſt Ieſus, though in themſelues altogether corrupt.1.Ioh.4.19. Wee loued him becauſe hee loued vs firſt. Rom.5.8. *God ſetteth out his loue towards vs, ſeeing that, while we were yet ſinners, Chriſt died for vs.*10. For if when we were enemies, wee were reconciled to God by the death of his ſonne, much more we being reconciled ſhall be ſaued by his life.

The declaration of Gods loue is twofold. The firſt, towards infants elected to ſaluation: the ſecond, towards men of riper yeares.

The declaration of Gods loue towards Infants, is on this manner.

Infants alreadie elected, albeit they in the wombe of their mother before they were borne, or preſently after, depart this life, they, I ſay, being after a ſecret and vnſpeakable manner by Gods ſpirit engrafted into Chriſt obtaine eternall ſaluation. 1.Cor.12.13. By one ſpirit we are all baptized into one bodie, whether Iewes, or Grecians, bond, or free, and haue beene all made to drinke into one ſpirit. Luk.1.35. The Angell anſwered, and ſaid vnto her, The holy Ghoſt ſhall come vpon thee, and the power of the moſt High ſhall ouerſhadow thee: therfore alſo that holy thing which ſhall be borne of thee, ſhall be called the ſonne of God. 41. And it came to paſſe, as Elizabeth heard the ſalutation of Marie, the babe ſprang in her bellie, and Elizabeth was filled with the holy Ghoſt. 64. And his mouth was opened immediatly, and his tongue looſed, and he ſpake and praiſed God. 80. And the child grew, and waxed ſtrong in ſpirit. Ier. 1. 5. Before I formed thee in the wombe, I knew thee, and before thou cameſt out of the wombe, I ſanctified thee.

I call the manner of Infants ſaluation ſecret and vnſpeakable, becauſe I. they want actuall faith to receiue Chriſt: for actuall faith neceſſarily preſuppoſeth a knowledge of Gods free promiſe, the which he that beleeueth, doth applie vnto himſelfe: but this, infants cannot any waies poſſibly performe. And ſurely if infants ſhould haue faith actually, they generally either looſe it when they come to mens eſtate, or at leaſt ſhew no ſignes therof, both which they could not doe, if before they had receiued actuall faith. Nay we ſee that in thoſe of riper yeares, there are not ſo much as the ſhadowes or ſparks of faith to be ſeene, before they be called by the preaching of the Goſpel. II. Infants are ſaid to be regenerated onely in regard of their internall qualities and inclinations, not in regard of any motions, or actions of the minde, will, or affections. And therefore they want thoſe terrours of conſcience, which come before repentance, as occaſions thereof, in ſuch as are of riper yeares of diſcretion. Againe, they are not troubled with that conflict & combate betwixt the fleſh and the ſpirit, wherewith thoſe faithful ones that are of more yeares are maruelouſly exerciſed.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Concerning the firſt degree of the declaration of Gods loue.

THe declaration of Gods loue, in thoſe of yeares of diſcretion, hath eſpecially foure degrees. Rom.8.30. 1.Cor.1.30.

The firſt degree is an effectuall calling, whereby a ſinner beeing ſeuered from the world, is entertained into Gods familie. Eph.2.17. *And came, and preached peace vnto you, which were a farre off, and to them that were neere.*19. Now therefore yee are no more ſtrangers and forrainers, but citizens with the Saints, and of the houſhold of God.

Of this there be two parts. The firſt is Election, which is a ſeparation of a ſinner from the curſed eſtate of all mankind. Ioh. 15.19. If ye were of the world, the world would loue his owne: but becauſe yee are not of the world, but I haue choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

The ſecond is, the reciprocall donation or free gift of God the Father, whereby he beſtoweth the ſinfull man to bee ſaued vpon Chriſt and Chriſt againe actually & moſt effectually vpon that ſinfull man, ſo that he may boldly ſay this thing, namely Chriſt, both God and man, is mine, and I for my benefit and vſe enioy the ſame. The like we ſee in wedlocke: The husbād ſaith, this woman is my wife, whome her parents haue giuen vnto me, ſo that, ſhee beeing fully mine, I may both haue her, and gouerne her. Againe, the woman may ſay, this man is mine husband, who hath beſtowed himſelfe vpon me, & doth cheriſh me as his wife. Rom. 8. 32. Hee ſpared not his owne ſonne, but gaue him for vs. Eſai. 9. 6. Vnto vs a childe is borne, and vnto vs a ſonne is giuen. Ioh. 17. 2. Thou haſt giuen him power vpon all fleſh, that hee ſhould giue eternall life to all them whome thou haſt giuen him. 6. I haue declared thy name to the men which thou gaueſt me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gaueſt them me, and they kept thy word. 7. Nowe they knowe that all things, whatſoeuer thou haſt giuen me, are of thee. Ioh. 10. 29. My father, which gaue thē me, is greater then all, and none is able to take them out of my fathers hands.

Hence commeth that admirable vnion, or coniunction, which is the ingraffing of ſuch as are to bee ſaued, into Chriſt, and their growing vp togither with him: ſo that after a peculiar maner, Chriſt is māde the head, and euery repentant ſinner, a member of his myſticall bodie. Ioh. 17. 20. I pray not for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall beleeue in me, through their word. 21. That they all may be one, as thou, O father, art in mee, and I in thee: euen that they may be alſo one in vs. Eph. 2. 20. We are members of his bodie, of his fleſh, and of his bones. Ioh. 15. 1. I am that true vine, and my father is the husbandman. 2. Euery branch that beareth not fruit in me, he taketh away: and euery one that beareth fruit, hee purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. Eph. 2. 20. Built vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, whoſe corner ſtone is Ieſus Chriſt. 21. In whome all the building coupled togither, groweth vnto an holy temple in the Lord. 22. In whome ye are alſo built togither, to bee the habitation of God by the ſpirit.

This, albeit it be a moſt neere and reall vnion, yet we muſt not thinke, that it is by touching, mixture, or, as it were, by ſoldring of one ſoule with another neither by a bare agreement of the ſoules among thēſelues: but by the communion and operation of the ſame ſpirit, which beeing by nature infinite, is of ſufficient abilitie to conioyne thoſe things togither, which are of themſelues farre diſtant from each other: the like wee ſee in the ſoule of man, which conioyneth the head with the foote. Eph. 2. 22. 2. Pet. 1. 4. Whereby moſt great and pretious promiſes are giuen vnto vs, that by them yee ſhould bee partakers of the Godly nature, in that ye flie the corruption, which is in the world through luſt. Phil. 2. 1. If there be any conſolatiō in Chriſt, if any comfort of loue, if any fellowſhip of the ſpirit, &c.

The things vnited. In this vnion not our ſoule alone is vnited with Chriſts ſoule, or our fleſh with his fleſh: but the whole perſon of euery faithful man, is verily conioyned with the whole perſon of our Sauiour Chriſt God and man.

The manner of their vnion is this. A faithfull man firſt of all and immediatly is vnited to the fleſh, or humane nature of Chriſt, and afterward by reaſon of the humanitie, to the Word it ſelfe, or diuine nature. For ſaluation and life dependeth on that fulneſſe of the godhead which is in Chriſt, yet it is not communicated vnto vs, but in the fleſh, and by the fleſh of Chriſt. Ioh. 6. 53. Except ye eate the fleſh, and drinke the blood of the Sonne of man, yee haue no life in you. 56. Hee that eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.

The bond of this vnion. This vnion is made by the ſpirit of God applying Chriſt vnto vs: and on our parts by faith receiuing Chriſt Ieſus offered vnto vs. And for this cauſe is it tearmed a ſpirituall vnion.

Chriſt, becauſe hee is the head of the faithfull, is to bee conſidered as a publike man ſuſtaining the perſon of all the elect. Hence is it that the faithfull are ſaide to be crucified with Chriſt, and with him to die, & to be buried Rom. 6. 4, 5, 6. to be quickned. Eph. 2. 5. to be raiſed vp and placed in heauen. v. 6. Col. 3. 1. the which is not onely in regard of the hope of the faithful, but becauſe they are accepted of God certenly to haue done all theſe things in Chriſt: euen as in Adams firſt ſinne all his poſteritie afterward was tainted of ſinne.

A member of Chriſt is diuerſly diſtinguiſhed: and is ſo either before men, or God.

Before men they are the members of Chriſt, who outwardly profeſſing the faith, are charitably reputed by the church as true members. But ſuch deceiuing at length, both themſelues and the Church, may be reprobates: and therefore in Gods

preſence they are no more true members, the are the noxious humours in mans bodie, or a woodden legge or other ioynt cunningly faſtened to an other part of the bodie.

Againe, members before God, they are ſuch, as either are decreed to be ſo, or actually are ſo alreadie.

Such as are decreed to bee ſo, are they, who beeing elect from all eternitie, are either as yet not borne, or not called. Ioh. 10 16. Other ſheepe haue I, which are not of this fold: them alſo muſt I bring.

Actuall members of Chriſt, are either liuing or dying members.

An actuall liuing member of Chriſt is, euery one elected, which being engraffed by faith, and the ſpirit into Chriſt, doth feele and ſhew forth the power of Chriſt in him.

An actuall dying or decaying member is, euery one truely engraffed into Chriſt, and yet hath no feeling of the power and efficacie of the quickning ſpirit in him. He is like vnto a benummed legge without ſenſe, which indeede is a part of mans bodie, and yet receiueth no nouriſhment: ſuch are thoſe faithful ones, who for a time doe faint and are ouercome vnder the heauie burthen of tentations, and their ſinnes: ſuch are alſo thoſe excommunicate perſons, who in regard of their engraffing are true members, howſoeuer in regard of the externall communion with the Church, & efficacie of the ſpirit, they are not members, till ſuch time as they beeing touched with repentance, doe begin as it were, to liue againe.

God executeth this effectuall calling by certaine meanes.

The firſt, is the ſauing hearing of the word of [a] God, which is, whē the ſaid word outwardly is preached, to ſuch an one as is both dead in his ſinnes, and doth not ſo much as dreame of his ſaluation. [b] And firſt of all, the Law ſhewing a man his ſin, and the puniſhment thereof, which is eternall death: afterward the Goſpel, ſhewing ſaluation by Chriſt Ieſus, to ſuch as beleeue. [c] And inwardly the eyes of the mind are enlightened, [d] the heart & eares opened that he may ſee, heare, and vnderſtand the preaching of the word of God. [a] Ezech. 16. 6. When I paſſed by thee, I ſawe thee polluted in thin owne blood, and ſaid vnto thee, when thou waſt in thy blood, thou ſhalt liue. Eſai. 55. 1. Ho, euery one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters, and ye that haue no ſilner, come, buy, and eate: come, I ſay, and buie wine and milke without ſiluer, & without money. Ioh. 1. 12. As many as receiued him, to them he gaue this priuiledge, that they ſhould become the ſonnes of God: namely, to them which beleeued in his name. [b] Rom. 7. 7. I knew not ſinne, but by the law: for I had not known luſt, except the law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not luſt. [c] 1. Ioh. 2. 27. But the annointing, which ye receiued of him, dwelleth in you: and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the ſame annointing teacheth you of al things, and is true, and is not lying, and as it is taught you, ye ſhal abide in him. [d] Act. 16. 14. A certaine woman named Lydia, a ſeller of purple, of the citie of the Thyatirians, a worſhipper of God, heard vs, whoſe heart God opened, that ſhe attended to the things that Paul ſpake. Pſal. 40. 6. Thou art not delighted with ſacrifice and burnt offerings, but mine eares haſt thou opened. Ioh. 6. 44. No man can come vnto me, except the father which hath ſent me, draw him: and I will raiſe him vp at the laſt day. Eſai. 54. 6. The Lord hath called thee, beeing as a woman forſaken, and as a yong wife, when thou waſt refuſed ſaith the Lord.

The ſecond, is the mollifying of the heart, the which muſt be bruiſed in pieces, that it may bee fit to receiue Gods ſauing grace offered vnto it. Ezech. 11. 19. I will giue them one heart, and I wil put a new ſpirit within their bowels: and I will take the ſtonie heart out of their bodies, and will giue them an heart of fleſh.

There are for the bruiſing of this ſtonie heart, foure principall hammers. The firſt, is the knowledge of the Law of God. The ſecond, is the knowledge of ſinne, both originall, and actuall, and what puniſhment is due vnto them. The third, is compunction, or pricking of the heart, namely, a ſenſe and feeling of the wrath of God for the ſame ſinnes. The fourth, is an holy deſperation of a mans owne power, in the obtaining of eternall life. Act. 2. 37, When they heard theſe things, they were pricked in heart, and ſaid vnto Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles, Men and brethren, what ſhall we doe? 38. Peter ſaid vnto them, Repent, and bee baptized euery one of you in the name of Ieſus into the remiſſion of ſinnes, and ye ſhall receiue the gift of the holy Ghoſt. Luk. 15. 17. Then he came to himſelfe, and ſaid, How many hired ſeruāts at my fathers haue bread ynough, and I die for hunger? 18. I will riſe and goe to my father, and ſay vnto him, Father, I haue ſinned againſt heauen, and before thee, 19. And am no more worthie to bee called thy ſonne: make me as one of thy hyred ſeruants, &c. Math. 15.24. He anſwered, and ſaid. I am not ſent, but to the loſt ſheepe of Iſraell.

The third, is faith, which is a miraculous and ſupernaturall faculty of the heart, apprehending Chriſt Ieſus beeing applyed by the operation of the holy Ghoſt, and receiuing him to it ſelfe. Iohn. 1.12. 6.35. Ieſus ſaid vnto them, I am the bread of life, he that commeth vnto me ſhall neuer hunger: & hee that beleeueth in me, ſhall neuer thirſt. Rom. 9.30 What ſhal we ſay then? the Gentiles which followed not righteouſues, haue attained vnto righteouſnes, euen the righteouſnes which is of faith

Chriſt is receiued, when euery ſeuerall perſon doth particularly apply vnto himſelfe, Chriſt with his merits, by an inward perſwaſion of the heart, which commeth none other way, but by the effectuall certificate by the holy Ghoſt concerning the mercy of God in Chriſt Ieſus. 1. Cor. 2. 12. Wee haue receiued, not the ſpirit of the world, but the ſpirit which is of God, that we might know the thinges that are giuen to vs of God. Ezech. 12.10. I wil poure the ſpirrit of grace vpon the houſe of Dauid. and vpon the inhabitants of Ieruſalem: and they ſhall looke vnto me, whome they haue wounded. Rom. 8. 16. His ſpirit beareth witneſſe to our ſpirit, that we are the ſonnes of God. Eph. 1. 13. In whome alſo ye haue truſt, after that he heard the word of truth, euen the Goſpell of your ſaluation, wherein alſo after that ye beleeued, ye were ſealed with the holy ſpirit of promiſe. 2. Cor. 1.22.

In the worke of faith, there are foure degrees, or motions of the heart, linked & vnited togither, and are worthy the conſideration of euery Chriſtian.

The firſt, is knowledge of the Goſpell, by the illumination of Gods ſpirit. Eſa, 53 11. By his knowledge ſhall my ſeruant iuſtifie many. Ioh. 7.3. This is life eternall, that they know thee to be the onely very God, and whom thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt.

To this in ſuch as are truely humbled, is annexed a ſerious meditation of the promiſes in the Goſpell, ſtred vp by the ſenſible feeling of their owne beggery.

And after the foreſaid knowledge in all ſuch as are inlightened, commeth a generall faith, whereby they ſubſcribe to the trueth of the Goſpell. Heb. 4.2. Vnto vs was the Goſpel preached, as alſo vnto them: but the word that they heard profited not them, becauſe it was not mixed with faith in thoſe that heard it. 1. Tim. 1.19. Hauing faith and a good conſcience, which ſome haue put away, & as cõcerning the faith, haue made ſhipwracke. 1. Tim. 2.4. Who will that all men ſhould bee ſaued, and come vnto the knowledge of the truth.

This knowledge if it be more full and perfect, is called in Greeke πληροφορια τῆς συνεσεως, that is the full aſſurance of vnderſtanding. Col. 2.2. That their heartes might be comforted, and they knit togither in loue, and in all riches, of the full aſſurance of vnderſtanding, to know the myſterie of God, euen the father, and of Chriſt. Rom. 14.14. I know, and am perſwaded through the Lord Ieſus, that there is nothing vncleane of it ſelfe. Luk. 1.1, For as much as many haue taken in hand to ſet forth the ſtory of thoſe things, whereof we are fully perſwaded. 1. Theſſ. 1.5. Our Goſpel was vnto you, not in word onely, but alſo in power, and in the holy Ghoſt, and in much aſſurance.

The ſecond, is hope of pardon, whereby a ſinner, albeit he yet feeleth not that his ſins are certenly pardoned, yet he beleeueth that they are pardonable. Luk. 15. 18. I will goe vnto my father, and ſay, Father, I haue ſinned againſt heauen & againſt thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy ſonne, make me as one of thy hired ſeruants.

The third, is an hungring and thirſting after that grace which is offered to him in Chriſt Ieſus, as a man hungreth and thirſteth after meata and drinke. Ioh. 6. 35. & 7.37. Reu. 21.6. And he ſaid vnto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ende, I will giue to him that is a thirſt of the well of the water of life freely. Math. 5. 6. Bleſſed are they which hunger and thirſt after righteouſnes, for they ſhall be ſatisfied.

The fourth, is the approching to the throne of Grace, that there flying from the terrour of the Lawe, he may take holde of Chriſt and finde fauour with God. Heb. 4. 16. Let vs therefore goe boldly to the throne of grace, that we may receiue mercy, and find grace to helpe in time of neede.

This approching hath two parts. The firſt, is an humble confeſſion of our ſinnes before God particularly, if they be known ſinnes; and generally, if vnknown: this done, the Lord forthwith remitteth al our ſinnes. Pſal. 32.5. I thought, I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe my wickednes vnto the Lord, and thou forgaueſt the puniſhment of my ſinne. Selah. 2. Sam. 12.13. Dauid ſaid to Nathan I haue ſinned againſt the Lord: wherefore Nathan ſaid to Dauid, The Lord hath taken away away thy ſinne, thou ſhalt not die. Luk. 15.19.

The ſecond, is the craving pardon of ſome ſinnes, with vnſpeakable ſighs, & in perſeuerance. Luk. 15.21. Act. 8.22. Repent of this wickednes, and pray God, that if it be poſſible, the thought of thine heart may be forgiuen thee. Rom. 8.26. The ſpirit helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what to pray as we ought: but the ſpirit it ſelfe maketh requeſt for vs, with ſighs which cannot be expreſſed. Hoſ. 14.2.3. O Iſrael, returne vnto the Lord thy God, for thou haſt fallen by thine iniquitie. Take vnto you words, and turne to the Lord, and ſay to him, Take away all iniquitie, and receiue vs graciouſly.

The fifth ariſing of the former, is an eſpeciall perſwaſion imprinted in the heart by the holy Ghoſt, whereby euery faithful man doth particularly applie vnto himſelfe thoſe promiſes which are made in the Goſpel. Math. 9.2. They brought vnto him a man ſicke of the palſie: and when Ieſus ſawe their faith, he ſaid vnto the ſicke of the palſie, Sonne, be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. Math. 15.28. O woman, great is thy faith, be it vnto thee as thou deſireſt. Gal. 2.20. I liue, yet not I now, but Chriſt liueth in me: and in that I now liue in the fleſh, I liue by the faith of the ſonne of God, who hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me.

This perſwaſion is, and ought to be in euery one, euen before he haue any experience of Gods mercies. Math. 15.22. A woman, a Canaanite, came out of the ſame coaſts, and cryed, ſaying vnto him, Haue mercie once, O Lord, the ſon of Dauid, my daughter is miſerably vexed with a deuill, &c. 23. 24.25.26.27. Ioh. 20.29. Ieſus ſaid vnto him, Thomas, becauſe thou haſt ſeene me, thou beleeueſt: bleſſed are they which haue not ſeene and haue beleeued. Heb. 11.1. Faith is the groũd of things hoped for, & the euidence of things which are not ſeene. In Philoſophie we firſt ſee a thing true by experience, and afterward giue our aſſent vnto it: as in naturall Philoſophie; I am perſwaded that ſuch a water is hot, becauſe when I put mine hand into it, I perceiue by experience an hot qualitie. But in the practiſe of faith it is quite contrarie. For firſt, we muſt conſent to the word of God, reſiſting all doubt and diffidence, and afterward will an experience and feeling of comfort follow. 2. Chron. 20.20. Put your truſt in the Lord your God, and yee ſhall be aſſured: beleeue his Prophets, and ye ſhall proſper. They therefore doe very ill, who are ſtill in a doubt of their ſaluation, becauſe as yet, they feele not in themſelues, eſpeciall motions of Gods ſpirit.

Thus much concerning the way which God vſeth in the begetting of faith. There are beſide this, two notable degrees of faith. The one is the loweſt, and as I may ſpeake, the poſitiue degree: the other is the higheſt, or ſuperlatiue.

The loweſt degree of faith, is called ὀλιγοπιστία, a little or weake faith, like a graine of muſtard ſeede, or ſmoking flaxe, which can neither giue out heat nor flame, but onely ſmoake. Math. 8.25. His Diſciples awaked him, ſaying, Saue, maſter, we periſh 26. And he ſaid vnto them, Why are ye fearefull, O ye of little faith? Math. 7.20. If ye haue faith as much as a graine of muſtard ſeede, ye ſhall ſay vnto the mountaine, Moone, and it ſhall remoone. Eſai. 42.3. The ſmoking flaxe ſhall he not quench.

Faith is then ſaid to be weake and feeble, when as, of thoſe fiue degrees aboue mentioned, either the firſt, which is knowledge, or the fift, which is application of the promiſes is very feeble, the reſt remaining ſtrong. Rom. 14.2. One beleeueth that he may eate all things, and an other which is weake, eateth hearbs. 3. Let not him that eateth, deſpiſe him that eateth not: and let not him which eateth not, iudge him which eateth: for God hath receiued him. The Apoſtles although they beleeued, that Chriſt was the ſonne of the liuing God; yet they were ignorant of his death and reſurrection. Math. 16.16. Ioh. 6.69. Math. 17.22. Luk. 9.49. They vnderſtood not that word: for it was hid from them, ſo that they could not perceiue it. Act. 1.6 They asked him, ſaying, Lord, wilt thou reſtore at this time the kingdome to Iſrael?

For the better knowledge of this kinde of faith, we muſt obſerue theſe two rules.

1. A ſerious deſire to beleeue, and an indeauour to obtaine Gods fauour, is the head of faith. Math. 5.6. Bleſſed are they which hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe: for they ſhall be ſatisfied. Reu. 21.6. I will giue to him that is a thirſt, of the well of the water of life freely. Pſal. 145.19. He will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him: he alſo will heare their crie, and will ſaue them. For in ſuch as begin to beleeue and to be renued, the minde will lye not idle, but beeing mooued by the holy Ghoſt, ſtriue with doubtfulneſſe and diſtruſt, and indeauour to put their aſſent to the ſweete promiſes made in the Goſpel, and firmely to applie the ſame to themſelues, and in the ſenſe of their weakeneſſe, deſire aſſiſtance from aboue, and thus faith is beſtowed.

II. God doth not deſpiſe the leaſt ſparke of faith, if ſo be, it, by little and little, doe encreaſe, & men vſe the meanes to encreaſe the ſame. Luk. 17. 5. The Apoſtles ſaid vnto the Lord, Encreaſe our faith. 6. And the Lord ſaid, If ye had faith as much as a graine of muſtard ſeede, and ſhould ſay vnto this mulberie tree, Plucke thy ſelfe vp by the rootes, and plant thy ſelfe in the ſea, it ſhould euen obey you. Man muſt therefore ſtirre vp his faith by meditation of Gods word, ſerious prayers, and other exerciſes belonging vnto faith.

The higheſt degree of faith, is πληροφορία, a full aſſurance, which is not only certen and true, but alſo a full perſwaſion of the heart, whereby a Chriſtian much more firmely taking hold on Chriſt Ieſus, maketh full and reſolute account that God loueth him, and that he wil giue to him by name, Chriſt, and all his graces pertaining to eternal life. Rom. 4. 20. Neither did he doubt of the promiſe of God through vnbeleefe, but was ſtrengthened in the faith, and gaue glorie to God. 21. Beeing fully aſſured that hee, which had promiſed, was able alſo to doe it. Rom. 8. 38. I am perſwaded, that neither life, nor death. &c. can ſeparate vs from the loue of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus. 1. Sā 17. 36. Thy ſeruant ſlue both the lyon and the beare: therfore this vncircumciſed Philiſtim ſhall be as one of them, ſeeing he hath rayled on the hoſt of the liuing God. Pſal. 33. 6. Doubtleſſe, kindneſſe and mercie ſhall follow me all the daies of my life. Conferred with v. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Man commeth to this high degree, after the ſenſe, obſeruation, & long experience of Gods fauour and loue.

Queſt. Whether is iuſtifying faith commanded in the law?

Anſwer. It is commanded in the law of faith, namely, the Goſpell, but not in the law of workes, that is, in the morall law. Rom. 3. 27. The reaſons are theſe: I. That which the law reuealeth not, that it commandeth not: but the law is ſo farre from reuealing iuſtifying faith, that it neuer knew it. II. Adam had fully before his fall written in his heart the morall law, yet had he not iuſtifying faith, which apprehendeth Chriſt.

Obiect. I. Incredulitie is condemned by the law.

Anſwer. That incredulitie which is toward God, is condemned in the lawe; but that incredulitie which is againſt the Meſſiah Chriſt Ieſus, is condemned by the Goſpel. For as by the Goſpell, not by the Law, incredulitie in the Sonne as Mediatour, appeareth to bee a ſinne: ſo likewiſe not by the law is incredulitie in the Meſſiah condemned, but by the Goſpel, which commandeth vs to heare him and to beleeue in him. Matth. 17. 5. 1. Ioh. 3. 23. Thus it is plaine that this ſinne, not to beleeue in Chriſt, is expreſſely and diſtinctly made manifeſt, and condemned by the Goſpel. And albeit the knowledge of ſin be by the law, yet not euery thing which doth reprooue, and declare ſome ſinne, is the law of workes or belongeth thereto.

Obiect. II. But ceremonies belong to the decalogue.

Anſwer. Ceremonies may be as examples referred to the decalogue, but indeede they are appendants to the Goſpel.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Concerning the ſecond degree of the declaration of Gods loue.

THe ſecond degree, is Iuſtification, whereby ſuch as beleeue, are accoũted iuſt before God, through the obedience of Chriſt Ieſus. 2. Cor. 5. 21. Hee hath made him to be ſin for vs, which knewe no ſin: that we ſhould be made the righteouſnes of God in him. 1. Cor. 1. 30. Rom. 5. 19. As by one mãs diſobediẽce many were made ſinners, ſo by the obedience of one (that is, Ieſus Chriſt, v. 17.) ſhal many alſo be made righteous.

Queſt. Whether did Chriſt performe full obediẽce to the law, for vs men alone, or for himſelfe alſo?

Anſw. I. Not for himſelfe, as ſome not rightly would haue him: for the fleſh of Chriſt beeing hypoſtatically vnited to the word, and ſo in it ſelfe fully ſanctified, was euen from the firſt moment of conception, moſt worthie to bee bleſſed with eternall life. Therefore by all that obedience which he performed after his conception, Chriſt, hee merited nothing for himſelfe. II. For vs, namely, for the faithfull, hee fulfilled all the righteouſnes of the law: & hence it is that he is called the end of the law vnto righteouſnes to euery one that beleeueth. Rom. 10.

Here may be obiected: I. Chriſt as hee is man, is bound to performe obedience to the law for himſelfe.

Anſw. Hee is not bound by nature, but

of his owne accord: for he was not a bare man but God and man. And albeit Chriſt did neuer ſuffer nor fulfill the law, but in that fleſh which he tooke vpon him; yet by reaſon of the hypoſtaticall vnion, this his paſſion and obedience hath reſpect vnto the whole perſon, conſidered as God and man, and therefore his obedience was not due on his part, and ſo was without merit to himſelfe: yea, in that the fleſh of Chriſt is vnited to the perſon of the Word, and ſo exalted in dignitie and ſanctitie aboue all Angles, it may ſeeme to be exempted from this naturall obligation of performing the law.

II. If then Chriſt performed the law for vs, we are no more bounden to the obſeruance of the ſame: as we doe not vndergoe eternall puniſhments for our ſinnes, the which Chriſt in his perſon did beare vpon the croſſe.

Anſ. If wee keepe the ſame reſpect of performing obedience to the law, the conſequēce is very true, otherwiſe it is not ſo: for Chriſt performed obedience to the law for vs, as it is the ſatisfaction of the law; but the faithfull they are bounden to obedience, not as it is ſatisfactorie, but as it is a document of faith, and a teſtimonie of their gratitude towards God, or a meanes to edifie their neighbours; euen as Chriſt ſuffering puniſhments for our ſinnes, wee alſo ſuffer puniſhments as they are either trialls, or chaſtiſments vnto vs.

III. The law and iuſtice of God doth not togither exact both, namely obedience, and puniſhment.

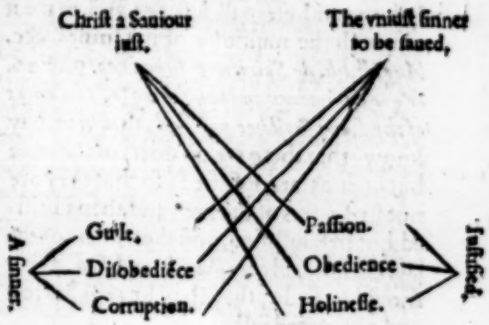
Anſwer. In mans perfect eſtate, the iuſtice of God requireth onely obedience: but in his eſtate corrupted, he requireth both obedience, and puniſhment. Puniſhment, as the law is violated: obedience, that legall iuſtice may be performed. Gal. 3. 10. It is therfore plaine, that not onely Chriſts paſſion, but alſo his legall obedience is our righteouſnes before God.

Iuſtification hath two parts: Remiſſion of ſinnes, and imputation of Chriſts righteouſnes.

Remiſſion of ſinnes is that part of iuſtification, wherby he that beleeueth is freed from the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, by the merits of the paſſion of Chriſt, Coloſſ. 1. 21. 22. You hath he now reconciled in the bodie of his fleſh through death, to make you holy and vnblameable, and without fault in his ſight. 1. Pet. 2. 24. Who, in his owne fleſh, bare our ſinnes in his bodie on the tree, that we beeing deliuered from ſinne, ſhould liue in righteouſnes, by whoſe ſtripes ye are healed.

Imputation of righteouſnes is the other part of iuſtification, whereby ſuch as beleeue, hauing the guilt of their ſinnes couered, are accounted iuſt in the ſight of God, through Chriſts righteouſneſſe. 2. Cor. 5. 21. Pſal 32. 1. Bleſſed is he, whoſe wickednes is forgiuen, and whoſe ſinne is couered. Romans 4. the whole chapter, where the Apoſtle repeateth imputation eleuen times. Phil. 3. 8, 9. I haue counted all things loſſe, and doe iudge them to bee dung, that I might win Chriſt, and might be found in him, that is, not hauing mine owne righteouſneſſe, which is by the lawe, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, euē the righteouſnes which is of God through faith.

The forme of iuſtification, is, as it were, a kind of tranſlation of the beleeuers ſinns vnto Chriſt, and againe Chriſts righteouſnes vnto the beleeuer, by meanes of Gods diuine imputation. As is apparant in this picture following.



This obedience of Chriſt, is called the Righteouſnes of God, and of Chriſt. Of God, I. not becauſe it is in God, but of God: for it taketh all the power and merit it hath from the deitie of the Son: whence it is that Ieremie ſaith, Iehouah our Righteouſnes. II. God doth onely accept of it for vs, becauſe that alone maketh vs boldly to approch vnto Gods throne of grace, that we may haue pardon for our ſinnes, and be receiued to eternall life. It is alſo called the Righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, becauſe beeing out of vs, it is in the humanity of Chriſt as in a ſubiect.

Obiect. I. No man is made iuſt by an other mans iuſtice.

Anſwer. This iuſtice is both an others, and ours alſo. An others, becauſe it is in Chriſt as in a ſubiect: ours, becauſe by meanes of the forenamed vnion, Chriſt with all his benefits is made ours.

Obiect. II. The auncient fathers neuer dreamed of this imputatiue iuſtice, and it may ſeeme too of no greater continuance then fiftie yeares.

Anſw. This is both falſe, and impious to affirme. Auguſt. 3. Tract. vpon Iohn, ſaith, All ſuch as are iuſtified by Chriſt, are iuſt not in themſelues, but in him. Barnard in his ſermon (ad milites templi cap. 11.) Mors in Chriſti morte fugatur, & Chriſti iuſtitia nobis imputatur: that is, Death in Chriſt his death is put to flight, and the iuſtice of Chriſt is imputed vnto vs. And in his 62. ſermō vpon the Canticles: Where is there any reſt (ſaith he) but in the woundes of our Sauiour? I wil further ſing but what? mine own iuſtice? nay, O Lord, I will remember they iuſtice alone: for that is alſo my iuſtice. For thou waſt made of God vnto me iuſtice. But ſhould I feare, whether that one iuſtice would ſuffice two? nay it is not a ſhort cloake that is not able to couer a couple. Thy iuſtice is iuſtice for euermore, and will both couer thee & me: it is largely large and eternall iuſtice: and in me it couereth the multitude of my ſinnes, &c. Auguſt. lib. de Spiritu & litera cap. 9. & 26. We muſt vnderſtand this ſaying ſo. The doers of the Lawe ſhall bee iuſtified, that wee may know, that there are no doers of the lawe but ſuch as are iuſtified; ſo that they are not firſt doers of the law, and then iuſtified, but firſt iuſtified, and then doers of the law. So it is ſaid they ſhall be iuſtified, as if it ſhould be ſaide, they ſhall be reputed iuſt and accounted iuſt.

Iuſtification hath annexed vnto it Adoption, whereby all ſuch as are predeſtinate to be adopted, receiue power, to be actually accounted the ſonnes of God by Chriſt. Eph. 1.5. Who hath predeſtinate vs to be adopted through Ieſus Chriſt, vnto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his wil.

By meanes of adoption, God hath beſtowed many notable priuiledges vpō his children. I. They are the Lords heires apparant. Rom. 8.17. If we be children, wee bee alſo heires, euen the heires of God.

II. They are fellow heires with Chriſt, yea kings. Rom. 8.17. Reu. 1.6. And made vs Kings and Prieſts, euen to God his Father.

III. All their afflictions, yea euen their wants, and offences, are turned to trials or fatherly chaſtiſments, inflicted vpon them for their good. Rom. 8.28. We know that all things worke together for the beſt, vnto them that loue God. 36. It is written, for thy ſake are we killed all the day long: we are counted as ſheepe for the ſlaughter. 37. Neuertheleſſe, in all theſe things, we are more then conquerours thorough him that loued vs. Pſal. 89. 32. I will viſit their tranſgreſſions with the rodde, and their iniquitie with ſtrokes. 33. Yet my louing kindneſſe will I not take from him. 2. Cor. 12.7. There was giuen vnto me a pricke in the fleſh, the meſſenger of Satan to buffet me, becauſe I ſhould not bee exalted out of meaſure. 2. Sam. 7.14. I will bee vnto him a father, and he ſhall be to me a ſonne: and if hee ſinne, I will chaſten him with the rod of men, and with the plagues of the children of men.

IV. They haue dominion ouer all creatures, yet ſo, as that in this life they haue onely right to the things; but after this life alſo in the ſame. Whence it is apparant, that the faithfull alone haue the true vſe of the Lords goods, I. becauſe their perſons are in Chriſt acceptable vnto him, in whome alſo they haue reſtitution made vnto them of thoſe goods which they loſt in Adam, that they may with a good conſcience vſe them. II. They vſe them with thankſgiuing to their endes appointed by God. 1. Cor. 3. 22, 23. Whether it be Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, whether they be things preſent, or things to come, euen all are yours. Heb. 2.7. Thou madeſt him little inferiour to the Angels, thou crowneſt him with glorie and honour, and haſt ſet him aboue the workes of thine hands. 8. Thou haſt put all things in ſubiection vnder his feete.

Laſt of all, they may haue the Angels as miniſtring ſpirits attending vpon them for their good. Heb. 1. 14. Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth to miniſter for their ſakes which ſhall be heires of ſaluation? Pſal. 34.7. The Angel of the Lord pitcheth round about them that feare him, and deliuereth them.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Concerning the third degree of the declaration of Gods loue.

THe third degree, is Sanctification, wherby ſuch as beleeue, being deliuered from the tyrannie of ſinne, are by little and little renued in holines & righteouſnes. 1. Ioh. 3.9. Whoſoeuer is borne of God, ſinneth not: for his ſeede remaineth in God. Rom. 8.1. There is no condemnation to thoſe which are in Chriſt Ieſus, which walke not after the fleſh but after the ſpirit.

Sancti-

Sanctification hath two parts: Mortification, and Viuification.

The mortification of ſinne, is the firſt part of ſanctification, whereby the power of ſinne is abated, & crucified in the faithfull. Rom. 6 2. How ſhall we that are dead to ſinne, liue yet therein: 3. Know ye not that all we which haue bin baptized into Ieſus Chriſt, haue bin baptized into his death? 4. We are buried the with him by baptiſme into his death, that like as Chriſt was raiſed vp from the dead, by the glorie of the father, ſo we alſo ſhould walk in newneſſe of life. Eccles. 5. 6, 7, 11, 12, 13. Gal. 5. 24. They which are Chriſts haue crucified the fleſh, with the affections & luſts thereof.

The meanes that worke mortification, is the death and buriall of Chriſt, from whence, ſin being by it at the firſt nipped in the head, proceedeth ſuch a vertue, as doth both keepe vnder the ſtrength that it can not breake out as it would, & in ma, as it were in a graue, doth cauſe it to die & eke putrifie, Rom. 6. 6. Our old man is crucified with him, that the body of ſinne might be deſtroyed.

The power of Chriſt his death, is a certaine power iſſuing into his humanitie, ſuffering and dying, from his deitie; whereby he did, in the ſame his humanity, both concerning the guilt, and alſo the puniſhment, vanquiſh our ſinne, imputed vnto him, beeing our ſurety: that in like ſort, he in vs his mebers, might by the ſame power aboliſh the corruption of ſinne.

Viuification, is the ſecond part of ſanctification: whereby inherent holines being begunne, is ſtill augmented and enlarged. Firſt we receiue the firſt fruits of the ſpirit, then a continuall encreaſe of them. Eph. 4. 23. Be renewed in the ſpirit of your minde. 24. And put on the newe man which after God is created in righteouſnes, and true holines. Eph. 2. 1. And you, hath he quickned that were dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes. Gal. 2. 20. Thus I liue, yet not I now, but Chriſt in me: and in that I now liue by the fleſh. I liue by the faith of the ſonne of God, who hath loued mee, and giuen himſelfe for me. Rom. 8. 23. We which haue the firſt fruites of the ſpirit, euē we do ſigh in our ſelues, waiting for the adoption, euen the redemption of our bodies. 1. Cor. 15. 45. The firſt man Adam was made a liuing ſoul, and the ſecond man Adam was made a quickning ſpirit.

The efficient cauſe of them both is the holy Ghoſt, who doth by his diuine power conuey himſelfe into the beleeuers hearts and in them, by applying the power of Chriſt his death, and reſurrection, createth holineſſe. Iob. 33. 24. 25. Rom. 8. 9. Now ye are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit, becauſe the ſpirit of God dwelleth in you: but if any man haue not the ſpirit of Chriſt, the ſame is not his. 11. But if the ſpirit of him that raiſed vp Ieſus from the dead dwel in you: he that raiſed vp Chriſt from the dead, ſhall alſo quicken your mortall bodies, becauſe that his ſpirit dwelleth in you.

The preſeruatiue of Viuification is a vertue deriued from Chriſts reſurrection, to thoſe that are quickned, which maketh them to riſe vp to newneſſe of life. Phil. 3. 10. That I may know him, and the vertue of his reſurrection.

The power of Chriſts reſurrection is that, whereby he firſt, did in his owne fleſh as conquerer ouer death and ſinne, begin to liue with God, and to be exalted aboue euery name: and then by it, he, in his members, ſinne beeing dead and buried, doth cauſe in them a ſtudie and purpoſe to liue according to the will of God.

Forthermore, this inherent holines is to be diſtinguiſhed into parts, according to the ſeuerall faculties of the body and ſoule of man. 1. Theſ. 5. 23. The very God of peace ſanctifie you throughout: and I pray God, that your whole ſpirit, ſoule, and bodie may be kept blameleſſe, vnto the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

1. The holines or renuing of the minde, which is the illumination thereof, to the knowledge of the will of God. Coloſſ. 1. 9. We ceaſe not to pray for you, and to deſire that ye might be fully filled with knowledg of his will, in all wiſdome and ſpirituall vnderſtanding. 1. Cor. 12. 8. To one is giuen by the ſpirit, the ſpeech of wiſdome to an other the ſpeech of knowledge, by the ſame ſpirit.

Illumination, is either ſpirituall vnderſtanding, or ſpirituall wiſdome.

Spirituall vnderſtanding, is an illumination of the minde, whereby it acknowledgeth the knowne truth of the word of God.

Spirituall wiſdome, is an illumination of the minde, whereby the ſame truth, is applied to the good ordering of particular both things and actions: as perſon, place and time require.

Theſe two haue the effects, which follow.

1. To diſcerne betweene good and euill. Hebr. 5. 14. Strong meate belongeth to them that are of age, which through long cu- ſtome haue their wittes exerciſed to diſcerne both good and euill. Phil.1.10. That we may diſcerne things that differ one from another.

II. To diſcerne of ſpirits. 1.Ioh.4.1. Deerely beloued, beleeue not euery ſpirit, but trie the ſpirits whether they be of GOD. 1. Theſſ.5.21. Trie all things, and keepe that which is good. Act.17.11. Theſe were more noblemen, then they which were at Theſſalonica, which receiued the word withall readines, and ſearched the ſcriptures daily, whether theſe things were ſo.

III. To meditate vpon the worde and works of God. Pſal.1.2. But his delight is in the law of God, and in that Law doth exerciſe himſelfe day and night. Pſal.119.15. I wil meditate in thy precepts, & conſider thy waies. Pſal.107. the whole pſalme.

IV. To diſcerne and acknowledge mans owne inward blindnes. Pſal.119.33. Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy ſtatutes, and I will keepe it vnto the end. 28. Open mine eies that I may ſee the wonders of thy Law.

II. The ſanctitie of the memory, is an ability to keepe a good thing, when it is offered to the minde, and as neede ſeruеth, to remember it. Pſal.119.11. I haue hid thy promiſe in mine heart, that I might not ſinne againſt thee. Pſal.16.7. I will praiſe the Lord who hath giuen me counſell: my raines alſo teach me in the nights. Luk.2.51. His mother kept all theſe things in her heart.

III. The ſanctitie of conſcience, which is a grace of God, whereby a mans conſcience excuſeth him for all ſinnes, after they are forgiuen him in Chriſt, as alſo of his vpright walking in the whole courſe of his life. 1.Tim.1.19. Hauing faith and a good conſcience, which ſome hauing put away, &c. 1.Cor.4.4. I know nothing by my ſelfe: yet am I not thereby iuſtified. Act.23.1. Paul ſaid, I haue in all good conſcience, ſerued God vntill this day. Act.24.16. I endeauour my ſelfe to haue alway a cleere conſcience toward GOD and toward men. Pſal.26.1,2,3. Iudge me O Lord, for I haue walked in mine innocencie, my truſt hath bin alſo in the Lord: therefore ſhall I not ſlide. Proone me, O Lord, and trie me, examine my reines and mine heart. For thy louing kindnes is before mine eies, therfore haue I walked in the truth.

Hence, in all godly men ariſeth the inward peace of God, and the outward alacrity in the countenance. Phil.4.7. The peace of God which paſſeth all vnderſtanding, ſhal preſerue your harts and mindes in Ieſus Chriſt. Prou.28.1. The wicked flee, when none purſueth: but the righteous are bold as a Lion.

IV. Sanctitie of will, whereby man beginneth to will that which is good, and to refuſe the contrary. Therefore in this eſtate, the wil is partly freed from bondage, partly in bondage to ſinne. Phil.2.13. It is God which worketh in you, both the will & the deede, euen of his owne pleaſure. Rom.7. 18. I know that in me, that is, in my fleſh, dwelleth no good thing: for to will is preſent with me, but I finde no meanes to performe that which is good, &c. v.19,20,21,22.

V. Sanctity of affections, is the right mooning of them. 1.Theſ.5.23. Rom.7.v. 24.

Affections of moſt eſpeciall note, are theſe.

I. Hope, whereby men with ſighings, looke for the accompliſhing of their redemption, Rom.8.23.

This hope: when it is once ſtrong and liuely, hath alſo her πληροφορία, that is, full aſſurance, as faith hath. Hebr.6.11. And we deſire that euery one of you ſhew the ſame diligence, to the full aſſurance of hope vnto the ende. 1.Pet.1.3. Bleſſed be God, euen the Father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, which, according to his aboundant mercie, hath begotten vs againe vnto a liuely hope, by the reſurrection of Ieſus Chriſt from the dead.

II. Feare of offending God, becauſe of his mercie. 1.Pet.1.17. If ye call him father, which without reſpect of perſon, iudgeth according to euery manes worke, paſſe the time of your dwelling here in feare. Pſal.103.4. There is mercie with thee, that thou maiſt bee feared.

III. A baſe account of all worldly things, in reſpect of Chriſt Ieſus. Phil.3.7. But the things that were aduantage to me, I accounted loſſe for Chriſts ſake. 8. Yea doubtleſſe, I thinke al things but loſſe, for the excellent knowledge ſake of Chriſt Ieſus my Lord, for whom I haue counted all things, and doe iudge them to be dung, that I might winne Chriſt.

IV. The loue of God in Chriſt, which is like vnto death, and as a fire that cannot be quenched. Cant.8.6. Loue is ſtrong as death, iealouſie is cruel as the graue, the coles thereof are fire coles, and a vehement flame.

V. A feruent zeale to Gods glorye. Rom.9.3. I would wiſh my ſelfe to be ſeparate from Chriſt, for my brethren, that are my kinſmen, according to the fleſh.

VI. An anguiſh of minde for our owne ſinnes and others alſo. Pſalm.119.v.136. Mine eyes guſh out with teares, becauſe men keepe not thy law. 2.Pet.2.7. And deliuered iuſt iuſt Lot, being vexed with the vncleanly conuerſation of the wicked. 8. For he being righteous, and dwelling among them, in ſeeing, and hearing, vexed his righteous ſoule from day to day, with their vnlawfull deeds.

VII. Exceeding great ioy in the holy Ghoſt. Rom. 14. 17. The kingdome of God is not meate and drinke, but righteouſneſſe, & peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt.

VIII. Sanctifie of body, whereby it is a fit inſtrument for the ſoule to accompliſh that which is good. Rom. 6. 19. As yee haue giuen your members ſeruants to vncleanneſſe, and to iniquitie, to commit iniquitie: ſo nowe giue your members ſeruants vnto righteouſneſſe in holineſſe.

CHAP. XXXIX.

Of Repentance and the fruites thereof.

FRom ſanctification, Repentance is deriued, becauſe no man can earneſtly repent, except he, denying himſelfe, doe hate ſinne, euen from his heart, and imbrace righteouſneſſe. This no man either will, or can performe, but ſuch an one as is in the ſight of God regenerated and iuſtified, & indued with true faith. Therefore albeit in ſuch as are conuerted, repentance doeth firſt manifeſt it ſelfe, yet regarding the order of nature, it followeth both faith and ſanctification. Hence alſo is it euident that this repentance, legall contrition being ſome occaſion, and as it were, a preparation to true conuerſion, is begotten by the preaching of the Goſpell.

Repentance is, when a ſinner turneth to the Lord. Act. 26. 20. He ſhewed firſt vnto them of Damaſcus, and at Ieruſalem, and through all the coaſts of Iudea, and then to the Gentiles, that they ſhould repent and turne to God, and doe workes worthy amendment of life. 1. Ioh. 3. 3. Euery man that hath this hope in him, purgeth himſelfe, as he is pure.

This is performed, when as any one by the inſtinct of the holy Ghoſt, doth purpoſe, will, deſire, and indeauour to relinquiſh his former ſinnes, and to become a new man. Pſal. 119. 112. I haue applyed my heart to fulfill thy ſtatutes alway, euen vnto the ende. 1. Ioh. 3. 3. Act. 11. 23. Who when he was come, and had ſeene the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted all, that with purpoſe of heart they would cleaue vnto the Lord.

The fruit of Repentance is, a Chriſtian conuerſation, wherein are brought foorth fruites worthy amendment of life. Matth. 3. 8. Bring ye therefore forth fruits worthy of repentance.

A chriſtian conuerſatiō, is ſuch a courſe of life, whereby we, following Chriſts example, doe by him, performe newe obedience to God. Matth. 11. 29 Take my yoke on you, and learne of me, that am meeke & lowly in heart: and ye ſhall find reſt vnto your ſoules. 1. Pet. 4. 1. For as much as Chriſt hath ſuffered for vs in the fleſh, arme your ſelues likewiſe with the ſame minde, which is, that he which hath ſuffered in the fleſh, hath ceaſed from ſin. 1. Pet. 2. 21. For hereunto are yee called, for Chriſt alſo ſuffered for vs, leauing vs an enſample that we ſhould follow his ſteps. 1. Pet. 3. 10. 11. If any man long after life, and to ſee good daies, let him refraine his tongue from euill, and his lips that they ſpeake no guile. Let him eſchewe euill and doe good, let him ſeeke peace and follow after it.

There are two parts of new obediēce: the deniall of our ſelues, and the profeſſiō of Chriſt. Matth. 16. 24. If any man will follow me, let him forſake himſelfe, take vp his croſſe and follow me.

The deniall of our ſelues, conſiſteth partly in Chriſtian warfare, partly in the patient bearing of affliction.

CHAP. XL.

Of Chriſtian warfare.

CHriſtian warrefare, is concerning the right way of fighting in the ſpirituall battell.

The parts thereof, are the preparation to battell, and the combate it ſelfe.

To the preparation, wee muſt vſe the complete armour of God. Eph. 6. 13. For this cauſe, take vnto you the whole armour of God, that yee may be able to reſiſt in the euill day, and hauing finiſhed all things ſtand faſt.

The parts hereof, are eſpecially ſixe. I. Trueth. II. Iuſtice. III. Euangelicall obedience. IV. Faith. V. The word of God. VI. Continuall and feruent prayer with watching. Eph. 6. 14. Stand therefore, and your loynes girded about with veritie, and hauing on the breſtplate of righteouſneſſe. 15. And your feete ſhodde with the preparation of the Goſpell of peace. 16. Aboue all, take the ſhield of faith, wherewith yee may quench all the fiery dartes of the wicked. 17. And take the helmet of ſaluation, and the ſword of the ſpirit, which is the word of God. 18. And pray alwaies alwayes with all manner prayer & supplication in the spirit, and watch thereunto with all perseuerance and supplication for all Saints. 1. Pet. 5. 8. Be sober, and watch: for your aduersarie the deuill, as a roaring lyon, walketh about seeking whome he may deuoure.

The combate, is a mutuall conflict of them that fight spiritually.

The warriours, are the tempter, and the Christian souldier. Eph. 6. 12. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, and against the wordly gouernours, the princes of the darkenesse of this world, against spirituall wickednesses, which are in high places.

The Tempter, is the prince, or his helpers. The Prince is Satan and his angels, which are spirituall wickednesses, in high things. His helpers are the flesh and the world.

The conflict of all these, is temptation, whereby man is prouoked to commit such wickednesse, as is hurtfull to the saluation of his soule. 1. Pet. 2. 11. Deerely beloued, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrimes abstaine from fleshly lusts, which fight against the soule.

In the Souldier, two things are to bee considered: his resisting, and his fall.

Resistance is an action, whereby the souldier doth withstand temptation, thorough grace working inwardly in him. 1. Ioh. 2. 14. I write vnto you babes, because yee haue knowne the father: I haue written to you fathers, because yee haue knowne him that is from the beginning: I haue written to you young men, because ye are strong, & the word of God abideth in you, and ye haue ouercome the wicked. 1. Pet 5. 8. Eph. 6. 16. Psal. 91. 13. Thou shalt walke vpon the lyon and aspe, the young Lion and the dragon shalt thou tread vnder feete.

To confirme this, these preseruatiues which follow, are very necessarie.

I. When you are tempted to sinne, doe not onely abstaine from it, but earnestly loue and follow after the contrarie. Ioh. 8. 44.

II. Neuer yeeld or consent to Satans wordes, whether he speake the trueth, accuse falsely, or flatter dissemblingly. Ioh. 8. 44. Ye are of your father the deuill, and the lusts of your father ye will doe: he hath beene a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no trueth in him: when he speaketh a lie, then speaketh he of his owne: for he is a lyer and the father thereof. Mark. 1. 24. And cryed with a loud voyce, & said, what haue I to doe with thee, Iesus, the sonne of the most high God. And Iesus said, Hold thy peace and come out of him. Acts. 16. 17. Shee followed Paul and vs, and cryed, saying, These men are the seruantes of the most high God, which shew vnto vs the way of saluation, &c. Aug. serm. 241.

III. One temptation is to bee looked for after another, and then especially, when our enemie after he hath set his snares, is at rest: for the deuill neuer maketh an ende of his malice. 1. Pet. 5. 8.

The fall is, whereby the souldier thorough infirmitie fainteth, beeing subdued by the power of the enemie. Gal. 6. 1. Brethren, if a man bee fallen by occasion into any fault, ye which are spirituall, restore such an one with the spirit of meekenes, considering thy self, least thou also be tempted.

To this appertaineth the spirituall remedie. A remedie, is a thing hauing aptnes to restore him which is fallen to his former estate. Gal. 6. 1.

And here two things must alwayes bee thought on.

I. If there be a willing minde, euery one is accepted for that grace which he hath, not for that which hee hath not. 2. Cor. 8. 12. For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

II. In all these things whosoeuer will lead a godly life in Christ, the power of God is to bee made perfect through their infirmitie. 2. Cor. 12. 9. And hee said vnto me, My grace is sufficient for thee, for my power is made perfect through weakenesse: very gladly therefore will I reioyce rather in mine infirmities, that the power of God may dwell in me. 10. Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproches, in necessities, in persecutions, in anguish for Christs sake, for when I am weake, then am I strong.

CHAP. XLI.

Of the first assault.

ASsaults are threefold.

The first is, about the Christian mans effectuall calling. The temptation is, the enterprise of the deuill to blindfolde mans minde, and to harden his heart, least the word of GOD should worke in him to saluation. Math. 13. 4. And as he sowed, some fell by the way side, and the foules came and deuoured them vp. 5. And some fell vpon stonie ground, where they had not much earth, and anone they sprung vp, because they had no depth depth of earth. 6. And whē the Sunne roſe vp, they were parched, and for lacke of rooting withered away. 7. And ſome fel among thornes, and the thornes ſprung vp and choked them. 19. Whenſoeuer a man heareth the word of the kingdome, and vnderſtandeth it not, the euill one commeth, and catcheth away that which was ſowne in his heart: and this is hee which hath receiued the ſeede by the way ſide.

A reſiſtance in thoſe that are called, is wrought by the ſpirit of God, that cauſeth men to lend their eares to heare, and doth ingraffe the worde in their hearts, that the immortall ſeede of regeneratiō may ſpring in them. Pſal. 40. 6. Ioh. 6. 44. Act. 16. 14. Iam. 1. 21. Wherefore lay apart all filthineſſe, and ſuperfluitie of malicitiouſneſſe, & receiue with meekenes, the word that is graffed in you, which is able to ſaue your ſoules. 1. Pet. 1. 22. Seeing your ſoules are purified in obeying the trueth through the ſpirit, to loue brotherly, without faining, loue one another with a pure heart fernētly. 1. Ioh. 3. 9. Whoſoeuer is borne of God ſinneth not: for his ſeed remaineth in him, neither can he ſinne, becauſe he is borne of God. A reſiſtance in thoſe that are to be called, is when in a ſincere heart they doe ioyne the word which they haue heard with faith. Luke, 8. 15. But that which fell in good ground, are they which with an honeſt and good heart, heare the worde and keepe it, and bring forth fruite with patience. Heb. 4. 2.

I. Premeditation of the power and vſe of the word, Eccleſ. 4. 17. Take heede to thy feete, when thou entreſt into the houſe of the Lord, and be more nere to heare, then to giue the ſacrifice of fooles: for they knowe not that they do euil. Chap. 5. 1. Be not raſh with thy mouth, nor let thine heart be haſtie to vtter a thing before God: for God is in the heauen, & thou art on the earth, therefore let thy words be fewe.

II. Diligent attention of the mind. Act. 16. 14.

III. An hungring deſire of the heart, Ioh. 7. 37. Now in the laſt and great day of the feaſt, Ieſus ſtood and cried, ſaying, If any man thirſt, let him come to me and drinke.

IV. Integritie of life Pſal. 26. 6.

V. The caſting away of euill affections. Iam. 1. 22. And be yee doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiuing your owne ſoules.

VI. The inward conſent and agreement of the heart with the word preached. Act. 2. 37.

VII. An hiding of the word in the heart, leaſt we ſhould ſinne. Pſal. 119. 11. I haue hid thy word in mine heart, that I might not ſinne againſt thee.

VIII. A trembling at the preſence of God in the aſſemblie of the Church. Iſay, 66. 2. For all theſe things hath mine hand made, and all theſe things haue beene, ſaith the Lord, and to him will I looke, euen to him that is poore and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my words. Act. 10. 33. Then ſent I for thee immediately, and thou haſt well done to come: now therefore are we all here preſent before God, to heare all things that are commanded of God.

The fall is either a coldneſſe in receiuing the word, and a neglect thereof, or els a falling into errours.

The remedie for this, is ſubiection, which muſt be made to the iudgement & cenſure of the brethren and miniſters, Reuelat. 3. 15. I know thy workes, that thou art neither cold not hotte. Gal. 6. 2. 1. Tim. 1. 20. Of whome is Hymeneus & Alexander, whom I haue deliuered vntō Satan, that they might learne not to blaſpheme.

CHAP. XLII.

Of the ſecond aſſault.

THe ſecond aſſault, is concerning faith. The temptation, is an illuſiō which the deuill caſteth into the hearts of godly men: as when he ſaith, Thou are not of the elect: thou art not iuſtified: thou haſt no faith: thou muſt certainely be condemned for thy ſinnes, Math. 4. 3. Then came to him the tempter, and ſaid, If thou be the ſonne of God, commaund that theſe ſtones be made bread

Helpes which the deuill abuſeth for the ſtrengthening of ſuch illuſions, are theſe.

I. Aduerſitie: as dangers, loſſes, perſecutions, iealouſie, grieuous offences, &c. Pſal. 73. 12. Loe, theſe are the wicked, yet proſper they alwaie, and increaſe in riches. 13. Certainly, I haue clenſed mine heart in vaine, and waſhed mine hands in innocencie Iob. 13, 23. How many are mine iniquities and ſinnes? ſhew me my rebellion and my ſinne. 24. Wherefore hideſt thou thy face, and takeſt me for thine enemie? 25. Wilt thou breake a leafe driuen to and fro, & wilt thou purſue the drie ſtubble?

II. The remembrance of ſinnes paſt. Iob, 13. 26. For thou writeſt bitter things a-

gainſt me, and makeſt me to poſſeſſe the iniquities of my youth.

III. A feeling of death euen already at hand.

The reſiſtance is made by a true faith, applying Chriſt with all his merits particularly, after this manner. I aſſuredly beleeue that I ſhall not be condemned, but that I am elected, and iuſtified in Chriſt, & am out of all doubt, that all my ſinnes are pardoned. Eſay. 53.11. He ſhall ſee the trauaile of his ſoule, and ſhall be ſatiſfied: by his knowledge ſhall my righteous ſeruant iuſtifie many: for he ſhall beare their iniquities. Rom. 8.38. For I am perſwaded, that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor thing to come, 39. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature ſhal be able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God, which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord.

The preſeruatiue, is in temptation, not to beholde faith, but the obiect of faith which is Chriſt. Phil. 3.12. Not as though I had alreadie attained vnto it, either were alreadie perfect: but I follow, if that I may comprehend that, for whoſe ſake alſo I am comprehended of Chriſt Ieſus. 13. One thing I do, I forget that which is behind, and indeauour my ſelfe to that which is before. 14. And follow hard toward the marke, for the price of the high calling of God in Chriſt Ieſus. Ioh. 3.14. And as Moſes lift vp the ſerpent in the wildernes, ſo muſt the ſonne of man be lift vp, that he that beleeueth in him, &c.

The falling, is doubtfulneſſe, and diſtruſt of our election, and of Gods mercie. Pſal. 77.6. I called to remembrance my ſonge in the night: I communed with my owne heart, and my ſpirit ſearched diligently. 7. Will the Lord abſent himſelfe for euer? and wil he ſhew no more fauour? 8. Is his mercy cleane gone for euer? doth his promiſe faile for euermore? So Dauid of himſelfe ſaith, Pſal. 22.1. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me, and art ſo farre from my health, and frō the words of my roaring?

The remedie is double.

Firſt the operation of the holy ſpirit ſtirring vp faith, and increaſing the ſame. Phil. 1.6. I am perſwaded of this ſame thing, that he that hath begunne this good worke in you, will performe it vntil the daie of Ieſus Chriſt. Luk. 17.5. And the Apoſtles ſaid vnto the Lord, Increaſe our faith.

The ſecond is, an holy meditation, which is manifold.

I. That it is the commandement of God that we ſhould beleeue in Chriſt. 1. Ioh. 3. 23. This is then his commandement, that wee beleeue in the name of his ſonne Ieſus Chriſt, and loue one another: as he gaue commaundement.

II. That the Euangelicall promiſes are indefinite, and do exclude no man, vnleſſe peraduenture any man doe exclude himſelfe. Eſay, 55.1. Ho, euery one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters, and yee that haue no ſilver, come, buie, and eate: come, I ſay, buie wine and milke without ſilver and without money. Math. 11.28. Come vnto me, all ye that are wearie and laden, and I will eaſe you. Ioh. 3. 15. That whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh but haue eternall life. Alſo the Sacraments of Baptiſme and the Lords ſupper, doe to euery one ſeuerally apply indefinite promiſes, and therefore are very effectuall to enforce particular aſſurance or plerophorie of forgiueneſſe of ſinnes.

III. That doubtfulnes and deſpaire are moſt grieuous ſinnes.

IV. That contrarie to hope, men muſt vnder hope beleeue with Abraham. Rom. 4.18. Which Abraham aboue hope, beleeued vnder hope, that he ſhould be the father of many nations: according to that which was ſpoken to him, ſo ſhall thy ſeed be.

V. That the mercie of God, and the merit of Chriſts obedience, beeing both God and man are infinite, Eſay. 54.10. For the mountaines ſhall remoue, and the hils ſhall fal downe: but my mercie ſhal not depart from thee, neither ſhall my couenant of peace fall away, ſaith the Lord, that hath compaſſion on thee. Pſal. 103.11. For as high as the heauen is aboue the earth, ſo great is his mercy toward them that feare him. 1. Ioh. 2.1. My babes, theſe things write I vnto you, that ye ſinne not: & if any man ſinne, we haue an aduocate with the father, Ieſus Chriſt, the iuſt. 2. And he is the reconciliation for our ſinnes: and not for ours onely, but alſo for the ſinnes of the whole world. Pſal. 130.7. Let Iſrael waite on the Lord: for with the Lord is mercie, and with him is great redemption.

VI. That God meaſureth the obedience due vnto him, rather by the affection and deſire to obey, then by the act & performance of it. Rom. 8.5. For they that are after the fleſh, ſauour the things of the fleſh, but they that are after the ſpirit, the things of the ſpirit. 7. Becauſe the wiſedome of the fleſh, is enmitie againſt God: for it is not ſubiect to the lawe of God, neither indeed can be. Rom. 7.20. Nowe if I doe that I would not, it is no more I that doe it, but the ſinne that dwelleth in me. 21. I finde then by the lawe, that when I would would doe good, euill is preſent with me. 22. For I delight in the lawe of God, concerning the inner man. Mal. 3. 17. I will ſpare them, as a man ſpareth his ſoone that reuerenceth him.

VII. when one ſinne is forgiuen, all the reſt are remitted alſo, for remiſſion being giuen once, without any preſcription of time, is giuen for euer. Rom. 11. 29. For the gifts and calling of GOD are without repentance. 10. 43. To him alſo giue all the prophets witneſſe, that through his name, all that beleeue in him, ſhall receiue remiſſion of ſinnes.

VIII. That grace and faith are not taken away by fals of infirmitie, but therby are declared and made manifeſt. Rom. 5. 20. Moreouer, the law entred thereupon, that the offence ſhould abound: neuertheleſſe, where ſinne abounded, their grace abounded much more, 2. Cor. 12. 7. And leaſt I ſhould be exalted out of meaſure, &c. there was giuen vnto me a pricke in the fleſh, the meſſenger of Satan to buffet me. 8. For this thing I beſought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me. 9. He ſaid, My grace is ſufficient for thee.

IX. That all the workes of God are by contrarie meanes. 2. Cor. 12. 9. My power is made perfect through weakeneſſe.

CHAP. XLIII.

Of the third aſſault.

THe third Aſſault is concerning Sanctification.

The tentation, is a prouoking to ſinne, according to the diſpoſition of euery man, and as occaſion ſhall offer it ſelfe. 1. Chronicl. 21. 1. And Satan ſtood vp againſt Iſraell, and prouoked Dauid to number Iſraell. Ioh. 13. 2. And when ſupper was done, the deuill had now put into the heart of Iudas Iſcariot, Simons ſonne, to betray him.

In this tentation, the deuill doeth wonderfully diminiſh and extenuate thoſe ſinnes, which men are about to commit, partly by obiecting cloſely the mercy of God, and partly by couering or hiding the puniſhment, which is due for the ſinne.

Then there are helpes to further the deuill in this his tentation.

Firſt, the fleſh which luſteth againſt the ſpirit, ſometimes by begetting euill motions and affections, and ſometimes by ouerwhelming & oppreſſing the good intents and motions, Gal. 5. 17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh: and theſe are contrary one to another, ſo that ye cannot doe the ſame things that ye would. 19. Moreouer the workes of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are adultery, fornication, vncleanneſſe, wantonneſſe. 20. Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, debate, emulations, wrath, contentions, ſeditions, hereſies. 21. Enuie, murthers, drunkennes, gluttonie, and ſuch like, whereof I tell you before, as I alſo haue told you before, that they which doe ſuch things ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God. Iam. 1. 14. But euery man is tempted, when he is drawne away by his owne concupiſcence, and is intiſed.

Secondly, the world, which bringeth men to diſobedience, through pleaſure, profit, honour, and euill examples. Ephe. 2. 3. Among whome wee alſo had our conuerſation in time paſt, in the luſts of our fleſh, in fulfilling the will of the fleſh, and of the minde, and were by nature the children of wrath, as well as others. 1. Iohn. 2. 16. For all that is in the world, as the luſts of the fleſh, and the luſts of the eies, and pride of life, is not of the father, but is of this world.

Reſiſtance is made by the deſire of the ſpirit, which worketh good motions and affections in the faithfull, and drieth forth he euill, Gal. 5. 22. But the fruite of the ſpirit is loue, ioy, peace, long ſuffering, gentleneſſe, goodneſſe, faith, 23. Meekeneſſe, temperancy: againſt ſuch there is no lawe. 24. For they that are Chriſts, haue crucified the fleſh, with the affections and the luſts thereof, 26. Let vs not be deſirous of vaine glory, prouoking one another, enuying one another.

The preſeruatiues are theſe, whereby men are ſtrengthened in reſiſting.

I. To account no ſinne, light or ſmall. Gal. 5. 9. A litle leauen doth leauen the whole lumpe. Rom. 6. 23. For the wages of ſinne is death, but the gift of God is eternall life, thorough Ieſus Chriſt our Lord.

II. To auoide all occaſions of ſinne. To theſe rather agreeth the prouerbe vſed of the plague: longè, tardè, citò: that is, aloofe ſlowly, quickly. 1. Theſſ. 5. 22. Abſtaine from all appearance of euill. Iude, verſe, 23. And other ſaue with feare, pulling them out of the fire, and hate euen the garment ſpotted by the fleſh.

III. To accuſtome thy ſelfe to ſubdue the leſſer ſinnes, that at the laſt, thou maieſt ouercome the greater, Rom. 13. 4.

IV. To

IV. To applie thy ſelfe to thy appointed calling, and alway to be buſily occupied about ſomething in the ſame,

V. To oppoſite the lawe, the iudgemēts of God, the laſt iudgement, the glorious preſence of God, and ſuch like, againſt the rebellion and looſeneſſe of the fleſh. Prou. 28.14. Bleſſed is the man that feareth alway: but he that hardeneth his heart ſhall fall into euill. Gen. 39.9. There is no man greater in this houſe then I: neither hath hee kept any thing from me, but onely thee, becauſe thou art his wife: how then can I doe this great wickednes, and ſo ſinne againſt God?

Here certaine remedies take place.

Againſt vniuſt anger, or priuate deſire of reuenge. Here meditate, I. Iniuries; they happen vnto vs by the Lords appointment, for our good. 2. Sam. 16.10. II. God of his great goodneſſe forgiueth vs farre more ſinns, then it is poſſible for vs to forgiue men. III. It is the dutie of Chriſtian loue to forgiue others. IV. We muſt not deſire to deſtroy them, whom Chriſt hath redemed with his pretious blood. V. Wee our ſelues are in daunger of the wrath of God, if wee ſuffer our wrath to burne againſt our brother. Forgiue (ſaith he) and it ſhall be forgiuen. VI. we knowe not the circumſtances of the facts, what the minde was, and purpoſe of them againſt whome we ſwell.

Bridles, or externall remedies, are thſe: I. In this we ſhall imitate the clemencie of the Lord, who for a very great ſeaſon doth often tollerate the wicked. Learne of me, for I am humble and meeke. II. There muſt be a pauſing & time of delay, betwixt our anger and the execution of the ſame. Athenodorus counſelled Auguſtus that he, beeing angrie, ſhould repeate all the letters of the Alphabet, or A B D before he, againſt another, did either ſpeake or doe any thing. III. To depart out of thoſe places where thoſe are, with whom we are angrie. IV. To auoid contention, both in word in deede. Doe nothing through contention.

Remedies againſt thoſe badde deſires of riches, and honour, I. God doeth euen in famine quicken and reuiue them which feare him. Pſal. 33.18.19. The eie of the Lord is vpon them that feare him, to deliuer thier ſoules from death, and to preſerue them from famine. II. Godlineſſe is great gaine if the mind of man can be therwith content. 1. Tim. 6.6. III. We doe wait and looke for the reſurrection of the bodie, and eternall life: therefore we ſhould not take ſuch carking care for this preſent mortall life. IV. We are ſeruants in our fathers houſe, therefore looke what is conuenient for vs, that will he louingly beſtowe vpon vs. V. The palpable blindnes of an ambitious mind deſireth to be ſet aloft, that hee may haue the greater downe-fall; and he feareth to be humbled, leaſt he ſhould not be exalted. VI. Adam when he would needes be check-mate with God, did bring both himſelfe and his poſterity headlong to deſtruction. VII. He is a very ambitious rob-God, which deſireth to take that commendation to himſelfe, which is appropriate onely to the Lord.

Preſeruatiues againſt the deſires of the fleſh. I. He that will bee Chriſts Diſciple, muſt euery day take vp his croſſe. Luke. 9. 23. II. They which are according to ſpirit, ſauour of ſuch things as are accordiug to the ſpirit. Rom. 8.5. III. We ought to behaue our ſelues as citizens of the kingdom of heauen. Phil. 3.20. IV. Wee are the temple of God. 1. Cor. 3.6. Our members, they are the members of Chriſt. 1. Cor. 6. 15. And we haue dwelling within vs the ſpirit of Chriſt, which we ſhold not grieue. Eph 4.30. Concerning this, looke more in the explication of the ſeauenth commandement.

In this tentation the fall is, when a man beeing preuented, falleth into ſome oftence. Gal. 6.1.

Here Satan doeth wonderfully aggrauate the offence committed, and doth accuſe and terrifie the offendour with the iudgements of God. Math. 27.3. Thē when Iudas which betraied him, ſaw that he was cōdemned, he repented himſelfe, and brought againe the thirty peeces of ſiluer, to the chiefe prieſts and elders, 4 ſaying, I haue ſinned, betraying the innocēt blood: but they ſaid, What is that to vs? ſee thou to it. 5. And when he had caſt downe the ſiluer peeces in the temple, he departed, and went and hanged himſelfe.

The remedie is, a renued repentance, the beginning whereof is ſorrow in regard of God, for the ſame ſinne: the fruits wherof are eſpecially ſeauen. 2. Cor. 7.9. Nowe I reioyce not that ye were ſorrie, but, that ye ſorrowed to repentance: for ye ſorrowed godly, ſo that in nothing ye were hurt by vs. 10. For godly ſorrowe cauſeth repentance vnto ſaluation, not to be repented of: but worldly ſorrowe cauſeth death. 11. For behold, this thing that ye haue beene godly ſorry, what great care hath it wrought in you: yea, what clearing of your ſelues: yea, what indignation: yea, what feare: yea, howe great deſire: yea, what zeale: yea, what puniſhment: in all things yee haue ſhewed your ſelues, that yee are pure in this matter.

I. A deſire of doing well.

II. An Apologie, that is, a confeſſion of the ſinne before God, with a requiring of pardon for the offence. Pſal. 32. 5. Then I acknowledged my ſinne vnto thee, neither hid I mine iniquitie: for I thought, I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe, my wickednesse vnto the Lord, and thou forgaueſt the puniſhment of my ſinne 2. Sam. 12. 13. Then Dauid ſaid vnto Nathan, I haue ſinned againſt the Lord: and Nathan ſaid to Dauid, The Lord alſo hath put away thy ſinne, thou ſhalt not die.

III. Indignation againſt a mans ſelfe, for his offence.

IV. A feare, not ſo much for the puniſhment, as for offending the Lorde, Pſal. 130. 3. If thou ſtraightly markeſt iniquities, O Lord, who ſhall ſtand?

V. A deſire to be fully renued, and to be deliuered from ſinne.

VI. A feruent zeale to loue God, and to imbrace and keepe all his commandements.

VII. Reuenge, whereby the fleſh may be tamed and ſubdued, leaſt at any time afterward, ſuch offences be committed.

CHAP. XLIV.

Of the patient bearing of the croſſe.

THe patient bearing of the croſſe, teacheth how Chriſtians ſhould vndergoe the burden.

The croſſe is a certaine meaſure of afflictions, appointed by God, to euery one of the faithfull, Matth. 16. 24. If any man will follow me, let him forſake himſelfe, take vp his croſſe and follow me Col. 1. 24. Nowe reioyce I in my ſufferings for you, and fulfill the reſt of the afflictions of Chriſt in my fleſh, for his bodies ſake, which is the Church.

We ought to take vp this croſſe willingly, euen with both handes, when it ſhall pleaſe God to lay it vpon vs.

And after we haue taken it vp, we muſt beare it with patience and perſeuerance. Col. 1. 11. Stengthened with all might, through his glorious power, vnto all patience and long ſuffering with ioyfulneſſe. Luk. 21. 19. Poſſeſſe your ſoules with patience.

The preſeruatiues of patience, are: I. Strength by the holy ghoſt. Phil. 4. 13. I am able to doe all things through the help of Chriſt, which ſtrengtheneth me. Phil. 1. 20. It is giuen to you for Chriſt, that not onely ye ſhould beleeue in him, but alſo ſuffer for his ſake. II. An holy meditation, which is manifold.

I. That the afflictions of the faithfull come not by chance, but by the counſell and prouidence of God, which diſpoſeth all things in a moſt excellent ſort Gen. 45. 4, 5. It was God that ſent Ioſeph into Egypt. 2. Sam. 16. 10. The Lorde biddeth Shemei curſe Dauid. Pſal. 119. 71. It was good for me, that I was afflicted, that I might learne thy ſtatutes. Hence it is euident, that afflictions to the godly are inuitable. Act. 14. 21. By many afflictions you muſt enter into the kingdome of God. Math. 7. 14. The gate is ſtrait, and the way narrow that leadeth vnto life, & few there be that finde it. Iohn, 16. 20. In the world ye ſhall haue troubles.

II. That albeit afflictions are grieuous, yet are they good and profitable: For they are helpes, whereby men beeing humbled for their ſinnes before God, obtaine peace, and holineſſe of life, 2. Cor. 1. 9. We receiued ſentence of death in our ſelues, becauſe we ſhould not truſt in our ſelues, but in God, which raiſeth the dead. Eſay. 26. 16. Lorde, in trouble haue they viſited thee, they powred out a prayer, when thy chaſtening was vpon them. Hoſ. 5. 15. I will goe, and returne to my place, till they acknowledge their fault, & ſeeke me: in their affliction they will ſeeke me diligently. Pſal. 78. 34. When he ſlue them they ſought him, and they returned, and they ſought God earely. Ierem. 31. 18. I haue heard Ephraim lamenting thus, Thou haſt corrected me, and I was chaſtiſed as an vntamed calfe: conuert thou me, and I ſhall bee conuerted. Heb. 12. 11. No chaſtiſement for the preſent ſeemeth ioyous, but greiuous: but afterward, it bringeth the quiet fruite of righteouſneſſe vnto them, which are thereby exercised. Pſal. 30. 5. Weeping may abide at euening but ioy commeth in the morning. Iohn, 15. 2. Euery braunch that beareth fruite, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. 1. Pet. 1. 6. Wherein yee reioyce, though nowe for a ſeaſon (if neede require) ye are in heauineſſe through many tentations. 2. Cor. 1. 6. The God of all comforte, which comforteth vs in all our tribulations, that we may bee able to comfort them which are in any affliction, by the comfort wherewith we our ſelues are comforted of God. Rom. 5. 3. We glory in afflictions, knowing that affliction bringeth patience. Heb. 2. 10. He did conſecrate the Prince of their ſaluation through affliction. We permit Chirurgians that they ſhould both bind vs lying diſeaſed in our beddes, and ſeare vs with hotte irons, yea launch and ſearch our members with raſors: and laſtly, we ſend them away vſually with friendly and kind ſpeeches, and often with a golden fee for their thus handling vs. Shall we then ſuffer ſo many things of a Chirurgian to cure a bodily diſeaſe. and will we not giue God leaue to cure by afflictions the moſt feſtered diſeaſes of our ſicke ſoules?

By this alſo may we gather that the afflictions of the godly are ſignes of their adoption. Heb. 12.6. Whome the Lord loueth he chaſteneth, and he ſcourgeth euery ſonne that he receiueth. 7. If ye endure chaſtiſement God offereth himſelfe vnto you, as vnto ſonnes.

And that they are to them, the Kings high way to heauen. Iam. 1.12. Bleſſed is the man that indureth tentation: for when he is tried, hee ſhall receiue the crowne of life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that loue him. 2. Cor. 4.17. For our light affliction which is but for a moment, cauſeth vnto vs a farre more excellent and an eternall weight of glory.

III. That God hath promiſed fauour, mitigation of puniſhment, his preſence, & deliuerance. Phil. 1.29. 1. Cor. 10.13. God is faithfull, who will not ſuffer you to be tempted aboue meaſure, but with tentation wil giue deliuerance. 2. Sam. 7.14. Pſal. 50.15. Call vpon me in the day of trouble, and I will deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. Pſal. 121.4. He that keepeth Iſrael will neither ſlumber nor ſleep. Eſai. 43.2. When thou paſſeſt through the waters, I wil be with thee, and through the floods that they doe not ouerflowe thee: when thou walkeſt through the very fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt, neither ſhall the flame kindle vpon thee: 3. For I am the Lord thy God, the holy one of Iſrael thy Sauiour.

IV. That in all troubles of the faithfull, Chriſt is a companion. 1. Pet. 4.13. Reioyce that ye are partakers of the afflictions of Chriſt 2. Cor. 4.10. Euery where we beare about in our bodie the dying of Chriſt, that the life of Ieſus might alſo be made manifeſt in our bodies, Col. 1.21.

V. That the angels are ready to defend ſuch as feare God, Pſal. 34.8. 2. King. 6.16. Feare not, there are more with vs then againſt vs.

CHAP. XLV.

Of the calling vpon God.

THus much concerning the deniall of our ſelues, nowe followeth the profeſſion of Chriſt. In which we conſider either Chriſt himſelfe, or his members: namely the faithfull, Math. 25.40 Verily I ſay vnto you, in as much as ye did it to one of the leaſt of my brethren, yee did it vnto me.

That profeſſion which directly concerneth Chriſt, is either continuall, or onely in the time of danger.

Continual, is the calling vpon the name of God, and ought euer to bee perfonned of vs, in the name of Chriſt Ieſus our mediatour, 1. Cor. 1.2. To the Church of God which is at Corinthus, to them that are ſanctified in Chriſt Ieſus, in euery place, both their Lord and ours. Act. 9.14. He hath authority from the high Prieſt, to bind all that cal vpon thy name. Col. 3.17. Whatſoeuer ye ſhall do in word or in deed, do it in the name of the Lord Ieſus, giuing thankes to God, and the Father by him.

The calling vpon Gods name, is by prayer or thankſgiuing. Phil. 4.6. In all things let your requeſts be ſhewed vnto God in praier and ſupplication, with giuing of thanks.

Praier hath two parts: Petition, and Aſſent. Marke, 11.24. I ſay vnto you, whatſoeuer ye deſire when ye pray, beleeue that ye ſhal haue it, and it ſhall be done vnto you.

Petition, is the firſt part of praier, whereby we, according to the rule of gods word, aske his helpe, for the obtaining of ſuch neceſſaries as we want, 1. Ioh. 5.14. This is the aſſurance that we haue in him, that if we aske any thing according to his wil, he heareth vs.

In euery petition we muſt expreſſe two things: I. a ſenſe of our wants. II. A deſire of the grace of God to ſupply thoſe wants, 1. Sam. 1.10. Shee was troubled in her minde, and praied vnto the Lord, and wept ſore. Dan. 9.4. And I praied to the Lord my God, and made my confeſſion ſaying, 5. We haue ſinned and haue committed iniquity, &c. 16. O Lord according to thy righteouſneſſe, I beſeech thee, let thine anger and thy wrath be turned from thy citty Hieruſalem, &c. to the 20. verſe. Pſal. 130.1. Out of the deepe I called to thee O Lord. 1. Sam. 1.15. Then Hannah anſwered and ſaid, Nay my Lord, but I am a woman troubled in ſpirit: I haue drunken neither wine nor ſtrong drinke, but haue powred out my ſoule before the Lord, &c. to the 16 verſe. Pſal. 143.6. I ſtretch forth myne handes vnto thee, my ſoule deſireth after thee, as the thirſty land.

Aſſent, is the ſecond part of praier, whereby we beleeue, and profeſſe it before God,

God, that he, in his due time, wil grant vnto vs thoſe our requeſts, which before we haue made vnto his maieſtie. 1. Ioh, 5. 14, 15. This is the aſſurance that we haue in him, that if we aske any thing according to his will, he heareth vs. And if we knowe that he heareth vs, whatſoeuer we aske, we knowe that we haue the petitions that we haue deſired of him. Math. 6. 13. Lead vs not into temptation, but deliuer vs from euil. For thine is the kingdom, thine is the power, and thine is the glory, for euer and euer, Amen.

As for the faithfull, howſoeuer they in their praiers, bewray many infirmities: yet no doubt they haue an notable ſenſe of Gods fauour, eſpecially, when they pray zealouſlie, and often vnto the Lord, Iam. 5. 16. Pray one for another, that yee may be healed: for the prayer of a righteous man auaileth much if it be feruent. Luk. 1. 13. The angel ſaid vnto him, Feare not Zacharias: for thy prayer is heard. Iona. 4. 1. It diſpleaſed Ionah exceedingly, and he was angry. 2. And Ionah prayed vnto the Lord, & ſaid, I pray thee, O Lord, was not this my ſaying, when I was yet in my countrie? therefore I preuented it to flie vnto Tarſhiſh: for I knew that thou art a gratious God, and mercifull, ſlowe to anger, and of great kindneſſe, and repenteſt thee of the euill. Rom. 8. 26. Gen. 19. 18. Lot ſaid vnto thē, Doe not ſo, I pray you, my lords &c. Pſal. 6. 1. O Lord, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chaſtiſe me in thy wrath, &c. verſe, 2, 3, 4, 5. Pſal. 8. 9. Pſal. 20. 5. Pſal. 35. 9. 18. 28. Pſal. 16. 7.

Thankeſgiuing, is a calling vpon Gods name, whereby we with ioy and gladneſſe of heart, doe praiſe God for his benefits either receiued, or promiſed, Pſal. 45. 1. Mine heart will vtter foorth a good matter, I will intreat in my wordes of the king: my tongue is as the pen of a ſwift writer. Eph. 5. 20. Giuing thankes alwayes for all things vnto God euen the Father, in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Pſal. 36. 8, 9. Howe excellent is thy mercie, O God! therefore the children of men truſt vnder the ſhadow of thy wings. They ſhall bee ſatisfied with the fatneſſe of thine houſe, and thou ſhalt giue them drinke out of the riuers of thy pleaſures. Coloſſ. 3. 16.

CHAP. XLVI.

Of Chriſtian Apologie, and Martyrdome.

THe profeſſion of Chriſt in dangers, is either in word, or deed.

Profeſſion in word, is Chriſtian Apologie, or the confeſſion of Chriſt, Rom. 10. 10. With the heart man beleeueth vnto righteouſneſſe: and with the mouth man confeſſeth to ſaluation. Pſal. 22. 23. I will declare thy name vnto my brethren: in the middes of the congregation will I prayſe thee:

Chriſtian Apologie, is the profeſſion of Chriſt in word, when as we are readie with feare and meekeneſſe, to confeſſe the truth of Chriſtian religion, ſo often as neede requireth, and the glory of God is endangered, euen before vnbeleeuers, eſpecially if they be not paſt all hope of repentance. 1. Pet. 3. 15. Sanctifie the Lord God in your hearts, and be readie alwayes to giue an anſwer to euery man that asketh you a reaſon of the hope that is in you. 16. And that with meekeneſſe and reuerence, hauing a good conſcience, that when they ſpeake euill of you as of euill doers, they may bee aſhamed, which blame your good conuerſation in Chriſt. Act. 7. the whole chap. Steuen there maketh an Apologie for himſelfe. Math. 7. 6. Giue not that which is holy to dogges, nor caſt your pearles before ſwine, leaſt they tread them vnder their feete, and turning againe all to rent you.

Profeſſion, which is indeede, is called Martyrdōe. Martyrdome is a part of Chriſtian profeſſion, when as a Chriſtian man doth, for the doctrine of faith, for iuſtice, and for the ſaluation of his brethren, vndergoe the puniſhment of death impoſed vpon him by the aduerſaries of Chriſt Ieſus. Mark. 6. 18, 27, 28. Iohn tolde Herod, It is not lawefull for thee to haue thy brothers wife. And immediately the king ſent the hangman, & gaue him charge that his head ſhould be brought: ſo he went & beheaded him in the priſon. 2. Cor. 12. 15. I will moſt gladly beſtow, and be beſtowed for your ſoules, though the more I loue you the leſſe am I loued.

Notwithſtanding, it is lawefull for Chriſtians to flie in perſecution, if they finde themſelues not ſufficiently reſolued and ſtrengthened by Gods ſpirit to ſtand, Math. 10. 23. When they perſecute you in one cittie, flie into another. Verely I ſay vnto you, ye ſhall not haue finiſhed all the citties of Iſrael, till the ſonne of man come. Ioh. 10. 39. Againe they ſtudied to apprehend him, but hee eſcaped out of their hands. Act. 9. 30. When the brethren knewe it, they brought him to Ceſarea, and ſent him forth to Tarſus. 1. Kin. 18. 23. Was it not told my Lord what I did, when Ieſabell ſlue the Prophets of the Lorde, howe I hidde an hundred men of the Lordes Prophets by fifties in a caue, and feede them with bread and water? Act. 20. 22. Nowe behold, I goe bound in the ſpirit vnto Hieruſa- lem, and know not what things shall come vnto me there.

CHAP. XLVII.

Of Edification, and Almes among the faithfull.

THat profession of Christ, which concerneth his members, namely, the Saints and faithfull ones, is either Edification, or Almes.

Edification, is euery particular dutie towards our brethren, whereby they are furthered either to growe vp in Christ, or else are more surely vnited to him. Rom. 14. 19. Let vs followe those things which concerne peace, and wherewith one may edifie another.

To edification, these things which followe appertaine.

I. To giue good example, Math. 5. 16. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good workes, & glorifie your father which is in heauen. 1. Pet. 2. 12. Haue your conuersation honest among the Gentiles, that they which speake euill of you as of euill doers, may by your good workes which they shall see, glorifie God in the day of visitation.

II. To exhort, Heb. 3. 13. Exhort one another daily, while it is called to day, least any of you be hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne. Rom. 1. 12. That I might be comforted together with you through our mutuall faith, both yours and mine.

III. To comfort, 1. Thess. 5. 14 Comfort the feeble minded, beare with the weake, be patient towards al men. Iam 5. 16. Acknowledge your faults one to another, & pray one for another, that ye may be healed. 20. He that cōuerteth a sinner from going astray out of his way, shall saue a soule from death, and shall hide a multitude of sinnes. 1. Thess. 4. 18. Comfort your selues one another with these wordes.

IV. To admonish. Rom. 15. 14. I my selfe am perswaded of you, brethren, that yee also are full of goodnesse, and filled with all knowledge: and are able to admonish one another. 1. Thess. 5. 14 We desire you, brethren, admonish them that are vnruly.

They shall obserue an holy manner of admonition, who in the spirit of meekenes and as it were, guilty of the like infirmity themselues, doe admonish forthwith all their brethren of such faults, as they certēly knowe by them, and that out of Gods word, Gal. 6. 1. Brethren, if any man by occasion be fallen into any fault, ye, which are spirituall, restore such an one in the spirit of meekenesse, considering thy selfe, least thou also be tempted. Math. 7. 5. Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beame out of thine owne eie, and then shalt thou see to take the mote out of thy brothers eie. 2. Tim. 4. 2. Preach the word: be instant in season and out of season: improue, rebuke, exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine. Math. 18. 15. If thy brother trespasse against thee, goe and tell him his fault betweene thee and him alone: if he heare thee, thou hast wonne thy brother. Rom. 15. 14. 2. Tim. 4. 2. Leuit. 19. 17. Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart, but thou shalt plainely rebuke thy neighbour, and suffer him not to sinne.

Reliefe peculiar to the godly among themselues, is a duty, whereby the rich doe out of their plenty supply the wants of the poore, both according to their ability and sometimes beyond their ability. 2. Cor. 8. 3. To their power (I beare record) yea, beyond their power they were willing, Act. 2. 44. 45. All that beleeued were in one place, and had all things common: and they sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as euery one had neede.

CHAP. XLVIII.

Of the fourth degree, of the declaration of Gods loue: and of the estate of the Elect after this life.

THe fourth degree of the declaration of Gods loue, is Glorification, Rom. 8. 30

Glorificatiō, is the perfect transforming of the Saints into the image of the sonne of God. Phil. 3. 21. Who shall change our vile bodie, that it may be fashioned like vnto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able euen to subdue all things vnto himselfe. 1. Cor. 15. 44. It is sowne a naturall bodie, and is it raised a spiritual bodie: there is a naturall bodie, and there is a spirituall body. 45. And it is also written, The first man Adam was made a liuing soule: the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. 49. And as we haue borne the image of the earthly, so shall we beare the image of the heauenly. Psal. 17. 15. I wil behold thy face in righteousnesse, & when I awake, I shall be satisfied with thine image.

The beginning of Glorification, is in death, but it is not accomplished and made perfect before the last day of iudgement.

The

The death of the elect, is but a ſleepe in Chriſt,[a] whereby the bodie and ſoule is ſeuered. The bodie,[b] that after corruption it may riſe to greater glorie. The ſoule, that it[c] beeing fully ſanctified, may[d] immediately, after departure from the bodie, be tranſported into the kingdome of heauen. [a] 1. Cor. 15.18. If Chriſt bee not raiſed, they which are aſleepe in Chriſt, are periſhed. Act. 7.60. When hee had thus ſpoken he ſlept. [b] 1. Cor. 15.36. O foole, that which thou ſoweſt is not quickened, except it die. [c] Reu 21. 27. There ſhall enter into it none vncleane thing, neither whatſoeuer worketh abomination or lies: but they which are written in the Lambes booke of life. Rom. 7.25. I my ſelfe in my mind ſerue the lawe of God, but in my fleſh the lawe of ſinne. [d] Luke, 23.42. He ſaid to Ieſus, Lord, remember me, when thou commeſt into thy kingdome. 43. Then Ieſus ſaid to him, This day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe. Reu. 14. 13. Then I heard a voice from heauen, ſaying vnto me, Write, Bleſſed are the dead, which hereafter die in the Lord Euen ſo ſaith the ſpirit: for they reſt from their labors, and their workes follow them.

Againſt the feare of death, note theſe preſeruatiues:

I. Death, it freeth the Godly from the tyranie of Satan, ſin, the world, the fleſh, and eternall damnation, yea, from infinite both perils and loſſes, and doeth place vs both ſafe and happie, vnder the ſhadowe, as it were, of Chriſts wings.

II. Chriſt by his death, hath ſanctified vnto vs both death and the graue.

III. Chriſt is both in life and death, gaine to the godly. Phil. 1.21.

IV. Thoſe conſolations which the ſpirie of Chriſt doeth ſuggeſt to the ſoules of the faithful, doe by many degrees ſurmount the dolours of death.

V. The deſire of that moſt bright and glorious beholding of God, and the preſence of thoſe Saints which are departed before vs.

VI. In ſtead of our bodies we ſhall be clothed with glorie, 2. Cor. 5.1.

VII. The ſting of death, namely ſin, is then ſo taken away, as that that Serpent can no more hurt vs, 1. Cor. 15.55. O death, where is thy ſting! O graue where is thy victorie! Heb. 2.15. That he might deliuer al them, which for feare of death, were all their life time ſubiect to bondage.

VIII. We ſhould not ſo much thinke of our death, as to take an exact account of our life. For that man cannot die ill, who hath liued well: and he ſeldome dieth well, that hath liued badly.

IX. The angels they ſtand at our elbowes, that ſo ſoone as a Saint departeth, they may with al ſpeed, immediately tranſport his ſoule into heauen.

Soules beeing once in heauen, remaine there till the laſt day of iudgement, where they partly magnifie the name of God, & partly doe waite, and praie for the conſummation of the kingdome of glorie, and full felicitie in bodie and ſoule. Reuelat. 5. 8. And when he had taken the booke, the foure beaſts, and the foure and twentie elders fell downe before the Lambe, hauing euery one harpes, and goulden vials full of odours, which are the praiers of the Saints. 9. And they ſang a newe ſong, ſaying, Thou art worthy to take the booke, and to open the ſeales thereof: becauſe thou waſt killed, and haſt redeemed vs to God by thy blood, out of euery kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation. Reuel. 14.2. I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harpes. 3. And they ſung, as it were, a newe ſong before the throne: and they cried with a loud voice, ſaying, Howe long, Lord, holy and true! doeſt not thou iudge & auenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

CHAP. XLIX.

Of the eſtate of the elect at the laſt day of iudgement.

THe laſt day of iudgement ſhall be on this manner.

I. Immediatly before the comming of Chriſt,[a] the powers of heauen ſhall bee ſhaken: the Sunne and Moone ſhall bee darkened, and the ſtarres ſhall ſeeme to fal from heauen:[b] at which ſight the elect thē liuing ſhall reioice, but the reprobate ſhall ſhake euery ioynt of them. [a] Math. 24.29. Immediately after the tribulation of thoſe daies, ſhall the Sunne bee darkened, and the Moone ſhall not giue her light, the ſtarres ſhall fall from heauen, and the powers of heauen ſhall bee ſhaken: 30. And then ſhall appeare the ſigne of the ſonne of man in heauen: and then ſhall all the kindreds of the earth mourne, and they ſhall ſee the ſonne of man come in the cloudes of heauen, with power and great glorie. [b] Luke, 21.26. Mens hearts ſhall faile them for feare, and for looking after thoſe things, which ſhal come on the world. 28. And when theſe things beginne to come to paſſe, then looke vp, and lift vp your heades, for your redemption draweth neere. 2. Tim.

4.8. Henceforth is laid vp for me the crown of righteouſneſſe, which the Lord, the righteous iudge ſhal giue mee at that day: and not to me onely, but vnto them alſo that loue his appearing.

II. Then the heauens, beeing all ſet on fire, ſhal with a noiſe like to that of chariot wheeles, ſuddenly paſſe away, and the elements, with the earth, and all therin ſhal be diſſolued with fire. 2. Pet. 3. 12. Looking for, and haſting vnto the comming of the day of God, by which the heauens beeing ſette on fire ſhall de diſſolued, and the elements ſhall melt with heate. 13. But we looke for newe heauens, and a newe earth, according to his promiſe, wherein dwelleth all righteouſnes.

[a] At the ſame time, when as al theſe things ſhall come to paſſe, [a] the ſound of the laſt Trumpet ſhall be heard, ſounded by the Archangell. [b] And Chriſt ſhall come ſuddenly in the cloudes, with power, and glorie, and a great traine of Angels. [a] Mat. Chap. 24. verſe. 31. And he ſhall ſend his Angels with a great ſound of a Trumpet. 1. Theſſ. chap. 4. verſe, 16. The Lord himſelfe ſhall deſcend from Heauen with a ſhout, euen with the voice of the Archangell, and with the Trumpet of God: and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt. [b] Math. Chap. 24. verſe, 30. 1. Theſſ. Chap. 4. verſe. 17. Then ſhall we which liue and remaine, bee caught vp with them alſo in the cloudes to meete the Lord in the aire, and ſo ſhall we euer be with the Lord.

III. Nowe at the ſound of the trumpet the elect, which were dead, ſhall ariſe with thoſe very bodies which were turned to duſt, and one part rent from an other, ſhall by the omnipotent power of God, be reſtored, and the ſoules of them ſhall deſcend from heauen, and be brought againe into thoſe bodies. As for [a] them which then ſhall be aliue, they ſhal be chāged in the twinckling of an eie, and this mutation ſhall be in ſtead of death. And at that time, the bodies ſhall receiue their full redemption; [b] and all the bodies of the Elect ſhall be made like the glorious bodie of Chriſt Ieſus, and therefore ſhall be ſpirituall, immortall, glorious, and free from all infirmity. [a] 1. Cor. 15. 52. We ſhall not all ſleepe, but wee ſhall be changed in a moment, in the twinckling of an eie, at the laſt trumpet. 43 [b] It is ſowne in diſhonour, it is raiſed in honour: it is ſowne in weakeneſſe, it is raiſed in power. 44. It is ſowne a naturall bodie, it is raiſed a ſpirituall body.

IV. Laſt of all, when they are all conuented before the tribunall ſeate of Chriſt, he will forthwith place the Elect, ſeuered from the reprobate, and taken vp into the aire, at his right hand, and to them beeing written in the booke of life, will hee pronounce this ſentence: Come ye bleſſed of my father, poſſeſſe the kingdome prepared for you from the foundations of the world. Math. 25. 33. He ſhall ſet the ſheepe on his right hand, and the goates on the left. 1. Theſſ. 4. 17. Reuelat. 20. 12. Whoſoeuer was not found written in the booke of life, was caſt into the lake of fire.

CHAP. L.

Of the eſtate of the Elect after iudgement.

THe laſt iudgement beeing once finiſhed, the elect ſhall enioy immediately bleſſedneſſe in the kingdome of heauen.

Bleſſedneſſe is that, whereby God himſelfe is all in all his elect. 1. Cor. 15. 28. Whē all things ſhall bee ſubdued to him, then ſhall the ſonne alſo himſelfe bee ſubiect vnto him, that did ſubdue al things vnder him, that god may be all in all. And it is the reward of good workes, not becauſe works can merit, but by reaſon of Gods fauour, who thus accepteth workes, and that in reſpect of the merit of Chriſts righteouſneſſe imputed to the elect. Rom. 6. 23. The wages of ſinne is death, but eternall life is the gift of God, through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. 2. Tim. 4. 8, Reu. 22. 12. Behold, I come ſhortly, and my reward is with me, to giue euery man according as his worke ſhall be.

Bleſſedneſſe hath two parts: Eternall life, and perfect glorie.

Eternal life is that fellowſhip with god, [a] whereby God himſelfe is, through the Lambe Chriſt, life vnto the Elect. For in the kingdome of heauen, the elect ſhal not neede meat, drinke, ſleepe, aire, heate, cold, phiſicke, apparell, or the light of the Sun and Moone: [b] but in place of all theſe, ſhall they haue in them Gods ſpirit, by which immediately they ſhall bee quickened for euer. [a] Ioh. 14. 23. If any man loue me, he will keepe my word, and my father will loue him, and we wil come vnto him, and dwel with him: 1. Iohn. 4. 15. Whoſoeuer confeſſeth that Ieſus Chriſt is the ſonne of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. Reu. 21. 3. And I heard a voice, ſaying, Beholde the Tabernacle of God is with men, and and he will dwell with them: and they shall be his people, and God himselfe shal be their God with them. 23. And that citie hath no need of sunne or moone to shine in it: for the glorie of God did light it, and the Lambe is the light of it. Reuel. 22. 1. In the middes of the streete of it, and of either side of the riuer, was the tree of life, which bare twelue manner of fruites, and gaue fruit euery moneth: and the leaues of the tree serued to heale the nations with. 5. And there shall be no light there, and they neede no candle, nor light of the sunne: for the Lord giueth them light, and they shall raigne for euermore. 1. Cor. 15. 45. Rom. 8. 11. If the spirit of him that raised vp Iesus from the dead, dwell in you, hee that raised vp Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortall bodies, because that his spirit dwelleth in you.

Perfect glorie, is that wonderfull excellencie of the Elect, whereby they shall be in a farre better estate then any heart can wish. This glorie cõsisteth in three points. I. In that they shall still behold the face of God, which is his glory and maiestie. Reuel. 22. 4. And they shall see his face, and his name shall be in their foreheads. Psal. 17. 15. I will behold thy face in righteousnesse, and whẽ I awake I shalbe satisfied with thine anger II. In that they shalbe most like to Christ, namely, iust, holy, incorruptible, glorious, honourable, excellent, beautifull, strong, mightie, and nimble. 1. Ioh. 3. 2. Dearely beloued, now are we the sonnes of God, but yet it doth not appeare what we shall bee: and we know that when he shall appeare, wee shall be like him: for wee shall see him as he is, Philip. 3. 21. Who shall change our vile bodie, that it may be fashioned like vnto his glorious bodie, according to the working whereby he is able euen to subdue all things to himselfe. III. They shall inherite the kingdome of heauen, yea, the new heauens and the new earth shall be their inheritance. 1. Pet. 1. 4. God hath begotten you to an inheritance immortall and vndefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserued in heauen for you. Matth. 25. 34. Then shall the King say to them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, possesse a kingdome prepared for you before the foundation of the world were laid. Reuel. 5. 10. Thou hast made vs vnto our God kings and Priests, and we shall raigne on the earth. Reuel. 21. 7. He that ouercommeth shall inherit all things, and I will be his God and hee shall be my sonne.

The fruit that commeth from both these parts of blessednesse, is of two sorts: Eternall ioy, and the perfect seruice of God. Psal. 16. 11. Thou wilt shew mee the path of life, in thy presence is the fulnesse of ioy: and at thy right hand there are pleasures for euermore. Psal. 36. 8. They shall be satisfied with the fatnesse of thine house, and thou shalt giue them drinke out of the riuer of thy pleasures: 9. For with thee is the well of life, and in thy light shall we see light.

The parts of Gods seruice, are Praise, and Thanksgiuing. Reuel. 21. 3. And I heard a great voice out of heauen, saying, Behold, the Tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them: and they shall be his people, and God himselfe shall bee their God with them. Cap. 5. 12. Saying with a loud voyce, Worthy is the Lambe that was killed, to receiue power, and riches, and wisdome, and strength, and honour, and glorie, and praise, &c. 13. Chap. 11. 17. The foure and twentie Elders which sate before God on their seates, fell vpon their faces and worshipped God, saying, We giue thee thanks, Lord God Almightie, which art, and Which was, and Which art to come: for thou hast receiued thy great might, and hast obtained thy kingdome.

The manner of performing this seruice, is to worship God by God himselfe immediatly. In heauen there shall neither be temple, ceremonie, nor Sacrament, but all these wants shall God himselfe supply together with the Lambe, that is, Christ. Reuel. 21. 22. I sawe no Temple therein, for the Lord God Almightie, and the Lambe, are the Temple of it.

This seruice shall be dayly, and without intermission. Reuel. 7. 15. They are in the presence of the throne of God, and serue him day and night in his temple.

A Corollarie, or the last conclusion.

THVS God, in sauing the Elect, doth clearely set forth his iustice & mercy. His iustice, in that hee punished the sins of the Elect, in his sonnes owne perso. His mercie in that he pardoned their sin, for the merites of his sonne. Eph. 1. 18. That the eyes of your vnderstanding may bee lightened, that ye may know what the hope is of his calling, and what the riches of his glorious inheritance is in his Saints, 19. And what is the exceeding greatnes of his power towards vs, which beleeue, according to the working of his mightie power, 20. Which he wrought in Christ, &c. 3. 18. That ye may be able to comprehend with all Saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height,

19. And

19. And to know the loue of Chriſt.

All theſe things the Lord himſelfe hath thus decreed, and in his good time wil accompliſh them, to the glorious praiſe of his Name. Prou. 16.4. The Lord hath made all things for his owne ſake: yea, euen the wicked for the day of euill.

CHAP. L.

CONCERNING THE ORDER of the cauſes of Saluation according to to the doctrine of the Church of Rome.

THere are 2. things requiſite to obtaine ſaluation: Predeſtination, and the Execution thereof.

Predeſtination, is a fore-ordaining of the reaſonable creature to grace in this life, and glorie in the life to come. Sebaſt. Cattaneus. Enchir. tract. 1. Chap. laſt.

This in regard of the firſt effects thereof, which are vocation, election, and ordination to eternall life, hath the cauſe of it in God, namely his will: but in regard, of the laſt effect, which is, the execution of ſuch an ordinance, and the obtaining of eternal life, it hath the cauſe of it from man; becauſe according to the common opinion, Gods predeſtination is by reaſon of workes foreſeene in men, that is, God doth therefore prediſtinate or reiect ſome man, becauſe he foreſeeth that hee will well or badly vſe his grace. But for the more euident declaration of this, theſe ſeuen concluſions muſt be ſet downe.

I. The Predeſtination, and Reprobation of God, doe not conſtraine or inforce any neceſſitie vpon the will of man.

II. God hath predeſtinated all men, that is, he hath appointed and diſpoſed all men, ſo as they might obtaine eternall ſaluation.

III. Man is neither by neceſſitie nor chance ſaued or condemned, but voluntarily.

IV. God hath predeſtinated ſome, other hath he reiected.

V. Thoſe whom God hath predeſtinated by his abſolute predeſtinatiō, which cannot be loſt, they ſhall infallibly die in grace: but they which are predeſtinate, by that predeſtination which beeing according to preſent iuſtice, may be loſt by ſome mortall ſinne which followeth, are not infallibly ſaued, but oftentimes ſuch are condemned, and looſe their crowne and glorie. Hence ariſeth that poſition of theirs, That he which is iuſtified may be a reprobate, and periſh eternally. Torrenſis Aug. Confeſſ. 2. booke. 4. chap. 20. Sect. Therefore predeſtination is not certen, ſeeing it may be loſt.

VI. God alone doth know the certen and ſet number of them which are predeſtinate.

VII. There is one ſet number of them which are predeſtinate, or reprooued, and that can neither bee increaſed nor diminiſhed.

The Execution of predeſtination, is either in infants, or thoſe of yeares of diſcretion.

Concerning Infants, the merit of Chriſt is applyed vnto them, by baptiſme rightly adminiſtred: ſo that whatſoeuer in originall corruption may truly and properly be accounted for ſinne, it is not onely, as I may ſay, not pared away, or not imputed, but vtterly takē away. For there is nothing that God can hate in ſuch as are renued. Concil. Trid. 5. ſect. 5. Can.

Neuertheles they are vrged to confeſſe, that there remaineth yet in ſuch as are baptized concupiſcence, or the reliques of ſin. The which ſeeing it is left in men for them to wraſtle withall, it hath no power to hurt ſuch as yeeld not vnto it.

The Execution of Predeſtination in ſuch as are of riper yeares, hath ſixe degrees.

The firſt is Vocation, whereby men, not for their owne merits, but by Gods preuenting grace through Chriſt, are called to turne vnto God.

The ſecond is, a Preparation to righteouſneſſe, whereby men through the inherent power of free-will, doe applie themſelues to iuſtification, after that the ſame power is ſtirred vp by the holy Ghoſt. For free-will is onely ſomewhat diminiſhed, and not extinguiſhed: and therefore ſo ſoone as the holy Ghoſt toucheth and inlighteneth the heart, it worketh togither with the ſame ſpirit, freely aſſenting vnto the ſame. This Preparation hath ſeuen degrees. Biel. 4. booke 14. diſt. 2. queſt.

The firſt is faith, which is a knowledge and an aſſent, whereby men agree that thoſe things are true which are deliuered concerning God, and his will, reuealed in the word of God.

This

A view of the diſtribution of the cauſes of Saluation and damnation, as the Church of Rome would haue it.

5 DE '60

This is the foundation of iuſtification, and prepareth the heart: becauſe it ſtirreth vp free will that it may affect the heart, with thoſe motions by which it is prepared to iuſtification.

I. The act of faith is, to apprehend the ouglines of ſinne, and the wages therof.

II. After this, followeth a feare of Gods anger, and of hell fire.

III. Then begin men to diſlike, and in ſome ſort to deteſt ſinne.

From theſe ariſeth a certaine diſpoſition, which hath annexed vnto it, the merit of congruitie, yet not immediat nor ſufficient, but imperfect.

IV. At the length, faith returneth to the contemplation of Gods mercies, and beleeueth that God is readie to forgiue ſinnes by the infuſiō of charity into thoſe, which are before ſufficiently prepared and diſpoſed.

V. Out of this contemplation proceedeth the act of hope, whereby faith beginneth to deſire and to waite on God, as the chiefeſt good.

VI. Out of this act of hope ariſeth loue, whereby God is loued aboue all things in the world.

VII. After this loue followeth a new diſlike, & deteſtation of ſinne, not ſo much in regard of feare of the puniſhment in hel fire, as in regard of the offence to God, who is ſimply loued more then all other things.

VIII. After all theſe, followeth a purpoſe of amendment of life: & here comes in the merit of congruitie, that is, ſufficient: or els, the immediate, ſufficient, and laſt diſpoſition before the infuſion of grace.

The third degree of Predeſtination, is the firſt iuſtification whereby men of vniuſt, are made iuſt, not onely through the remiſſion of their ſinnes, but alſo by a ſanctification of the inward man, by his voluntarie receiuing of grace and gifts.

The efficient cauſe of this iuſtification, is the mercie of God, and the meritorious paſſion of our Sauiour Chriſt, whereby hee purchaſed iuſtification for men. The inſtrumentall cauſe is baptiſme. The formall cauſe is not that iuſtice which was inherent in Chriſt, but which he infuſeth into man: and that is eſpecially hope, and charitie.

The fourth degree, is the ſecond iuſtification wherby men are of iuſt, made more iuſt: the cauſe hereof is faith, ioyned with good workes.

It is poſſible for ſuch as are renued, to keepe the commandements: and therefore it is falſe that a iuſt man committeth ſo much as a veniall ſinne in his beſt actions, much leſſe, that he deſerueth eternal death for the ſame.

The fifth degree, is the reparation of a ſinner by the ſacrament of Penance. The which is, as it were, the ſecond boord after a ſhipwracke. The cauſe why this reparation is neceſſarie, is, becauſe men looſe the grace of iuſtification by euery mortall ſinne.

The laſt degree is the fruit of iuſtification, namely, the glorie of eternall life, the which workes done in grace, doe ex condigno, condignly merit, of ſufficient worthineſſe.

Condigne merit is, when as the reward is after ſuch ſort due, as that it is be not giuen, iniuſtice will be committed. This by the rigour of iuſtice is due.

Two conditions are requiſite to make a merit. I. That a reward ſhould by ſome compact or bargaine be due. And this cōdition is in works, in regard of God. For God in the Scriptures hath promiſed a reward to ſuch as worke well. II. That beſides this compact whereby the debter is bound, there ſhould bee alſo ſome worthines in the worke, or ſome proportion of the worke to the reward.

The worthines or dignitie of the worke, dependeth I. on Chriſt, becauſe Chriſt did not onely merit that his owne proper actions ſhould be meritorious, but the actions alſo of his members. II. On the holy Ghoſt. For the holy Ghoſt doth inſpire, excite, and mooue men to doe. III. On an Habituall grace, which is a certaine participation of the diuine eſſence.

Thus much concerning the degrees of executing Predeſtination. Now followeth the applying of Predeſtination particularly to the perſons of men.

No man, ſo long as he liueth in this mortall life, ought ſo much to preſume on the ſecret myſterie of Gods predeſtination, as to determine vndoubtedly that he is in the number of them whome God hath ordained to eternall happineſſe. For no man, without eſpeciall reuelation can knowe, whome God hath choſen to be his heires. Seſſ. 6. c. 12.

The ſumme of al theſe, is this. God by a certaine grace giuen freely, or rather a grace preuenting, or comming before, the the which is tearned an especiall ayde, doth mooue a man, that he may dispose himselfe vnto his iustifying grace, namely, that hee may beleeue, feare, repent, loue, and propound to himselfe newnes of life, &c.

Furthermore, if a sinner doe by his free-will yeeld his assent vnto this diuine motion, and doth consequently & accordingly righly dispose himselfe, God doth incontinently forgiue him his sinne, and withall doth infuse into him iustifying grace, by which he may doe good works, and so by them merit eternall life. Bellarm.

Errours of the Papists in their distributing of the causes of salvation.

And thus is the doctrine of the Church of Rome, surely a very blasphemous doctrine, and no better to be accounted of then as a gallowes set vp for the tortute & massacre of mens consciences, And that this may the more manifestly appeare to be so, I will set downe the most principall points of popish doctrine in this case.

The I. errour.

Predestination is onely of the Elect, the Reprobate they are onely foreknowne.

The Confutation.

The name of Predestination, by a figure called Synecdoche, the whole for the part, is taken indeede sometimes in the good part, and spoken of the Elect, and faithfull called as Rom. 8. 30. Whome he predestinated, them also he called, and whome he called, them also he iustified, and whome he iustified, them also he glorified. So are the Ephesians said to be predestinate into the adoption of the sonnes of God, Eph. 1. 5. Yet may this word Predestination, neuertheless generally be extended vnto the decree of God, whether it be that of predestination to eternall life, or the other vnto eternal death. The reasons: I. Act. 4. 27. 28. They gathered themselues together against thine holy sonne Iesus: to doe whatsoeuer thine hand and thy counsell had determined (or foreordained, or predestinated, προώρισεν) before to be done. II. August. de Bono perseu. Chap. 17. he calleth Predestination the disposition of future workes: and in his 15. booke of the Citty of God, chap. 1. he deuideth all mankind into two cities: wherof one is predestinate to raigne with God eternally, the other predestinate to vndergo eternal punishment with the deuill. And in his Manuel to Laurentius. chap. 100. he saith, That God hath iustly predestinated wicked men vnto punishment, and mercifully predestinated the good vnto grace. Thomas of Aquaine 1. part. quest. 23. artic. 4. It mattereth not in regard of the name of predestination whether a man be said to be predestinate to life eternall or not.

Furthermore, for a man to say that the Reprobates are foreknowne, and not predestinate, it is very iniurious: becaus. Gods foreknowledge, may in nothing which is to be, be seuered from his will and eternall decree. For that, which beeing hereafter to be, is foreknowne of God, that assuredly will come to passe, and shall be, and that either by the will of God, or without his will: if with his will, then no doubt, hee both decreed and preordained the same, if without or against his will, how is GOD then said to be omnipotent? And surely euill it selfe, albeit God will it not in his approuing or allowing will; yet willeth he the free, and willing permission thereof. August. in his Manuel or Enchiridion to Laurentius, chap. 100. hath an excellent saying to this purpose. Although (saith he) that those things which are euill, in that they are euill, cannot be good, yet that there are not only good, but also euill things, it is very good: to the intent that after a maruailous and vnspeakeable manner, that thing may not be besides, or without his will, which also is done, against his will, because it should not bee done, vnlesse he suffered it, neither doth he suffer it, against his will, but willingly.

The II. Errour.

That Predestination is mutable. For, (according to the common opinion of the Papists) whosoeuer is predestinate, he is contingently predestinated, as well on Gods part, as on mans: whence it followeth, that he which is predestinated, that is, appointed to saluation, may bee condemned, and he which is foreknowne, that is, appointed to damnation may be saued.

The Confutation.

The contrary to this their doctrine is most true. Namely, that the decreee of god concerning euery mans eternall both saluation and damnation, is from all eternity set downe, and immutable. The reasons: I. Testimonies of Scripture. Rom. 11. 29. The gifts and calling of God they are ἀμεταμέλητα such as are without repentance. Math. 24. 24. There shall arise false Christs, and false prophets: and shall doe great signes and miracles, so that [if it were possible] they should deceiue euen the elect. Rom. 8 33. Who shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods chosen? it is God that iustifieth, who shall condemne? 2. Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God stan- ſtandeth ſure, and hath this ſeale, The Lorde knoweth who are his. II. Election and reprobation they are in God, not in men: now there can be nothing in God which is not immutable. Mal. 3. 6. I Iehouah am not changed. Eſai 46. 10. My counſell ſhall ſtand, and I will doe whatſoeuer I will. III. If this Popiſh concluſion ſhould be granted, then would it follow of neceſſitie, that the foreknowledge of God muſt bee made voide, his power weakened, and his will changed, each of which is impious once to dreame of. For he which changeth his counſell, or his will, doth therefore change it either becauſe he at the length ſeeth that he might haue taken better aduiſe, or elſe in that he ſeeth that he could not bring his former purpoſe about as he would. Either of theſe are farre from our Lord God. IV. If wee reſolue that the councell of God is any wayes mutable, it will by this come to paſſe that euery man muſt bee vncertaine whether he be predeſtinate to life or not: whereby that notable ſtay and ground of our full aſſurance to bee ſaued, is vtterly ſhaken and ouerturned. Wherefore let this truth bee maintained of vs: namely, that both the election and reprobation of God, ſtand immutable, ſo that neither the Elect can become reprobates, nor the reprobates elect; and conſequently neither theſe be ſaued nor they condemned.

Againſt this doctrine, the popiſh ſort except. If you ſpeake in a compound ſenſe, or meaning (in ſenſu copoſito) it is very true that the predeſtinate cannot be ſaued, nor ſuch as are fore knowne periſh: but if in a ſenſe diuided (in ſenſu diuiſo) it is not ſo. This diſtinction is plaine by his example. White colour in a compound meaning cannot be blacke, becauſe blackneſſe is repugnant and contrarie to whitneſſe. But in a diuided ſenſe, white colour now may afterwards bee made blacke. In like ſort, one predeſtinated to ſaluation may, by reaſon of the free-will he hath, ſinne, and ſo bee damned. Anſw. Theſe are ſilly ſhifts, and meere ſophiſmes, becauſe ſuch as are predeſtinated to the ende, namely, ſaluation, are neceſſarily predeſtinate to the meanes of ſaluation, the which they cannot but vſe, and by them come to the ende it ſelfe.

The III. Errour.

All men are predeſtinate that is, diſpoſed and ordained of God, ſo as they might attaine eternal life. Sebaſt. Cattaneus in his Enchirid. chap. of Predeſt.

The Confutation.

This is manifeſtly falſe. For I. infants, who ſo ſoone as they are borne, depart this life, ſeeing for want of time they cannot in this life vſe the meanes of ſaluation, albeit they may haue life eternall, yet obtaine they it not by vſing the meanes vnto the ſame. II. That which the Lord indeede actually doth, the very ſame hath he determined to doe. For hee doth nothing either vnaduiſedly, or vnwillingly: but he actually forſaketh a very great part of mankind, the which being ſhut vp vnder contumacie, hee doth leaue to it ſelfe. Act. 14. 16. Who in times paſt ſuffered all the Gentiles to walke in their owne waies. Hence alſo is it, that Eph. 2. all the Gentiles are ſaid to be ἄθεοι, without God in the world. Therefore God decreed to forſake ſome men in this life, & conſequently hee ordained not all men to the obtaining of eternall life. Nay, if God once but would in his ſecret will, that all men ſhould bee ſaued, it were vnpoſſible for any to periſh: becauſe Gods willing is his doing of it: and if hee that was ordained to ſaluation periſh, then muſt God now needes haue left off to will that, which he would from all eternitie, or els begin to will that, which before hee would not; the which cannot bee ſaide of God, without blaſphemie. III. Paul 2. Theſſ. 2. 10. ſaith, that there bee certaine men, τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις, of them that periſh, and ſo he diſtinguiſheth from the elect. v. 13. Rom. 9. 21, 22. Hath not the potter power &c. Where there is not onely mention made of veſſels of glorie, and mercie, but alſo of certaine made, & faſhioned in Gods eternall counſel, as veſſels of wrath. Now looke whome God hath made to wrath and deſtruction, them he neuer diſpoſed to obtaine eternall life.

The IV. Errour.

Predeſtination in regard of the laſt effects thereof hath this cauſe in man, that is, in mans free-will, and workes: for they whome God had foreſeene, that they would receiue grace offered in Chriſt, and lead their life according to the Law, them he predeſtinated, not of workes, but of his mercie; yet ſo, as that he had reſpect vnto workes, or to deale with them according to their workes: or (as others ſay) to ordaine them by their workes foreſeene. As for example: God did from al eternitie foreſee and foreknowe that Peter ſhould be ſaued, and Iudas condemned, becauſe he from the ſame eternitie did both foreſee and fore-know

know, that Peter would accept of the grace offered vnto him, and after vse the same aright: and hee did also foresee that Iudas should receiue the grace offered, yet notwithstanding by reason of his peruerse will, vse the same peruersly.

The Confutation.

This their forged deuise of foreseene workes, I. Paul doth shew to be plainely counterfeit, when as he saith, that the Ephesians were elected in Christ before the foundations of the world were laid: and that not because he did foresee that they would be holy, but that they might be holy and vnblameable before God with loue. And c. 2. v. 10. he saith, they were created to good workes in Christ, that they might walke therein. In which places, good works they are made effects of predestination; but the effect foreseene can not bee the cause of his cause: for that euery cause, in the order both of nature and knowledge, doth goe before his effect. II. Tit. 3. 5. Not of workes which we haue done, but according to his mercie did God elect and saue vs. III. God in electing vs, did not regard any thing out of himselfe, but in himselfe did he elect vs, Eph. 1. 4. and 9. Therefore did he not regard future workes. IV. Some of the Papists schoolemen confesse, that Predestination doth put nothing in the partie predestinated, in respect of him, for which God did predestinate him. Thom. 1 primæ quæst. 23. art. 2. V. Election is onely on Gods mercie. Rom. 9. 16. VI. God saw no grace in man, but that which he himselfe must bestow vpon him: whence it is apparent, that in election the beginning thereof proceedeth from grace. VII. Seeing there is nothing either aboue God or greater then God, it must needes be impious to assigne any cause of his will, either out of, or aboue his maiestie: & therefore that his foreknowledge of faith and works should be accounted the impulsiue cause of his decree, concerning mans saluation, we doe rightly deny.

The V. errour.

By Baptisme rightly administred, not onely the guiltines, but also the corruption of original sinne, is so washed away, as that it is not afterward properly accounted a sinne.

The Confutation.

We contrarily doe thus distinguish of sinne. Sinne in regard of the guiltinesse of Gods wrath, and also in regard of the punishment together by on act is taken away in Baptisme: but in regard of that errour & corruption of nature, it is not at the first quite taken away, but successiuely, and by little and little it is extinguished; euen as our renouation wrought by the H. Ghost, is by little and little begun & increased in vs. Reasons. I. Paul would not so greatly bewaile his originall sinne, if after Baptisme it ceased any more to be sinne. I see, saith he, another law in my members, rebelling against the law of my minde, and leading me captiue vnto the lawe of sinne which is in my members. O miserable man! who shall deliuer me from this bodie of death? II. Originall sinne is called a sinne out of measure sinfull, Rom. 7. 13. And, Heb. 12. 1. a sinne that hangeth fast on, or, easily compasseth vs about. III. Concupiscence is the roote of actuall sinne; and therefore euen after Baptisme, it must properly be a sin. IV. Vnlesse that concupiscence were a sin, where wold or could be that vehement and hote combate betweene the flesh and the spirit?

The VI. errour.

Baptisme is absolutely necessarie to saluation, specially for children.

The Confutation.

Wee deny that Baptisme is of absolute necessitie to saluation. Reasons. I. Sacraments doe not conferre grace, but rather confirme grace, when God hath conferred the same. The children of faithful parents are borne holy, not by naturall generation, but by the grace of God, and are not first made holy by baptisme: & as for such as are of yeares of discretion before they be baptized, they can not be baptized vnlesse they beleeue. Now all such as beleeue, they are both iustified, and reconciled to God, and therefore albeit they without their owne default, are deprived of the Sacraments, it is vnpossible for them to perish. II. God did precisely appoint circumcisiō to be on the eight day, not on the first, or the second: now there is no doubt but that many infants before their eight day were preuented of circumcision by death, all which for a man peremptorily to set downe as condemned, were very absurd. III. If circumcision were of such absolute great necessity, why was it for the space of fourtie yeares in the desart intermitted? and that onely because the Israelites beeing often in iourney, such as were circūcised were by it in ieopardy of death: no doubt Moses and Aaron would neuer haue omitted this Sacrament so long, if it had beene absolutely necessarie to saluation. IV. This doctrine of the absolute neceſſitie of Baptiſme was vnknowne to the auncient Fathers. For the primitiue Church did tolerate very Godly men (though wee allow not this their fact) that they ſhould deferre their baptiſme many yeares, yea often to the time of their death. Hence was it that Conſtantine the great was not baptized till a litle before his death: and Valentinian by reaſon of his delay, was not at al baptized: whome notwithſtading Ambroſe pronounceth to be in heauen. And Bernard in his 77. epiſt. diſputeth, that not euery depriuation of baptiſme, but the contempt or palpable negligence, is damnable.

The VII. errour.

Man after the fall of Adam hath freewill as well to doe that which is good, as that which is euill, although it be in a diuers manner, that is, hee hath freewill to doe euill ſimply, and without any external aide: but to doe wel, none at all, but by the grace of God preuenting, or guiding vs: the which grace notwithſtanding euery man hath, and to the which grace it is in our freewill either to conſent, and together worke with the ſame, or not. And therefore the power of freewill to doe that which is good and acceptable to God, is onely attenuated and weakned before conuerſion, and therefore man can of himſelfe worke a preparation to iuſtification.

The Confutation.

Man not regenerated hath freewill to doe onely that which is euill, none to doe good. Hee beeing not alreadie conuerted cannot ſo much as will to haue faith, & be conuerted. Reaſons. I. Man is not ſaid to be weake or ſicke, but dead in ſinnes. Eph. 2.1. Col. 1.13. As he therefore that is corporally dead cannot ſtir vp himſelf, that he may performe ſuch works of viuification, no not then when others helpe him: ſo he that is ſpiritually dead, cānot mooue himſelfe to liue vnto God. II. Hee is the ſeruant of Satan, and bondſlaue of ſinne. Eph. 2. 2. Rom. 6. 13. Nowe we know that a ſeruant ſtandeth at the becke and pleaſure of another, and can doe nothing els. III. That which no man can by himſelfe know and beleeue, the ſame he can not will: but no man can know and beleeue thoſe thinges that appertaine to the kingdome of God. 1. Cor. 2. 14. The naturall man perceiueth not the things of the ſpirit of God. 2. Cor. 3. 5. We are not ſufficient of our ſelues, to thinke any thing as of our ſelues. Therefore no man can will by himſelfe, thoſe things that appertaine to Gods kingdome. IV. That which is a deadly enemie to goodnes, and is directly repugnant thereunto, the ſame deſireth not that which is good: but the will is an enemie and directly repugnant vnto goodnes. Rom. 8. 7. The wiſedom of the fleſh is hatred againſt God: for it is not ſubiect to the law of God, neither indeede can be.

Obiect. I. The word is neere vnto thee in thine heart, and in thy mouth, that thou maiſt doe the ſame. Deut. 30. Anſ. It is eaſie to performe the lawe legally, but not Euangelically. Now this is done, when as any man doth fulfill the lawe by a Mediatour, and from him receiuing the ſpirit of God, doth endeauour to performe new obedience.

Obiect. II. God giueth many precepts by which wee are commanded to repent, beleeue, obey God, &c. Therefore to doe theſe, we haue freewill. Anſ. Such places doe not ſhewe vs what wee can doe, but what we ſhould doe, and our weakneſſe what we cānot doe: neither doe they ſhew what men can doe, but what men ſhould doe. II. They are inſtruments of the holy Ghoſt, whereby he doth renue & conuert ſuch as ſhall bee ſaued. The obiect againe. God in commanding theſe, doth not require thinges impoſſible. Anſ. He doth not indeede to men in their innocencie, but nowe to all ſuch as fell in Adam hee doth, and that by their owne default, not Gods.

Obiect. III. Phil. 2. 12. Worke your ſaluation with feare and trembling. Anſ. Paul ſpeaketh of ſuch as are already conuerted, which haue their will in part freed.

Obiect. IV. If the will be a meere patient, it is conſtrained to doe that, which is good. Anſ. The will both in it ſelfe, and of it ſelfe, is a meere patient in her firſt conuerſion vnto God; but if it be conſidered as it is mooued by the ſpirit of God, it is an agent. For, beeing mooued, it mooueth. It is not therefore compelled, but of a nilling will, is made a willing will.

The VIII. errour.

The holy Ghoſt doth not giue grace to will, but onely doth vnlooſe the will which before was chained, and alſo doth excite the ſame: ſo that the will by her owne power, doth diſpoſe her ſelfe to iuſtification.

The Confutation.

It is apparently falſe. To wil thoſe things which concerne the kingdome of God, as faith, conuerſion, and new obedience, is the meere gift of Gods ſpirit. Matth. 11. 28. No man knoweth the Father, but the Sonne, and he to whome the Sonne wil reueale him. Luk. 8. To you it is giuen to know the myſteries of the kingdome of God. Philip. 2. It is God which worketh in you to will and to doe. 1. Cor. 12. 10. No man can ſay that Ieſus is the Lord but by the holy Ghoſt. Briefly he, who according to God is to be created to righteouſnes and holineſſe, Eph. 4. 24. cannot any waies diſpoſe himſelfe to iuſtification, or new creation. For it is impoſſible that a thing not created, ſhould diſpoſe it ſelfe to his creation.

The IX. errour.

That preparation to grace, which is cauſed by the power of freewill, may by the merit of congruitie deſerue iuſtification.

The Confutation.

Theſe things ſmell of more then Satanicall arrogancie. For what man but ſuch an one as were not in his right minde, would beleeue, that he, vnto whome ſo many millions of condemnations are due, could once merit the leaſt dramme of grace? The prodigall ſonne, he was not receiued into fauour by reaſon of his deſerts, but by fauour. Luk. 15. 21. His ſonne ſaid vnto him, I haue ſinned againſt heauen, and againſt thee, and am no more vvorthy to be called thy ſonne.

The X. errour.

The faith of the godly, or that which iuſtifieth is that whereby a man doth in generall beleeue the promiſed bleſſednes of GOD, and by which alſo he giueth his aſſent to other myſteries reuealed of God concerning the ſame.

The Confutation.

Faith is not onely a general knowledge, and aſſent to the hiſtorie of the Goſpel, but further alſo a certaine power, both apprehending and ſeuerally applying the promiſes of God in Chriſt, whereby a man doth aſſuredly ſet downe that his ſinnes are forgiuen him, and that he is reconciled vnto GOD. Reaſons. I. A particular aſſurance of the fauour of God, is of the nature of faith. Eph. 3. 10. By whome we haue boldneſſe, & entrance with confidence, by faith in him. Rom. 4. 20 Neither did he doubt of the promiſe of GOD through vnbeleefe, but was ſtrengthened in the faith, and gaue glorie vnto GOD. 21. Beeing fully aſſured that hee which had promiſed, was alſo able to doe it. Heb. 10. 22. Let vs draw neere with a true heart in aſſurance of faith. II. Particular doubting is reprehended. Math. 14. 31. O thou of little faith, why didſt thou doubt? Luk. 12. 29. Hang ye not in ſuſpence. III. That which a man praieth for to God, that muſt he aſſuredly beleeue to receiue. Mat. 11. 24. But the faithfull in their prayers make requeſt for adoption, iuſtification, and life eternall: and, therefore they muſt certenly beleeue that they ſhall receiue theſe benefits. IV. Rom. 5. 1. Wee beeing therefore iuſtified, haue peace with GOD. But there can be no peace, where there is not a particular aſſurance of Gods fauour. V. That which the ſpirit of God doth teſtifie vnto vs particularly, that muſt alſo be beleeued particularly: But the ſpirit of God doth giue a particular teſtimonie of the adoption of the faithfull. Rom. 8. 16. Gal. 4. 6. This therfore is in like ſort to be beleeued.

Whereas they ſay, that no man hath a particular aſſurance, but by eſpeciall reuelation, as was that which Abraham, and Paul had, is falſe. For the faith of theſe two is ſet downe in Scripture, as an example which we ſhould all follow. For this cauſe Abraham is called the Father of the faithfull: and Paul teſtifieth the very ſame of himſelfe, 1. Tim. 1. 16. For this cauſe (ſaith he) was I receiued to mercie, that Ieſus Chriſt ſhould firſt ſhew on me all long ſuffering, vnto the example of them which ſhall in time to come beleeue in him vnto eternall life. Againe, whereas they ſay, that wehaue a morall aſſurance, but not the aſſurance of faith, it is a popiſh deuiſe. For, Rom. 8. 16. the ſpirit of adoption (συμμαρτυρεῖ) together beareth witneſſe to our ſpirits. Where wee ſee two witneſſes of our adoption, our owne ſpirit, and the ſpirit of God. Our ſpirit doth teſtifie morally of our adoption; by ſanctification, and the fruits thereof: and therefore alſo the ſpirit of God witneſſeth after another manner, namely, by the certenty of faith, declaring and applying the promiſes of God.

Obiect. I. Wee are commaunded to worke our ſaluation with feare and trembling. Anſw. This feare is not in regard of Gods mercie forgiuing our ſinnes, but in reſpect of vs, and our nature, which is euer prone to ſlide away, and ſtarting from God.

Obiect. II. In reſpect of Gods mercie, we muſt hope for ſaluation: but in reſpect of our vnworthineſſe, we muſt doubt. Anſ. I. We may not at all lawfullie doubt of Gods mercie, becauſe doubtfulneſſe is not of the nature of faith, but rather a naturall corruption. II. If wee conſider our owne vnworthines, it is out of all doubt, that wee muſt bee out of all hope and deſpaire ſpaire of our ſaluation.

Obiect. III. There be many ſinnes vnknowne vnto vs, and ſo alſo vncertaine whether they be pardoned vnto vs. Anſw. He that certenly and truely knoweth that but one ſinne is pardoned him, he hath before God all his ſinnes remitted, whether they be knowne or vnknowne.

Obiect. IV. No man dare ſweare, or die in the defence of this propoſition, I am the child of God, or in Gods fauour, and iuſtified. Anſ. They which haue an vnfained faith, will if they be lawfully called, not only teſtifie their adoption by an oth, but ſeale it alſo by their blood.

Obiect. V. A man may haue this faith which the Proteſtants talke of, and lie in a mortall ſinne, and haue alſo a purpoſe to perſeuere in a mortall ſinne. Anſ. It is farre otherwiſe: for Act. 15.9. True faith puriſieth the heart.

Theſe Sophiſters doe farther affirme, that this faith, which to them is nothing but a knowledge and illumination of the mind, concerning the truth of Gods word, is the roote and foundation of iuſtification. The which if it bee true, why ſhould not the deuill be iuſt? for hee hath both a knowledge of Gods word, and thereunto by beleeuing doth giue his aſſent; who notwithſtanding he haue ſuch a faith, yet can he not be called one of the faithfull.

Here they except, & ſay. The deuils faith is voide of charitie, which is the forme of faith. But this is a doting ſurmiſe of their owne braine. For charitie is the effect of faith, 1. Tim. 1. 5. But the effect cannot informe the cauſe.

The XI. errour.

Mans loue of God, doth in order and time goe before his iuſtification and reconciliation with God.

The Confutation.

Nay contrarily, vnleſſe we be firſt perſwaded of Gods loue towards vs, we neuer loue him. For we loue him, becauſe he loued vs firſt. 1. Ioh. 4. 19. Againe, it is impoſſible that Gods enemie ſhould loue him: but hee which is not as yet iuſtified, or reconciled to God, he is Gods enemie. Rom. 5. 9, 10. Neither is any man before the act of iuſtification, made of Gods enemie his friend.

The XII. Errour.

Infuſed or inherent iuſtice, is the formall cauſe of iuſtification, whereby men are iuſtified in the ſight of God.

The Confutation.

Wee doe contrarily hold, that the materiall cauſe of mans iuſtification is, the obedience of Chriſt in ſuffering & fulfilling the lawe for vs: but as for the formal cauſe that muſt needs be imputation, the which is an action of God the father accepting the obedience of Chriſt for vs, as if it were our owne Reaſons, 1. Looke by what wee are abſolued from all our ſinnes, and by which we obtaine eternall life, by that alone are we iuſtified: But by Chriſts perfect obedience imputed vnto vs, we are abſolued from all our ſinnes, and through it we are accepted of God to eternall life; the which we can not doe by inherent holineſſe: Therefore by Chriſts perfect obedience imputed vnto vs, are wee alone iuſtified. This will appeare to be true in the exercies of inuocation on Gods name, and alſo of repentance. For in tentation, and conflicts with ſinne and Satan, faith doth not reaſon thus: Now I haue charitie and inherent grace, and for theſe God will accept of me. But faith doth more rightly behold the ſonne of God, as he was made a ſacrifice for vs, and ſitteth at the right hand of his Father, there making interceſſion for vs: to him, I ſay, doeth faith flie and is aſſured that for this his ſonne, God will forgiue vs all our ſinnes, and will alſo be reconciled vnto vs, yea, and account vs iuſt in his ſight, not by any quality inherent in vs, but rather by the merit of Ieſus Chriſt. Rom. 5. 19. 11. As Chriſt is made a ſinner, ſo by proportion ſuch as beleeue are made iuſt: But Chriſt was by imputation onely made and accounted a ſinner for vs. 2. Cor. 5. 21. For he became a ſurety for vs, and a ſacrifice for our ſinnes, vpon which all both the guiltines of Gods wrath, and puniſhment for vs was to bee laide. Hence is it that he is ſaid to become (κατάρα) a curſe for vs: therefore we againe are made iuſt onely by imputation. III. The contrary to condemnation is remiſſion of ſinnes, and iuſtification is the oppoſite of condemnation. Rom. 8. 33. It is God that iuſtifieth, who ſhall condeme? Therefore iuſtification is the remiſſion of ſinnes. Nowe remiſſion of ſinnes dependeth only vpon this imputation of Chriſts merits. IV. Albeit infuſed and inherent iuſtice may haue his due place, his praiſe, and alſo deſerts, yet as it is a worke of the Holy Ghoſt, it is not in this life complete, and by reaſon of the fleſh whereto it is vnited, it is both imperfect, & infected with the dregs of ſinne. Eſay. 64. Therefore before Gods iudgement ſeat it cannot claime this prerogatiue, to abſolue any from the ſentence of condemnation.

Obiect. I. This imputation is nothing els but a vaine cogitation. Anſw. I. Yes, it is a relation or diuine ordinance, whereby one relatiue is applyed to his correlatiue, or as the Logitians ſay, is as the foundation to the Terminus. II. As the imputation of our ſinnes vnto Chriſt, was indeed ſomething: ſo the imputation of Chriſts iuſtice vnto vs, muſt not be thought a bare concept. III. Againe, the Church of Rome doth her ſelfe maintaine imputatiue iuſtice namely, when as by eccleſiaſticall authoritie ſhe doth apply the merits and ſatisfactiõs of certaine perſons, vnto other members of that Church. Whence it is apparent, that euen the Popes indulgences they are imputatiue.

Obiect. II. Imputatiue iuſtice is not euerlaſting: but that iuſtice which the Meſſiah brings is euerlaſting. Anſ. Although after this life there is no pardõ of ſinnes to be looked for, yet that which is giuen vs in this life, ſhall to our ſaluation continue in the life to come.

Obiect. III. If iuſtification bee by imputation, he may before God be iuſt, who indeede is a very wicked man. Anſ. Not ſo any wayes: for he that is once by impotation iuſtified, he is alſo at that ſame inſtant ſanctified.

The XIII. Errour.

There is alſo a ſecond iuſtification, and that is obtained by workes.

The Confutation.

That popiſh deuice of a ſecond iuſtification, is a fantaſticall deluſion. For, I. the word of God doth acknowledge no more but one iuſtification at all, and that abſolute and complete of it ſelfe. There is but one iuſtice, but one ſatisfaction of God being offended: therefore there cannot be a manifold iuſtification. II. If by reaſon of the increaſe of inherent iuſtice, iuſtification ſhould bee diſtinguiſhed into ſeuerall kinds or parts, we might as well make an hundreth kinds or parts of iuſtification, as two. III. That which by order of nature doth follow after full iuſtification before God, it cannot be ſaid to iuſtifie: But good workes doe by order of nature follow mans iuſtification, and his abſolution from ſinnes: becauſe no worke can pleaſe God, except the perſon it ſelfe, that worketh the ſame, doe before pleaſe him. But no mans perſon can pleaſe God, but ſuch an one as beeing reconciled to God, by the merits of Chriſt hath peace with him. IV. Such workes as are not agreeable to the rule of regall iuſtice: they, before the tribunall Seate of God, can not iuſtifie, but rather both in, and of themſelues are ſubiect to Gods eternall curſe. For this is the ſentence of the Law, Curſed is euery one that continueth not in all things written in the booke of the Law to doe them. Nowe the workes euen of the regenerate, are not ſquared according to the rule of regall iuſtice: wherefore Dauid beeing, as it were ſtricken, with the conſideration of this, durſt not once oppoſe, no not his beſt workes to the iudgement of God, that by them he might plead pardon of his ſinnes; whence it is that hee cryeth out and ſaith, Enter not into iudgement with thy ſeruant, O Lord: for then no fleſh liuing ſhall be iuſtified in thy ſight. The like doth Iob. 9. 3. If he (namely, ſuch an one as ſaith he is iuſt) contend with God, he cannot anſwere him one of a thouſand. And Dan. 9. 18. Wee doe not preſent our ſupplications before thee for our owne righteouſneſſe, but for thy great tender mercies. V. Iuſtification by works, let them be whatſoeuer they can bee, doth quite ouerturne the foundation of our faith. Gal. 5. 2. If ye be circumciſed, Chriſt will profit you nothing. & v. 4. Ye are aboliſhed from Chriſt, whoſoeuer are iuſtified by the Law: ye are fallen from grace. In this place the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of them, not which did openly reſiſt Chriſt, and the Goſpel, but of ſuch as did with the merit of Chriſt mingle together the workes of the Lawe; as though ſome part of our ſaluation conſiſted in them. Exception. This place doth onely exclude ſuch morall workes of the fleſh, as doe goe before faith, or the workes of the law of Moſes. Anſ. This is vntrue. For euen of Abraham being alreadie regenerated, & of thoſe his works which were done when he was iuſtified, Paul ſpeaketh thus, To him, not which worketh, but which beleeueth is faith imputed. Thoſe workes which GOD hath prepared that the regenerate ſhould walke in them, are morall workes, and workes of grace; but theſe are excluded from iuſtification, and working mans ſaluation Eph. 2, 10. And Paul being regenerate ſaith thus of himſelfe, I am not guiltie vnto my ſelfe of any thing, yet am I not thereby iuſtified. VI. The cauſe of the cauſe is the cauſe of the thing cauſed: but grace without works is the cauſe of mans predeſtination, the which is the cauſe of his iuſtification: & therefore grace without works

shall much more be said to be the cause of iustification.

Obiect. I. Leuit. 18. 5. He that keepeth my statutes shall liue in them. Ans. This saying is a legall sentence: and therefore sheweth not what we can do, but what they should doe.

Obiect. II. Psal. 119. 1. Blessed are they that walke in the Law of the Lord. Ans. Man is not here saide to be blessed, because he walketh vprightly, but because the person of such a walker is by the merits of Christ, iustified before God.

Obiect. III. Iudge me according to my righteousnes. Psal. 7. And the fact of Phinees was imputed to him for righteousnes. Ans. These places are not meant of that righteousnes of the person, by which it is righteous before God; but of the righteousnes of some particular cause, or worke. For where as Dauid was accused of this crime, that he did affect Saulskingdome, he in this point doth in the words aboue mentioned, testifie his innocencie before God.

Obiect. IV. We are iudged according to our workes, therefore also by them iustified. Ans. The reason is not like: because the last iudgement is not the iustifying of a man, but a declaratiō of that iustification which he had before obtained. Therefore the last iudgement must be pronounced and taken, not from the cause of iustification, but from the effects and signes thereof.

Obiect. V. Make you friends of vnrighteous Mammon, &c. that they may receiue you into eternall habitations. Ans. This they doe, not as authors of saluation, but as witnesses of the same.

Obiect. VI. Dan. 4. 24. Redeeme thy sinnes by righteousnes, and thine iniquitie by mercie towards the poore. Ans. It is rather, breake off thy sinnes, then redeeme, for so is the originall: now men breake off their sinnes, by ceasing from the, not satisfying for them.

Obiect. VII. Euill workes condemne: therefore good workes iustifie. Ans. It followeth not because good workes are not perfectly good, as euill workes are perfectly euill.

Obiect. VIII. We are saued by hope. Rom. 8. Ans. We must distinguish betwixt iustification, and saluation: saluation is the ende, iustification, is one degree to come to the end: but there is more required to the end thē to a degree subordinate to the end: therefore we are saued by hope and faith, but iustified by faith alone.

Obiect. IX. Affliction causeth eternall glorie. 2. Cor. 4. 17. Ans. This it doth not, as by it owne nature effecting the same, but, rather, as a path and way manifesting and declaring the same.

Obiect. X. Iam. 2. 21. Abraham was iustified by workes. Ans. Not as any cause of iustification, but as a manifestation therof.

Obiect. XI. He that is iust, let him be more iust. Ans. This place must be vnderstood of iustification before men, namely, of sanctification, or an holy life: not of iustification in the sight of God.

Obiect. XII. We are iustified by faith therefore by a worke. Ans. We are iustified by faith, not as it is a vertue, and a worke, but but as it is an instrument apprehending the iustice of Christ, whereby we are iustified. And in this respect faith is said by the figure called Metonymia, to be imputed to vs vnto righteousnes.

Obiect. XIII. The workes of grace are dyed in the blood of Christ. Ans. They are indeed dyed therein, but to the end they might the better please God, not iustifie man: and whereas they are so stained as that they neede dying in the blood of Christ, therefore can they not any waies iustifie sinfull man. And the person of the worker, is as well dyed in Christs blood, as is his worke, yet he can not say that his person doth therefore iustifie him.

And as I haue now prooued that this doctrine of the Papists is very erroneous, so I also proue that it is most ridiculous. Because for a mā to say that inherent righteousnes is, by good workes, namely the fruits of righteousnes augmented; is as if a man should say, that the vine is made more fruitful by bearing grapes, or that the internall light of the sunne is augemented by the externall emission of the beames. Luthers saying is farre more true, Good workes doe not make a good man, but a good man doth make workes good.

The XIV. errour.

Grace is quite extinguished, or rather vterly lost by any mortall sinne.

The Confutation.

1. The word of God doth manifestly declare that it is farre otherwise. Ioh. 6. All that the Father giueth me, shall come vnto me: and him that commeth vnto me, I cast not out. Mat. 16. 16. Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke will I build my Church: (so that the gates of hell shall not preuaile against it. 1. Ioh. 2. 19. They went out from vs, but they were not of vs: for if they had beene of vs, they would haue continued with vs, Rom. 5.1. Beeing therefore iustified, we haue peace with God. Now how could this be true, if he that was before iustified, could any way quite fall from grace, and so perish? II. The elect after their very grieuous fallings frō God, forthwith repented them of their sinnes, as we may see in the example of Dauid, Peter, &c. the which argueth that they had not quite fallen from grace, and lost the spirit of God. III. If grace be once vtterly lost, then the ingraffing of that partie into Christ is quite abolished: therefore for such as repent, there must needes succeede a second new ingraffing into Christ: and then it will also follow, that they must of necessitie be baptized a-new, which is absurd to thinke.

But for all this, we denie not but grace may in part, and for a time be lost, to the end that the faithfull may therby acknowledge and know their weakenes, and for it be humbled: but that there is any totall or finall falling from grace, we vtterly denie.

The XV. errour.

It is possible to fulfill the Law in this life.

The Confutation.

The law is euangelically fulfilled, by beleeuing in Christ; but not legally, by doing the workes thereof. Reason. They which are carnal cannot possibly fulfil the law of God: but the most regenerate, so long as they liue in this life, are carnall in part. Rom. 7.14. I am, saith Paul of himselfe, carnall, & sold vnder sinne. Pro. 20. Who can say, Mine heart is pure, I am pure frō sin? Eccl. 7. There is none so iust vpon earth, which doth good, and sinneth not. Psal. 130. If thou Lord, obserue what is done amisse, Lord who shall abide it? We are daily taught to pray vnto God, Forgiue vs our sinnes. Exception. Indeede if the iustice of the faithfull be absolutely considered, it is imperfect, but as God doth exact it of our frailtie, it is perfect. Anſ. This is but the fansie of some doting Iesuite. For this sentance of the law is simple, eternall, and immooueable, Cursed is euery one that cōtinueth not in all things which are written in this booke to doe them. Neither may we imagine, that God will not therefore exact the full accomplishing of the law, because wee are traile. For wee are creatures and debters: now we know that the debt doth not decrease, by reason of the debters pouertie.

Obiect. The faithfull are saide to bee perfect in this life. Anſw. There is a two-fold perfection, the one incomplete, the which is an endeauour or care to obey God in the obseruation of all his precepts; the other is learned complete, this is that iustice which the law requireth, namely, a perfect and absolute iustice, according to that measure which man performed to God in his innocencie. In the first sense the faithful are said to be perfect, not in this latter.

The XVI. errour.

Workes done in grace, doe (ex condigno) condignly merit eternall life

The Confutation.

I. Eternall life is the free gift of God. Rom. 6.23. The wages of sinne is death, but the gift of God is eternall life through Christ Iesus. Therefore it is not obtained by the merit of workes. II. The merit of condignitie, is an action belonging to such a nature as is both GOD and man, not to a bare creature. For the Angels themselues cannot merit any thing at Gods hands: yea and Adam also, if he had stoode in his first innocencie, could not haue deserued nothing of God, because it is the bounden dutie of the creature to performe obedience vnto his Creator. The merit therefore of condignitie, doth onely agree vnto Christ God and man, in whom each nature doth, to the effecting of this merit performe that which belongeth to it. For the humanitie it doth minister matter vnto the meritorious worke, by suffering and performing obedience: but the Deitie of Christ, whereunto the humanitie is hypostatically vnited, doth conferre full and sufficient worthinesse vnto the worke. Hence is it that the Father doth speake thus of his sonne, Mat. 3.17. This is my beloued Sonne, in whome I am well pleased (in Matth.) III. In the second commandement God doth promise eternall life to the keepers of his commaundements, yet he saith not that they shall obtaine it by desert, but that he will shew mercie to thousands of them that loue him, and keepe his commaundements. IV. That a worke may be meritorious, first there must be an equall proportion betwixt it, and legal iustice, or eternall life: secondly, merit doth presuppose this also, that in God there must be a due debt towards man; for GOD then ought on dutie, not by fauour, to accept of the person of man. But all our workes, yea our most holy works, they cannot come neere vnto legall righteousnesse. For, seeing all the regenerate are partly carnal, and partly spiriſpirituall, all their workes in like ſort are imperfectly good. For looke what the cauſes are, ſuch muſt the effect needes be. So then, good workes doe preſuppoſe a due debt in man, none in God. V. The ancient Fathers doe not acknowledge this merit of condignity as currant. Auguſt. in his manuel, chap. 22. My merits is Gods mercy Bernard, ſerm. 68. vpon the Cant. It is ſufficient to knowe this, that merits are not ſufficient. And ſerm. 61. Cant. Mans iuſtice is Gods goodneſſe. And Epiſt. 190. That the ſatisfaction of one may be imputed to all, as the ſinnes of all were borne by one. And as for auncient Doctours, merit was nothing els to them but a good worke acceptable to God. Aug. epiſt. 105. to Sixtus. If it be grace, then is it not beſtowed by reaſon of any merit, but vpon free mercie. What merit of his owne can he that is ſet at liberty bragge of, who if he had his merits ſhould haue beene condemned? So the word merite doth ſignifie to do well, to be acceptable, to pleaſe, as the olde interpreter hath, for εὐαρεστεῖν ſignifying to pleaſe God, vſed this Latine word, promereri, to merit.

Obiect. I. Workes haue attributed vnto them reward. Anſwer. Reward is not ſo much attributed to the worke, as to the worker, and to him not for himſelfe, but for Chriſts merites apprehended by faith. Therefore not our merit, or perſonall merit, but Chriſts merit, and our rewarde are correllatiues.

Obiect. II. 2. Theſſ. 1. 6. It is a righteous thing with God to recompence tribulations, &c. Anſ. It is righteous, not becauſe God ought ſo to doe of dutie, but becauſe hee promiſed: nowe for God to ſtand to his word, it is a part of iuſtice.

Obiect. III. Chriſt hath merited, that workes might merit. Anſ. I. This taketh quite away the interceſſion of Chriſt. II. It is againſt the nature of a legall worke, to merit (ex condigno) condignly: becauſe both the lawe of nature and creation doe bind man to performe legall workes vnto God. And further, all workes are very imperfect, and mixed with ſinne. III. This doctrine concerning workes, doth obſcure and darken the merit of Chriſt: becauſe that the obtaining of eternall life is withdrawne from his death and obedience, & attributed vnto workes. For they ſay thus, that Chriſt by his paſſion did merit indeed for the ſinner iuſtification, but a ſinner once iuſtified, doth for himſelf by his own merits euen condignly merit eternall life.

Obiect. IV. The workes of the regenerate, are the works of the holy Ghoſt, therfore perfect and pure. Anſ. I. The workes of God are al perfect, but yet in their time, and by degrees: therefore ſanctification which is a worke of God, muſt in this life remaine incomplete, and is made perfect in the world to come. II. The workes of God are pure, as they are the workes of God alone, not of God and impure man: but nowe good works they doe come immediately from the naturall faculties of the ſoule, namely, from the vnderſtanding, & the will, (in which, they beeing as yet, but partly regenerated, ſome corrupt qualities of ſinne doe yet remaine) and are not immediatly and ſimply, or wholly deriued from Gods ſpirit. And hence it is that they are all ſtained with ſinne.

The XVII. error.

Man knoweth not but by eſpeciall reuelation, whether he be predeſtinated or not.

The Confutation.

The contrary to this, is a plaine trueth. Reaſon. I. That which a man muſt certainely beleeue, that may he alſo certainly knowe without an eſpeciall reuelation: but euery faithfull man muſt beleeue that he is elected. It is Gods commandement that we ſhould beleeue in Chriſt. 1. Ioh. 3. 23. Now to beleeue in Chriſt, is not onely to beleeue that we are adopted, iuſtified, and redeemed by him; but alſo in him elected from eternity. II. That which is ſealed vnto vs by the ſpirit of God, of that we are very ſure without ſpeciall reuelation: but our adoption, and ſo conſequently our election, is ſealed vnto vs by the ſpirit of god. 1. Cor. 2. 12. We haue not receiued the ſpirit of the world, but the ſpirit which is of GOD: that we might know the things that are giuen to vs of God. Therefore is our election certainely known vnto vs, Eph. 1. 13. In whom alſo ye haue truſted after that ye heard the word of trueth, euen the Goſpell of your ſaluation, wherein alſo after that ye beleeued, ye were ſealed with the holy ſpirit of promiſe.

Exception. The holy Ghoſt doth ſeale vnto vs our adoption morally by workes, and therefore the knowledge of our adoption is but onely probable. Anſwer. It ſealeth vnto vs our adoption, by begetting a ſpeciall truſt and confidence. For when as we heare Gods promiſes, and withall thinke vpon them, then doeth the holy Ghoſt by the ſame promiſes moouе our vnderſtandings and wils to imbrace them, and in mooning them, doth make vs both to giue our aſſent vnto them, and in them to reſt our ſelues: whence ariſeth a ſpeciall aſſurance that we are adopted, and in the fauour of God. Luk. 10.20. Reioyce rather that your names are written in heauen. But no man can be glad for that good which he is in doubt whether he haue receiued it or not. 1 V. 2. Pet. 1.10. Study to make your vocation and election ſure, for ſo doing &c. but this is not in reſpect of GOD, but our ſelues.

Obiect. No man muſt by the Catholike faith beleeue any thing which God hath not reuealed either in the written or vnwritten word, namely tradition. But there is no ſuch either writing or tradition as this namely, that ſuch a particular man, ſuppoſe Peter, or Henrie, is predeſtinated of God. Therefore no man muſt particularly beleeue that he is ſaued. Anſ. Albeit this particular propoſition, I am elected, is not expreſſly ſet downe in the Scriptures, yet is it incluſiuely comprehended in them, as the Species is in his Genus, as the Logicians ſpeake: ſo that it may by iuſt conſequent be gathered out of Gods word, if we reaſon thus: They which truely beleeue are elected. Ioh. 6.35. I truely beleeue: therfore I am elected. The firſt propoſition is taken from the Scriptures: the ſecond frō the beleeuers conſcience, and from them both the concluſion is eaſily deriued.

CHAP. LII.

Concerning the decree of reprobation.

THus much ſhall ſuffice for the decree of election, now followeth the decree of Reprobation.

The decree of Reprobation, is that part of predeſtination, wherby God, according to the moſt free and iuſt purpoſe of his will, hath determined to reiect certaine men vnto eternall deſtruction, and miſery, and that to the praiſe of his iuſtice. Rom. 9.21. Hath not the potter power ouer the clay, to make of the ſame lump one veſſell to honour and another to diſhonour? 1. Pet. 2.8. To them which ſtumble at the word, beeing diſobedient, vnto which thing (ἐτέθησαν) they were euen ordained. Iud. v. 4. There are certaine men crept in which were before of olde (προγεγραμμένοι) ordained to this condemnation. 1. Theſſ. 5.9. God hath not appointed vs vnto wrath, but vnto ſaluation. In the Scriptures Cain and Abel, Iſmael and Iſaac, Eſau and Iacob, are propounded vnto vs as types of mankind partly elected, and partly reiected.

Neither doe we here ſet downe any abſolute decree of damnation, as though we ſhould thinke that any were condemned by the meere and alone will of God, without any cauſes inherent in ſuch as are to be condemned. For vnto the decree of God it ſelfe, there are certaine meanes for the execution thereof annexed, and ſubordinate. And therefore though we neuer doe, or can ſeperate Gods decree, and the meanes to execute the ſame, yet doe we diſtinguiſh them, and doe conſider the purpoſe of God, ſometimes by it ſelfe alone, and ſometimes againe not by it ſelfe, but with middle cauſes ſubordinate thereto. And in this ſecond reſpect, Chriſt is ſaid to be predeſtinate: but in the former namely, as the decree is conſidered by it ſelfe, he is not predeſtinated, but togither with God the Father a predeſtinatour.

Againe, the decree of God is ſecret. I. Becauſe it ariſeth onely from the good pleaſure of God, vnſearchable, and adored of the very angels themſelues. I I. Becauſe it is not knowne, but by that which is after it, namely by the effects thereof.

CHAP. LIII.

Concerning the execution of the decree of Reprobation.

IN the executing of this decree, there is to be conſidered, the foundation or beginning, and the degrees or proceeding thereof.

The foundation of executing the decree of Reprobation, is the fall of Adam, by which fall he was ſubiect both to ſinne and damnation. Rom. 11.32. For God hath ſhut vp all in vnbeleefe, that he might haue mercy on all. 1. Pet. 2.8. Here we muſt note, that God hath ſo decreed to condemne ſome, as that notwithſtanding, al the fault and guilt of condemnation remaineth in the men onely.

Further, whome God reiecteth to condemnation, thoſe he hateth: this hatred of God is whereby he deteſteth and abhorreth the reprobate when he is fallen into ſinne, for the ſame ſinne. And this hatred which God hath to man, comes by the fal of Adam: and it is neither an antecedent nor a cauſe of Gods decree, but onely a conſequent, and followeth the decree.

Reprobates are either infants, or men of riper age:

In

In reprobate infants, the execution of Gods decree is this: assoone as they are borne, for the guilt of original and natural sinne, beeing left in Gods secret iudgement vnto themselues, they dying are reiected of God for euer. Rom. chap. 5 verse. 14. But death raigned from Adam to Moses, euen ouer them also that sinned not after the like manner of the trangression of Adam, which was the figure of him that was to come. Rom. 9.11. For ere the children were borne, and when they had neither done good nor euil, that the purpose of God might remaine according to election not by workes, but by him that calleth.

Reprobates of riper age, are of two sorts, they that are called, namely, by an vneffectuall calling, and they that are not called.

In the reprobates which are called, the execution of the decree of reprobatiō hath three degrees, to wit, an acknowledgemēt of Gods calling, a falling away againe, & condemnation.

The acknowledgement of gods calling is, whereby the Reprobates for a time, doe subiect themselues to the calling of God, which calling is wrought by the preaching of the word, Mat. 22. 14. For many are called, but fewe are chosen. And of this calling there are fiue other degrees.

The first is, the enlightning of their minides, whereby they are instructed of the holy ghost to the vnderstāding & knowledge of the word. Heb. 6. 4. For it is impossible that they which were once lightned, &c. 2. Pet. 2. 20. For if they, after they haue escaped from the filthinesse of the world, through the knowledge of the Lord, and of the Sauiour Iesus Christ, are yet rangled againe therin, & ouercome, the latter end is worse with them then the beginning.

The second, is a certaine penitencie, whereby the Reprobate, I. doth acknowledge this sinne. II. Is pricked with the feeling of Gods wrath for sinne. III. Is grieued for the punishment of sinne. IV. doth confesse his sinne. V. Acknoweledgeth God to bee iust in punishing sin. VI. Desireth to bee saued. VII. Promiseth repentance in his miserie or affliction, in these words, I wil sin no more. Math. 27. 3. Then when Iudas which betrayed him, sawe that he was condemned, he repented himselfe, and brought againe the thirtie peeces of siluer, to the cheife Priests and Elders. Heb. 12. 17. For yee knowe howe that afterward also when he would haue inherited the blessing, he was reiected: for he found no place to repentance, though hee sought the blessing with teares. 1. King. 21. 27. Now when Ahab heard those words, he rent his clothes and put sackcloth vpon him, and fasted, and lay in sackcloath, and went softly. Numb. 23. 10. Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his. Psal. 78. 32. For all this, they sinned still, and beleeued not his wondrous workes. 33. Therefore their daies did he consume in vanitie, and their yeares hastily. 34. And when he slue them, they sought him, and they returned, and sought God earely. 35. They remembred that God was their strength, and the most high God their redeemer.

The third degree is, a temporarie faith, whereby the reprobate doeth confusedly beleeue the promises of God, made in Christ, I say, confusedly, because hee beleeueth that some shall be saued, but he beleeueth not that he himselfe particularly shall be saued, because he beeing content with a generall faith, doth neuer apply the promises of God to himselfe, neither doeth he so much as conceiue any purpose, desire, or indeauour to apply the same, or any wrestling or striuing against securitie or careleſnesse and distrust. Iam. 2. 19. Thou beleeuest that there is one God, thou doest well: the deuils also beleeue it, and tremble. Math. 13. 20. And he that receiued seede in the stony ground, is he which heareth the word, and incontinently with ioy receiueth it. 21. Yet hath he no roote in himselfe, and dureth but a season. Iohn. 2. 23. Now when he was at Ierusalem at the Passeouer in the feast, many beleeued in his Name when they sawe his miracles which hee did. 24. But Iesus did not commit himselfe vnto them, because he knewe them all.

The fourth is, a tasting of heauenly giftes as of Iustification, and of Sanctification, and of the vertues of the worlde to come. This tasting is verely a sense in the hearts of the Reprobates, whereby they do perceiue and taste the excellencie of Gods benefits, notwithstāding they doe not inioy the same. For it is one thing to taste of dainties at a banquet, and another thing to feede and to bee nourished thereby. Heb. 6. 4. For it is impossible, that they which were once lightened, and haue tasted of the heauenly gifts, and were made partakers of the holy Ghost.

The fifth degree is, the outward holines of life for a time, vnder which, is comprehended a zeale in the profession of religion, a reuerence and feare towards Gods

miniſters, and amendment of life in many things, Mark. 6.20. For Herod feared Iohn, knowing that hee was a iuſt man, and an holy, and reuerenced him, and when hee heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly. Act. 18.13. Then Simon himſelfe beleeued alſo, and was baptized, and continued with Philip, and wondred when he ſawe the ſignes and great miracles which were done. Hoſ. 6. 4. O Ephraim, what ſhall I doe vnto thee? O Iudah, how ſhall I intreat thee? for your goodneſſe is as a morning cloud, and as the morning dewe it goeth away.

The ſecond degree of the execution of Gods counſell of reprobation, in men of ripe age which are called, is a falling away againe, which for the moſt part is effected and wrought after this manner. Firſt, the reprobate is deceiued by ſome ſinne. Secondly, his heart is hardened by the ſame ſinne. Thirdly, his heart beeing hardened, it becometh wicked and peruerſe. Fourthly, then followeth his incredulitie and vnbeleefe, wherby he conſenteth not to gods word, when he hath heard and knowne it. Fifthly, an Apoſtaſie, or falling away from faith in Chriſt, doeth immediately followe this vnbeleefe. Heb. 3.12,13. Take heede, brethren, leaſt at any time there bee in any of you an euill heart, and vnfaithfull to depart away from the liuing God. 1. Tim. 1.19.

This Apoſtaſie, is ſometimes ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt. In the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, wee haue theſe ſeuerall points to be conſidered: I. The name; it is called a ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, not becauſe it is done againſt the perſon, or deitie of the holy Ghoſt (for in this reſpect he that ſinneth againſt the holy Ghoſt, ſinneth in like ſort againſt both the father, & the ſonne) but it is ſo called, becauſe it is done contrarie to the immediate action, namely, the illumination of the holy ghoſt. For albeit this be an action common to the whole Trinitie, yet the Father and the Son doe effect the ſame by the holy Ghoſt. II. The efficient cauſe of it; which is a ſet and obſtinate malice againſt God, and againſt his Chriſt. Therefore when a man doth in the time of perſecution, either for feare, or raſhly denie Chriſt, he doeth not commit this ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, as may appeare by the example of Peter who denied Chriſt. Math. 26.73,74,75. Neither doth he which perſecuteth Chriſt and his Church vpon ignorance fall into this ſinne. Paul perſecuted the Church of Chriſt, and yet God had mercie on him, becauſe he did it ignorantly. 1. Tim. 1.13. Many of the Iewes crucified our Sauiour Chriſt, who afterward, becauſe they committed that grieuous fact vpon ignorance, repenting at Peters ſermon, they did obtaine remiſſion of their ſinnes. Act. 3.17. 37. III. The obiect, namely, God himſelfe, and the Mediatour Chriſt Ieſus. For the malice of this ſinne is directed againſt the very maieſtie of God himſelfe, and againſt Chriſt. Heb. 10.29. Of how much ſorer puniſhment ſuppoſe yee ſhall he be worthy, which treadeth vnder foote the ſonne of God, and counteth the blood of the teſtament as an vnholy thing, wherewith he was ſanctified, and doth deſpiſe the ſpirit of grace? Therefore this ſinne doth directly reſpect the firſt table of the moral law, and is not ſome particular ſlipping aſide from the obſeruation of thoſe commandements which are contained in this firſt table, ſuch as are ſome doubtings concerning god, or of the truth of the ſcriptures, or of Chriſt, &c. but it is a generall defection and apoſtaſie from God and that totally. IV. The ſubiect in which it is. This ſinne is found in none at all, but ſuch as haue beene enlightned by the holy Ghoſt, and haue taſted of the good gift of God. Heb. 6.4,5,6. Neither is it in him a bare cogitation alone, but an externall action, or rather ſuch a blaſphemie againſt God as proceedeth from a malitious and obſtinate heart. Math. 12.31. V. The Elect cannot commit this ſinne: and therefore they who feele in themſelues a ſure teſtimonie of their election, neede neuer to deſpaire: nay, this ſin is not in euery reprobate: for many of them die before they haue this illumination by Gods ſpirit. VI. This ſinne cannot be forgiuen, not becauſe it is greater then that Chriſts merit can ſatisfie for it, but becauſe after a man hath once committed this ſin, it is impoſſible for him to repent. For the gift of repentance proceedeth from the holy ghoſt, and the holy Ghoſt remaineth in vs thorough Chriſt apprehended by faith: nowe no mā doth apprehend Chriſt, that doeth malitiouſly deſpiſe and contemne him. VII. It is very hard to know when a man committeth this ſinne, becauſe the roote thereof, namely, ſet malice, lurketh inwardly in the heart, and is not ſo eaſily diſcerned.

Out of al this which hath beene ſpoken, we may thus define this ſinne. The ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt is a voluntarie, and obſtinate deniall of, & blaſphemie againſt the

A frame of the doctrine of Predeſtination, out of the writings of ſome later Diuines in Germanie.

Gods eternall decree, whereby he decreed

1. To create mankinde.

2. To giue a law to his creature with condition both of life and death.

3. After the giuing of the law to permit the fall.

4. To redeeme all mankind in Chriſt; ſo that election is in this place made vniuerſall.

5. To call mankind ſo redeemed in time: here is an vniuerſall vocation.

Predeſtination or ſpeciall election, whereby God purpoſed with himſelfe vpon his meere mercie, to beſtow faith vpon ſome certain of Adams poſteritie called: and in like ſort freely, not by faith or works foreſeene to iuſtifie, & glorifie.

the Sonne of God, or that trueth which was before acknowledged concerning him, and ſo conſequently an vniuerſal defection from GOD and his true Church. We haue an example of this ſinne partly in the deuill, who albeit he knewe well enough that Ieſus was that Chriſt, yet hee neuer ceaſed both wittingly and willingly with all his power to oppugne the ſacred Maieſtie of GOD, togither with the kingdome of Ieſus Chriſt, and, as far forth as he could, vtterly to ſupplant the ſame, partly in the Phariſes, Math. 12. 38. Ioh. 3. 2.

After Apoſtaſie followeth pollution, which is the very fulneſſe of all iniquitie, altogither contrary to ſanctification. Gen. 15. 16. And in the fourth generation they ſhal come hither againe, for the wickednes of the Amorites is not yet full.

The third degree is damnation, whereby the Reprobates are deliuered vp to eternall puniſhment. The execution of damnation beginneth in death, and is finiſhed in the laſt iudgemet. Luk. 16. 22. And it was ſo that the beggar died, and was carried by the Angel into Abrahams boſome: the rich man alſo died and was buried. 23. And beeing in hell torments, he lift vp his eies and ſaw Abraham a far off, and Lazarus in his boſome.

The execution of the decree of reprobation in Infidels, which are not called is this. Firſt, they haue by nature ignorance and vanitie of mind. After that followeth hardneſſe of heart, whereby they become void of all ſorrowe for their ſinnes. Then commeth a reprobate ſenſe, which is, when the naturall light of reaſon, and of the iudgement of good and euill, is extinguiſhed. Afterward when the heart ceaſeth to ſorrow, then ariſeth a committing of ſinne with greedineſſe. Then commeth pollution, which is the fulneſſe of ſinne. Laſtlie, a iuſt reward is giuen to al theſe, to wit, fearfull condemnation, Eph. 4. 18. Hauing their cogitations darkened, and being ſtrangers from the life of God through the ignorace that is in them, becauſe of the hardneſſe of their hearts. Rom. 1. 28. For as they regarded not to knowe God, euen ſo God deliuered them vp to a reprobate mind, to doe thoſe things which are not conuenient.

CHAP. LIV.

Concerning a newe deuiſed doctrine of Predeſtination, taught by ſome new and late Diuines.

CErtaine new Diuines of our age, haue of late erected vp a newe doctrine of Predeſtination, in which, fearing belike, leaſt they ſhould make GOD both vniuſt and vnmercifull, they doe in the diſtribution of the cauſes of ſaluation and damnation, turne them vpſide downe: as may appeare by their deſcription in this table.

But this their doctrine hath ſome foule errours and defects, the which I, according as I ſhall be able, will briefly touch.

The I. Errour.

There is a certaine vniuerſall or generall election, whereby God, without any either reſtraint, or exception of perſons, hath decreed to redeeme by Chriſt, and to reconcile vnto himſelfe all mankind wholly, fallen in Adam, yea euery ſingular perſon, as well the Reprobate, as the elect.

The Confutation.

The very name of Election doeth fully confute this: for none can be ſaide to be elected, if ſo be that God would haue al men elected in Chriſt. For he that electeth, or maketh choice, cannot be ſaid to take all: neither can he that accepteth of all, be ſaid to make choice onely of ſome.

Obiect. Election is nothing els but dilection, or loue: but this we knowe, that God loueth all his creatures; therfore he electeth all his creatures.

Anſwer. I. I denie that to elect is to loue, but to ordaine and appoint to loue. Rom. 9. 13. 11. God doth loue all his creatures, yet not all equally, but euery one in their place.

Furthermore this poſition doth flatly repugne the moſt plain places of holy ſcripture. Tit. 2. 14. Who gaue himſelfe for vs, that he might redeeme vs from all iniquitie, and purge vs to be a peculiar people vnto himſelfe. Iohn, 20. I giue my life for my ſheepe. Exception. All men are the ſheepe of Chriſt. Anſwer. Iohn addeth, and my ſheepe heare my voice, and I knowe them, and they follow me, and I giue vnto them eternal life, neither ſhall they periſh. Eph. 5. 23. Chriſt is the head of the Church, and the ſame is the Sauiour of his bodie, verſe, 25. Chriſt loued the Church, and gaue himſelfe for it. Redemption, and remiſſion of ſinnes, is the inheritance of the Saints, and of ſuch as are made heires of the kingdome of Chriſt, Coloſſ. 1. 13.

Againe, looke for whom Chriſt is an aduocate, to them onely is he a redeemer, for redemption and interceſſion, which are parts of Chriſts prieſthood, the one is as generall and large as the other, and are ſo ſurely vnited and faſtened togither, as that one cannot be without the other. But Chriſt is only an aduocate of the faithfull. Iohn. 17. In that his ſolemne praier, he firſt praieth for his owne, namely, his diſciples, elected not onely to the Apoſtleſhip but alſo to eternall life: and then verſe. 20. he praieth likewiſe for them that ſhould beleeue in him by their word. Now againſt theſe, he oppoſeth the world, for which he praieth not that it may attaine eternall life. And Rom. 8. Who ſhall accuſe Gods elect? Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of the father & maketh interceſſion for vs. Furtheremore, the members of Chriſts Church are called the Redeemed of the Lord, Pſal. 87. Therefore this priuiledge is not giuen to all alike.

Exception. This vniuerſal reconciliation is not in reſpect of man, but God himſelfe, who, both made it for all, and offereth it to all. Anſ. If Chriſt became once before God a reconciliation for all mens ſinnes, yea and alſo ſatisfied for them all, it muſt needes followe that before God all thoſe ſinnes muſt be quite blotted out of his remembrance. For the actuall blotting out of ſinnes, doth inſeparably depend vpon reconciliation for ſinnes: and ſatisfaction doth infer by God, and that neceſſarily, the very reall and generall aboliſhment of the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne.

Obiect. I. Chriſt tooke vpon him mans nature: therefore he redeemed mans nature generally. Anſwer. I. It followeth not, except we would ſay that Chriſt redeemed his owne humanity, which cannot be any waies poſſible. II. Euery woman doth partake the humane nature of euery man, yet is not euery man each womans husband, but hers alone, with whome by the couenant in matrimony, hee is made one fleſh: and in like ſort Chriſt did by his incarnation (ſua ὁμοιώσει) take alſo vpon him mans nature, and that comon to all Adams progenie, yet is he the husband of his Church alone, by another more peculiar coniunction, namely, the bond of the ſpirit and of faith. And by it the Church is become fleſh of his fleſh, and bone of his bone. Eph. 5. 20. And therefore ſhee alone may iuſtly claime title to the death of Chriſt and al his merits.

Obiection. II. Chriſts redemption is as generall, as Adams fall was: and therefore it appertaineth to all Adams poſteritie. Anſwer. Adam was a type of Chriſt, and Chriſt a counter-type correſpondent to Adam. Adam was the roote of all his ſucceſſours, or all that ſhould come of him from the which firſt Adam, was ſinne and death deriued: againe, Chriſt he is alſo a roote, but of the elect onely, and ſuch as beleeue, to whome, from him, proceede righteouſneſſe, and life eternall. He cannot be ſaid to be the roote of all, and euery ſingular man, becauſe that all doe not drinke and receiue this his righteouſneſſe, & life, neither are they actually by him made righteous. Rom. 22. 17. 19. Obiect. The benefit of Chriſts death redounded to all. Anſwer. It did, to all that beleeue. For as Adam deſtroyed all thoſe that were borne of him: ſo Chriſt doeth iuſtifie and ſaue all thoſe that are borne anewe by him, and none other. Obiect. If that Adams ſin deſtroyed al, and Chriſts merit doth not ſaue all: then is Adams ſinne more forcible to condemne, then Chriſts mercie is to ſaue. Anſwer. We muſt not eſteeme of the mercie of Chriſt by the number of men which receiue mercie (for ſo indeede I grant, that as Adams fall made all vniuſt, ſo the mercy of Chriſt and his redemption ſhould actually iuſtifie all) but we muſt rather meaſure it by the efficacie and dignitie therof, then by the number on whome it is beſtowed. For it was a more eaſie thing to deſtroy all by ſinne, then by grace to ſaue but one. Man beeing but meere mā, could deſtroy all: but to ſaue euen one, none could doe it, but ſuch an one as was both GOD and man.

Obiect. III. Many places of Scripture there are which affirme this, that the benefit of Chriſts death doeth appertaine vnto all, Rom. 11. God hath ſhutte vp all vnder ſinne, that he might haue mercie vpon all. 1 Tim. 24. God would haue all men to be ſaued 2. Pet. 2. 9. God would not haue any to periſh, but all come to repentance. Anſwer. I. You muſt vnderſtand, all that beleeue: as it is Math. 11. 28. All that are wearie, and heauie laden Ioh. 3. 6. All that beleeue Gal. 3. 23. The. Scripture hath concluded all vnder ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt, ſhould be giuen to them which beleeue. Acts. 10. 43. All which beleeue. And ſurely there is as well a generalitie of them that beleeue, as of the whole world. II Wee may vnderſtand by [all] of all ſorts ſome, not euery ſingular perſon of all ſorts. So, Reu. 5. 9. Chriſt is ſaid to haue redeemed ſome out of euery kindred, and tounge, & people, and nation. And Gal. 3. 28. There is neither Iewe nor Grecian, neither bond nor free, there there is neither male nor female, for yea are all one in Chriſt Ieſus, Math. 4. Chriſt is ſaid to haue healed euery diſeaſe, that it, euery kind of diſeaſe. And Auguſtine to this purpoſe hath a fit rule. All is often vſed for many, as Rom. 5. 18. 19. Auguſtine in his Manuel to Laur. chap. 103. It is thus ſaid (ſaith Auguſtine) God would haue all to be ſaued, not becauſe there was no man which he would haue damned, who therefore would not doe miracles amongſt them, which would as he ſaith, haue repented, if he had done miracles, but that by all men, we ſhould vnderſtand all ſorts of men, howeſoeuer diſtinguiſhed, whether Kings, priuate perſons, &c. And in his booke de Corrept. & gratia, chap. 14. It is ſaid, he would haue all to be ſaued, ſo as we muſt vnderſtand all ſuch as are predeſtinate to be ſaued, becauſe amongſt them there are of all ſorts of men, as he ſaid to the Phariſes, Turne the eare hearke, III. Theſe two, to be willing to ſaue man, and that he ſhould come to the ſauing knowledge of the trueth, are vnſeparably vnited togither. 1. Tim. 2. 4. But the ſecond we ſee doth not agree to all and euery ſingular perſon: therfore the firſt cannot.

Obiect. IV. In many places of ſcripture Chriſt is ſaid to redeeme the world, as 1. Iohn. 2. 2. He is a propitiation for the ſinnes of the whole world. Anſ. This worde world, ſignifieth, I. the frame of heauen and earth. II. All men both good and bad togither. III. The companie of vnbeleeuers, and malignant haters of Chriſt. IV. The congregation of the elect, diſperſed ouer the face of the whole earth, and to be gathered out of the ſame. In this fourth ſignification we muſt vnderſtand ſuch places as are aboue mentioned. Abraham is called the heire of the world, Rom. 4. 13. that is, of many nations, Gen. 17. 45.

Obiect. V. God will not the death of a ſinner, but rather that he repent and liue, Ezec. 18. 23. Anſw. Auguſtine in his firſt booke to Simplicius, 2. queſt. anſwereth this queſtion. You muſt (ſaith he) diſtinguiſh betwixt man, as he is he the man, and man as hee is a ſinner. For God is not delighted with the deſtruction of man, as he is man, but as he is a ſinner: neither will he ſimply the death of any as he is a ſinner, or as it is the ruine and deſtruction of his creature: but in that by the deteſtation and reuenge of ſinne with eternall death, his glorie is exceedingly aduanced. God therefore will the death of a ſinner, but as it is a puniſhment, that is, as it is a meanes to declare & ſet out his diuine iuſtice: and therefore it is an vntruth for a man to ſay that God would haue none condemned. For whereas men are once condemned, it muſt be either with Gods will or with out it: if without it, then the wil of God muſt needs ſuffer violēce, the which to affirme is great impietie: if with his will, God muſt needes change his ſentence before ſet downe, but we muſt not preſume to ſay ſo.

Obiect. VI. God is the Father of all, Malach. 2. 10. Anſ. This place is ment of Gods church, out of which all men, ſtanding in that corrupt eſtate by Adam, are the children of wrath, and of the deuill, Eph. 2. 2. Ioh. 8. 44.

Obiect. VII. If God did elect ſome, and reiect others, he muſt needes be [προσωποληπτης] a reſpecter of perſons. Anſwer. I. One is ſaid then to accept, or haue reſpect of perſons, when as hee by ſome circumſtances inherent in the perſon, is mooued to doe this or that. Nowe, as for God, he did vpon his meere pleaſure elect ſome, and reiect others eternally, not mooued or vrged therevnto by any thing whatſoeuer out of himſelfe. II. He is debter to none, but may by good right doe with his creatures what ſeemeth good vnto him in his owne eyes. III. It is one thing with God to accept of perſons, & another to make choiſe of men. This if we ſhould not grant, it would followe that God muſt be deemed blame-worthie, becauſe he made not all his creatures moſt glorious angels.

Obiect. VIII. If God decreed to reiect certaine men, then did he hate his creature. Anſ. God decreed to reiect his creature and workemanſhip, not becauſe he hated it, but becauſe he appointed it to hatred. And it is one thing to hate, and another to appoint to hatred. And indeed God doth not actually hate any thing, but for ſinne. That ſaying of Auguſtine to Simplicius is fit for this purpoſe. When God maketh the wicked, whome he doth not inſtiſie, veſſels of wrath, he doth it not to hate that which he made: for in that he made them veſſels, they haue their vſe, namely, that by their paines to which they were ordained, the veſſels of honour might reap profit. God therefore doth not hate them, in that they are men, or veſſels, neither any thing that he made in thē by creation, or ordinatiō. For God hateth nothing which hee hath made. But in as much as he made thē veſſels of deſtruction, he did it to inſtruct others. As for their impietie, which he neuer made, that he hateth vtterly.

As therefore a iudge hateth theft in a man, but he doth not hate his punishment that he is sent to worke in the mines. For the theefe doth the first, the iudge the latter: so God whereas of the companie of them that perish, he maketh vessels of perdition, he doth not therefore hate that which he doth, that is, the condemnation of those which perish in their due punishment for sinne.

Obiect. IX. The reprobates are said in many places of scripture to be redeemed by Christ, as 2. Pet. 2. 1. Answ. First, we must not vnderstand such places meant of all reprobates, but of such as are for a time in the Church. II. They are said to be redeemed, iustified, and sanctified, both in their owne iudgements, and the Churches also, in as much as they make an externall profession of the faith. But this is a iudgement of charitie, not of certentie.

Obiect. X. God might be thought cruell, if that he had ordained the greatest part of the world to destruction. Answ. God could well enough haue decreed, that euen all men should vtterly haue beene reiected, and yet he should haue beene neuer a whit either cruell or vniust. Reasons. I. He adiudged all and euery one of those foule and wicked spirits which fell from him to eternall torments. II. He decreed also, as is apparent by the euent, that men should liue by the slaughter of beasts; and yet God is not therefore cruell against them: and surely God is no more bounden vnto man, then vnto the very bruit beasts.

Exception. God appointed all to be saued, with this caueat and condition, If they beleeue. Answ. This is absurd to affirme: for I. by this meanes the decree of God should depend vpon the will of man, when as contrarily Gods decree doth limit and order all inferiour causes. II. It quite taketh away the certaintie of gods decree, because a conditionall proposition doth set downe nothing as beeing, or, it doth not certainly affirme any thing.

Obiect. If the merit of Christ did not extend it selfe as farre as the fall of Adam, then is not the head of the Serpent broken, nor Sathans kingdome abolished by Christ. Answ. This bruising of the Serpents head, is seene in them onely which are at enmitie with the Serpent, namely in such as truely beleeue. Gen. 3. 15. compared with Rom. 16. 20.

To conclude, that is not true which they say, namely, that this opinion of an vniuersall and effectuall redemption of euery singular man, is a notable remedie to cōfort afflicted cōsciences. For I appeale to the iudgement of all men, whether there is in this manner of consolation, any great comfort to the conscience afflicted.

Christ died for all men:
Thou art a man:
Therefore Christ died for thee.

The II. Errour.

God did foreknow the fall of Adam, but he did not by his eternal decree forordaine the same and therefore that his fall was without the agent permission of God.

The confutation.

It is false. For, I. there is not the least thing in nature, but it commeth to passe by the decree and will of God. Math. 10. 30. Wherefore such as affirme, that God did onely foreknow this, or that, they doe either quite ouerturne the prouidence of GOD, or at the least imagine that it is a very idle prouidence. II. The fact of Herod and Pilate, in deliuering Christ against their owne consciēces, to be crucified, may seme to be as heinous as was Adams fall, and yet they are said to haue done that, which the hand of the Lord had fore-ordained to be done. Act. 4. 28. Againe the fall of Adam was two manner of waies by Gods active, or rather operatiue permission. I. In as much as the fall was an action: for in God alone we liue, we mooue, and haue our beeing. II. In as much as that his fall was but a bare triall of his loyaltie to God, whereby God would trie both the power and will of his creature.

The III. errour.

God by reason that he did foresee the disobedience of some, or, that they would contemne the Gospell, did decree their destruction and condemnation.

The confutation.

We vtterly denie, that the foreseeing of the contempt of grace in any, was the first and principall cause of the decree of reprobation. Reasons. I. Paul, Rom. 1. doeth deriue the common condemnation of the Gentiles from hence, namely, that they withheld the truth in vnrighteousnesse, that is, because they did wittingly extinguish that light of nature, by their wicked doings, which they had of the knowledge of God and would not obey their consciences inwardly checking them for the same. II. If that faith foreseene, be not the cause of the decree of election, it can not be that the

the want of faith foreſeene, ſhould be the cauſe of the decree of reprobation; but rather as faith doeth in order of cauſes followe after election, ſo muſt incredulity reprobation. For there is the like reaſon or proportion of contraries. III. Many infants depart this life, both beeing out of the true Church and before they haue any vſe of reaſon: and againe, many there are, which albeit they liue long, yet beeing either idiots and fooles or borne deafe, they cannot come to the true vſe of reaſon: in all which it is not credible that their ſhould be ſuſpected any contempt of the Goſpell which they could not learne. IV. Eſau was hated of God for none other cauſe, but for that it ſo pleaſed him. Rom. 9, 18. V. If this opinion ſhould bee true, then would it followe that men ſhould be condemned for nothing els but incredulitie, the which is not ſo. Iohn, 3. 36. Chriſt ſpeaking of vnbeleefe, ſaith not that for it the wrath of God came vpon man, but remaineth vpon him. And why ſhould we dayly aske pardon for our ſinnes, if nothing but incredulity or vnbeleefe condemned vs? nay, although that there were neuer any contempt of the Goſpell, yet that corruption of originall ſinne, were ſufficient enough to condemne men. VI. Alſo that admiration which Paul hath, Rom 9. 20. O man, who art thou, which diſputeſt with God! doth plainly ſhewe that the cauſe of the decree of God in reiecting ſome, is vnſearchable: and that it doth not at all depēd vpon any foreſeene contumacie towardes the grace of God offered in the Goſpell. For if it were otherwiſe, wee might eaſily giue a reaſon of Gods decree. Auguſt. epiſt. 105. ſaith very well. Who (ſaith hee) created the Reprobates, but God? and why, but becauſe it pleaſed him? but why pleaſed it him? O man, who art thou that diſputeſt with God?

Some Diuines perceiuing that this is an hard ſentence, they goe about to mitigate it in this ſort. The matter, ſay they, or obiect of predeſtination, is a reaſonable creature, and that not ſimply or abſolutely conſidered, but partly as it fell, partly as of it ſelfe it was ſubiect to fall: and thereupon God preordaining men from euerlaſting, conſidered them, not ſimply as he was to make them men, but as they were ſuch men as might fal into ſinne, and againe bee redeemed by Chriſt, and after called to the light of the Goſpell. The efficient or firſt motiue cauſe, was not any foreknowne cauſe, either this or that, but the meere will of God. For he diſpoſeth all things not of, and by his fore-knowledge, but rather according to the ſame. But theſe things albeit they may ſeeme to be ſubtile deuiſes, yet are they not altogether true. Reaſons. I. The Potter when he purpoſeth to make ſome veſſell, doeth not conſider the clay, and regard in it ſome inherent quality, to make ſuch a veſſell, but he maketh it of ſuch and ſuch a forme, to this or that vſe, euen of his alone free-will and pleaſure. II. Rom. 9. 21. Hath not the potter power to make of the ſame lumpe one veſſell to honour, and another to diſhonour? In which place we may not vnderſtand by the name lumpe, all mankind corrupted and fallen, and ſo to be reedeemed in Chriſt: for then Paul would not haue ſaid that God made veſſels of wrath, but rather that hee did forſake them after they were made. III. This ſeemeth prepoſterous, that God did firſt foreknowe mankinde created, fallen, and redeemed in Chriſt: and that afterward hee ordained them ſo foreknowne to life or to death. For the end is the firſt thing in the intention of the agent: neither will a moſt skilfull workeman firſt prepare meanes by which he may bee helped to doe a thing, before he hath ſet downe in his mind al the ends, both ſuch as are moſt neere, and them that are very farre off. Nowe we knowe this, that mans creation, and his fall in Adam, are but meanes to execute Gods predeſtination, and therefore are ſubordinate vnto it: but the ende of Gods decree is the manifeſtation of his glory in ſauing ſome, and condemning others. Therefore we may not once imagine thet God did firſt conſult of the meanes whereby he determined to execute his decree, before he deliberated of the election, and reprobation of man.

The IV. error.

Gods calling to the knowledge of the Goſpell is vniuerſall, yea of all men and euery ſingular perſon, without exception.

The Confutation.

This is a very vnreaſonable poſition. Reaſons. I. God would not haue all men called, Matth. 20. 16. Many are called, but fewe are choſen. He ſaith not that all, but many are called. Chriſt in his Diſciples firſt ambaſſage, chargeth them that they ſhould not preach to the Gentiles of his comming: & to the cannanitiſh woman hee ſaith, It is not lawfull to giue that which is holy vnto dogges. Math. 13, 11. It is not giuen to euery one to know the myſteries of the kingdoe of God. Rom. 16. 25. The myſterie of the Gospell (whether it be meant of Christ, or the calling of the Gentiles) was kept secret from the beginning of the world. II. There be many millions of men, which haue not so much as heard of Christ. Act.14.16. God in times past suffered all the Gentiles to walke in their owne waies. III. The greatest part of the world hath euer bin out of the couenant. Eph.2.12. Ye were, I say, at that time without Christ, and were aliants from the commonwealth of Israell, and strangers from the couenants of promise, and had no hope, & were without God in the world: but nowe ye are no more strangers and forreners, but citizens with the Saints.

Obiect. They are said to be [ἀπηλλοτριωμένοι] not simply alienated, but abalienated from God: nowe howe could they be abalienated, except either they or their predecessors had beene in the couenant? Answ. The Gentiles are not said to be abalienated from the couenant, but from the common wealth of Israel: because that God had then by certaine lawes, rites, and ceremonies, vterly seuered, and distinguished the people of the Iewes from all other nations.

Obiect. This generall calling is not to be vnderstood simply of the ministery of the word, but of the will of God deliuered presently after the fall in his vnwritten word, but afterward in his written worde: and this all men ought to knowe, although many, through their owne default knowe it not. Answ. But the Scriptures were committed to the custodie of the Church of God, and euery one was not credited with them. Rom.3.2. Vnto the Iewes were of credit committed the Oracles of God. 1.Tim.3.15 The Church is the pillar and ground of trueth. Psal.147.19 He shewed his words vnto Iacob, and his statutes and lawes to the house of Israel. 20. He hath not dealt so with euery nation: therfore they haue not knowne his lawes. Psal.76.1. The Lord is famous in Iudea, & in Israel is his name great.

Obiect. The couenant of Grace was made with Adam and Eue, and in them all mankinde was receiued both into the Church, and couenant, and also called to the knowledge of God. Answ. I. This reason wanteth euen common reason and sense, to say that God giuing his promise in the daies of Adam and Noah, did in them call all mankinde that should come after. II. Adam before his fall, did indeede receiue the grace both for himselfe and for others also; and in the fall, he lost it both for himselfe, and for all others: but after the fall, he receiued the promise for himselfe alone, and not for the whole world, otherwise the first Adam should not onely haue beene a liuing creature, but a quickening spirit, the which is proper to the second Adam. 1.Cor. 15.45.

The conclusion.

If we should graunt this doctrine to bee true, then must we needes allowe of these absurdities in diuinity, which followe. I. That God would haue all, and each singular man to be saued: and withall he would hath some ordained to hatred and perdition: or, That in regard of God, all men are elected, and redeemed, but in regard of the euent manie perish. II. The guilt of Adams sinne must not be imputed to any one of his posterity, because that God, hauing mercie of all generally in Christ, did take into the couenant of reconciliation al mankind. Nowe if but the guiltinesse of Adams fal be taken away, the punishment foorthwith ceaseth to be a punishment, and corruption it selfe is by little and little abolished in all men.

CHAP. LV.

Of the state and conditon of the Reprobates when they are dead.

THe death of the Reprobate, is a separation of the body and the soule: of the body, that for a time it may lie dead in the earth: of the soule that it may feele the torments of hell, euen vntill the time of the last iudgement: at which time the whole man shall be cast into the most terrible and fearefull fire of hel. 1.Pet.3.19. By the which hee also went and preached vnto the spirits that are in prison. Luke.8. 2.Pet.2.4. For if God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them downe into hell, and deliuered them into chaines of darkenesse to be kept vnto damnation, &c.

The reprobate when they die; doe become without sense and astonished like vnto a stone: or else they are ouerwhelmed with a terrible horrour of conscience, and despairing of their saluation, as it were with a gulfe of the sea ouerturning them. 1.Sam. 25.37. Then in the morning when the wine was gone out of Nabal, his wife told him those wordes, and his heart died within him, and hee was like a stone. 38. And about ten daies after the Lord smote Nabal that he died. Mat.27.5. And when he had cast downe the silver peeces in the temple, he departed, and went and hanged himselfe.

CHAP.

CHAP. LVI.

Of the condemnation of the Reprobates at the laſt iudgement.

IN the laſt iudgement, at the ſound of the trumpet, the liuing beeing ſtricken with horrour and feare, ſhall bee changed in a moment, the dead ſhall riſe againe to condemnation: both the liuing and the dead ſhall then haue immortal bodies, but without glorie: and they ſtanding vpon the earth at the left hand of Chriſt the iudge, ſhall heare the ſentence of condemnation: Depart from me ye curſed into euerlaſting fire which is prepared for the deuill and his angels. Ioh. 5.29. And they ſhall come forth that haue done good, vnto the reſurrection of life: but they that haue done euill, vnto the reſurrection of condemnation. Math. 25.41. 1. Theſſ. 4.16. For the Lord himſelfe ſhall deſcend from heauen with a ſhout, and with the voice of the Archangell, and with the trumpet of God, and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt. 17. Then ſhal we, which liue and remaine, bee caught vp with them alſo in the cloudes, to meete the Lord in the ayre: and ſo ſhall we be euer with the Lord.

CHAP. LVII.

Of the eſtate of the Reprobates in hell.

AFter that the ſentence of condēnation is pronounced, then followeth euerlaſting death: wherof this is the eſtate.

I. The Reprobates are ſeparated from the preſence and glorie of God.

II. They are puniſhed with eternall confuſion, and moſt bitter reproches: becauſe all their ſecret wickednesſes and ſins are reuealed. 2. Theſſ. 1.9 Which ſhall be puniſhed with euerlaſting perdition, from the preſence of the Lorde, and from the glorie of his power. Mat. 5.8. Bleſſed are the pure in heart, for they ſhall ſee God. 1. Iohn, 2.28. And nowe little children, abide in him, that when he ſhall appeare, wee may be bold, and not bee aſhamed before him at his comming.

III. They haue fellowſhippe with the deuill and his angels, Math. 25.41.

IV. They are wholly in bodie and ſoule tormented with an incredible horrour, and exceeding great anguiſh, through the ſenſe and feeling of Gods wrath, powred out vpon them for euer. Eſay, 66.24. And they ſhall goe foorth, and looke vpon the carkaſſes of men, that haue tranſgreſſed againſt me: for their worme ſhall not die, neither ſhall their fire bee quenched and they ſhall bee an abhorring vnto all fleſh.

Hereupon is the puniſhment of thoſe that are condēned, called hel fire, a worme, weeping, & guaſhing of teeth, vtter darkeneſſe, &c. Reu. 21.8. But the fearefull, and vnbeleeuing, and the abhominable, and murtherers, and whoremongers, and ſorcerers, and Idolaters, and all lyars, ſhall haue their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimſtone, which is ſecond death. Math. 13.42. And ſhall caſt them into a furnace of fire, there ſhall bee weeping and gnaſhing of teeth. Eſai. 66.24.

A Corollarie.

AND this is the full execution of Gods decree of reprobation, whereby appeareth the great iuſtice of God in puniſhing ſinne: from whence alſo commeth Gods glorie, which hee propoundeth to himſelfe, as the laſt and chiefeſt end in all theſe things: Therefore let euery Chriſtian propound the ſame end vnto himſelfe, Rom. 9.14. What ſhall wee ſay then? is there vnrighteouſneſſe with God? God forbid. 15. For hee ſaid to Moſes, I will haue mercie on him to whome I will ſhewe mercie: and will haue compaſſion on him, on whome I will haue compaſſion. 16. So then, it is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercie. 17. For the Scripture ſaith vnto Pharaoh, For this ſame purpoſe haue I ſtirred thee vp, that I might ſhewe my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth. 1. Cor. 10.31. Whether therefore yee eate or drinke, or whatſoeuer yee doe, doe all to the glorie of God.

CHAP. LVIII.

Of the application of Predeſtination.

THE right applying of Predeſtination to the perſons of men, is very neceſſarie: and it hath two parts. The firſt is, the iudgement of particular predeſtination, and the ſecond is, the vſe of it.

The iudgement & diſcerning of a mans owne predeſtination, is to bee performed by meanes of theſe rules which follow.

I. The Elect alone, and al they that are elect, not onely may bee, but alſo in Gods good time, are ſure of Election in Chriſt to eternall life. 1. Cor. 2.12. 2. Cor. 13.5.

II. They haue not this knowledge from the firſt cauſes of Election, but rather from the laſt effects thereof: and they are eſpecially two: The teſtimonie of Gods ſpirit, and the workes of Sanctification. 2. Pet. 1. 10. Rom. 8. 16.

III. If any doubt of this teſtimonie, it will appeare vnto them, whether it come from the ſpirit of God, or their owne carnall preſumption: Firſt, by a full perſwaſion which they ſhall haue; for the holy ghoſt will not barely ſay it, but perſwadeth ſuch, that they are the children of GOD, the which the fleſh can not in any wiſe do. Secondly, by the manner of perſwaſion: for the holy Ghoſt draweth not reaſons from the workes, or worthineſſe of man, but from Gods fauour and loue: and this kind of preſwaſion is farre different from that which Satan vſeth. Thirdly, by the effects of that teſtimony. For if the perſwaſion ariſe from preſumption, it is a dead perſwaſion: but contrarily, it is moſt liuely & ſtirring, if it come from the holy Ghoſt. For ſuch as are perſwaded that they are elected, and adopted children of God, they will loue God, they will truſt in him, and they will call vpon him with their whole heart.

IV. If the teſtimonie of Gods ſpirit be not ſo powerfull in the elect, then may they iudge of their election, by that other effect of the holy Ghoſt; namely, Sanctification: like as we vſe to iudge by heate that there is fire, when we cannot ſee the flame it ſelfe.

V. And of all the effects of ſanctification, theſe are moſt notable. I. To feele our wants, and in the bitterneſſe of heart to bewaile the offence of GOD in euery ſinne. II. To ſtriue againſt the fleſh, that is, to reſiſt, and to hate the vngodly motions thereof, and with griefe to thinke them burthenous and troubleſome. III. To deſire earneſtly and vehemently the grace of GOD, and merit of Chriſt to obtaine eternall life. IV. When it is obtained, to accoũt it a moſt pretious iewel. Phil. 3. 8. V. To loue the miniſter of Gods word, in that he is a miniſter, and a Chriſtian, in that he is a Chriſtian: and for that cauſe, if neede require, to be readie to ſpend our bloode with them. Math. 10. 42. 1. Iohn, 3. 16. VI. To call vpon GOD earneſtly, and with teares. VII. To deſire and loue Chriſts comming, and the daie of iudgement, that an ende may be made of the daies of ſinne. VIII. To flie all occaſions of ſinne, and ſeriouſlly to endeauour to come to come to newneſſe of life. IX. To perſeuer in theſe things to the laſt gaſpe of life. Luther hath a good ſentence for this purpoſe. He that will ſerue god, muſt, ſaith he, beleeue that which cannot be ſeene, hope for that which is deferred, and loue God when he ſheweth him ſelfe an enemie, and thus remaine to the ende.

VI. Nowe, if ſo be all the effects of the ſpirit are very feeble in the godly, they muſt knowe this, that God trieth them, yet ſo, as they muſt not therewith be diſmaied, becauſe it is moſt ſure, that if they haue faith, but as much as a graine of muſtard ſeed, and be as weake as a young infant is, it is ſufficient to engraffe them into Chriſt, and therefore they muſt not doubt of their election, becauſe they ſee their faith feeble, & the effects of the holy Ghoſt faint within them.

VII. Neither muſt he, that as yet hath not felt in his heart any of thoſe effects, preſently conclude that he is a Reprobate: but let him rather vſe the word of God, & the ſacraments, that he may haue an inward ſenſe of the power of Chriſt, drawing him vnto him, and an aſſurance of his redemption by Chriſts death and paſſion.

VIII. No man may peremptorily ſet downe, that himſelfe, or any other is a reprobate. For God doeth oftentimes prefer thoſe which did ſeeme to be moſt of all eſtranged from his fauour, to be in his kingdome aboue thoſe, who in mans iudgement were the children of the kingdome. Hence is it that Chriſt ſaith: The Publicans and harlots goe before you: and, many an one is called at the eleuenth houre, as appeareth by that notable example of the theife vpon the croſſe.

The vſes, which may be made of this doctrine of predeſtination, are very many. Firſt, for our inſtruction, we are taught theſe things.

I. That there is neither any iuſtification by workes, nor any workes of ours that are meritorious, For election is by the free grace of GOD: and therefore in like ſort is iuſtification. For, as I haue ſaid before, the cauſe of the cauſe, is the cauſe of the thing cauſed. And for this reaſon, in the worke of ſaluation, grace doth wholly challenge al to it ſelfe. Rom. 11. 5. At this time there is a remnãt through the electiõ of grace. 2. Tim. 1. 9. Who hath ſaued vs, and called vs with an holy calling, not according to our workes, but according to his owne purpoſe and grace, which was giuen to vs, through Chriſt Ieſus before the world was. Phil. 1. 29. Vnto you it is giuen for Chriſt, that not onely ye ſhould beleeue in him, but alſo ſuffer for his ſake. Rom. 3. 24. We are iuſtified freely by grace. Tit. 3. 5. not by the workes of righteouſnes which wee had done, but according to his mercy hee ſaued vs. Ezech.36. 27. I will cauſe you to walke in my ſtatutes. Rom.6 23. The gift of God is eternall life.

II. That Aſtrologie, teaching, by the caſting of Natiuities, what men will bee, is ridiculous, and impious: becauſe it determineth, that ſuch ſhall be very like in life, and conuerſation, whome God in his predeſtination hath made vnlike. Iacob and Eſau, borne of the ſame parents, and almoſt in the ſame moment of time, (for Iacob held Eſau by the heele as he was borne) were of moſt vnlike diſpoſitions, and had diuers euents. The like may we ſee in all twinnes, and others, which are borne at the ſame time.

III. That God is moſt wiſe, omnipotent, iuſt, and mercifull. O the wonderfull riches, both of the wiſedome and knowledge of God! how vnſearchable are his iudgements, & his waies paſt finding out! Eph.1.5. Who hath predeſtinate vs, to be adopted through Ieſus Chriſt vnto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will.

Secondly, beeing the ſeruants of Chriſt we are admoniſhed.

I. To fight againſt all doubting and diffidence of our ſaluation, becauſe it neither dependeth vpon workes, nor faith, but vpon Gods decree which is immutable. Math.24. 24. Luk.10.20. Reioyce that your names are written in the booke of life. Rom. 8.33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods choſen? it is God that iuſtifieth, who ſhall condemne? 2.Tim.2.19. This teacheth, that the anker of hope muſt be fixed in trueth, and ſtabilitie of the immutable good pleaſure of God: ſo that albeit our faith be ſo toſſed, as that it is in danger of ſhipwracke, neuertheleſſe it muſt neuer ſincke to the bottome, but euen in the midſt of daunger take hold vpon repentance, as on a board, and ſo recouer it ſelfe.

II. To humble our ſoules vnder the mightie hand of God: for we are as clay in the hand of the potter. Rom.9.21. They through infidelitie are broken off, but thou ſtandeſt thorough faith. Be not high minded, but feare.

III. To giue all glory to God. 2. Theſſ, 2.13. Wee ought to giue thankes alway to God for you brethren, beloued of the Lord, becauſe that God hath from the beginning choſen you to ſaluation.

IV. To beare croſſes patiently. Rom.8. 29. Thoſe which he knew before, hee hath alſo predeſtinate, to be made like to the image of his ſonne. This likenes to Chriſt, is in bearing afflictions. Phil.3.10. That I may knowe him, and the vertue of his reſurrection, and the fellowſhip of his afflictions, to be made conformable to his death.

V. To doe good workes. Eph.2.10. We are his workmanſhip created in Chriſt Ieſus to doe good workes, which God hath ordained, that we ſhould walke in them.

Thus much concerning Theologie.

AN EXCELLENT TREATISE OF COMFORTING SVCH, as are troubled about their Predeſtination:

Taken out of the ſecond anſwer of M. Beza, to D. Andreas, in the act of their Colloquie at Mompelgart. &c.

VNleſſe (ſaith D. Andreas) regeneration be alwaies vnited to baptiſme, and remayneth in ſuch as are baptized, howe ſhould the troubled conſciences of thoſe be eaſed and comforted, who becauſe they feele not in themſelues any good motions of Gods holy ſpirit, finde none other refuge, but the Worde and Sacramentes, eſpecially the Sacrament of Baptiſme? Nowe this remedie would be of ſmall force, except it be oppoſed againſt thoſe imaginations, which the deuill caſteth into a troubled heart; yea, except it taught ſuch, that God is greater then our heart, who in Baptiſme hath not onely offered vs the adoption of ſonnes, but hath indeede beſtowed the ſame vpon vs: as it is ſaide by Chriſt, He that beleeueth, and is baptized, ſhal be ſaued. And by Paul, Yee which are baptized, haue put on Chriſt. Dauid beeing armed with the like comfort from his circumciſion, feared not to ioyne battell with that great Giant Goliah: and if this were not ſo, it muſt needes follow, that Baptiſme were nothing els but an idle ceremonie, and alſo the perſons of the Trinity would be thought lyars. Wherefore thoſe afflicted men, when Sathan aſſaulteth them, muſt reſiſt him with theſe words: Depart from me Satan, thou haſt neither part nor portion in the inheritance of my ſaule, becauſe I am baptized in the Name of the holy Trinity, and ſo am truly made the Son of GOD by adoption. And are theſe the ſtronge weapons, which ſo many times, and in ſo many words, haue beene obiected againſt me by D Andreas? and whereby he hath gotten the victorie? But becauſe this his reaſon is ſomewhat intricate, I will explane it after this ſort. Firſt, for the place of Scripture which he alleadgeth, namely, that GOD is greater then our hearts: It is ſo far from comforting an afflicted conſcience, that it will rather driue him to deſpaire. Neither doth Iohn. 1. Epiſt. 3. 20. make mention of it, to eaſe ſuch as are in deſpaire, ſhewing vnto them by that ſentẽce, the greatnes of Gods mercies; but rather that he might thereby euen bruiſe in pieces the hearts of proud perſons, when they conſider the greatnes of Gods maieſtie. And for the other place, when as a man doubteth of his ſaluation, and feeleth no teſtimonies of faith in himſelfe, (for ſuch an one we here ſpeake of) what comfort, thinke you, can he haue in theſe words: He that beleeueth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaued? For hee would rather reaſon contrarily thus: I indeed am baptized, yet for all that I beleeue not, and therfore my Baptiſme is not auaileable, I muſt needes be condemned. For the ſaying of Auguſt. in his treatiſe vpon Ioh. 6. is very true, who ſpeaking of Simon Magus, ſaith, What good did it to him to be baptized? brag not therefore, ſaith he, that thou art baptized, as though that were ſufficient for thee, to inherit the kingdome of heauen. As for the place of Paul, Gal. 3. I ſhewed plainely before, how D. Andreas did violently wreſt it to his purpoſe.

Neither are his reaſons taken from the abſurdity that would follow, of more force then the former, allbeit he maketh them eſpecial pillars to vnderproppe the truth of his cauſe. For, I pray you, is God of leſſe truth, becauſe his truth is neglected & derided of them that contemne it? Is the ceremonie of Baptiſme therefore in vaine, becauſe ſome refuſe the grace offered in Baptiſme: others (if wee may beleeue D. Andreas) reiect that grace when they haue receiued it? What? Is not the Goſple therfore the power of God to ſaluation, becauſe it is to ſuch as beleeue not, the ſauour of death to eternall death? May not the Supper of the Lord, be a pledge of Gods couenant becauſe ſo many abuſe theſe holy ſignes, or (as D. Andreas is of opinion) the very bodie and blood of our Sauiour Chriſt? And, that I may reaſon from that which is true in the experience of euery child: can the Sunne be ſaid to be without light, becauſe they which are blind, and aſleepe, haue no benefit by the light thereof, neither ſuch as ſhut their eyes ſo cloſe, that they will not enioy the comfort of the light? But amongſt all, this one is moſt childiſh, that D. Andreas will make this his principall argument, namely that in vaine did men, thus tempted, flie at all vnto baptiſme, vnleſſe we conclude with him, that all ſuch as are baptized, are in Baptiſme adopted the ſonnes of God. For firſt, if this were a good conſequent from baptiſme, it were in vaine, for ſuch an afflicted conſcience, to gather vnto himſelfe a teſtimonie from the word of God, and the other Sacrament of the Lords Supper, vnleſſe we make all thoſe to be in like ſort regenerate and adopted, vnto whome the word of God is preached, and the Lords ſupper adminiſtred, either of which, for D. Andreas to affirme, is a bold vntruth.

But to omit this, what if we graunt this which D. Andreas requireth concerning Baptiſme? may not for all that, any that is ſo tempted, by Satans pollicie, refell this great comforter, by his owne argument? after this ſort: I will graunt D. Andreas your queſtion: ſuppoſe I haue beene baptized and adopted the ſonne of GOD, yet ſeeing you teach, that the grace of GOD is not ſo ſure but that I may fall from the ſame, as indeed I feele that I haue grieuouſly fallen, what doe you now els but lift me vp with one hand to heauen, and with the other caſt me downe into hell? What meane you therefore to teach me thoſe things which are ſo farre from eaſing me, as that contrarily, they doe more & more lay out vnto me mine abominable and vngratefull heart? See now what ſure conſolation, conſciences grieuouſly afflicted may reape by this doctrine of their comforter D. Andreas.

Now if any be deſirous to know, what ſpirituall comfort is moſt meete to be miniſtred vnto conſciences ſo troubled, I will ſhew them that which is grounded vpon a ſure foundation, and which I my ſelfe haue often found to be true in mine owne experience: the which alſo I purpoſe to handle more largely, for the benefit of the Chriſtian reader. Firſt therefore we teach, contrarily to that which D. Andreas doth moſt falſly obiect againſt vs, that the eternall decree, or as Paul ſpeaketh, the purpoſe of GOD, muſt not be ſought in the bottomleſſe counſell of God, but rather in the manifeſtation of it, namely, in his vocation, by the Word and Sacraments. This I ſpeake of ſuch as are of yeares of diſcretion, as they muſt needes be, whome wee ſeeke to comfort in this place.

Now becauſe that externall vocation, is not proper onely to the elect (for many are called, but few are chosen) but such a vocatiō as is effectuall, that is, whereby the vnderstanding is not onely inlightned with the saving knowledge of God, but in the will also there is created a true, though not a perfect hatred of sinne, frō whence ariseth an abhorring of sin, & loue of that which is good, or rather a desire to will, and doe that which is right. Therfore when we see one thus dangerously tempted, wee apply vnto his afflicted conscience, that true Nepenthes, and comfortable and restorative medicine, which is taken from Gods effectuall vocation, as it were out of an Apothecaries boxe.

If therefore I haue to doe with such an one, who either was neuer called by the preaching of the Gospel, or if he were called, yet seemeth both to himselfe & others, neuer to haue regarded him that called: & hence concludeth that he is not in the nūber of them whom God hath purposed to take pitie vpon: I forthwith tell him, that Satā plaieth the Sophister, in teaching him thus to conclude: for this his reason is as vntrue, as if a man looking at midnight, & seeing that the Sun is not then risen, should therefore affirme that it would neuer rise. And this is that which when I obiected to D. Andreas. p. 482. he very boldly corrupting my meaning printed this as mine assertion, Say vnto a man that is afflicted, the Sun is risen, although as yet it be not risen. But I teach not lies, howsoeuer this deprauation of my wordes came from D. Andreas printers, or himselfe. And whereas D. Andreas excepted, that this consolation were to no purpose, because he that was afflicted might doubt whether this sun would euer rise or not: I answered to him, that which the printers haue quite left out, and which I will now therefore more fully repeate. I was woont therfore to tell the partie thus troubled, after he had forsaken his false & diuelish position: that although an external vocatiō were not of force ynough to appease an afflicted conscience, yet it was of sufficient force & efficacie against the deuill. For I tell him that they which neuer had externall nor internall calling, they (if we regard an ordinary calling) must needs perish: but whosoeuer is once called, he hath set as it were, his foote in the first entrie into the kingdom of heauen: & vnlesse it be by his own default, he shal come afterwards into the courts of God, and so by degrees into his Maiesties pallace. And for the confirmation of this, I vse diuerse waies. For why, say I, doubtest thou of his good wil towards thee, who in mercy hath sent me a minister to call thee vnto him? thou hast no cause, vnlesse thou alleage the number of thy sinnes. If this be all, why oppose the infinite greatnes of Gods mercy against thy sinnes, who hath sent me to bring thee vnto him. The Lord vouchsafeth to bring thee into the way of the elect, why art thou a stumbling blocke vnto thy selfe? & refusest to followe him? if thou feelest not as yet inwardly thy selfe to be stirred forward, pray that thou maist knowe this for a most sure truth, that this desire in thee is a pledge of Gods fatherly good wil towards thee. Hee neither can, nor will be wanting to this which he hath stirred vp in thee. After these exhortations, I shew him, how some are called at the eleuenth houre, how the Gentiles after many thousand yeres were called to be Gods people, how the theife was saued vpon the crosse: these and other remedies I vsed, whereof, I neuer remember, that it repented me.

But I deale with such as haue before obeyed the Lords calling. & either by reason of some grieuous sin into which they haue fallen, or because they haue absented themselues from the Church of God, or in that they, refusing publike and priuate admonitiōs, haue bin offensiue to the church, or which in mine experience, hath befallē many very good & godly persons, whilst they satisfie not thēselues they are so altogither busily conuersant in reprehending & iudging thēselues, that they for a while forget the mercy of God: with these, to omit such as for some natural infirmities, are if they procure not speedie helpe of some expert Minister, most dangerously tempted with these, I say, I vse this order.

First, I desire that the intimate vnto me, that which especially grieueth them, & as I vnderstand both, the thing, and measure thereof by them: I take especiall care of this, that they, beeing alreadie ouermuch cast downe, that I then, by the seuere denunciation of the law, doe not quite ouerturne them: yet so as that I doe not altogither withdraw them either from condemning their former sinnes, or the meditation of Gods iudgement: And so, as much as I can, I temper the words of consolation, as that I nothing cloake Gods anger against them for their sinnes.

After I haue thus prepared them, I then demaund, whether they haue beene euer in this this case or no? Nay, (say they, for the most part) the time was, when I was in great ioy & peace of conscience, I serued the Lord, then was I an happie person, full of faith, full of hope: But now wretch that I am, I haue lost my first loue, & there is nothing vexeth me more, then to remember those times past. But say I, whether consideratiō is more grieuous vnto thee, the apprehension of Gods iudgements, or the dislike of thy selfe that thou shouldest offend so gratious & so louing a father? Both, say they, but especially the latter. Therefore, say I, sinne also displeaseth thee in that it is sin, namely, because it is euill, and God who is goodnes it selfe, is offended with it? It is euen as you told vs, say they, and I am now ashamed that so vile and wicked a wretch as my selfe, should come before so gratious and mercifull a father. Then I tell them, that no man is offended, but rather is glad, when hee can iniurie one whome hee hateth: this they grant, and withall say, God forbid, that albeit the Lord hate mee, I in like sort should hate him, vnto whom, if it were possible, I would be recōciled again. Then I adde this: Be of good comfort, my deare brother, you are in good case. For who can loue God, especially when he is wounded by him? who can bewaile the losse of his friendship? who can desire to come againe into his fauour, but he, whom God still loueth, although for a time he be angrie with him? except peraduenture you haue not learned thus much, that the know ledge of our saluation commeth not from flesh and blood, but from God himselfe, who first vouchsafed to instruct vs, & from Christ Iesus, manifesting the Father vnto vs: And that it is Gods blessing, that wee do loue God, who loued vs first, when we were his enemies. You haue therefore, my good brother iust cause, why you should bee greatly displeased with many things past, but there is no cause why you should despaire. Briefly, you haue inwardly, and, as it were, dwelling with you, euident testimonies of your future reconciliation with God: especially if you cease not to pray vnto him earnestly, who hath laid the foundation of repentance in you, to wit, a dislike of sinne, and a desire to bee reconciled vnto him. The sheepe which wandered out of the fold ceased not to be a sheep, albeit it went astray for a time: you now are that sheepe, to whom that faithfull sheapheard of all those sheepe, which the father hath committed to him, leauing those ninetie and nine, doth not so much by my ministerie, declare that he seeketh you, as hauing alreadie sought you, though you not seeking him, hath indeed found you. Knocke (saith he) and it shall be opened vnto you. And haue you now forgotten those promises, which were so often made to them that repent? & also, which they had experience of, who in the sight of the world were in a desperate case. But I, saith he, againe feele no motions of the Comforter, I haue now no sense of faith, or hope: but I feele all the contrary. Nay, say I, you deceiue your self, as I told you before. For it is the Comforter alone, which teacheth you to hate sin, not so much for the punishmēt, as because it is euill and displeaseth God, albeit he shew not himself so fully at the first: because you had so many wayes grieuously offended him, as that he seemeth for a while quite to forsake you. And, that you haue not quite lost him, but that hee is yet in some secret corner of your soule, from whence at your instant praiers he will shew himselfe vnto you? this will plainely declare vnto you, which I now admonish you of the second time. But let vs graunt as much as you can say: yet, sure it is, that your faith was not dead, but onely possessed with a spirituall lethargie. You liue in the wombe of your mother, and there were ignorant of your life. A drunken man, although hee loose for a time the vse of reason, and also of his limmes, yet he neuer looseth reason it selfe. You would thinke that in winter the trees were dead, but they spring againe in the sommer season. At night the Sunne setteth, but in the next morning it riseth againe. And how often see we by experience, that he which at one time tooke the foyle in a combat, at another did win the prize? And know this, that in the spirituāl combate of the flesh with the spirit, the like we may see in many, partly by reason of the weaknes of our nature, partly through sloth to resist, and partly for default to beware. To these he replieth, for such temptations are very hardly remooued, I would to God, saith hee, I could perswade my selfe that these promises belonged to mee. For my present estate constraineth mee to doubt, whether I am the childe of God, or not.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE, EDWARD LORD

Russell, Earle of Bedford, Grace, and peace, &c.

Ight Honourable, excellent is the saying of Paul to Titus, To the pure al things are pure: but to the impure & vnbeleeuing is nothing pure, but euen their mindes and consciences are defiled. Tit. 15.

In which words he determines three questions. The first, whether things ordained & made by God, may become vncleane or no? his answere is, that they may: and his meaning must be conceiued with a distinction. By nature things ordained of God are not vncleane: for Moses in Genesis saith, that God sawe all things which he had made, & they were very good: yet they may become vncleane either by lawe, or by the fault of men. By lawe, as when God forbids vs the thinges which in themselues are good: without whose commandement, they are as pure as things not forbidden. Thus for the time of the old testament God forbad the Iewes the vse of certaine creatures; not because they were indeed worse then the rest, but because it was his pleasure vpon special cause to restraine them, that he might put a difference betweene his owne people and the rest of the world: that he might exercise their obedience, and aduertise them of the inward impurity of minde. Now this legall impurity was abollished at the ascension of Christ. By the fault of men things are vncleane when they are abused, and not applyed to the endes for which they were ordained. The second question is, to whom things ordained of God are pure? He answers, to the pure: that is, to them whose persons stand iustified and sanctified before God in Christ in whom they beleeue, who also doe vse Gods blessings in holy manner to his glory and the good of men. The third question is, who they are to whom all things are vncleane? His answere is, to the vncleane: by whom he vnderstands all such: I. whose persons displease God, because they do not indeede beleeue in Christ: I I. who vse not the gifts of God in holy manner sanctifying them by word and prayer: I I I. who abuse them to bad ende, as to riot, pride, & oppression of men, &c: Now that to such, the vse of al the creatures of God is vncleane, it is manifest: because all their actions are sinnes, in that they are not done of faith: and a mans person must first please God in Christ, before his action or worke done can please him. Againe they vse the blessings and creatures of God with euill conscience, because so long as they are forth of Christ, they are but vsurpers thereof before God. For in the fall of the first Adam we lost the title and interest to all good things: and though God permit the vse of many of them to wicked men; yet is not the former title recouered but in Christ the second Adam, in whom we are aduanced to a better estate then we had by creation. Act. 15. 10. 1. Tim. 4. 3.

Hence it follows necessarily, that (to omit all other things) Nobility, though it bee a blessing and ordinance of God in it selfe, is but an vncleane thing, if the inioyers thereof bee not truly ingrafted into Christ, and made bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh. The blood vnstained before men, is stained blood before God by the fall of Adam, if it be not restored by the blood of Christ the lambe of God. And hence it followes againe, that Nobility must not dwell solitary, but combine her selfe in perpetual fellowship with hearty loue and sincere obedience of pure and sound religion: without the which all pleasant pastimes, all sumptuousnes of building, all brauery in apparell, all glistering gold, all delicate fare, all delightfull musicke, all reuerence done with cappe and knee, al earthly pleasures & delights that heart can wish, are but as a vanishing shadowe, or like the mirth that begins with laughing and endes in woe. A happy thing were it, if this consideration might take place in the hearts of all noble men: it would make them honour God that they might bee honoured of God with euerlasting honour: and it would make them kisse the sonne least he be angry, and they perish in the way. 1. Sam. 2. 31. 26. Psal. 2. 12.

I speake not this as though I doubted of your Lordshippes care in this very point: but my only meaning is to put you in minde that as you haue begunne to cleaue vnto Christ with ful purpose of heart, so you would continue to do it still, and do it more: and withall to manifest the same vnto the whole world, by honouring Christ with your own honour, and by resembling him specially in one thing, in that, as he grew in stature & yeares, he also grew in grace and fauour with God and men. And for this very cause (without any consideration of earthly respects) I further present vnto you an Exposition of another part of the Catechisme, namely the Symbole or Creed of the Apostles: which is indeed the very pith and substance of Christian religion, taught by the Apostles, imbraced by the ancient fathers, sealed by the blood of Martyrs, vsed by a Theodosius the Emperour as a meanes to ende the controuersies of his time: and here vpon hath beene called the b rule of faith, the c key of faith. And furthermore I hope that your Lordship will accept the same in good part, the rather because you vouchsafed when you were in Cambridge to be an hearer thereof when it was taught and deliuered. Thus craning pardon for my boldnesse, I take my leaue, commending your L. and yours to the protection of the Almighty. Anno. 1595. Apr. 2. Prou. 3. 9, 10. 5 DE 60

The Creed hath two parts:
One, of the Actions of faith, which are
To beleeue a thing, as in God: and it hath three parts:
I. To beleeue God as he hath reuealed himselfe in his word.
II. To acknowledge him in particular to be my God.
III. To put my confidence in him.
To beleeue a thing; and this action hath two parts:
I. To acknowledge the thing.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE CREEDE.

I beleeue in God, &c.

NO man iustly can bee offended at this, that I beginne to treate of the Doctrine of faith without a text: though some bee of minde, that in Catechizing the Minister is to proceede as in the ordinarie course of Preaching, easily by handling a set portion of Scripture: and therefore that the handling of the Creede beeing no scripture, is not conuenient. Indeede I graunt, that other course to bee commendable: yet I doubt not, but in Catechizing the Minister hath his liberty to followe or not to followe a certaine text of scripture, as we doe in the vsuall course of preaching. My reason is taken from the practise of the Primitive Church; whose Catechisme (as the author of the epistle to the Hebrewes sheweth) was cõtained in sixe principles or groũds of religion, which were not taken out of any set text in the old Testament: but rather was a forme of teaching gathered out of the most cleare places thereof. Hence I reason thus: That which in this point was the vse & manner of the primitive church, is lawfull to be vsed of vs now: but in the primitive Church it was the manner to catechize without handling any set text of scripture: and therefore the Ministers of the Gospell at this time may with like liberty do the same: so be it they do confirme the doctrine which they teach with places of scripture afterward.

Heb. 6. 1. & 2.

Now to come to the Creede, let vs begin with the name or title thereof. That which in English wee call the Apostles Creede, in other tongues is called Symbolum, that is, a shot or a badge. It is called a shot, because as in a feast or banquet euery man payeth his part: which being all gathered, the whole (which is called the shot) amounteth: and so out of the seuerall writings of the Apostles ariseth this Creede or briefe confession of faith. It is a badge, because as a Souldier in the field de-by his badge and liuery is knowne of what band he is, and to what Captaine he doth belong: euen so by this beleefe a christian man may be distinguished and known from all Iewes, Turkes, Atheists, and all false professours: and for this cause it is called a badge.

Againe it is called the Creede of the Apostles, not because they were the penners of it, conferring to it besides the matter a the very style and frame of wordes, as we haue them now set downe. Reasons. I There are in this Creede certaine words & phrases, which are not to be found in the writings of the Apostles: & namely these; He descended into hell: the Catholike Church. The latter whereof, no doubt, b first began to be in vse, when after the Apostles daies the Church was dispersed into all quarters of the earth. II. If both matter and wordes had beene from the Apostles, why is not the Creede Canonicall scripture, as well as any other writings? III. The Apostles had a summary collection of the points of Christian Religion which they taught, and also deliuered to others to teach by; consisting of two heads, faith and loue: as may appeare by Pauls exhortation to Timothy, wishing him to keepe the patterne of wholesome wordes: which hee had heard of him in faith and loue, which is in Christ Iesus. Now the Creede consistes not of two heades but of one, namely of faith onely and not of loue also. Wherefore I rather thinke, that it is called the Apostles Creede, because it doth summarily containe the chiefe and principall pointes of religion, handled and propounded in the doctrine of the Apostles: and because the points of the Creede are conformable and agreeable to their doctrine and writings.

And thus much of the title. Now let vs heare what the Creede is. It is a summe of thinges to be beleeued concerning GOD & concerning the Church, gathered forth of the Scriptures. For the opening of this description: first I say, it is a summe of thinges to be beleeued, or an abridgement, drawne by the practise of teaching both in the new and old Teſtament to abridge & contract ſummarily the religion of their time. This the Prophets vſed. For when they had made their ſermons to the people they did abridge them and penned thē briefely: ſetting them in ſome open place, that all the people might read the ſame. So the Lord bad Habakuk to write the viſion which he ſaw, and to make it plaine vpon tables, that he may runne that readeth it. And in the new teſtament the Apoſtles did abridge thoſe doctrines, which otherwiſe they did handle at large, as may appeare in the place of Timothie afore named. Now the reaſon why both in the old and new teſtament the doctrine of religiō was abridged, is that the vnderſtanding of the ſimple, as alſo their memories might bee hereby helped, and they better inabled to iudge of the truth, and to diſcerne the ſame from falſhood. And for this end the Apoſtles Creede beeing a ſummary collection of things to be beleeued, was gathered briefly out of the word of GOD for the helping of memory and vnderſtanding of men. I adde that this creede is concerning God and the church. For in theſe two pointes conſiſteth the whole ſumme thereof. Laſtly, I ſay, that it is gathered forth of the Scripture, to make a difference betweene it and other writings, and to ſhew the authority of it; which I will further declare on this manner.

d Aug. ſerm. 119. de temp. Caſſian l. 6 de incar. dom.

There be two kind of writings in which the doctrine of the church is handled, and they are either Diuine or Eccleſiaſticall. Diuine, are the bookes of the olde and newe Teſtament, penned either by Prophets or Apoſtles. And theſe are not onely the pure word of God, but alſo the ſcripture of God: becauſe not only the matter of them, but the whole diſpoſition therof with the ſtyle and the phraſe was ſet down by the immediat inſpiration of the holy Ghoſt. And the authority of theſe bookes is diuine, that is, abſolute and ſoueraigne, and they are, of ſufficient credit in & by themſelues needing not the teſtimony of any creature: not ſubiect to the cenſure either of men or Angels, binding the conſciences of all men at all times, and beeing the onely foundation of faith, and the rule & canon of all truth.

Eccleſiaſticall writings, are all other ordinarie writings of the church conſenting with Scriptures. Theſe may bee called the word or truth of God, ſo farre forth as their matter or ſubſtance is conſenting with the written word of God: but they cannot be called the Scripture of God, becauſe the ſtyle and phraſe of them was ſet down according to the pleaſure of man, and therfore they are in ſuch ſort the word of God, as that alſo they are the word of mē. And their authoritie in defining of truth and falſhood in matters of religion is not ſoueraigne, but ſubordinate to the former: and it doth not ſtand in the authority and pleaſures of men and councels, but in the conſent which they haue with the Scriptures.

Eccleſiaſticall writings are either generall, particular, or proper. Generall, are the creedes and confeſſions of the church diſperſed ouer the whole world, and among the reſt the Creede of the Apoſtles, made either by the Apoſtles themſelues, or by their hearers and diſciples, Apoſtolicall men deliuered to the church, and conueied from hand to hand to our times. Particular writings are the confeſſions of particular churches. Proper writings are the bookes and confeſſions of priuate men. Now betweene theſe we muſt make difference. For the generall Creede of the Apoſtles, (other vniuerſall creedes in this caſe not excepted) though it be of leſſe authority then Scripture; yet hath it more authoritie then the particular and priuate writings of Churches and men. For it hath beene receiued and approued by vniuerſall conſent of the catholike church in all ages, and ſo were neuer theſe: in it the meaning and doctrine cannot be changed by the authority of the whole catholike church: and if either the order of the doctrine or the wordes whereby it is expreſſed, ſhould vpon ſome occaſion bee changed, a particular church of any countrey can not doe it, without catholike conſent of the whole church: yet particular writings and confeſſions made by ſome ſpeciall churches may be altered in the words and in the points of doctrine by the ſame churches without offence to the catholike church. Laſtly it is receiued as a rule of faith among all churches to try doctrines and interpretations of Scriptures by, not becauſe it is a rule of it ſelfe, for that the Scripture is alone; but becauſe it borroweth his authority from Scripture with which it agreeth. And this honour no other writings of men can haue.

Here ſome may demand the number of Creedes. Anſ. I ſay but one creede, as there is but one faith: and if it bee alleadged that that we haue many Creedes, as beſides this of the Apoſtles, the Nicene creede, and Athanaſius creede, &c. I anſwere, the ſeuerall creedes and confeſſions of Churches containe not ſeuerall faithes and religions, but one and the ſame: and this called the Apoſtles creed is moſt antient, and principal: al the reſt are not new creeds in ſubſtance, but in ſome points penned more largely for the expoſition of it, that men might better auoid the hereſies of their times.

Further, it may be demaunded, in what forme this creede was penned? Anſ. In the forme of an anſwer to a queſtion. The reaſon is this. In the Primitiue Church, when any man was turned from Gentiliſme to the faith of Chriſt, and was to be baptized, this a queſtion was asked him, What beleeueſt thou? then hee anſwered according to the forme of the creede, I beleeue in God, &c. And this manner of queſtioning was vſed euen from the time of the Apoſtles. When the Eunuch was conuerted by Philip, he ſaid, What doth let mee to bee baptized? Philip ſaide, If thou doſt beeleeue with all thine heart, thou maiſt. Then he anſwered, I beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is the ſonne of God. By this it appeares, that although all men, for the moſt part, amongſt vs can ſay this creede, yet not one of a thouſand can tell the ancient and firſt vſe of it: for commonly at this day of the ſimpler ſort it is ſaide for a prayer, being indeede no prayer: and when it is vſed ſo, men make it no better then a charme.

Act. 8. 38.

Before wee come to handle the particular points of the creede, it is very requiſite that wee ſhould make an entrance thereto by deſcribing the nature, properties, and kinds of faith, the confeſſion and ground whereof is ſet forth in the creede. Faith therefore is a gift of God, whereby we giue aſſent or credence to Gods word. For there is a neceſſarie relation betweene faith and Gods word. The common propertie of faith is noted by the author of the Hebrewes, when he ſaith, Faith is the ground of things hoped for: and, the demonſtration of things that are not ſeene. For all this may bee vnderſtood, not onely of iuſtifying faith, but alſo of temporarie faith, and the faith of miracles. Where faith is ſaid to bee a ground, the meaning is, that though there are many things promiſed by God, which men doe not preſently enioy, but onely hope for: becauſe as yet they are not: yet faith doeth after a ſort giue ſubſiſting or beeing vnto them. Secondly it is an euidence or demonſtration, &c. that is, by beleeuing a man doth make a thinge as it were viſible, beeing otherwiſe inuiſible and abſent.

Heb. 11. 1.

Faith is of two ſorts: either common faith, or the faith of the Elect: as Paule ſaith, he is an Apoſtle according to the faith of Gods elect: which is alſo called faith without hypocriſie. The common faith is that, which both the elect and reprobate haue, and it is threefold. The firſt is hiſtoricall faith, which is, when a man doth beleeue the outward letter and hiſtorie of the word. It hath two parts; knowledge of Gods word, and an aſſent vnto the ſame knowledge: and it is to be found in the deuill and his angels. So Saint Iames ſaith, the deuills beleeue and tremble. Some will ſay, what a faith haue they? Anſ. Such as thereby they vnderſtand both the Law and the Goſpell: beſides they giue aſſent to it to be true: and they doe more yet, in that they tremble and feare. And many a man hath not ſo much. For amongſt vs, there is many a one which hath no knowledge of God at all, more then hee hath learned by the common talke of the world: as namely, that there is a God, and that he is mercifull, &c. and yet this man will ſay, that hee beleeueth with all his heart: but without knowledge it can not bee that any ſhould truly beleeue, and therefore hee deceiueth himſelfe. Queſt. But whence haue the deuils hiſtoricall faith? were they illuminated by the light of the ſpirit? Anſ. No: but when the Goſpell was preached, they did acknowledge it, and beleeued it to be true, and that by the vertue of the reliques of Gods image, which remained in them ſince their fall. And therefore this their faith doth not ariſe from any ſpeciall illumination by his ſpirit, but they attaine to it euen by the very light of nature, which was left in them from the beginning.

The ſecond kinde of faith, is Temporarie faith, ſo called becauſe it laſteth but for a time and ſeaſon, and commonly not to the ende of a mans life. This kinde of faith is noted vnto vs in the parable of the ſeede, that fell in the ſtonie ground. And there bee two differences or kindes of this faith. The firſt kinde of temporarie faith hath in it three degrees. The firſt is, to knowe the word of God and particularly the Goſpell. The ſecond, to giue an aſſent vnto it. The third, to profeſſe it, but to goe no further: and all this may bee done without any loue to the worde. This faith hath one degree more then historicall faith. Examples of it wee haue in Simon Magus, Act.8.13. who is said to beleeue, because hee held the doctrine of the Apostle to bee true; and withall professed the same; and in the deuils also, who in some sort confessed, that Christ was the sonne of the most highest, and yet looked for no saluation by him. Mark.5.7. Act.19.15. And this is the common faith that abounds in this land. Men say they beleeue as the prince beleeueth, and if religion change, they will change. For by reason of the authoritie of princes lawes, they are made to learne some little knowledge of the word: they beleeue it to bee good, and they professe it: and thus for the space of thirtie or fortie yeares men heare the word preached, and receiue the Sacraments, beeing for all this as voide of grace as euer they were at the first day: and the reason is, because the doe barely professe it, without either liking or loue of the same. The second kinde of temporarie faith hath in it fiue degrees. For by it first a man knowes the worde. Secondly, hee assenteth vnto it. Thirdly he professeth it. Fourthly, hee reioyceth inwardly in it. Fiftly, hee bringeth foorth some kind of fruit: and yet for al this hath no more in him, but a faith that will faile in the end; because he wanteth the effectuall application of the promise of the Gospell, and is without all manner of sound conuersation. This faith is like corne in the house top, which groweth for a while, but when heate of sommer commeth, it withereth. And this is also set forth vnto vs in the parable of the seede, which fell in stony ground, which is hastie in springing vp: but because of the stones, which will not suffer it to take deepe roote, it withereth. And this is a very common faith in the Church of God: by which many reioyce in the preaching of the worde, and for a time bring foorth some fruites accordingly with shewe of great forwardnesse, yet afterward shake off religion and all. But (some will say) howe can this bee a temporarie faith, seeing it hath such fruits? Anſ. Such a kinde of faith is temporarie, because it is grounded on temporarie causes which are three. I. A desire to get knowledge of some strange points of religion. For many a man doeth labour for the fiue former degrees of temporarie faith, onely because hee desires to get more knowledge in Scripture then other men haue. The second cause is a desire of praise among men, which is of that force that it will make a man put on a shewe of all the graces, which God bestoweth vpon his owne children, though otherwise hee want them: and to goe very farre in religion; which appeareth thus. Some there are which seeme very bitterly to weepe for the sinnes of other men, and yet haue neither sorrowe nor touch of conscience for their owne: and the cause hereof is nothing else but pride. For hee that sheds teares for an other mans sinnes, should much more weepe for his owne, if he had grace. Againe, a man for his owne sinnes will pray very slackly and dully, when he prayeth priuately: and yet when he is in the company of others, hee praies very feruently and earnestly. From whence is this difference? surely often it springeth from the pride of heart and from a desire of praise among men. The third cause of temporarie faith is profit, commoditie, the getting of wealth and riches: which are common occasions to moue to chooſe or refuse religion, as the time serueth: but such kinde of beleeuers embrace not the Gospell because it is the Gospell, that is, the glad tidings of saluation; but because it brings wealth, peace, and libertie with it. And these are the three causes of temporary faith.

Luke.8.13.

The third kinde of faith is the faith of Miracles: when a man grounding him'elfe on some speciall promise or reuelation from God, doeth beleeue, that some strange and extraordinarie thing, which he hath desired or foretould, shall come to passe by the worke of God. This must be distinguished from historicall and temporarie faith. For Simon Magus hauing both these kinds of faith, wanted this faith of miracles, and therefore would haue bought the same of the Apostles for mony. Yet we must knowe that this faith of miracles may be in hypocrites, as it was in Iudas, and at the last iudgement it shall bee found to haue beene in the wicked and reprobate; which shall say to Christ, Lord in thy name we haue prophesied; & cast out deuils, and done many great miracles. Act.8.19. Math.7.22. 1.Cor.13. 2.

And thus much for the three sortes of common faith: Nowe wee come to true faith, which is called the faith of the elect. It is thus defined: Faith is a supernaturall gift of God in the minde, apprehending the sauing promise with all the promises miſes that depend on it. Firſt, I ſay, it is a gift of God, Phil. 1. 29. to confute the blinde opinion of our people, that thinke that the faith wherby they are to be ſaued, is bredde and borne with them. I adde that this is a gift ſupernaturall, not onely becauſe it is aboue that corrupt nature in which we are borne, but alſo becauſe it is aboue that pure nature, in which our firſt parentes were created, for in the ſtate of innocency they wanted this faith, neither had they the any need of faith in the ſame GOD as he is Meſſias: but this faith is a new grace of GOD added to regeneration after the fall, and firſt preſcribed and taught in the couenant of grace. And by this one thing, faith differeth from the reſt of the giftes of GOD, as the feare of GOD, the loue of GOD, the loue of our brethren, &c. for theſe were in mans nature before the fall, and after it, when it pleaſeth God to call vs, they are but renewed; but iuſtifying faith admittes noe renewing. For the firſt ingrafting of it into the heart, in the conuerſion of a ſinner after his fall.

The place and ſeate of faith (as I think) is the mind of man, not the will: for it ſtands in a kind of particular knowledge or perſwaſion, and there is no perſwaſion but in the minde. Paul ſaith in deede, that wee beleeue with the heart, Rom. 10. but by the heart he vnderſtandes the ſoule without limitation to any part. Some doe place faith in the minde, and partly in the will, becauſe it hath two parts; knowledge and affiance: but it ſeemes not greatly to ſtand with reaſon, that one particular and ſingle greace ſhould be ſeated in diuerſe partes or faculties of the ſoule.

The forme of faith is to apprehend the promiſe, Gal. 3. 14. that we might receiue the promiſe of the ſpirit through faith, and Ioh. 1. 1. 2. to receiue Chriſt and to beleeue, are put one for another; and to beleeue, is to eate and drinke the bodie and blood of Chriſt: to apperehend properly, is an action of the hand of man, which laies hold of a thing, and puls to himſelfe: and by reſemblance it agrees to faith, which is the hand of the ſoule, receiuing and applying the ſauing promiſe.

The apprehenſion of faith, is not performed by any affection of the will, but by a certaine and particular perſwaſion, whereby a man is reſolued that the promiſe of ſaluation belongs vnto him which perſwation is wrought in the minde by the holy Ghoſt, 1. Cor. 2. 12. And by this, the promiſe which is generall is applyed particularly to one ſubiect.

By this one action, ſauing faith differeth from all other kindes of faith. From hiſtoricall; for it wanteth all apprehenſion, and ſtandeth onely in a generall aſſent. From temporarie faith, which though it make a man to profeſſe the Goſpell and to reioice in the ſame, yet doeth it not thoroughly apply Chriſt with his benefits. For it neuer bringes with it any thorough touch of conſcience or liuely ſenſe of Gods grace in the heart. And the ſame may bee ſaide of the reſt.

The principall and maine obiect of this faith is, the ſauing promiſe. God ſo loued the world, that hee gaue his onely begotten ſonne, that whoſoeuer beleeues in him ſhall not periſh but haue euerlaſting life. But ſome will ſay, Chriſt is commonly ſaid to be the obiect of faith. Anſ. In effect it is all one to ſay the ſauing promiſe, and Chriſt promiſed, who is the ſubſtance of the couenant. Chriſt then as he is ſet forth vnto vs in the word and Sacraments, is the obiect of faith. And here certaine queſtions offer themſelues to bee skanned.

The firſt, What is that particular thing, which faith apprehendeth? Anſ. Faith apprehendeth whole Chriſt God and man. For his Godhead without his manhood, & his manhood without his Godhead doth not reconcile vs to God. Yet this which I ſay muſt bee conceiued with ſome diſtinction according to the difference of his two natures. His Godhead is apprehended not in reſpect of his eſſence or nature, but in reſpect of his efficacie manifeſted in the manhood, whereby the obedience thereof is made meritorious before God: as for his manhood, it is apprehended both in reſpect of the ſubſtance or thing it ſelfe, and alſo in reſpect of the efficacie and benefits thereof.

The ſecond, In what order faith apprehends Chriſt? Anſw. Firſt of all it apprehends the very body and blood of Chriſt: & then in the ſecond place the vertue and benefits of his body and blood: as a man that would feele in his body the vertue of meate and drinke, muſt firſt of all receiue the ſubſtance thereof.

To goe forwarde. Beſides this maine promiſe, which concernes righteouſneſſe and life euerlaſting in Chriſt, there be other particular promiſes touching ſtrength in temptations, comfort in afflictions, and ſuch like, which depend on the former and they they also are the obiect of iustifying faith: and with the very same faith wee beleeue them, wherewith we beleeue our saluation. Thus Abraham by the same faith wherewith he was iustified, beleeued that hee should haue a sonne in his old age, Rom. 4. 19. 22. And Noe by that faith whereby he was made heire of righteousnesse, beleeued that he and his family should bee preserued in the flood: this conclusion beeing alwayes laid downe, that To whom GOD giues Christ, to them also hee giues all thinges needefull for this life or the life to come, in and by Christ. And hereupon it comes to passe that in our prayers, besides the desire of thinges promised, wee must bring faith whereby wee must be certainely perswaded, that God will graunt vs such things as he hath promised: and this faith is not a new kind or distinct faith from iustifying faith. Thus we see plainely what sauing faith is.

Whereas some are of opinion, that faith is an affiance or confidence, that seemes to
Eph. 3. 12. be otherwise: for it is a fruite of faith, and indeede no man can put any confidence in God, til he be first of al perswaded of Gods mercy in Christ towards him.

Some againe are of minde, that Loue is the very nature and forme of faith: but it is otherwise. For as confidence in GOD, so also loue is an effect which proceedeth from faith. 1. Tim. 1. 5. The ende of the lawe is loue from a pure heart and good conscience and faith vnfained. And in nature they differ greatly. Christ is the fountaine of the waters of life. Faith in the heart is as the pipes, and leades that receiue in, and holde the water and Loue in some part is as the cocke of the conduit, that lets out the water to euery commer. The property of the hand is to hold and of it selfe it cannot cutte: yet by a knife or other instrument put into the hand, it cutts: the hand of the soule is faith, and his propertie is to apprehend Christ with all his benefits: and by it selfe it can doe nothing else: yet ioyne loue vnto it, and by loue it will be effectuall in all good Gal. 5. 6. dutyes.

Now to proceede further: first we are to consider, how faith is wrought: secondly, what bee the differences of it. For the first, faith is wrought in and by the outward ministery of the Gospell, accompanyed by the inward operation of the spirit; and that not suddenly, but by certaine steps and degrees: as nature frameth the bodie of the infant in the mothers wombe, 1. by making the braine and heart, 2. by making veines, sinewes, arteries, bones: 3. by adding flesh to them all. And the whole operation of the spirit standes in two principall actions. First, the enlightning of the minde: the second, the mouing of the will. For the first, the holy Ghost inlightens mens mindes with a further knowledge of the lawe then nature can affoard; and thereby makes them to see the sinnes of their hearts and liues with the ouglinesse thereof, and withall to tremble at the curse of the lawe. Afterward the same spirit opens the eye to vnderstand and consider seriously of righteousnesse and life eternall promised in Christ. This done, then comes the second worke of the holy Ghost, which is the inflaming of the will, that a man hauing considered his fearefull estate by reason of sinne, and the benefit of Christs death, might hunger after Christ; and haue a desire not so much to haue the punishmentes of sinne taken away, as Gods displeasure: and also might enioy the benefits of Christ. And when he hath stirred vp a man to desire reconciliation with GOD in Christ, then withall hee giues him Grace to praye not onely for life eternall, but especially for the free remissi on and pardon of all his sinnes: and then the Lords promise is, Knocke and it shall be opened. seeke and ye shall Mat. 7. 7. finde. After which hee further sends his spirit into the same heart that desireth reconciliation with God, and remission of sinnes in Christ, and doeth seale vp the same in his heart by a liuely and plentifull assurance thereof.

The differences and degrees of faith are two: I. a weake faith: II. a stronge faith. Concerning the first, this weake faith shewes it selfe by this grace of God namely an vnfained desire, not onely of saluation (for that the wicked and graceless man may haue) but of reconciliation with God in Christ. This is a sure signe of faith in euery touched and humbled heart, and it is peculiar to the elect: and they which haue this, haue in them also the ground and substance of true sauing faith: which afterwardes in time will growe vp to greater strength. Reasons. I. Promise of life euerlasting, is made to the desire of reconciliation, Psal. 10. 17. Lord thou hast heard the desire of the poore. Psal. 143. 6. My soule desireth after thee, as the thirsty land. Psal. 145. 19. He will fulfill the desire of them that feare him. Math. 5. 6. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousnesse, for they shall be satisfied. Reu. 21. 6. I will giue vnto him which is a thirst, of the wel of the water of life freely

II. The hungring desire after grace is a sanctified affection: where one affection is sanctified, all are sanctified: where all are sanctified, the whole man is sanctified: and hee that is sanctified, is iustified and beleeues. III. Gods accepts the will and desire to repent and beleeue, for repenting and beleeuing indeed: wherefore this desire of reconciliation (if it be soundly wrought in the heart) is in acceptation with God as true faith indeed. But carnall men will say, If faith, yea true faith shewe it selfe by a desire of reconciliation with God in Christ for all our sinnes, then wee are well inough, though wee liue in our sinnes: for we haue very good desires. I answer, that there bee many sundrie fleeting motions and desires to doe good thinges which growe to no issue or head, but in time vanish as they come. Nowe such passions haue no soundnesse in them, & must be distinguished from the desire of reconcilation with God, that comes from a bruised heart, & brings alwaies with it reformation of life: therefore such, whatsoeuer they are that liue after the course of this worlde, and thinke notwithstanding that they haue desires that are good, deceiue themselues.

Now faith is said to be weake, when a man either failes in the knowledge of the gospell: or els hauing knowledge, is weake in grace to apply vnto himselfe the sweet promises thereof. As for example, wee knowe that the Apostles had all true sauing faith (except Iudas) and when our Matth. 16. 16. Sauiour Christ, asked them, whome they thought that he was; Peter in the person of the rest, answered for them all, and said: Thou art Christ the sonne of the liuing God: for which our Sauiour commended him, and in him, them all, saying: Thou art Peter and vpon this rocke, (that is, vpon Christ, which Peter confessed in the name of the all) will I build my Church. And yet about that time we shal finde in the Gospel, that Matth. 8. 26 and 16. 8. they are called men of litle faith. Now they failed in knowledge of the death of Christ, and of his passion, and resurrection; and were carried away with a vaine hope of an earthly kingdome. And therefore when our Sauiour shewed them of his going down to Hierusalem and of his sufferings there, Peter a little after his notable confession begunne to rebuke Christ & said, Master haue pitie on thy selfe, this shall not be vnto thee. And vntill hee had appeared vnto them after his death, they did not distinctly beleeue his resurrection.

Againe, weake faith though it be ioyned with knowledge, yet it may faile in the applying or in the apprehension and appropriating of Christs benefits to a mans owne selfe. This is to be seene in ordinarie experience. For many a man there is of humble and contrite heart, that serueth God in spirit and trueth, yet is not able to say without great doubtings and wauerings; I knowe and am fully assured that my sinnes are pardoned. Now shall wee say, that all such are without faith? God forbid. Nay, we may resolue our selues, that the true childe of God may haue a hungring desire in his heart after reconciliation with God in Christ for all his sins, with care to keepe a good conscience, and yet be weake sometime in the apprehension of Gods mercie and the assurance of the remission of his owne sinnes.

But if faith faile either in the true knowledge, or in the apprehensio of Gods mercies, how can a mā be saued by it? Ans. We must knowe that this weake faith will as truely apprehend Gods mercifull promises for the pardon of sinne, as strong faith, though not so soudly. Euen as a man with a palsie hand can stretch it out as well to receiue a gift at the hand of a king, as hee that is more sound, though it be not so firmely & steadfastly. And Christ saith, that hee will not breake the bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flaxe.

The Church of Rome beares men in hand, that they are good Catholiks, if they beleeue as the church beleeues; though in the meane season they cannot tel what the Church beleeues. And some papists commend this faith by the example of an old deuout father, who beeing tempted of the deuill, and asked, how he beleeued; answered, that he beleeued as the Church beleeued; being againe asked how the Church beleeued, he answered, as I beleeue: whereupon the deuill (as they say) was faine to depart. Well, this fond and ridiculous kind of faith we renounce, as beeing a means to nuzle men in blindnes, superstitiō, & perpetuall ignorance: yet withall we doe not denie but there is an implicite or infolded faith; which is, when a man as yet hauing but some litle portiō of knowledge in the doctrin of the gospel, doth truely perform obedience according to the measure therof, & withall hath care to get more knowledge, & shews good affection to all good meanes whereby it may be increased. In

Ioh. 4. 53. & 42. this respect a certaine ruler, who by a miracle wrought vpon his child, was moued to acknowledge Christ for the Messias, & further to submit himselfe to his doctrine, is commended for a beleeuer: and so are in the like case the Samaritans.

And thus much of weake faith: which must be vnderstood to be in a man not all the daies of his life, but while hee is a young babe in Christ. For as it is in the state of the bodie, first wee are babes and growe to greater strength as we growe in yeares; so it is with a christian man. First he is a babe in Christ, hauing weake faith, but after growes from grace to grace, till he come to haue a strong faith: example whereof wee haue in Abraham, who was strong and perfect both in knowledge & apprehension. This strong faith is, when a man is indued with the knowledge of the Gospel and grace to apprehend and apply the righteousnesse of Christ vnto himselfe for the remission of his owne sins: so as he can say distinctly of himselfe and truely that he is fully resolued in his owne conscience, that he is reconciled vnto god in Christ for all his sinnes, and accepted in him to life euerlasting. This degree of faith is proper to him that beginnes to bee a tall man and of ripe yeares in Christ. And it commeth not at the first calling of a man vnto grace. And if any shal thinke that he can haue it at the first, he deceiueth himselfe. For as it it in nature: first we are babes and then as we increase in yeares, so we growe in strength: so it is in the life of a Christian: first ordinarily he hath a weak faith, and after growes from grace to grace, til he come to stronger faith: and at the last he be able to say, he is fully assured in his heart, and conscience of the pardon of his sinnes, and of reconciliation to god in Christ. And this assurance ariseth from many experiences of Gods fauour and loue in the course of his life by manifold preseruations and other blessings, which beeing deeply & duely considered bring a man to bee fully perswaded that God is his God, and God the father his father, & Iesus Christ his redeemer, and the Holy Ghost his sanctifier.

Nowe howesoeuer this faith be strong, yet is it alwaies imperfect, as also our knowledge is; & shall so long as we liue in this world be mingled with contrarie vnbeleefe and sundrie doubtings more or lesse. A great part of men amongest vs, blinded with grosse ignorance, say they haue faith, and yet indeede haue not. For aske them what faith they haue, they will answer, they beleeue that God is their father, and the sonne their redeemer, &c. aske them how long they haue had this faith, they will answer, euer since they could remember: aske them whether they euer doubt of Gods fauour? they will say, they would not once doubt for all the world. But the case of these men is to bee pitied; for howsoeuer they may perswade themselues, yet true it is, that they haue no sound faith at all: for euen stronge faith is assaulted with temptations and doubtings: and God will not haue men perfect in this life, that they may alwaies go out of themselues, & depend wholly on the merit of Christ.

And thus much of these two degrees of faith. Nowe in whomsoeuer it is, whether it be a weake faith, or a strong, it bringeth forth some fruit, as a tree doth in the time of sommer. And a speciall fruite of faith, is this confession of faith. I beleeue in God &c. so Paul saith. With the heart a man may Ro. 10. 10. beleeue vnto righteousnesse, and with the mouth man confesseth to saluation. Confession of faith is when a man in speech and outward profession doeth make manifest his faith for these two causes. I. That with his mouth outwardly hee may glorifie God and do him seruice both in bodie & soule. II. That by the confession of his faith, he may seuer himselfe from all false Christians, from Atheists, hypocrites, and all false seducers whatsoeuer. And as this is the duety of a Christian man, to make profession of his faith; so here in this Creede of the apostles, we haue the right order and forme of making confession set downe, as we shall see in handling the parts thereof.

The Creede therefore sets downe two things concerning faith, namely, the action of faith and his obiect, which also are the partes of the Creede. The action in these wordes, I beleeue: the obiect in all the words following, in God the father almighty maker, &c. And first let vs begin with the action.

I beleeue in God.) We are taught to say, I beleeue, not wee beleeue, for two causes. First because (as we touched before) in the Primitiue Church this Creede was made to be an answere to a demaund or question, which was demaunded of euery particular man that was baptized: for they asked him thus; What doest thou beleeue? Then he answered, I beleeue in God the father, &c. And thus did euery one of yeares make profeſſion of his faith, and it is likely that Peter alluded hereunto ſaying, the ſtipulation or anſwere of a good conſcience maketh requeſt to God. The ſecond cauſe is howeſoeuer wee are to pray one for another, by ſaying O our Father, &c. yet when wee come to yeres, we muſt haue a particular faith of our owne: no man can be ſaued by another mans faith, but by his owne, as it is ſaid: The iuſt ſhal liue by his faith. But ſome will ſay, this is not true, becauſe children muſt be ſaued by their parents faith: the anſwere is this, the faith of the parent doth bring the child to haue a title or interreſt to the couenant of grace, and to all the benefits of Chriſt: yet doeth it not apply the benefits of Chriſts death, his obedience, his merits, and righteouſneſſe vnto the infant: for this the beleeuer doth onely vnto himſelfe and to no other. Againe ſome may ſay, if children doe not apprehēd Chriſts benefits by their parents faith, how then is Chriſts righteouſnes made theirs and they ſaued? Anſ. By the inward working of the holy ghoſt, who is the principall applier of all graces, whereas faith is but the inſtrument. As for the places of ſcripture that mention iuſtification and ſaluation by faith, they are to be reſtrained to men of yeares: whereas infants dying in their infancie, and therefore wanting actual faith which none can haue without actuall knowledge of Gods will and word, are no doubt ſaued by ſome other ſpeciall working of Gods holy ſpirit, not knowne to vs.

also

1. Pet. 3. 21

Hab. 2. 4.

Furthermore, to beleeue, ſignifieth two things, to conceiue or vnderſtand any thing, and withall to giue aſſent vnto it to be true: and therefore in this place, to beleeue, ſignifieth to know and acknowledge that all the points of religion which followe, are the truth of God. Here therefore wee muſt remember, that this clauſe (I beleeue) placed in the beginning of the Creed, muſt be particularly applyed to all and euery article following. For ſo the caſe ſtandes, that if faith faile in one maine point, it faileth a man in all: and therefore faith is ſaid to be wholly copulatiue. It is not ſufficient to holde one article, but he that will hold any of them for his good, muſt hold them all: and he which holdes them all in ſhewe of wordes, if he ouerturne but one of them in deede, he ouerturnes them all.

Fides eſt tota copulatiua.

Againe, to beleeue is one thing, and to beleeue in this or that is another thing: and it containeth in it three points or actions of a beleeuer. I. To knowe a thing. II. To acknowledge the ſame. III. To put truſt and confidence in it. And in this order muſt theſe three actions of faith bee applyed to euery article following which concerneth any of the perſons in Trinitie. And this muſt be marked as a matter of ſpeciall moment. For alwaies by adding them to the wordes following, wee doe apply the article vnto our ſelues in a very comfortable manner. As I beleeue in the father, and doe beleeue that he is my father: and therefore I put my whole truſt in him, and ſo of the reſt.

Nowe wee come to the obiect of generall faith, which is either God or the Church in handling of both which, I will obſerue this order. I. I will ſpeake of the meaning of euery article. II. Of the duties which wee ought to learne thereby. III. And laſtly, of the conſolations which may bee gathered thence. Concerning GOD, three thinges are to bee conſidered. And firſt by reaſon of manifolde doubtings that riſe in our mindes, it may bee demaunded, whether there be a GOD? many reaſons might bee vſed to reſolue thoſe that haue ſcruple of conſcience: otherwaies wee are bound to beleeue that there is a God without all doubting. As for the Atheiſts which confidently auouch there is no GOD, by Gods law they ought to die the death: nay, the earth is too good for ſuch to dwell on. Malefactours, as theeues & rebels, for their offences haue their rewarde of death: but the offence of thoſe, which denie that there is a God, is greater: and therefore deſerues a moſt cruell death.

The ſecond point followeth, namely what God is? Anſw. Moſes deſiring to ſee Gods face, was not permitted but to ſee his hinder parts: and therefore no man can be able to deſcribe God by his nature, but by his effectes and properties, on this or ſuch like manner: God is an eſſence ſpirituall, ſimple, infinite, moſt holy. I ſay firſt of all, that God is an eſſence, to ſhew that he is a thing abſolutely ſubſiſting in himſelfe, and by himſelfe, not receiuing his beeing from any other. And herein hee differeth from all creatures whatſoeuer, which haue ſubſiſting and beeing from him alone. Againe, I ſay hee is an eſſence ſpirituall, becauſe he is not any kinde of body, neither hath hee the partes of the bodies of men or other creatures, but is in nature a ſpirit inuisible, not subiect to any mans senses. I adde also, that hee is a simple essence, because his nature admits no maner of composition of matter or forme or parts. The creatures are compounded of diuers parts, and of varietie of nature, but there is no such things in God: for whatsoeuer thing he is, he is the same by one and the same singular and indiuisible essence. Furthermore he is infinite, and that diuers waies: infinite in time, without any beginning and without end: infinite in place; because he is euery where and excluded no where, within all places, and forth of all places. Lastly he is most holy, that is, of infinite wisdom, mercie, loue, goodnes, &c. and he alone is rightly tearmed most holy, because holines is of the very nature of God himselfe: whereas among the most excellent creatures it is otherwise. For the creature it selfe is one thing and the holines of the creature an other thing. Thus wee see what God is, and to this effect God describes him selfe to be Iehouah Elohim: and Paul describes him to bee a King euerlasting, immortall inuisible, and onely wise, to whom is due all honour and glorie for euer.

Exod 3. 6.14.

1. Tim. 1. 17.

The third point is, touching the number of Gods, namely whether there be more Gods then one or no. Anſ. There is not, neither can there be any more Gods then one. Which point the Creede auoucheth, in saying, I beleeue in God, not in Gods: and yet more plainely the Nicene Creede and the Creede of Athanasius, both of the explaining the wordes of the Apostles Creede in this maner, I beleeue in one God. Howsoeuer some in former times haue erroniously held, that two Gods were the beginning of all things, one of good things, the other of euill things: others, that there was one God in the old testamet, an other in the new: others againe, namely the Valentinians, that there were thirtie couple of Gods: and the heathen people (as Augustine recordeth) worshipped thirtie thousand gods; yet we that are members of Gods Church, must hold and beleeue one God alone, and no more, Deut. 4.39. Vnderstand this day and consider in thine heart, that Iehouah hee is God in heauen aboue and vpon the earth beneath: there is none other. Eph. 4. 6. One God, one faith, one baptisme. If it be alleadged that the Scripture mentioneth many Gods because a Magistrates are called Gods, b Moses is called Aarons God, c the deuil and all idols are called Gods. The answer is this: They are not properly or by nature gods, for in that respect there is onely one God: but they are so tearmed in other respects. Magistrates are gods, because they be Vicegerents placed in the roome of the true God, to gouerne their subiects: Moses is Aarons god, because he was in the roome of God to reueale his will to Aaron: the deuill is a god, because the hearts of the wicked would giue the honour vnto him, which is peculiar to the euerliuing God: idols are called gods, because they are such in mens conceits & opinions who esteeme of them as gods. Therefore Paul saith, an idol is nothing in the world, that is nothing in nature subsisting, or nothing in respect of the diuinitie ascribed vnto it.

a Psal. 82. 6, b Exod 4.16. c 1. Cor. 4.4.

1. Cor. 8.4.

To proceed forward: to beleeue in this one God, is in effect thus much: I. To know and acknowledge him as he hath reuealed himselfe in his word: II. To beleeue him to bee my God: III. From mine heart to put all mine affiance in him. To this purpose Christ saith, This is eternall life to know thee the onely God, and whom thou hast sent Iesus Christ. Now the knowledge here meant, is not a bare or generall knowledge, for that the diuells haue, but a more special knowledge whereby I know God not onely to be God, but also to be my God, and thereupon do put my confidence in him.

Ion. 17.3.

And thus much of the meaning of the first words. I beleeue in God, &c. Now follow the duties which may bee gathered hence. First of all, if wee are bound to beleeue in God, then wee are also bound to take notice of our naturall vnbeleefe, whereby wee distrust God, to checke our selues for it, and to striue against it. Thus dealt the father of the childe that had a dumbe spirit, Lord (saith hee) I beleeue, Lord help mine vnbeleefe. And Dauid, why art thou cast downe my soule? and why art thou so disquieted in me? wait on God. And that which our Sauiour Christ said once to Peter, men should daily speake to themselues: O thou of little faith, why hast thou doubted? But some may say wherein stands our vnbeleefe? Anſ. It stands in two things: I. In distrusting the goodnes of God, that is in giuing too little or no affiance to him: or in putting affiance in the creature. For the first, few men will abide to be told of their distrust in God: but indeede it is a common and rife corruption: and though they sooth themselues neuer so, yet their vsuall dealings proclaime their vnbeleefe. through through all places, it ſhall be found that ſcarſe one of a thouſand in his dealings makes conſcience of a lie: a great part of men gets their wealth by fraud and oppreſſion and all kinde of vniuſt and vnmercifull dealing. What is the cauſe that they can doe ſo? Alas, alas, if there be any faith, it is pinned vp in ſome by-corner of the heart, & vnbeleefe beares ſway as the lord of the houſe. Againe, if a man had as much wealth as the world comes to, he could find in his heart to wiſh for another, and if he had two worlds, he could be caſting for the third, if it might be compaſſed: the reaſon hereof is, becauſe men haue not learned to make God their portion, and to ſtay their affections on him: which if they could doe, a meane portion in temporall bleſſings would be enough. Indeed theſe and ſuch like perſons will in no wiſe yeeld that they doe diſtruſt the Lord, vnleſſe at ſome time they be touched in conſcience with a ſenſe and feeling of their ſinnes, and be throughly humbled for the ſame: but the truth is, that diſtruſt of gods goodnes is a generall & a mother ſin, the ground of all other ſinnes, & the very firſt & principall ſinne in Adams fall. And for the ſecond part of vnbeleefe, which is an affiance in the creatures, read the whole booke of God, and we ſhall find it a common and vſuall ſinne in all ſortes of men, ſome putting their truſt in riches, ſome in ſtrength, ſome in pleaſures, ſome placing their felicity in one ſinne, ſome in another. When king Aſa was ſick, he put his whole truſt in the Phiſitians, & not in the Lord. And in our daies the common practiſe is, when croſſes and calamities fal, then there is trotting out to that wiſe man, to this cũning woman, to this ſorcerer, to that wizzard, that is, from God to the deuill, and their counſell is receiued and practiſed without any bones making. And this ſhewes the bitter roote of vnbeleefe, and confidence in vaine creatures; let men ſmooth it ouer with goodly tearmes as long as they will. In a worde, there is no man in the world, be he called or not called, if he looke narrowly vnto himſelfe, he ſhall finde his heart almoſt filled with manifold doubtings and diſtruſtings, whereby he ſhall feele himſelfe euen carried away from beleeuing in God. Therefore the dutie of euery man is, that will truely ſay that he beleeues in God, to labour to ſee his owne vnbeleefe & the fruits thereof in his life. As for ſuch as ſay they haue no vnbeleefe, nor feele none; more pitifull is their caſe. For ſo much the greater is their vnbeleefe.

2. Chro. 16 12.

Secondly, conſidering that we profeſſe our ſelues to beleeue in God, we muſt euery one of vs learne to knowe God. As Paul ſaith, Howe can they beleeue in him, of whom they haue not heard? and how can they heare without a preacher? therefore none can beleeue in God but he muſt firſt of all heare and be taught by the miniſterie of the word to know God aright. Let this be remembred of young and old. It is not the pattering ouer of the beleefe for a prayer, that will make a man a good beleeuer, but God muſt be knowne of vs and acknowledged as he hath reuealed himſelfe partly in his worde and partly in his creatures. Blinde ignorance and the right vſe of the Apoſtles Creede will neuer ſtand togither. Therefore it ſtandes men in hand to labour and take paines to get knowledge in religion, that knowing God aright, they may come ſtedfaſtly to beleeue in him, and truly make confeſſion of their faith.

Ro. 10.14.

Thirdly, becauſe we beleeue in God, therefore another dutie is, to denie our ſelues vtterly, and to become nothing in our ſelues. Our Sauiour Chriſt requires of vs to become as little children, if we would beleeue. The beggar depends not on the relieſe of others, till he finde nothing at home: and till our hearts be purged of ſelfe loue and pride, wee cannot depend on the fauour and goodneſſe of God. Therefore he that would truſt in God, muſt firſt of all be abaſed and confounded in himſelfe, and in regard of himſelfe be out of all hope of attaining to the leaſt ſparke of the grace of God.

Fourthly, in that we beleeue in God, and therefore put our whole truſt and aſſurance in him: we are taught, that euery mã muſt commit his body, his ſoule, goods, life, yea all that he hath into the hands of God, and to his cuſtodie. So Paul ſaith, I am not aſhamed of my ſufferings, for I knowe whom I haue beleeued, and am perſwaded that he is able to keepe that which I haue cõmitted vnto him againſt that day. A worthy ſaying: for what is the thing which Paul committed vnto the Lord? it was his own ſoule and the eternall ſaluation thereof. But what mooues him to truſt God? ſurely his perſwaſion, whereby he knew that God would keepe it. And Peter ſaith: Let them that ſuffer according to the will of God

2. Tim. 1. 12.

1. Pet. 4. 19.

God, commit their soules to him in well doing as vnto a faithfull creatour. Looke as one friend laieth downe a thing to be kept of another: so must a man giue that hee hath to the custodie of God. Few or none can practise this, and therefore when any euill befals them either in bodie or in goods, or any other way whatsoeuer, then they presently shew themselues rather beasts then men in impatience. For in prosperitie they had no care to put their trust in God, and therefore in aduersitie when crosses come, they are void of comfort. But when a man hath grace to beleeue, and trust in God, hee commits all into Gods handes: and though all the world should perish, yet he would not be dismaied. And vndoubtedly if a man will be thankefull for the preseruation of his goods, or of his life, hee must shewe the same by committing all he hath into Gods hands, and suffer himselfe to be ruled by him.

Now followes the consolations & comforts which Gods Church and children reape hereby. He that beleeues in God, and takes God for his God, may assure himselfe of saluation, and of a happie deliuerance in all dangers and necessities. When God threatned a plague vpon Israell for their idolatrie, good king Iosiah humbled himselfe before the Lord his God: and hee was safe all his daies. And so king Hezekiah, when Senacherib the king of Ashur offered to inuade Iudah, trusted likewise in the Lord, and praied vnto him, and was deliuered, Whereby we see, if a man puts his whole trust in God, he shall haue securitie and quietnes, as Iehosaphat said to the men of Iudah. And our Sauiour Christ when hee was vpon the crosse, and felt the whole burden of the terrible wrath of God vpon him, cried, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken mee? And it appeareth in the epistle to the Hebrewes, that Christ was heard in that hee feared: whereby we are giuen to vnderstand, that they shall neuer bee vtterly forsaken that take God for their God. And king Dauid hauing experience of this, vseth most excellent speeches for this ende, to shew that the ground of his comfort was, that God was his God. And it is said that Daniell had no manner of hurt in the Lyons denne; because he trusted in the Lord his God. And contrariwise, such as distrust God are subiect to all miseries and iudgements. The Israelites in the wildernesse beleeued not God, and trusted not in his helpe, therefore God was angrie, and his fire was kindled in Iacob, and wrath came vpon Israell.

God, the Father almightie.) Some haue thought that these wordes are to be coupled to the former without distinction, as if the title of God had beene proper to the first person the father, and not common to the rest: and thus haue some heretickes thought. But indeede there must a pause or distinction bee made, that the name or title of God may bee set in the fore front, as common to all the three persons following. For that is the very intent of the order of his Creede, to teach vs to beleeue in one God, who is distinct into three subsistances or persons called the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost. And here offers it selfe to be considered euen one of the greatest mysteries of our religion: namely, that God is the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost: and again, that the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost are one and the same God. Some at the first may possibly say, that this cannot stand, because it is against all reason that one should bee three, or three one. The answere is, that indeed if one and the same respect be kept it is not possible, but in diuers considerations and respects it may. And thus the father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost are three, namely in person; and againe, they three are one, not in person but in nature. By nature is meant, a thing subsisting by it selfe, that is common to many: as the substance of man consisting of bodie and soule common to all men, which wee call the humanitie of a man, is the nature of man. By person is meant, a thing or essence subsisting by it selfe, not common to many, but incommunicable: as among men, these particulars, Peter, Iohn, Paul, are called persons. And so in the mysterie of the trinitie, the diuine nature is the Godhead it selfe simply and absolutely considered; and a person is that which subsisteth in this Godhead, as the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost. Or againe, a person is one and the same Godhead not absolutely considered, but in relation, and as it were restrained by personall or characteristicall properties: as the godhead or God begetting is the Father, God againe considered not simply but so far forth as hee is begotten is the Sonne; and God proceeding of the the Father, and the Sonne, the holy ghost. And if any man would conceiue in mind rightly the diuine nature, he must conceiue God or the Godhead absolutely: if any of the persons, then he must conceiue the same Godhead relatiuely with personall properties. Thus the Godhead considered with the proprietie of fatherhood or begetting is the father: and conceiuing the same Godhead with the proprietie of generation, wee conceiue the sonne, and the godhead with the proprietie of proceeding, wee conceiue the holy Ghost. Neither must it seeme strange to any that wee vse the names of nature and person, to set foorth this mysterie by: for they haue beene taken vp by common consent in the Primitiue Church, and that vpon waightie consideration to manifest the truth, and to stoppe the mouthes of heretickes: and they are not vsed against the proper sense of the scriptures, nay they are therein a contained. Thus wee see howe it comes to passe that the three things signified by these names, Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost, are each of them one and the same God. And this mysterie may well bee conceiued by a comparison borrowed from light. The light of the sunne, the light of the moone, and the light of the aire, for nature and substance are one and the same light: and yet they are three distinct lights. The light of the sunne beeing of it selfe and from none, the light of the moone from the sunne, and the light of the aire from them both. So the diuine nature is one, and the persons are three, subsisting after a diuers manner in one and the same nature.

a Heb. 1. 3. Col. 2. 9.

And for the further clearing of this point, wee must yet further marke and remember two things: namely, the vnion & the distinction of the persons. The vnion is whereby three persons are one not simply, but one in nature, that is, coessentiall, or consubstantiall; hauing all one Godhead. For the Father is God, the sonne is God, and the holy Ghost is God: nowe there are not three distinct Gods, but one God, because there is one God and no more in nature; considering that the thing which is infinite is but one and is not subiect to multiplication: and the Father is this one God, as also the sonne and the holy Ghost. And as these three persons are in nature, so whatsoeuer agrees to God simply considered, agrees to them al three. They are all coequall and coeternall: all most wise, iust, mercifull, omnipotent, by one and the same wisdome, iustice, mercie, power. And because they haue all one Godhead, therefore they are not onely on with another, but also each in other, the Father in the sonne, and the sonne in the Father, and the holy Ghost in them both. And wee must not imagine that these three are one God, as though the father had one part of the Godhead, the sonne another part, and the holy Ghost a third. For that is most false, because the infinite and the most simple godhead is not subiect to composition or diuision: but euery person is whole God, subsisting not in a part, but in the whole godhead: and the whole entire godhead is communicated from the father to the son, and from both father and sonne to the holy Ghost. But some may yet say, that this doctrine seems to be impossible; because three creatures, as for example, Peter, Paul, Timothy be three persons, and so remaining, cannot haue one and the same nature, that is, the same body, & the same soule. Ans. Three or moe men may haue the same nature b in kind, but the truth is, they cannot possibly haue a nature which shall be one and the same c in number, in them all three. For a man is a substance created and finite, and the bodies of men are quantities, and therfore diuisible and separable one from another. Hereupon it comes, that the persons of men are not onely distinguished by proprieties, but also diuided and sundered one frō another. And though Peter, Paul, Timothy haue all one common and vniuersal forme, yet they three are not on mā but three mē. Now it is otherwise with the diuine nature or godhead which is vncreated and infinite, and therfore admits neither composition nor diuision, but a distinction without any seperation: so as the three persons subsisting in it, shall not be three Gods but one and the same God.

Yet further some will obiect, that it is truely said of the Father, that hee is God, but the same godhead is not in the sonne, nor in the holy Ghost; for the sonne & the holy ghost haue their beginning from the father. Ans. The sonne and the holy Ghost haue not a beginning of their nature or of their godhead from the father, but of their person onely: the person of the sonne is from the father; and the person of the holy ghost is both from the father and from the sonne: but the Godhead of all three persons is vncreate and vnbegotten, and proceeding from none. Yet ſome may ſay, both the ſonne and the holy Ghoſt haue receiued from the father all their attributes, as wiſedome, knowledge, power, &c. Nowe he that receiueth any thing frō another, is in that reſpect inferiour to him that giueth it: and therefore the ſonne and the holy Ghoſt are not God as he is. Anſ. We muſt knowe, that, which the ſonne receiueth of the Father, he receiueth it by nature, and not by grace: and he receiueth not a part, but all that the father hath, ſauing the perſonall proprietie. And the holy Ghoſt receiueth from the father and the ſonne by nature, and not by grace: & therfore though both the ſonne and the holy Ghoſt receiue from the Father, yet they are not inferiour to him, but equall with him. And thus much is both neceſſarie and profitable to be learned of the vnion between the three perſons in Trinitie, wherby they beeing three haue all one and the ſame Godhead.

The ſecond point to be conſidered is, that though theſe three haue but one godhead, and all make but one God, yet they are diſtinguiſhed one from another: for the father is the father, and not the ſonne or the holy Ghoſt: the ſonne is the ſonne, and not the father nor the holy Ghoſt: and the holy Ghoſt is the holy Ghoſt not the father nor the ſonne. This diſtinction of the perſons is notably ſet foorth vnto vs in the baptiſme of our Sauiour Chriſt: where it is ſaid, that when Ieſus was baptized he came out of the water: there is the ſecond perſone: and the holy Ghoſt deſcended vpō him in the forme of a doue; there is the third perſon: and the father the firſt perſon pronounced from heauen, that hee was his onely beloued ſonne in whom he was well pleaſed. And we muſt conceiue this diſtinction in ſuch manner, as though theſe three, Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt, were three names of one God. For the three perſons doe not in name or worde, but really in trueth diſtinctly ſubſiſt in the ſame diuine nature. Neither muſt we imagine that the three perſons are three formes or differences of one God as ſome heretickes haue dreamed, who taught that the father alone is God, and that he is called a father in one reſpect, the ſonne in another, and the holy Ghoſt in a third. For this were nothing elſe but to make the perſonall proprieties to be nothing but imaginarie accidents, which indeed, or at the leaſt in mans conceit, might come and goe, and be either in the perſons or forth of them. For the perſonall relations though in [a] minde they may be diſtinguiſhed from the diuine eſſence, yet [b] indeed they are one with it. But ſome will ſay, if they make this diſtinction, there is rather a quaternity then a Trinity: for the Godhead is one, the father another, the ſonne a third, and the holy Ghoſt a fourth. Thus ſome heretikes haue obiected againſt the diſtinction of the Trinity: but it is vntrue which they ſay. For the Godhead muſt not be ſeuered from the father, nor from the Sonne, nor from the holy Ghoſt: for the Father is God or the whole godhead, ſo alſo is the ſonne and the holy Ghoſt: and the godhead likewiſe is in euery one of theſe three perſons, and euery one of them ſubſiſting in the Godhead, muſt be conceiued to be in them all, and not as a fourth thing out of them. And therefore we muſt ſtill maintaine, that theſe three perſons are diſtinguiſhed and not deuided, as three men are deuided in beeing and ſubſtance: for this diuiſion cannot be in them; becauſe all three haue one diuine nature and one Godhead. This is the myſtery of all myſteries to be receiued of vs all, namely, the Trinitie of the perſons in the vnity of the Godhead. This forme of doctrine muſt bee retained and holden for theſe cauſes: I. Becauſe by it we are able to diſtinguiſh the true God from all falſe gods and Idols. II. Becauſe among all other pointes of religion this is one of the chiefeſt, beeing the very foundation thereof. For it is not ſufficient for vs to know GOD as we can conceiue of him in our owne imagination: but we muſt knowe him as he hath reuealed himſelfe in his worde. And it is not ſufficient to ſaluation to beleeue in GOD confuſedly, but we muſt beleeue in one GOD diſtinct into three perſons, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt: yea and more then this, we muſt hold and beleeue that GOD the father is our father, the Sonne our redeemer, the holy Ghoſt our ſanctifier and comforter. Well then, if we muſt in this manner beleeue in God, then we muſt alſo know him: for we can haue no faith in the thing which is vtterly vnknowne. Wherfore if we would beleeue in the father, ſonne, or holy Ghoſt, we muſt know them in part, Iohn, 17. This is life eternall to know thee the onely God, and whō thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt. Iohn, 14. 17.

Mat. 3. 16. 17.

The

world can not receiue the ſpirit of trueth becauſe it hath neither ſeene him nor knowne him. 1. Ioh. 2. 23. Whoſoeuer denieth the ſon hath not the father. Thirdly, this doctrine directs vs in worſhipping God aright: for vnity in trinity and trinity in vnity is to be worſhipped; one God muſt be worſhipped in the father, in the ſonne, and in the holy Ghoſt: and if we worſhip God the father without the ſonne and the holy Ghoſt; or if we worſhip the ſonne without the father and the holy Ghoſt: & the holy Ghoſt without the father and the ſonne, we worſhippe nothing but an idol. Againe, if wee worſhip the three perſons not as one God, but as three gods, then likewiſe we make three idols.

Note further, that of all the three perſons, the firſt perſon the father is ſet in the firſt place, and deſcribed to vs by three thinges. I. by his title that he is a father. II. by his attribute that he is Almighty. III. by his effect, that he is maker of heauen and earth: of theſe in order as they lie in the Creede. And firſt of the title (Father) It may ſeeme that he hath ſome prerogatiue ouer the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt, becauſe he is ſet before them: but wee muſt know, that he is ſet before them neither in regard of time, nor of dignity, for therein all three are equal; but in regard of order onely. The Father is the firſt, the Sonne the ſecond, and the holy Ghoſt the third: as may appeare by this ſimilitude. If three Emperours equall in dignity ſhould meete all in one place, being equall alſo in power and maieſty, if all three ſhould ſit downe, though one bee no better then another, yet one of them muſt needes ſit downe the firſt, and another in the ſecond place, and then the third: but yet we cannot ſay, that he which ſate downe firſt is the chiefeſt. And ſo it is in the Trinity, though none be greater or aboue another, yet the father is in the firſt place, not becauſe he is before the ſonne, or the holy Ghoſt in dignity or honour, but becauſe he is the fountaine of the deity, the ſonne being from him, & the holy Ghoſt from them both.

The meaning. Nowe let vs come to the title of the firſt perſon. The name Father in Scriptures is aſcribed either to God taken indefinitely, and ſo by conſequent to all the three perſons in trinity: or particularly to the firſt perſon alone. For the firſt, God is a father properly and principally, according to the ſaying of Chriſt, Call no man father vpon earth, for there is but one your father which is in heauen: that is, principally: whereas earthly parents, whom we are commaunded to worſhip and honour are but certaine images or reſemblances of our heauenly father, hauing this bleſſing, that they are fathers from him. And hereupon this title agrees to men, not ſimply, but ſo farre forth as God honoureth them with fatherhood in calling them to be fathers. whereas God himſelfe receiues this honour frō none. God is tearmed a father in reſpect both of nature and grace. He is a father in regard of nature, becauſe he created and gouerneth all things. In this regard he is called the father of ſpirits, and [b] Adam is called the Sonne of God. He is a father in reſpect of grace, becauſe we are regenerate by him, and accepted to be his ſonnes by adoption through the merit of Chriſt. And in this reſpect the ſecond perſon as well as the firſt is called [c] a Father, and ſaid to haue an offſpring[d] or ſeede & children. But when the name of father is giuē to the firſt perſon, it is done vpō a ſpecial conſideration, becauſe he is a father by nature to the ſecond perſon begetting him of his owne ſubſtance before all worldes. By this it appeares, that out of the title of the firſt perſon, wee may fetch a diſcription thereof on this manner. The Father is the firſt perſon in Trinity, begetting the ſon. Nowe to be begette is the perſonall propriety whereby he is diſtinguiſhed from the other two. If it bee ſaid that creatures doe beget, and that therefore to beget is not proper to the father: the anſwere is, that in this point there are many differences betweene God the father and all creatures. First the father begets the ſonne before all eternity: and therefore God the father begetting, and the ſonne begotten are equall in time: whereas in earthly generation the father is before the ſonne in time. Secondly, God the father begets his ſonne by communicating to him his whole eſſence or Godhead: which can not bee in earthly parents vnleſſe they ſhould bee aboliſhed and come to nothing. Whereas neuertheleſſe, God the father giuing his whole nature to his ſonne, retaines the ſame ſtill, becauſe it is infinite. Thirdly, the father begets the ſonne in himſelfe and not forth of himſelfe: but in earthly generation the father begetting is foorth of the child, and the child foorth of the father. And that must not trouble vs which heretickes alleadge against this doctrine, namely, that if the Father who is of one nature with the sonne, did beget the sonne, then he did beget himselfe: for the Godhead of the Father doth not beget either the godhead or the person of the sonne: but the person of the father begets the person of the sonne, both which in one godhead are really distinct.

Thus we see what the father is. Nowe to beleeue in the father, is to bee perswaded, that the first person in Trinity, is the Father of Christ, and in him my Father particularly, and that for this cause I intend and desire for euer to put my trust in him.

Ier.14.19. Math.6.4.

The duties which we may learne hence are manifold. And here we haue occasion offered first of all to consider who is our father by nature. I shall say to corruption (saith Iob) thou art my father: and to the wormie thou art my mother: seeing God vouchsafeth this great prerogatiue to thē that loue him, that he will be their father: therefore Iob in consideration hereof would haue euery man to haue recourse to his own naturall condition, to see who is his father by nature. Iob saith, corruption is his father: but if we marke well the condition of our nature, we shall further see euery man to be the child of wrath, & that Satan is his father, for so long as a mā walkes in his sinnes (which euery man doth by nature) so long doeth he shewe himselfe to be the liuely childe of the deuill. And thus Christ reasoneth against the Scribes and Pharisees. Ye are of your father the deuill, and the lusts of your father yee will doe. And true it is, that no child is so like his father that begot him, as euery man by nature is like the deuill: and the whole tenour and course of his naturall life without grace is a liuely resemblance of the disposition of Satan. Secondly, euery one that beleeues God to bee a father, and in Christ his father, must as a good childe be obedient to his fathers will. So Salomon saith, A wise sonne maketh a glad Father. How? by doing his will: and therefore when one told our Sauiour Christ that his mother and brethren stood without, desiring to speake with him, he said, Whosoeuer shall doe my fathers will which is in heauen, the same is my father, my sister, and mother: wherein we may note, that hee that will haue God the father to be his father, and Christ Iesus his brother, must doe the will of God the father. And hence God saith, If I be a master, where is my feare? If I be a father where is my honour? Where is plainly taught this second duty, that if God bee our father, then as good children we must shewe obedience vnto him: but if we disobey him, then wee must knowe, that that former saying of Christ will bee verified vpon vs: that because men do the lusts of the deuill, therefore they are the children of the deuill. But least this feareful sentence be verified of vs, it is the duty of euery mā that maketh this confessiō, that he beleeues God to be his father, first to labour to know Gods will, and secondly, to perform continuall obedience vnto the same: like vnto a good child that would faine please his father, and therefore is alwaies ready to doe the best he can. And without doubt that man which vnfainedly takes God for his father, is then most grieued, when as by any sinne he displeaseth him, and no other crosse or calamity is so grieuous vnto him. The greatest griefe that the prodigall sonne vpon his repentance had, was that he had offended his father, by sinning against heauen, and against him: the same also must be our griefe: and all our care must be set on this, to consider howe wee may be obedient children to this our louing father. Thirdly, that mā that beleeues God to be his father, must imitate and follow him: for it is the will of God that his childrē should belike vnto himselfe. Now we followe God especially in two things. I. In doing good to them that persecute vs: so saith our Sauiour Christ, Pray for them that hurt you, that you may bee the children of your father which is in heauen: for he maketh the sunne to rise on the euill and on the good, and sendeth raine on the iust and vniust. II. Our heauenly father is mercifull: for he is a father of the fatherlesse: & therefore he that will be a sonne of this father, must be mercifull to his poore brethren, as Iob saith of himselfe, I was the eies to the blinde, and I was the feet vnto the lame, I was a father vnto the poore. Fourthly, seeing we beleeue God to be our father, we are hereby taught to vse moderate care for the things of this life: for if a man know himselfe to be the childe of God, then hee also knows that God will prouide for him, as we know in a family the father prouideth for all. Now God is a father, and his Church is his family: therefore if thou wilt be a member of Gods Church, and a child of God, thou must cast thy care on god, & follow the counsel of Christ. Be not too carefull for your life what yee shall eate, or what ye shall drinke. And marke his reason drawne from the point which wee haue in hand. The fowles of the heauen (saith he) they neither sow nor reape, nor carrie into barnes: and yet your heauenly father feedeth them: are ye not much better then they? But alas, the practise of the world is contrarie: for men haue no care for the knowledge of Gods word, nor the meanes of their saluation: all their mindes are set on the things of this life, when as Christ saith, First seeke the kingdome of heauen, and the righteousnesse thereof, and all these things shall be ministred vnto you. If you should see a yong man prouide for himselfe, and no man els for him, we should presently say, surely his father is dead: euē so, when a mans care is set wholly both day & night for the things of this life, it argues that God hath either cast him off, or els that he takes him for no father of his. Fifthly, if God be our father, then we must learne to beare any crosse patiently that he shall lay vpō vs, either in bodie or in mind, and alwaies looke for deliuerance from him: for whome the Lord loueth, them he chastiseth: and if ye endure chastising (saith the Apostle) God offereth himselfe vnto you as vnto children: which may appeare more plainly by this comparison. If two children should fight, and a man comming by, should part them, and after beat the one, and let the other goe free: euery man that seeth this will say, that that child which he beats is his owne sonne. Euen so, when God chastiseth vs, he sheweth himselfe vnto vs as a father, if we submit our selues. Now if our earthly fathers corrected vs and we gaue them reuerence, taking it patiently: should we not much rather be in subiection to the father of spirits that we may liue? Therefore the conclusion is this: If we displease God, be ye sure, he will correct vs; and when his hand is vpon vs wee must not murmure against him, but beare it with a mild spirit: & furthermore when we are vnder the crosse, wee must alwaies looke for deliuerance from this Father onely. If a sonne when he is beaten should flee to his fathers enemies for helpe and counsell: it would argue that he were but a graceless child. Sundrie and diuers calamities and crosses befall men in this life, which they can not brooke: and therefore it is a common practise of many among vs in these daies, when Gods hand is vpon them, to goe for helpe to the deuill; they seeke for counsell at witches and wise men (as I haue said) but let them looke vnto it, for that is the right way to double their miserie, and to shew themselues lewd children. Lastly, if wee confesse and beleeue God to be the father of Christ, and in him our father also; then in regard of our conuersation, we must not frame our selues like vnto the world: but the course of our liues must be in righteousnesse and true holinesse. Paul exhorteth the Corinthiās to separate themselues from Idolaters, alleadging the place out of the olde Testament, where the Lord biddeth the Israelites to come out from Idolaters, and to touch no vncleane thing: and the reason followeth out of Ieremie, that if they doe so, then God will be their Father, and they shall be his children, euen his sonnes and daughters: which reason Paul vrgeth in the next chapter to this effect: considering we haue these promises, that therefore wee should cleanse our selues from al filthinesse of the flesh and spirit, and grow vp vnto holinesse in the feare of the Lord. Where, if we marke the place diligently, we shall finde this lesson, That euery man who takes God for his father, must not onely in this sinne of Idolatrie, but in all other sinnes separate himselfe, that men by his godly life may know whose childe he is. But some will say, this exhortation is needelesse amongst vs, for we haue no cause to separate our selues from others, because all amongst vs are Christians, all beleeue in God and are baptized, & hope to be saued by Christ. Ans. In outward profession, I confesse, we carrie the shew of Christians, but in deede and truth, by our liues and conuersations, very many among vs denie Christ: for in euery place the common practise is, to spend the time in drunkennes and surfetting, in chambering and wantonnesse: yea, great is the companie of those that make a trade of it; take this lewd conuersation from many men, and take away their liues. And on the Lords day it may be seene both publikely and priuately, in houses and in the open streetes, there is such reuel, as though there were no God to serue. In the fixe daies of the weeke, many men walke very painefully in their callings: but when the Lords day commeth, thē euery man takes license to doe what hee will: and because of the Princes laws, men wil come formally to the Church for fashions sake: but in the meane time how many doe nothing else but scorne, mocke, and deride, and as much as in them lyeth, disgrace both the word and the ministers thereof? so that the common saying is this: oh he is a precise fellow, he goes to heare Sermons, he is too holy for our companie. But it stands men in hand to take out a better lesson, which is, if we will haue God to be our father, we must shew our selues to be the children of God by repentance and newnesse of life: he can not be but a graceless child, that will lead a rebellious life flat against his fathers minde. Let vs then so behaue our selues, that we may honour our father which is in heauen, and not dishonour him in our liues and callings: rather let vs separate our selues from the filthinesse of the flesh, loathing those things which our father loatheth, & flying from those things which our father abhorreth.

And thus much for the duties. Now follow the consolations which arise from this point. But first we are to know that there are three sorts of men in the world. The first are such as will neither heare nor obey the word of God. The second sort are those which heare the word preached vnto them but they will not obey: both these sorts of men are not to looke for any comfort hence. Now there is a third sort of men, which as they heare Gods word: so they make conscience of obeying the same in their liues and callings: and these are they to whom the consolations that arise out of this place, doe rightly belong, and must be applyed.

First therefore, seeing God the father of Christ, and in him the father of all that obey and doe his will, is our father, here note the dignitie and prerogatiue of all true beleeuers: for they are sonnes and daughters of God, as saith S. Iohn. So many as receiued him, to them he gaue a prerogatiue to be the sonnes of God: euen to them that beleeue in his name. This priuiledge will appeare the greater if we consider our first estate: for as Abraham saith, We are but dust and ashes, and in regard of the depriuation of our natures, we are the children of the deuill: therefore of such rebels to be made the sonnes of God, it is a wonderfull priuiledge and prerogatiue, and no dignitie like vnto it. And to inlarge it further, he that is the sonne of God, is the brother of Christ, and fellow heire with him; and so heire apparent to the kingdome of heauen: and in this respect, is not inferiour to the very angels. This must be laide vp carefully in the hearts of Gods people, to confirme them in their conuersation among the companie of vngodly men in this world.

Iohn. 1. 12.

Gen. 18. 27.

Secondly, if a man doe indeuour himselfe to walke according to Gods word, then the Lord of his mercie will beare with his wants: for as a father spareth his owne sonne, so will God spare them that feare him. Now a father commands his childe to write or to applie his booke: though all things herein be not done according to his minde, yet if he finde a readinesse with a good indeauour, he is content, and falls to praise his childs writing or learning. So God giueth his commandement, and though his seruants faile in obedience; yet if the Lord see their heartie indeauour, and their vnfained willingnesse to obey his will, though with sundry wants, he hath made this promise and will performe it, that as a father spareth his sonne, so will he spare them. If a child be sicke, will the father cast him off? nay, if through the grieuousnes of his sicknes he cannot take the meat that is giuen him, or if he take it, and for faintnesse picke it vp againe, will the father of the child thrust him out of doores? no: but he will rather pitie him. And so when a man doth indeauour himselfe through the whole course of his life to keepe Gods commandements, God will not cast him away though thorough weaknesse he faile in sundrie things and displease God. This prerogatiue cannon: haue, but he that is the child of God: as for others when they sinne, they doe nothing els but draw downe Gods iudgements vpon them, for their deeper condemnation.

Mal. 3. 17. Psal. 103. 13.

Thirdly hence we learne, that the child of God cannot wholly fall away from Gods fauour, I doe not say, that he cannot fall at all: for he may fall away in part, but he cannot wholly. Indeede so oft as he sinnes, he depriues himselfe wholly of Gods fauour as much as in him lyeth: yet God for his part still keepeth the minde and purpose of a father. Dauid loued his sonne Absolon wonderfully, but Absolon like a wicked sonne played a lewd prancke, and would haue thrust his father out of his kingdome: and Dauid although he was sore offended with Absolon, and shewed tokens of his wrath, yet in heart he loued him, and neuer purposed to cast him off. Hereupon when he went against him, he commaunded the captaines to intreat

2. Sam. 18. 5. treat the young man Absolon gently for his sake. And when he was hanged by the haire of the head in pursuing his father, then David wept and cried, O my sonne Absolon, my sonne Absolon, would God I had died for thee, Absolon my sonne. And so it is with God our heauenly Father, when his children sinne against him, and thereby loose his loue and fauour, and fall from grace, he forsakes them: but how farre? Surely he shewes signes of anger for their wickednesse, and yet indeede his loue remains towards them stil: and this is a true conclusion, The grace of God in the adoption of the Elect is vnchangeable, and he that is the childe of God can neuer fall away wholly or finally. On the contrary, that is a bad and comfortlesse opinion of the Church of Rome; which holdeth, that a man may be iustified before God, & yet afterward by a mortall sinne, finally fall from grace and be condemned.

Torren conf. August.

Fourthly, the child of God that takes God the father for his father, may freely come into the presence of God, and haue liberty to pray vnto him. Wee know it is a great priuiledge to come into the chamber of presence before an earthly prince: and few can alwaies haue this prerogatiue though they be great men: yet the kinges owne sonne may haue free entrance, and speake freely vnto the king himselfe, because he is his sonne. Now the children of God haue more prerogatiue then this: for they may come into the presence, not of an earthly king, but of Almighty GOD the King of kinges: & as they are the sons of God in Christ, so in him they may freely speake vnto God their father by praier. And this ouerthrows the doctrine of such as be of the church of Rome, which teach and holde, that a man must come to speake to God by prayer through the intercessiō of Saints: for, say they, the presence of God is so glorious, that we may not be so bold, as of our selues to speake vnto him; but needs must haue the intercession of others.

Lastly, GOD will prouide for all his Church and children all thinges needefull both for their bodies and soules: so our Sauiour Christ bids his disciples take noe thought what they should eate, or what they should drinke, or wherewith they should be cloathed, adding this reason: for your heauenly Father knoweth all your wāts. And if we take thought, it must be moderate, and not distrustfull: it is a part of the fathers duty to prouide for his family & children, & not the childrē for the father. Now shal an earthly father haue this care for his children: and shall not our heauenly father much more prouide for those that feare and loue him? Nay marke further, in Gods Church there be many hypocrits which receiue infinite benefits frō God, by reason of his elect children with whom they liue: and wee shall see this to be true, that the wicked man hath euer fared better for the godly mans cause. Sodome and Gomorrha receiued many benefits by reason of righteous Lot: & when the Lord was purposed to destroy Sodō, he was faine to pull Lot forth of the cities: for the text saith the Angell of the Lord could not do any thing till he was come out of it. So also in Pauls dangerous voyage towards Rome, al the men in it fared better for Pauls company: for the Lord tolde Paul by an angel, that there should be no losse of any mans life, for the Lord had giuen to him all that sailed with him. And vndoubtedly if it were not for some few that feare God, he would powre downe his vengeance vpon many nations and kingdomes, there is such excesse of wickednes in all sorts. Againe, if the Lord doe thus carefully prouide for his children all kind of benefits; what a wonderfull wickednes is this, for men to get their liuing by vngodly meanes; as vsury, carding, dicing, and such like exercises. If a man were perswaded that God were his father, & would prouide sufficiently both for his bodye & soule; so that vsing lawful meanes he should euer haue enough: out of all doubt he would neuer after the fashion of the world vse vnlawful and prophane meanes to get a liuing. But this prooueth, that how soeuer such men say, God is their father, yet indeede they deny him.

And thus much of this title, Father, the first thing whereby the first person is described. Now followeth the second point, namely his attribute of Omnipotencie, in the word Almighty. And whereas the father is said to be almighty, it is not so to be vnderstood as though the Sonne were not almighty, or the holy Ghost not almighty: for euery property and attribute (saue the personall properties) is common to all the three persons. For as God the father doth impart his Godhead vnto the sonne, and to the holy Ghost, so doth he communicate the properties of the Godhead to them also.

God

God is omnipotent two waies: I. Because he is able to do whatsoeuer he will. II. Because he is able to doe more then he will doe. For the first, that God is able to doe whatsoeuer hee will, Dauid saith, Our God is in heauen, and he doth whatsoeuer he will: for there is nothing that can hinder God; but as he willeth, so euery thing is done. Secondly, that God can doe more thē he willeth to be done, it is plain where Iohn Baptist saith: God is able of these stones to raise vp children vnto Abraham: for though God can doe thus much, yet he will not doe it. So likewise when Christ was betraied, the Father could haue giuen him more then 12. legions of Angels to haue deliuered him out of their hands, but yet he would not: and the like may be said of many other things. The Father is and was able to haue created an other world, yea a thousand worlds; but he would not, nor will not. And likewise Christ beeing vpon the crosse, was able at their bidding to haue come downe, and saued himselfe from death; but he would not: and therefore this is true, the Lord can do any thing that he willeth to be done actually, yea & more then he will. But some will say, God can not doe some things which man can doe, as God cannot lie, nor denie himselfe: and therefore he is not omnipotent. Ans. Although some haue thought that God could doe euen these things, and that he did them not, because he would not: yet we must know and beleeue that God can neither lie, nor denie himselfe: indeed man can doe both, but these and many other such things if God could doe them, he could not be God. God indeede can doe all things which shew forth his glorie and maiestie: but such things as are against his nature he cānot doe: as for example: God can not sinne, and therefore can not lie: and because he can not doe these thinges, for this very cause he is omnipotent: for these and such like, are works of impotencie: which if God could doe, he should euen by his owne word be iudged impotent. Secondly, he can not doe that which implies contradiction: as when a thing is, to make it at the same time to be, and not to bee: as when the Sunne doth shine, to make it at the same instant to shine & not to shine. And therfore false is the doctrine of that Church, which in their Transubstātiation make the body of Christ, (whose essentiall propertie is to be onely in one place at once) to be circumscribed, & not to be circumscribed: to be in one place, & not to be in one place.

Heb. 3. 9.

Tit. 1. 2. 2. Tim. 2. 13.

And thus much for the meaning. Now follow the duties whereunto we are mooued by this doctrine, of Gods omnipotencie.

First, whereas God the father is saide to be Almightie, we are taught true humiliation: Humble your selues vnder the mightie hand of God, saith Peter: where he giueth an exhortation to humilitie, & alleadgeth the cause, because God is Almightie. To make this more plaine. Euery one of vs was borne in sinne, and by nature we are most wretched in our selues: now what an one is God? Surely he is able to do whatsoeuer he will, yea and more then hee will, and is able to destroy such as rebel against him euery moment. Therefore our dutie is, to cast downe our selues for our sinnes in his presence. This true humiliation was that which our Sauiour Christ would haue brought the young man in the Gospell vnto, when he bad him goe sel all that he had and giue to the poore. Therefore whosoeuer thou art, take heede thou must: for if thou runne on in thy wickednes, and still rebell against God, it is a thousand to one at length he will destroy thee. For he is an almightie God, & able to doe whatsoeuer he will: his hand is mightie, it boots not a man to striue with him: for hee was neuer yet ouermastered, and for this cause we must needes cast downe our selues vnder his hand. It is a fearefull thing (saith the holy Ghost) to fall into the hands of the liuing God: therefore if we would escape his heauie and terrible displeasure, the best way for vs is, to abase our selues, and be ashamed to follow our sinnes. Christ biddeth vs not to feare him that is able to kill the bodie, and can goe no further: but wee must feare him that is able to cast both bodie and soule into hell fire. Exampe of this we haue in Dauid, who when he was persecuted by his owne sonne Absolon, he said vnto the Lord, If hee thus say, I haue no delight in thee, behold here I am, let him doe to me as seemeth good in his eyes. But some wil say, I will liue a little longer in my sinnes, in lying, pride, Sabboth-breaking, in swearing, dicing, gaming, and wantonnes: for God is mercifull, and in my old age I will repent. Ans. Well, soothe not thy selfe: but marke, vsually when God holds backe his hand for a season, hee doth as it were fetch a more mightie blow, for the greater confusion of a rebellious sinner; therefore humble, submit, and cast downe thy selfe before before God, and doe not ſtriue againſt him: his hand is mighty, and will ouerthrow thee. Though thou hadſt all learning, wiſedome, might, riches, &c. yet (as Chriſt ſaid to the young man) one thing is wanting, that thou ſhouldeſt be humbled; and vntill thou be humbled, nothing is to be looked for but Gods iudgement for ſinne.

Secondly ſeeing God is Almighty; wee muſt tremble and feare at all his iudgements, we muſt ſtand in awe, quake, and quiuer at them, as the poore child doth, when hee ſeeth his father come with the rod. Example of this wee haue often in Gods word; as when the ſonnes of Aaron offered ſtrange fire before the Lord, hee ſent fire from heauen, & burned them vp. And though Aaron was very ſorrie for his ſonnes, yet when Moſes told him, that the Lord would be glorified in all that came neere him, then the text ſaith Aaron held his peace. So alſo we reade that the Apoſtles reprooued Peter, for preaching vnto the Gentiles: but when Peter had expounded the things in order which hee had ſeene, then they held their peace, and glorified God. As alſo Dauid ſaith: I held my tongue, O Lord, becauſe thou diddeſt it. Iſaiah ſaith, In hope and ſilence is true fortitude. If a man be in trouble he muſt hope for deliuerance, and be quiet and patient at Gods iudgements. But the practiſe of the world is flat contrary. For men are ſo farre from trembling at them that they vſe to pray to God that plagues, curſes, and vengeance may light vpon them, and vpon their ſeruants and children. Now the Lord beeing a mighty God, often doth anſwerable bring his iudgements vpon them. Againe, many caried away with impacience, with themſelues hanged or drowned: which euills they thinke ſhal neuer befal them: yet at the length God doth in his iuſtice bring ſuch puniſhments vpon them according as they wiſhed. And (which is more) in all ages there haue bin ſome which haue ſcorned and mocked at Gods iudgements. Hereof we had not far hence a moſt fearfull example. One beeing with his companie in a houſe drinking on the Lords day, whē hee was ready to depart thence there was great lightening and thunder: whereupon his fellow requeſted him to ſtay but the man mocking and ieſting at the thunder & lightning, ſaid (as report was) I haue nothing but a knaue cooper knocking my hir tubbes, come what would, hee would goe; and ſo went on his iourney: but before he came halfe a mile from the houſe, the ſame hand of the Lord which before hee had mocked, in a crack of thunder ſtroke him about the girdleſtead that hee fell downe ſtarke dead. Which example is worthy our remembrance, to put vs in mīde of Gods heauy wrath againſt thoſe which ſcorne his iudgements: for our duty is to tremble & feare: & it were greatly to be wiſhed, that we could with open eie beholde the terriblenesſe and fearfulnes of Gods iudgmets: it would make a man to quake and to leaue off ſinne. If a man paſſe by ſome high and daungerous place in the night when he cannot ſee, he is not afraid; but if yee bringe him backe againe in the day, and let him ſee what a ſteepe & dangerous way he came, he will not bee perſwaded to paſſe the ſame way againe for any thing: ſo it is in ſinning: for men liuing in ignorance and blindneſſe, practiſe any wickednesſe, and doe not care for Gods iudgments: but when God of his goodneſſe bringeth them backe, and openeth their eyes to ſee the downefall to the pit of hell, and the iudgements of God due to their ſinnes: then (they ſay) they will neuer ſinne as they haue done, but become new men, and walke in the way to eternall life.

Thirdly, we are taught by the Apoſtle Paul, that if we be to doe any duty to our brethren, as to releeue them, we muſt doe it with chearefulnes: for he laboureth to perſwade the Corinthians to chearfull liberality; and the reaſon of his perſwaſion is, becauſe God is able to make all grace to abound toward them. Where alſo this duty is taught vs, that ſeeing God is omnipotent, and therfore able to make vs abound, therefore we muſt giue chearefully to our poore brethren which want.

1. Cor. 9. 7. 8.

Fourthly, whereas there are many in euery place, which haue liued long in their ſinnes, euen from their cradle; ſome in wantonnes, ſome in drunkennes, ſome in ſwearing, ſome in idleneſſe, and ſuch like: out of this place to all ſuch there is good leſſon, namely, that euery one of them doe now become new men, and repent of all their ſinnes, for all their life paſt. For marke what Paul ſaith of the Iewes which are cut off from Chriſt the olde vineeare, and haue ſo continued in hardneſſe of heart, and deſperate malice againſt him almoſt 16. hundreth yeares: if (ſaith he) they abide not ſtill in vnbeliefe, they may be grafted in their oliue againe: and his reaſon is this, becauſe God is able to graft them in againe. Euen ſo though wee haue liued many yeares in ſinne, (and ſure it is a dangerous and fearefull caſe for a man to liue 20. 30. or 40. yeares vnder the power of the deuill;) yet we muſt know that if we will now liue a new life, forſake all our ſinnes and turne to God, wee may be receiued to grace, and be made a branch of the true oliue, though wee haue borne the fruites of the wild olive all our life long. But ſome will obiect, that they haue no hope of Gods fauour, becauſe they haue beene ſo grieuous ſinners, and continued in them ſo long. Anſ. But know it, whoſoeuer thou art, God is able to graft thee in; and if thou repent, he will receiue thee to his loue and fauour. This muſt be obſerued of all, but eſpecially of ſuch as are old in yeares, and yet remaine ignorant without knowledge, they muſt turne to the Lord by repentance: otherwiſe, if they continue ſtil profane and impenitent, they muſt knowe this, that their damnation comes poſt haſt to meete them, and they to it.

And thus much for the duties. Now follow the conſolatiõs which Gods church reape from this, that God the Father is Omnipotent. Firſt, the wonderfull power of God ſerueth to ſtrengthen vs in prayer vnto God: for he that will pray truly, muſt onely pray for thoſe things for which hee hath warrant in Gods word: all our praiers muſt be made in faith, and for a man to pray in faith, it is hard: therefore a ſpeciall meanes to ſtrengthen vs herein, is the mighty power of God. This was the ground and ſtay of the leper whom our Sauiour Chriſt clenſed: Lord (ſaith hee) if thou wilt, thou canſt make me cleane. And in the Lords prayer, whẽ our Sauiour Chriſt hath taught vs to make ſixe petitions; in the ende he giueth vs a reaſon, or motiue to induce vs to ſtand vpon, & to wait for the benefits before craued, in theſe words: Thine is the kingdome, thine is the power. &c. Matth. 8.

Secondly, hence we learne this comfort, that all the gates of hell ſhal neuer be able to preuaile againſt the leaſt member of Chriſt. I doe not ſay, they ſhall neuer bee able to aſſault, or tempt them, for that may be: but they ſhall neuer ouercome them. How (wil ſome ſay) may wee bee reſolued of this? I anſwer, By reaſon of faith: for if a Chriſtian man do beleeue that God the Father, and in Chriſt his father, is Almightie, no enemy ſhall euer be able to preuaile againſt him. So S. Iohn reaſoneth: Little children yee are of God, and haue ouercome them, that is, al falſe teachers, becauſe greater is he that is in you, that is, Chriſt Ieſus by his holy ſpirit, who is God & therfore Almighty, Then he that is in the world, that is, the ſpirit of Satan: therefore you heede not to feare. So Dauid compareth himſelfe to a ſilly ſheepe, and ſaith: Though I ſhould walke through the valley of the ſhadow of death, that is, as it were in the mouth of the Lyon, yet I would feare none euill: why ſo? becauſe the Lord is with him: thy rodde (ſaith he) and thy ſtaffe comfort me. 1. Ioh. 5. 4. Pſal. 23.

Thus much for the benefits. Now whereas it is ſaide the firſt perſon is a Father, as alſo Almighty, ioyne theſe two together, and hence will ariſe ſingular benefits and inſtructions. Firſt, whereas wee are taught to confeſſe, that the firſt perſon is a Father Almighty, wee, and euery man muſt learne to haue experience in himſelfe, of the mighty power of this almightie Father. Why, will ſome ſay, that is nothing, for the diuell and all the damned ſoules feele the power of the Almighty? True indeede they feele the power of God, namely, as hee is an almighty Iudge condemning them; but they feele not the power of an almighty Father: this is the point whereof we muſt indeauour to haue experience in our ſelues. Paul praieth that the God of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt the father of glory, would giue vnto the Epheſians the ſpirit of wiſedome, to ſee what is the exceeding greatnes of his power in them which beleeue, according to the working of his mighty power which he wrought in Chriſt. Which place muſt be conſidered: for here the Apoſtle would haue vs haue ſuch a ſpeciall manifeſtation of Gods power in our ſelues, like to that which hee did once ſhew forth in Chriſt. But how did Chriſt ſee and finde the power of God as hee was man? Anſw. Diuers waies: I. on the croſſe hee died the firſt death; which is the ſeperation of bodie and ſoule: and he ſuffered the ſorrows of the ſecond death. For in his ſoule hee bare the whole wrath of God, and all the pangs of hell, and after was buried & laid in the graue, where death triumphed ouer him for the ſpace of three dayes. Now in this extremity God did ſhew his power, in that he raiſed Chriſt from death to life. And looke as his power was manifeſted in Chriſt the head: ſo muſt it be manifeſted in al his members: for euery man hath his Eph. 1. 19.

graue, which is naturall ſinne and corruption, which wee draw from our firſt parents, and looke as a man lies dead in the graue, and can mooue neither hand nor foote: ſo euery man by nature lieth dead in ſinne. Now as God did ſhew his power in raiſing Chriſt from death: ſo euery one muſt labour to haue this knowledge and experience in himſelfe of the mightie power of God, in raiſing him from the graue of ſinne to newneſſe of life. For thus Paul makes a ſpeciall requeſt, that he might know Chriſt, and the vertue of his reſurrection, that is, that hee might feele in himſelfe that power whereby Chriſt was raiſed from death to life, to raiſe him alſo from the bondage of his ſinnes to a new life more and more. Furthermore, when Chriſt was vpon the croſſe, and all the gates of hell were open againſt him, then did he vanquiſh Satan: he bruiſed the ſerpents head, & as Paul ſaith, he ſpoyled principalities and powers, and made a ſhew of them openly, and hath triumphed ouer them in the croſſe: he ouercame the deuil and al his angels by the power of his Almightie father, and by his owne power as he is God. And euen ſo muſt Chriſtian men labour to finde the ſame power in themſelues of this almightie Father by which Chriſt did triumph ouer Satan: that by it they may tread him vnder their feet, which men can neuer do by any power in themſelues. Againe, Chriſt praieth that that cup might paſſe from him: and yet he ſaith, Not my will, but thy will be fulfilled. For it was neceſſarie that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer. And this requeſt was heard, not becauſe he was freed from death, but becauſe God his father Almightie gaue him power and ſtrength in his manhood to beare the brunt of his indignation. Now looke as this power was effectuall in Chriſt Ieſus the head, to make him able and ſufficient to beare the pangs of hel: ſo the ſame power of God, is in ſome meaſure effectual in all the members of Chriſt, to make them both patient, and of ſufficient ſtrength to beare any affliction, as Saint Paul ſaith: being ſtrengthened with all might through his glorious power vnto all patience and long ſuffering with ioyfulneſſe. And this is a notable point which euery one ought to learne: that whereas they confeſſe God to be their Almightie father, they ſhould herewithall labour to feele and haue experience in themſelues, that he is Almightie in the beginning & continuing of grace vnto the, and in giuing them power and patience to ſuffer afflictions. Further, Chriſt Ieſus when the worke of our redemption was accompliſhed, was lifted vp into heauen, & ſet at the right hand of God in heauenly places farre aboue al principalities and powers, &c. euen by the power of his father: well, as this power was made manifeſt in the head; ſo muſt it be in the members thereof. Euery child of God ſhall hereafter ſee and feele in himſelf the ſame power to tranſlate him from this vale of miſerie in this life, to the kingdom of heauen. Wherfore to conclude, we haue great cauſe to be thankefull and to praiſe God for this priuiledge, that he ſheweth his power in his childrē in regenerating thē, in making them die vnto ſinne, & to ſtand againſt the gate of hell, and to ſuffer afflictions patiently: as alſo that hee tranſlates them from death to life. And euery one ſhould ſhew his thankefulnes in labouring to haue experience of this power in himſelfe, as Paul exhorteth vs in his epiſtles to the Coloſſians and Epheſians: yea, read all his epiſtles and wee ſhall finde he mētioneth no point ſo often as this, namely, the mightie power of God, manifeſted firſt in Chriſt, and ſecondly in his members: & he accounteth all things loſſe that he might know Chriſt, and the vertue of his reſurrection. This point is the rather to bee marked, becauſe his power in the matter of grace is not to be ſeene with eye; and few there be in reſpect that haue left the vertue thereof in themſelues, for the deuil doth mightily ſhew his contrarie power in the greateſt part of the world in carrying them to ſinne and wickednes.

Phil. 3. 10.

Secondly, hence we learne that which Paul teacheth, namely, to know that all things worke togither for the beſt vnto them that loue God. God is Almightie, and therefore able to doe what ſoeuer hee will: he is alſo a father, and therefore is willing to doe that which is for our good. But ſome wil ſay, we are ſubiect to many croſſes, yea to ſin: what? can our ſins turne to our good? Anſ. If God almightie be thy father, he will turne thine afflictions, yea thy ſinnes which by nature are euill, beyond all exſpectation vnto thy ſaluation. And thus much God will doe to al ſuch as be obedient vnto him: yet no man muſt hereupon preſume to ſinne.

Rom. 8. 28.

Thirdly, whereas we beleeue that God is a mightie father, it ſerues to confirme Gods children in the promiſes of mercie reuealed in his word. The chiefeſt whereof is, that if men wil turne from there ſins, and beleeue in Chriſt, they ſhal not periſh but haue life euerlaſting. I know ſome men wil make it an eaſie thing to beleeue eſpecially thoſe which neuer knew what faith meant. But ſuch perſons neede no meanes of confirmation of faith: therefore let all thoſe which haue taſted of the hardnes of attaining vnto it, learne how to eſtabliſh their wauering hearts in the promiſe of God, by the conſideration of theſe two points: God is a father, & therefore he is willing: he is alſo Almightie, and therefore hee is able to performe his promiſe. He that wil be truly reſolued of Gods promiſes, muſt haue both theſe ſetled in his heart, and build on them as on two foundations.

It followeth, Creator of heauen and earth. We haue ſpoken of the title of the firſt perſon, & of his attributes: now we come to ſpeake of his effect, namely the Creation: but before we come to it, we are to anſwer a certaine obiection which may be made. At the firſt it may ſeeme ſtrange to ſome, that the worke of creation is aſcribed to the firſt perſon in Trinitie the father: whereas in the Scripture it is common to them all three equally. And firſt that the father is Creatour, is was neuer doubted: as for the ſecond perſon the Sonne, that he is Creatour, it is euident: Ioh. 1. 3. All things are made by it, that is, by the Son, who is the ſubſtantiall word of the father, and without it was made nothing that was made. And againe it is ſaide, that God by his Heb. 1. 2. Sonne made the world. As for the holy Ghoſt, the worke of creation is alſo aſcribed vnto him: and therefore Moſes ſaith, The ſpirit mooued vpon the waters: and Iob Gen. 1. 2. ſaith, His ſpirit hath garniſhed the heauens. How then is this peculiar to the father, being common to all the three perſons in Trinitie? I anſwer, The actions of God are twofold: either inward, or outward. The inward actions are thoſe, which one perſon doth exerciſe towards an other: as the father doth beget the ſonne, and this is an inward action peculiar to the father: and all inward actions are proper to the perſons from whome they are. So the Sonne doth receiue the godhead by communication from the Father: and the holy Ghoſt from them both: & theſe are inward actions peculiar to theſe perſons. So likewiſe, for the father to ſend his ſonne, it is an inward action proper to the father, and cannot be communicated to the holy Ghoſt: and the Sonne to be ſent by the father onely is a thing proper to the Sonne, and not common to the father, or to the holy Ghoſt. Now outward actions are the actions of the perſons in the Trinitie to the creatures, as the worke of creation, the worke of preſeruation, and of redemption. Theſe & all ſuch actions are common to all the three perſons: the father createth, the ſonne createth, & the holy Ghoſt createth. and ſo we may ſay of the workes of gouernment, and of redemption, and of all outward actions of the perſons to the creatures. But ſome againe may ſay, how then can the worke of creation, beeing an outward action of God to the creature, be peculiar to the firſt perſon the father? I anſwer, The work of creation is not ſo proper to the firſt perſon, as that it cannot alſo be common to the reſt: for all the three perſons ioyntly created al things of nothing; onely they are diſtinguiſhed in the manner of creating. For the father is the cauſe that beginneth the worke, the Sonne puts it in execution, the H. Ghoſt is the finiſher of it. And againe, the father createth by the a Son, and by the H. ghoſt: the Son createth by the holy Ghoſt, and from the Father: the holy Ghoſt createth not by the Father, nor by the Son; but frō the Father and the Sonne. And this is the reaſon why the worke of creation is aſcribed here vnto the Father, becauſe he alōe createth after a peculiar manner, namely by the Sonne and by the holy Ghoſt: but the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt create not by the Father but from him.

Baſil. de ſpirit ſanct. cap. 16. a Coloſſ. 1. 16. Rō. 11. 36.

Thus hauing anſwered the obiection, we come to ſpeake of the Creation it ſelf. In handling whereof, we muſt withal treat of the Counſell of God, as beeing the cauſe thereof, and of the Gouernment of the creatures, as beeing a work of God wherby he continues the creation. And the order which I will obſerue, is firſt to ſpeake of the Counſell of God, and ſecondly of the Execution of his Counſell, which hath two ſpeciall branches, the firſt the Creation, the ſecond the preſeruation or gouernement of things created.

The Counſell of God, is his eternal and vnchangeable decree, whereby he hath ordained all things either paſt, preſent, or to come, for his owne glorie. Firſt I call it a decree, becauſe God hath in it ſet downe with himſelfe & appointed as ſoueraigne Lord, what ſhal be, what ſhal not be.

be. I adde further, that all things whatsoeuer come vnder the compasse of this decree; as Paul saith. He worketh al things according to the counsell of his will. And our Sauiour Christ saith, that a sparrow cannot fall on the ground without the heauenly father: yea further, he tels his disciples, that the very haires of their heads are numbred, meaning that they are knowne and set downe in the councell of God. And considering that God is King of heauen and earth; & that most wise, yea wisedome it selfe; and most mightie, yea might & power it selfe: it must needes be that he hath determined how all things shall come to passe in his kingdome, with all their circumstances, time, place, causes, &c. in such particular māner, that the very least thing that may be, is not left vnappointed and vndisposed.

Math. 10. 29.
ver. 30.

The councel of God hath two properties, eternitie and vnchangeablenes. It is eternall, because it was set downe by God from everlasting before all times, as Paul saith: God hath chosen the Ephesians to saluation before all worlds. And he saith of himselfe, that he was called according to the purpose of God, which was before all worlds. Againe, the same counsell once set downe, is vnchangeable. God saith, I am Iehouah, and I change not. With God (saith S. Iames) there in no variableneſse, nor shadow of chaunge. Now such as God is, such is his decree or counsell. And being vnchangeable, his counsels also are vnchangeable.

Eph. 1. 4.
2. Tim. 1. 9
Mat. 3. 6.
Iam 1. 17.

Gods counsell hath two parts: his Foreknowledge, and his will or pleasure. His foreknowledge, wherby he did foresee all things which were to come. His will, whereby in a generall manner he wills and ordaines whatsoeuer is to come to passe: and therefore such things as God altogither nilleth, can not come to passe. Now these two parts of the counsell of God must be ioyned togither and not seuered. Will without knowledge is impotent, and foreknowledge without will is idle. And therefore such as hold that God doth barely foresee sundrie things to come, no manner of way either willing or decreeing the issue and euent of them, doe bring in little better then Atheisme. For if we say that any thing coms to passe either against Gods will, or God not knowing of it or not regarding it, we shall make him either impotent or careless, and raise the very foundation of Gods prouidence.

And this decree of God must bee conceiued of vs as the most generall cause of all things subsisting: beeing first in order hauing all other causes vnder it, and most principall, ouerruling all, ouerruled by none.

Thus we see what is to be held touching Gods counsel: now for the better cleering of the truth, three obiections of some difficultie are to be answered. First may some man say, if God decree and ordaine all things whatsoeuer, then he decreeth & ordaineth sinne: but God decrees not sin in as much as it is against his will: & therefore he decrees not all things. Ans. Wee vse not to say that God doth simply will or decree sinne, but onely in part, adding withall these caueats: I That God willeth and decreeth sinne, not properly as it is sinne, but as it hath in it sundrie regards & respects of goodnesse, so farforth as it is a punishment, or chastisment, or triall, or action, or[a] hath any existence in nature. II. God can so vse euill instruments, that the worke done by them beeing a sinne, shall neuertheles in him be a good worke: because he knowes how to vse euill instruments well. If it be further aleadged, that God willeth no wickednes, Psal. 5. 5. wee must know that Gods will is twofold, generall, and speciall. Generall, whereby God willeth & decreeth that a thing shall be: and by this kind of will he may be said to will sinne; and that without sinne. For though he decree it thus, yet doth he not instill wickednes into the heart of any sinner, and his decree is onely for a most excellent ende. For in regard of God which decreeth it, it[b] is good that there shou'd be euill. To this purpose Augustine saith excellently, By an vnspeakable manner it comes to passe, that that which is against Gods will, is not without his will. [c] Now the speciall will of God is that whereby he willeth any thing in such manner, that he approoueth it and delighteth in it. And thus indeed we can not say without blasphemy, that God willeth sinne. Thus then we see in what manner and how farforth God may be said to decree sinne, that is, to will and appoint the permission of it.

b Bonum est vt sit malum. Aug. Enchir ad Laur. c. 101.

c Voluntate permissiua vult: approbatiua non vult.

Againe it may be obiected thus. If all things be determined by the vnchangeable decree of God, then all things come to passe by an vnchangeable necessitie: and men in their actions haue no free will at al, nor libertie in doing any thing. Answ. This must be learned as a certen rule, that the neceſſarie decree of God, doth not aboliſh the nature of the ſecond cauſes, and impoſe neceſſitie vpon the wil of man, but onely order and incline it without any conſtraint, to one part. As for example: When a people is gathered togither to heare Gods word, there is none of them but they know that they come thither by Gods prouidence (and in that reſpect neceſſarily) yet before they come, they had al freedome and libertie in themſelues to come or not to come: and Gods eternall counſell did not hinder the libertie of our wills, in comming or not comming, nor take away the ſame: but onely incline and turne them to the choice of one part. Another example hereof we may haue in our Sauiour Chriſt, whoſe ſtate and condition of body, if we regard, he might haue liued longer: yet by the eternall counſel of God he muſt die at that place, at that time, at that houre, where & whē he died. Whereby we may ſee, that Gods counſell doth not hinder the will of man: but onely order and diſpoſe it. Which anſwer beeing well marked, we ſhall ſee theſe two will ſtand togither; the neceſſarie & vnchangeable councell of God, and the free will of man. And againe, that the ſame action may be both neceſſarie and contingent: neceſſarie in regard of the higheſt cauſe, the counſell of God; not neceſſarie but contingent in reſpect of the ſecond cauſes, as among the reſt, the will of man.

Thirdly, ſome will yet obiect againſt this doctrin, that if al things come to paſſe according to Gods vnchangeable decree, then what needs the vſing of any means? what needes the preaching of the word? and receiuing of the Sacraments? what needes any lawes, Princes, Magiſtrates, or gouernment? what needes walking in mens ordinarie callings? all is to no ende: for let men play or worke, ſleepe, or wake; let them doe what they will: all is one: for Gods eternall counſell muſt needes come to paſſe: therefore it may ſeeme in vaine for mē to buſie themſelues about ſuch things. Anſ. But we muſt know that as God hath appointed all things to come to paſſe in his eternal & vnchangeable counſel; ſo in the ſame decree, he hath togither ſet downe the meanes and waies whereby he will haue the ſame things brought to paſſe: for theſe two muſt neuer be ſeuered; the thing to be done, and the meanes whereby it is done. Wee may read in the Acts in Pauls dangerous voyage towards Rome, an angel of the Lord told Paul, that God had giuen him al that ſailed with him in the ſhip: now the ſoldiours and marriners hearing this, might reaſon thus with themſelues: Seeing God hath decreed to ſaue vs all, we may doe what we will, there is no danger, for we ſhal all come to lād aliue: but marke what Paul ſaith, Except theſe abide in the ſhippe, ye can not be ſafe: where we ſee, that as it was the eternall counſell of God to ſaue Paul, and all that were with him: ſo he decreed to ſaue all by this particular meanes of their aboad in the ſhippe. King Ezechias was reſtored to his health, and receiued from God a promiſe that he ſhould haue 15. yeares added to his daies, and the promiſe was confirmed by ſigne: now, what doth he? caſt off all meanes? no: but as he was preſcribed, ſo he applieth a bunch of drie figges to his ſore, and vſeth ſtill his ordinarie diet. Therefore it is groſſe ignorance & madneſſe in men to reaſon ſo againſt Gods decree; God in his vnchāgable counſell, hath decreed and ſet downe all things how they ſhall be; therefore I wil vſe no meanes, but liue as I liſt: nay rather we muſt ſay the contrarie; becauſe God hath decreed this thing or that to be done: therfore I will vſe the means which God hath appointed to bring the ſame to paſſe.

2. King. 20.

Now follows the Creation, which is nothing els but a worke of the bleſſed Trinitie, forming and framing his creatures which were not before, & that of nothing. The points to be knowne concerning the creation are many. The firſt is, the thing by which God did beginne and finiſh the creation. And we muſt vnderſtand, that at the firſt God made all things, without any inſtrument or meanes, & not as men doe which bring to paſſe their buſines by ſeruants and helps; but onely by his word & commandement: as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, He commanded, and all things were made. In the beginning God ſaide, Let there be light, and there was light: and by the ſame meanes was the creation of euery creature following. The very power of the word and commaundement of God was ſuch, as by it that thing was made and had a beeing, which before was not. It may be demanded, what word this was by which God is ſaid to make all things. Anſ. The word of God in Scripture is taken three waies: for the ſubſtantiall word, for the ſounding or written word, for the operatiue

Pſal. 14. 8, 3.

Gen. 13.

tiue or powerfull word. The ſubſtanciall word, is the ſecond perſon begotten of the ſubſtance of the father. Now howſoeuer it be true, that God the father did create all things by his word, that is, by his Sonne: yet doth it not ſeeme to bee true that by theſe words [God ſaid, Let there be, this or that] that the Sonne is meant. For that word which God gaue out in the creation was in time, whereas the Sonne is the word of the Father before all times: and againe, it is a word common to the three perſons equally, whereas the Sonne is the word of the Father onely. Furthermore, it is not like that it was any ſounding word ſtanding of letters and ſyllables, and vttered to the creatures after the vſual manner of men, that was the cauſe of them: it remaines therfore that all things were made by the operatiue word, which is nothing but the pleaſure, will, and appointment of God, and is more powerfull to bring a thing to paſſe then all the meanes in the world beſide. For Gods willing of any thing is his effecting and doing of it. And this is prooued by Dauid, when he ſaith, He ſpake the word, and they were made: hee commanded, and they were created. Hence we muſt take out a ſpecial leſſon, needfull to be learned of euery man. Looke what power God vſed and ſhewed in making the creatures whē they were not, the ſame power he both can and will ſhew forth in recreating and redeeming ſinfull men by the pretious blood of Chriſt. By his word he created mans heart when it was not; & he can and wil as eaſily create in vs al new hearts, ſpecially when wee vſe the good meanes appointed for that ende. As, when Chriſt ſaid to dead Lazarus, Lazarus, come forth, he aroſe and came forth of his graue, though bound hand and foote: ſo when the Lord ſpeakes to our dead hearts by his word and ſpirit, wee ſhall riſe forth of the graues of our ſinnes and corruptions. In the creation of the great world, God ſaid, Let there be light, and preſently darknes gaue place: and the ſame he can doe to the little world, that is to man. We are by nature darknes, and let God but ſpeake to our blind vnderſtandings, our ignorance ſhall depart, and we ſhall be inlightened with the knowledge of the true God and of his will: as Paul ſaith, God that commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſſe, is hee which hath ſhined in our hearts to giue the light of the knowledge of the glorie of God in the face of Ieſus Chriſt.

2. Cor. 4. 6.

Secondly, God made all creatures, without motion labour, or defatigation: for his very bidding of the worke to be done, was the doing of it. And this thing no creature can doe, but God onely, though vnto Adam labour was without paine before the fall.

Thirdly, the matter and the firſt beginning of all creatures was nothing, that is, al things were made, when as there was nothing whereof they might bee made, as Paul ſaith, God calleth thoſe things which be not, as though they were. And indeede in the firſt creation, all things muſt be made either of the eſſence of God or of nothing: but a creature can not be made of the eſſence of God, for it hath no parts, it is not diuiſible: and therefore God made all things that were made out of himſelfe or his owne eſſence: the concluſion then is, that the framing of the creatures in the beginning, was not of any matter, but of nothing, becauſe before the creation, out of God there was nothing. This muſt teach vs to humble our ſelues. Many there bee that ſtand vpon their anceſtours: but let them here looke whence they came firſt, namely, as Abraham ſaith of himſelfe, of duſt and aſhes. And what was this duſt and aſhes made of? ſurely of nothing: wherefore euery mans firſt beginning is of nothing. Well then, ſuch men as are caried away with their pedigree and deſcent, if they looke well vnto it, they ſhal find ſmal cauſe to boaſt or bragge. And this conſideration of our firſt beginning, muſt mooue vs to true humiliation in our ſelues.

Rom. 4. 17.

Fourthly, God in framing his creatures, in the beginning made them good; yea very good. Now the goodnes of the creature is nothing elſe, but the perfect eſtate of the creature, whereby it was conformable to the will and minde of the Creator allowing and approouing of it when hee had made it: for a creature is not firſt good, and then approoued of God: but becauſe it is approoued of God, therefore it is good. But wherein, will ſome ſay, ſtands this goodnes of the creature? I anſwer, in three things: I. in the comelineſſe, beautie, and glorie of euery worke in his kind both in forme and conſtitution of the matter. II. In the excellencie of the vertue which God hath giuen to it: for as he hath appointed euery creature for ſome eſpeciall ende, ſo he hath fitted and furniſhed it with ſufficient power and vertue for the accomplishing of the same ende. III. In the exceeding benefit and profitablenesse that came by them to man, But since the fall of man this goodnesse of the creature is partly corrupted and partly diminished. Therefore when we see any want, defect, or deformity in any of them, wee must haue recourse backe againe to the apostacie of our first parents, and remember our fal in them, and say with a sorrowful heart, this comes to passe by reason of mans most wretched sinne, which hath defiled heauen and earth, & drawne a curse not only vpon himselfe, but vpon the rest of the creatures for his sake, whereby their goodnes is much defaced.

Fifthly, the ende of creation, is the glory of God, as Salomon saith, God made all things for his owne sake, yea euen the wicked for the day of euill. And God propounds this principall ende to himselfe, not as though he wanted glory, and would purchase it vnto himselfe by the creation; for he is most glorious in himselfe, and his honour and praise beeing infinite, can neither be increased nor decreased: but rather that he might communicate & make manifest his glory to his creatures, and giue them occasion to magnifie the same. For the reasonable creatures of God beholding his glory in the creatiō, are moued to testifie and declare the same among men.

Prov. 16.4

The sixth shall be touching the time of the beginning of the world, which is betweene fiue thousand and sixe thousand yeares agoe. For Moses hath set downe exactly the computation of time from the making of the world to his owne dayes: and the Prophets after him haue with like diligence set downe the continuāce of the same to the very birth of Christ. But for the exact account of yeares Chronologers are not all of one minde. Some say there be 3929. from the creatiō to Christs birth, as Beroaldus: some 3952. as Hierome and Bede: some 3960. as Luther and Io. Lucidus: some 3963. as Melanchthon in his Chronicle, and Functius: some 3970. as Bullinger and Tremellius: some towards 4000. as Buntingus. Now from the birth of Christ to this day are 1592. yeares, & adding these togither, the whole time amoūteth. And God would haue the very time of the beginning of the world to be reuealed, first that it might bee knowne to the church, when the couenant of grace was first giuen by God to man, & when it was afterward renewed, and how Christ came in the fulnesse of time, Gal. 4. secondly that we might know that the world was not made for the eternall & euerliuing God, but for man: thirdly that we might learne not to set our hearts on the world and on the things therein which haue begining & ende, but seeke for things eternall in heauen. And before the time which I haue named began, there was nothing beside God, the world it selfe and all things else were vncreated. Some men vse to obiect and say, what did God al that while before the world was? how did hee imploy himselfe? what was he idle? Answ. The Iewes to this badde question make as badde an answere. For they say he was continually occupied in making many little worlds, which he cōtinually destroyed as he made them: because none pleased him till hee made this. But we must rather say, that some things are reuealed which God did thē, as that he decreed what should come to passe when the world was: & that then the blessed persons in Trinitie did take eternall delight each in other. If any man wil needes know more, let him heare what Moses saith, Secret things belong to the Lord our God, but things reuealed to vs and to our children for euer: and let them marke what one eluding the question, answered: namely, that God was making hell fire to burne all such curious persons as will needes know more of God then he hath reuealed to them: for where God hath not a mouth to speake, there we must not haue an eare to heare: therfore our duty is, to let such curious questions passe.

Prov. 8.30.

Deu. 29.29

August. lib. 1. confes. c. 12.

Seuenthly, some may aske in what space of time did God make the world? I answer, God could haue made the world, and all things in it in one moment: but he began and finished the whole worke in sixe distinct daies. In the first day he made the matter of all things & the light: in the second the heauens: in the third day hee brought the sea into his compasse, & made the drie land appeare, & caused it to bring forth hearbs, plants, & trees: in the fourth he made the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres in heauen: in the fifth day hee made the fishes of the sea, the foules of the heauen, and euery creeping thing: in the sixth day he made the beasts of the field, and all cattell, and in the ende of the sixth day he made man. Thus in sixe distinct spaces of time, the lord did make al things: and that especially for three causes. I. To teach men that they ought to haue a distinct distinct and serious consideration of euery creature: for if God made the world in a moment, some might haue said, this worke is so mysticall, that noe man can speake of it. But for the preuenting of this cauill, it was his pleasure to make the world and all things therein in sixe daies: and the seuenth day he commanded it to be sanctified by men, that they might distinctly & seriously meditate vpon euery dayes worke of the Creation. II. God made the world, and euery thinge therein in sixe distinct daies, to teach vs, what wōderfull power and liberty he had ouer all his creatures: for he made the light when there was neither Sunne nor Moone, nor starres: to shewe, that in giuing light to the world, he is not bound to the Sunne, to any creature, or to any meanes: for the light was made the first day: but the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres were not created before the fourth day. Againe, trees and plants were created the third day: but yet the Sunne, Moone, and the Starres, and raine which nourish and make hearbes, trees, and plants to grow, were not created till after the third day: which shews plainly, that God can make trees, plants, and hearbes to growe without the meanes of raine, and without the vertue and operatiō of the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres. III. He made the world in sixe distinct dayes, and framed all things in this order, to teach vs his wonderfull prouidēce ouer all his creatures: for before man was created he prouided for him a dwelling place, and al things necessarie for his perpetuall preseruation, & perfect happinesse & felicity. So also he created beasts and cattel: but not before he had made hearbs, plāts, and grasse, and all meanes whereby they are preserued. And if God had this care ouer man when as yet he was not: much more will God haue care ouer him nowe when he is, and hath a being in nature.

And thus much concerning the points of doctrinē touching the creation. The duties follow. And first by the worke of creation we may discerne the true Iehouah from all false gods and Idols in the world. This Esaiah maketh plaine, bringing in the Lord reasoning thus: I am God, and there is none other God besides me. How is that proued? thus: I forme the light and create darknesse, I make peace, and create euill: I the Lord doe all these things. If a man aske thee howe thou knowest the true God from all false gods: thou must answer, by the work of creation: for he alone is the maker of heauen and earth, and all things in them. This property can not agree to any creature, to any man, Saint, or Angel: may, not to all men and all Angels: they cannot giue beeing to a creature which before was nothing. Secondly whereas God the father is creatour of all things, and hath giuen vnto man reason, vnderstanding, & ability more then to other creatures, we are taught to consider and meditate of the worke of Gods creation. This the wise man teacheth vs, saying, Consider the worke of God. And indeed it is a speciall duty of euery man which professeth himselfe to bee a member of Gods Church, as he acknowledgeth God to be the Creatour, so to looke vpon his workemanshippe, and view and consider all creatures. A skilfull workeman can haue no greater disgrace, then when hee hath done some famous thing, to haue his friend passe by his worke, & not so much as looke vpon it. If it be demaunded for what ende we must looke vpon the work of Gods creation, I answer, that in it wee may see and discerne Gods power, wisedome, loue, mercie, and prouidence, and al his attributes, and in all things his glory. This is a most necessary duty to be learned of euery man: we thinke nothing too much or too good to bestowe on vaine shewes and playes, idle sports & pastimes, which are the vanities of men, and we doe most willingly behold them: in the meane season vtterly neglecting and contemning the glorious worke of Gods creatiō. Well, the Lord hath appointed his Sabboth to be sanctified not only by the publike ministery of the worde, and by priuate prayer, but also by an especiall consideration and meditation of Gods creatures: and therfore the duty of euery man is this, distinctly and seriously to view and consider the creatures of God; and thereby take occasion to glorifie his name, by ascribing vnto him, the wisedome, glory, power, and omnipotencie that is due vnto him, and appeares in the same.

Esa. 45.6.7.

Eccles. 7. 15.

Thirdly, wee must giue God glorie in all his creatures, because he is the creatour of them al. So in the Reuelation the foure and twenty Elders fall downe before him, and say, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receiue glory and honour and power: giuing this reason, for thou hast created all things, and for thy wils sake they are and haue bene created. Read the Psalmes, 147. and 148. both which which tende to this effect, that God muſt be praiſed, becauſe he is the Creatour of all things, to whome all glorie is due. We knowe, that when men behold any curious worke of a cunning and skilful craftsman, ſtraightway they will leaue the worke, and inquire after him that made it, that they may praiſe his skill. The ſame is our dutie in this caſe, when we come abroad, and behold euery where in all the creatures the admirable and vnſpeakeable wiſedome, goodneſſe, and power of God, then we muſt make haſte from the creature, and goe forward to the Creatour, to praiſe and glorifie him: and herein muſt we ſhewe our ſelues to differ from bruite beaſts, in that by the vſe & viewe of Gods creatures, we do returne due glorie, praiſe, and honour vnto the Creatour.

Our fourth dutie is ſet downe by the prophet Amos, who mouing the people to meete God by repentance, addeth a reaſon taken from the creation: He that formeth the mountaines and createth the windes, which declareth vnto man what is his thought, which maketh the morning darknes, &c. the Lord God of hoaſts is his name. The meaning of the prophet is this: God is a terrible iudge, and we are as traitours and rebels againſt him: therefore the beſt way that we can take is this: he is comming to iudgement, let vs therefore meet him, and fall downe before him, and humble our ſelues vnder his mightie hand. And the holy Ghoſt by the prophet would moue the people to meete God by ſerious repentance, by a reaſon framed thus: If God who is their iudge, be able to create the windes, and to forme the mountaines, and to make the morning darkeneſſe: then he is alſo able to make an eternall iudgement for their confuſion. And therefore all ſuch as be impenitent ſinners, let them prepare themſelues to turne vnto him: and ſurely if men had grace to lay this to their hearts, they would not liue ſo long in their ſinnes without repentance as they doe: nay rather they would prepare themſelues to meete him in the way before he come to iudgement, becauſe he is a Creator, and therefore able to bring infinite puniſhments vpon them at his pleaſure, and to bring them to nothing, as he made them of nothing. And let them knowe it, whoſoeuer they be that goe forward in their ſinnes, that God the Creatour whenſoeuer he will, can open hell to deuour thē: and that he can ſhew himſelfe as mightie in his iudgement to mens deſtruction, as he was mightie in the beginning in giuing vs a beeing when we were nothing. Wherefore notable is the practiſe of Dauid, who inures himſelfe to the feare of God by the conſideration of his creation, ſaying, I am fearefully, & wonderfully made, &c.

Pſal. 139. 14.

Laſtly, thoſe that haue beene impenitent ſinners through all their life paſt, muſt not onely learne to repent for their ſinnes; but alſo indeauour to performe obedience vnto Gods word. God is a creatour, and the thing created ſhould in all reſpects be conformable to his will: for Dauid ſaith, Thine handes haue faſhioned me, and framed me, giue me vnderſtanding therefore that I may learne thy commaundements. And good reaſon: for there is no man of any trade, but he would faine haue all that he maketh and deuiſeth to be vſed: but yet ſo as the vſe thereof muſt be conformable to the will of the maker. For this cauſe Moſes that faithfull ſeruant of God ſaith, that the people of Iſrael dealt wrōgfully with the Lord: why? for he hath created them, and proportioned them, hee is their father and he bought them: yet they haue diſhonoured him by corrupting themſelues towards him by their vice.

Pſal. 119. 73.

All creatures in heauen and in earth doe the will of the Creatour, except man, and the deuill and his angels: for the Sun, the Moone, and the Starres, they keepe that courſe which God hath appointed them: but man though he be bound to do the will of God, becauſe God is his Creatour, yet he rebels againſt him. The potter if in tempering his clay, he cannot make and frame it according to his minde, at length he will daſh it in peeces: ſo God, he createth man, not that he ſhould doe his own will, but Gods will: and therefore the Lord in his wrath will confound him eternally whoſoeuer he be that followeth the luſts of his own wicked heart, and will not be brought to be cōformable to Gods will, but goes on in his rebellion without ſtay. For this cauſe it ſtandes euery man in hand to yeelde himſelfe pliable to Gods will, and to indeauour to obey it by keeping a good conſcience before God and all men, and by walking faithfully in his calling, leaſt the ende be confuſion. If a mā haue a trade and other men come into his ſhoppe, and vſe ſuch tooles and inſtruments as be there to wrong endes, he will in no wiſe brooke it, but take the abuſe in great great displeasure: now the world is as it were an opened shop in which God hath set forth vnto vs his glorie and maiestie: and the creatures of all kindes be instruments appointed for excellent vses, & specially man for the accomplishment of his will. And therfore when he rebels against the will of God, & by sinne puts the creatures to wrong ends he cannot but most grieuously offend God.

And thus much of the duties. Now in the third place follow the consolations vnto Gods Church and people. First as 1.Pet.4.19 Saint Peter saith; God is a creatour, yea a faithfull creatour. The properties of a faithfull creatour are two: I. He will preserue his creature: no man is so tender ouer any worke as he that made it, for hee cannot abide to see it any way abused. God therefore being a faithfull creatour, tenderly loues all his creatures. So Iob reasoneth with God, that he will not cast
Iob. 10. 3. him off, because he is the worke of his hands. II. God will beare with his creature to see whether it will be brought to any good end and vse before he will destroy it. And to vse the former comparison: the potter will turne and worke the clay euery way to make a vessell vnto his minde; but if it frame no way, then will he cast it away & dash it against the wall. And so God who created man, still preserueth him, and vseth all meanes to make him conformable to his will, before he cast him off. The Lord did long striue with men in the old world, to turne them from their wickednes: but when nothing would serue them, it is said,
Gen. 6.56 It repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth. And in like manner, if we which are the creatures of God, shal rebell against this our creator, it may be, he will beare with vs for a time: but if we continue therein, and do not turne to him by repentance, he wil bring vpon vs a finall destruction both in bodie and soule. Yet I say, before he doe this, his manner is to trie all meanes to preserue vs, and turne vs vnto him: and afterward if nothing will serue, then will he shew forth his power in mens confusion: and therefore it stands vs in hand to looke vnto it betime.

Secondly, looke what power the Lord did manifest in the creation of all things, the same power he both can & will make manifest in the redemption of mankinde. In the beginning God made all things by his word; and so likewise he is able still to make by the power of his word, of a wicked man that is dead in sinne, a true & liuely member of Christ: which the prophet Esay signifieth when he saith, The Esa.45.12. 13.
Lord that created the heauens & spread them abroad, he that stretcheth forth the earth, & the bodie thereof, &c. I the Lord haue called thee in righteousnesse. This must not encourage euill men in their wickednesse, but it serueth to comfort the people of God cōsidering that the same God which once created them, is also as able to saue them: and will shew himselfe as mightie in their redemption, as he was in their creation of nothing.

And thus much of the creation in generall. Now it followeth that we come to the handling of the parts thereof. For it is not said barely that God is a Creatour; but particularly that he is a creatour of heauen and earth: of both which we wil speake in order: and first of the Creation of heauen.

Heauen] in Gods word signifieth all that is aboue the earth: for the aire wherein we breath is called heauen. And according to this acceptation of the word, there are three heauens, as Paul saith, He was ta- 2.Cor. 12. 2.
ken vp into the third heauen. The first of these heauens is that space, which is from the earth vpward vnto the firmament, where the stars are. Thus the birds which flie in the aire betweene the earth and the starres, are called the foules of heauen: and when God sent the flood to drowne the old world, Moses saith, the windows of heauen were opened: meaning, that God powred downe raine from the clouds aboundātly, for the making of a flood to drown the worlde. The second heauen is that which containeth the Sunne, the Moone, and the starres: so Moses saith, that God in the beginning created the Sunne, the Moone, and the starres, and placed them in the firmament of heauen. Besides these Gen.1.14.
two heauens, there is a third which is inuisible: and yet it is the worke of Gods hands: and it is that glorious place where Christ euen in his manhood sitteth at the right hand of the Father: and whither the soules of the faithfull departed are carried and placed: and in which at the ende of the world shall all the elect both in body and soule, haue perfect ioy and blisse in the glorious sight and presence of God for euer. But for the better conceiuing the trueth, we are to skanne and consider diligently three questions. First whether this third heauen be a creature, or for many haue thought it was neuer created, but was eternal with God himselfe; but it is a grosse errour contrarie to Gods worde. For the scripture saith, Abraham looked for a cittie (meaning the heauenly Ierusalem, this third heauē) hauing a foundation whose builder and maker is God. Further if it be eternall, it must either be a creatour or a creature: but it is no creator, for then it should be God: and therefore it must needes be a creature. But some will say, the Lord is eternal, and this third heauen hath alwaies beene the place of the Lords aboade, and therfore it is also eternall, Ans. True it is indeede that God doth shewe his glory and maiesty in the thirde heauen: but yet that cannot possibly containe his Godhead, as Salomon saith: Behold the heauens, and the heauens of heauens are not able to containe thee. Wherefore though God doeth manifest his eternall glory in this third heauen, yet doeth it not followe that therefore this place should be eternall: for he needes no habitation to dwel in, he is euery where filling all things with his presence excluded frō no place. The second question is, where this third heauen is? Ans. There are some Protestants say, it is euery where: and they holde this opiniō to maintaine the real presence of the Lords body in or about the Sacrament. But if it were euery where, then hell should bee in heauen, which no man will say: but heauen in deede is aboue these visible heauens which we see with our eyes: so the Apostle saith, Christ ascended on high farre aboue al heauens, &c. And again it is said of Steuen, that being full of the holy Ghost, Hee looked vp stedfastly into the heauens, and sawe them open, and the son of man standing at the right hand of GOD. Thirdly, it may be demaunded, why God created this third heauen? Ans. God made it for this cause, that there might be a certaine place wherein he might make manifest his glory and maiestie to his elect angels and men; for the which cause it was created a thousand fold more glorious thē the two former heauens are, and in this respect is called Paradise, by reason of the ioy and pleasure arising from Gods glorious presence. And our Sauiour Christ calleth it the house of God his father; because into it must be gathered all Gods childrē. It is called the kingdome of heauen, because God is the king thereof and ruleth there in perfect glory. True it is, God hath his kingdome here on earth: but hee ruleth not so fully and gloriously here, as he shall in heauen: for this is the kingdome of grace, but that is the kingdome of his glorie, where he so raigneth, that he wil be all in all, first in Christ, and then in the elect both angels and men.

Nowe followe the duties whereunto we are mooued principally in consideration of the making of the third heauē. First, if God created it especially for the manifestation of his glory vnto men, that at the ende of the world, by the fruition of Gods most glorious presence, there they might haue perfect ioy and felicity: wee haue occasion here to consider the wonderfull madnesse and forgetfulnesse that raigneth euery where among men; which onely haue regard to the estate of this life, & cast all their care on this worlde, and neuer so much as once dreame of the ioyfull and blessed estate which is prepared for Gods children in the highest heauen. If a man hauing two houses, one but a homely cottage, and the other a princely pallace, should leaue the better & take al the care and paines for the dressing vp of the first, would not euery man say, he were a mad man? yes vndoubtedly. And yet this is the spirituall madnesse that takes place euery where among men: for God hath prepared for vs two houses, one is this our body which wee beare about vs, which is an house of clay, as Iob saith, We dwell in houses of clay whose foundation is dust, which shall be destroyed before the moth: and as Peter saith, a tabernacle or tent, which wee must shortly take downe; and wherein we abide but as pilgrimes and strangers. Againe, the same God of his wonderfull goodnes hath prouided for vs a second house in the third heauen, wherein wee must not abide for a time and so depart: but for euermore enioy the blessed felicity of his glorious presence. For all this marke a spirituall phrensie possessing the mindes of men: for they imploy all their care and industry for the maintaining of this house of clay, whose foundation is but dust: but for the blessed estate of the second house, which is prepared for them in the kingdome of heauen, they haue little regard or care. They will both runne and ride from place to place day and night, both by sea and land: but for what? Is it for the preparing of a mansion place in the heauenly Ierusalem? Nothing lesse, for they will scarse goe out of the doore to vse any meanes whereby they may come vnto it: but all their their ſtudie is to patch vp the ruines and breaches of their earthly cabbin. Now let all men iudge in their owne conſciences whether as I haue ſaid, this bee not more then ſenſleſſe madneſſe? Againe, the bodie is but a tabernacle wherein we muſt reſt as it were for a night, as a ſtraunger doth in an Inne, & ſo away: but the ſecõd houſe is eternall in the heauens, an euerla-Math.6.33 ſting ſeate of all felicitie and happineſſe. And therfore our dutie is aboue all things to ſeeke the kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, as Chriſt himſelfe biddeth vs. And if the Lord haue there prepared ſuch a place for vs, then we muſt in this world vſe all good meanes: whereby we may be made worthy the fruition of it; & alſo fitte and readie at the daie of death to enter into it: which at the daie of iudgement we ſhall fully poſſeſſe both in ſoule and bodie, and there raigne eternally in all happineſſe with God Almightie our creator, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. But ſome may ſay, howe ſhall a man ſo prepare himſelfe, that he may be fitte for that place? Anſwer. This the holy Ghoſt teacheth vs: for ſpeaking of this heauenly Ieruſalem, he ſaith, There

Reu.22. ſhall enter into it none vncleane thing, neither whatſoeuer worketh abomination or lies. Then meaning then to make our ſelues fit is, to ſeeke to bee reconciled to God in Chriſt for our ſinnes paſt, and withall to indeauour to haue an aſſurance of the free remiſſion and pardon of them all in the blood of Chriſt. And as touching that part of life which is to come, wee
1.Ioh.3.3. muſt remember what Saint Iohn ſaith. Euery one that hath this hope purifieth himſelfe, meaning, that he which hath hope to raigne with Chriſt in heauen, vſeth the meanes whereby he may purifie and keep himſelfe from ſinne, as alſo he ſaith after,
1.Ioh.5. 18. that hee which is borne of God keepeth himſelfe, and the wicked one toucheth him not. Signifying, that all ſuch perſons as are truely iuſtified and ſanctified, carrie ſuch a narrow and ſtrait watch ouer the whole courſe of their liues and conuerſations that the deuill can neuer giue them deadly wounds, and wholly ouercome thē. Now the man that is reſolued in his conſcience of the pardon of his ſinne for the time paſt, and hath a ſteadfaſt purpoſe in his heart to keepe himſelfe vpright, and continually to walke in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe all the daies of his life: this man, I ſay, is prepared and made fitte to to enter into the heauenly Ieruſalem: come death when it will, he is readie. And howſoeuer he muſt not looke for heauen here vpon earth, yet he is as it were in the ſuburbes of this heauenly cittie: and at the ende of this life, the king thereof, the Lord Ieſus will open the gates, and receiue him into his kingdome, for he is alreadie entred into the kingdome of grace. To conclude this point, let euery man in the feare of God, be mooued hereby to ſet his heart to prepare himſelfe; that when God ſhall call him hence, hee may be fitte to enter into that glorie. Secondly, ſeeing God hath prepared the third heauen for vs, it teacheth euery man in this world to be content with the eſtate wherin God hath placed him, whether it be high or lowe, rich or poore: why ſo? becauſe here he is but a pilgrime, and liues in a cottage of clay, and in a tent wherein he muſt abide but a while, as a pilgrime doth, oftentimes carrying his houſe about with him; and we ſhall in better ſort accept the afflictions which God ſendes vs in this life, if we remember that there is prepared for vs a place of ioy, which muſt be our reſting place and perfect felicitie for euermore. This was the practiſe of the children of God, eſpecially of Abraham: for when the Lord called him out of his owne countrie, hee obeyed, and by faith abode in Heb.11.9. 10. the promiſe land, as in a ſtraunge countrie, as one that dwelt in tents with Iſaac and Iaakob heires with him in the ſame promiſe: and the reaſon followeth, for hee looked for a cittie hauing a foundation whoſe builder and maker is God. They beleeued that theſe thinges which the Lord promiſed, were ſhadowes of better things: and hereon ſtaied themſelues, beeing well content with that eſtate whereto God had called them. So Paul was contented to beare the afflictions which God had laied vpon him, and his reaſon was, Becauſe (ſaith he) we looke not on 2.Cor.4. end. things which are ſeene, but on things which are not ſeene: for the thinges which are ſeene are temporall, but the thinges which are not ſeene are eternall. And in the next chapter: We knowe (ſaith he) that if our earthly & ver.1.2. houſe of this Tabernacle be deſtroyed, we haue a dwelling giuen vs of God, that is, an houſe not made with hands, but eternall in the heauens. And for this cauſe his deſire was rather to remooue out of this bodie, and to be with the Lord.

And thus much concerning heauen. Nowe followeth the ſecond part of Gods

And earth) Earth ſignifieth the huge maſſe or bodie ſtanding of ſea and land, on which we liue, and all things that be in
Col.1.16. or vpon the earth whatſoeuer: as Paul ſaith, For by him were created all thinges that are in heauē or in earth, &c. In other creeds which were made ſince this of the Apoſtles, beeing expoſitions of that; there is added, maker of all things viſible and inuiſible. Here we haue occaſion to ſpeake of all creatures, but that were infinite: therefore I will make choice of theſe two, good Angels and men.

I. That Angeles had a beginning it is no queſtion: for Paul ſaith, that by God all thinges were created in heauen and Col.1.16. earth, things viſible and inuiſible, whether thrones, principalities, or powers. And in reſpect of the creation, angels are Iob.38.7. called the ſonnes of God. But the time and day of their creation cannot be ſet downe further then this, that they were created in the compaſſe of the ſixe daies. For Moſes ſaith, Thus, namely in the compaſſe of the firſt ſixe daies, the heauens and the earth were faſhioned, and all the hoaſt of them: that is, all varietie of creatures in heauen and earth ſeruing for the beautie and glorie thereof: whereof no doubt the Angels are the principall.

II. Touching the nature of Angels, ſome haue thought that they are nothing but qualities and motions in the mindes of men, as the Sadduces and the Libertines of this time: but the trueth is, that they are ſpirites, that is, ſpirituall and inuiſible ſubſtances created by God, and really ſubſiſting: for the ſcripture aſcribes vnto them ſuch kind of actions which can not be performed by the creatures, ſaue onely ſuch as be ſubſtances: as to ſtand before the throne of God, to behold the face of the Father, to carrie mens ſoules to heauen, yet we muſt not imagine that they are bodily ſubſtances conſiſting of fleſh and bone. And though they tooke vpon them viſible ſhapes and formes, and did eate and drinke in the companie of men, and thereupon are called Men in ſcripture:
Luk.24.4. yet they did this by diuine diſpenſatiō for a time, that they might the better performe the actions and buſineſſes among men, to which they were by God appointed. And the bodies of men which they aſſumed, were no parts of their natures vnited to them, as our bodies are to vs; but rather they were as garments are to vs, which they might put off and on at their pleaſure. If any ſhall aske, whence they had theſe bodies, the anſwer is, that either they were created of nothing by the power of God, or framed of ſome other matter ſubſiſting before. If againe it be asked, what became of theſe bodies when they laied them downe, becauſe they vſed them but for a time, the anſwer may be, that if they were made of nothing, they were againe reſolued into nothing: if made of other creatures, that then they were reſolued into the ſame bodies of which they were firſt made, though indeede we can define nothing certainely in this point.

III. Angels are reaſonable creatures of excellent knowledge and vnderſtanding, farre ſurpaſſing all men ſaue Chriſt. Their knowledge is threefold: naturall, reuealed, experimentall. Naturall, which they receiued from God in the creation. Reuealed, which God makes manifeſt to them in proceſſe of time, whereas before they knewe it not. Thus God reuealed to Gabriell the myſterie of the 70. weekes, Dan.8. and 9. And in the Apocalyps many things are reueale to the angels that they might reueale them to vs, Experimentall knowledge, is that which they get by obſeruing the dealing of God in the whole world, but eſpecially in the Church.
Eph.3.10. And thus Paul ſaith, that to principalities and powers in heauenly places is knowne the manifold wiſedome of God by the Church.

IV. And as the knowledge, ſo alſo the power of the good angels is exceeding great. They are able to doe more then all men can. Therefore Paul calls them Pſal.103. 20. mightie Angels. 2. Theſſ. 1.7. Yea their power is farre ſuperiour to the power of the wicked angels, who ſince the fall are Aug.de trin.lib.3. cap.3. vnder them and cannot preuaile againſt them.

V. The place of the aboad of angels, is the higheſt heauen, vnleſſe they be ſent thence by the Lord, to doe ſome thing appointed by him. This our Sauiour Chriſt teacheth when he ſaith, that the angels of little ones doe alreadie behould the face of their father in heauen. And the wicked angels before their fall were placed in heauen, becauſe they were caſt thence.

VI. That there be certaine diſtinctions & diuerſities of angels, it is very likely, becauſe they are called thrones, & principalities, and powers, Cherubim and Seraphim. But what be the diſtinct degrees and orders of Angels, and whether they are to bee diſtinguiſhed by their natures, giftes, or offices, no man by ſcripture can determine.

VII. The miniſterie of Angels to which the Lord hath ſet them apart, is threefolde, and it reſpecteth either God himſelfe, or his church, or his enemies. The miniſterie which they performe to God, is firſt of all, to adore, praiſe, and glorifie him continually. Thus the Cherubims in Eſaies viſion crie one to another, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of hoaſts: the world is full of his glorie. And when they were to publiſh the birth of the Meſſias, they begin on this maner, Glorie to God in the higheſt heauens, peace on earth. And Iohn in his viſion heard the angels about the throne, crying with a loud voice, Worthy is the lãbe &c. to receiue power, riches, and ſtrength, wiſedome, and honour, and glorie, and praiſe. And indeede the higheſt ende of the miniſterie of angels is the manifeſtation of the glorie of God. The ſecond, is to ſtand in Gods preſence, euermore readie to doe his commandemẽts, as Dauid ſaith, Praiſe the Lord, ye his angels that excell in ſtrength, that doe his commandements in obeying the voice of his word. And here is a good leſſon for vs. Wee praie daily, that we may do the will of God as the angels in heauen doe it: let vs therefore bee followers of the holy Angels in praiſing God and in doing his commandements as they doe.

The miniſterie of angels concerning the Church, ſtandes in this, that they are miniſtering ſpirits for the good of them which ſhall be heires of ſaluation. The good is threefold; in this life, in the ende of this life, and in the laſt iudgement: againe, the good which they procure to the people of God in this life, is either in reſpect of bodie or ſoule. In reſpect of the body, in that they doe moſt carefully performe all manner of duties which doe neceſſarily tend to preſerue the temporall life of Gods children, euen from the beginning of their daies to the end. Dauid ſaith, that they pitch their tents about them that feare the Lord. When Agar was caſt forth of Abrahams family, and wandered in the wilderneſſe, an angell comes vnto her and giues her counſell to returne to her miſtreſſe and humble her ſelfe. When Elias fled from Ieſabel, he was both comforted, directed, and fedde by an angell. And an angel bids the ſame Elias bee of good courage and with out feare to goe to king Achazias & reprooue him. Angels bring Lot and his family out of Sodome and Gomortha, before they burne the cities with fire and brimſtone. When Iakob feared his brother Eſau, he ſawe angels comming vnto him: and he plainely acknowledgeth that they were ſent to be his protectours and his guides in his iourney. Abraham being perſwaded of the aſſiſtance of Gods angels in al his waies, ſaid to his ſeruant, The Lord God of heauen, who tooke me from my fathers houſe, &c. will ſend his angels before thee. The wiſe men that came to ſee Chriſt, are admoniſhed by Angels to returne another way: and Ioſeph by the direction of an angel fledde into Egypt, that he might preſerue Chriſt from the hands of the cruel tyrant. The tents of the Iſraelits were garded by angels. The three children are deliuered from the fiery furnace: and Daniel out of the lyons denne by angels. When Chriſt was in heauineſſe they miniſtered vnto him and comforted him: and they brought Peter out of priſon and ſet him at liberty.

Againe the angels procure good vnto the ſoules of the godly, in that they are maintainers & furtherers of the true worſhip of God, & of al good meanes, whereby we attaine to ſaluation. The lawe was deliuered in Mount Sina by angels: and a great part of the reuelation of Iohn. They expound to Daniell the 70. weakes. They inſtruct the Apoſtles touching the returne of Chriſt to the laſt iudgement. An angell forbids Iohn to worſhip him, but to worſhip God the creator of heauen and earth. They fetch the Apoſtles out of priſon & bid them teach in the temple. An Angell brings Philip to the Eunuch that hee may expoũd the ſcriptures to him. Laſtly they reueale the miſteries and the will of God: as to Abraham that he ſhould not kill his ſonne Iſaac, to Mary and Elizabeth the natiuity of Iohn Baptiſt, and of Chriſt our Sauiour, and all this they doe according vnto the will of God, Gal. 1.8. Beſide all this, angels reioyce at the conuerſion of ſinners by the miniſtery of the Goſpell. And for the Churches ſake, they protect not onely particular men, but euen whole nations and kingdomes.

The miniſtery of angels in the ende of this life, is to carry the ſoules of the godly into Abrahams boſome, as they did the ſoule of Lazarus. And in the day of iudgment to gather all the elect that they may come before Chriſt, and enter into eternall fruition fruition of glorie both in bodie and ſoule.

The third and the laſt part of the miniſterie of Angels, concernes Gods enemies; and it is to execute iudgements on all wicked perſons and impenitent ſinners. Thus all the firſt borne of Egypt are ſlaine by an angell. When Ioſhua was about to ſacke Ierico, an angell appeared vnto him as a captain, with a drawn ſword to fight for Iſraell. When the hoſt of Zenacherib came againſt Iſrael, the angel of the Lord in one night ſlue an hundred eightie & fiue thouſand. Becauſe Herod gaue not glorie vnto God, the angell of the Lord ſmote him, ſo as he was eaten vp of lyce and died.

Exod. 12. Ioſ. 5.

2. King. 19 15.

And thus we ſee what points we are to marke touching the good angels. Nowe followeth the vſe which we are to make in regard of their creation. Firſt wheras they are Gods miniſters to inflict puniſhments vpon the wicked, here is a ſpecial point to be learned of vs; that euery man in the feare of God take heed how he liueth and continueth in his ſins, for the caſe is daungerous conſidering that God hath armies of angels, which ſtand readie euery where to execute Gods heauie iudgements vpon them that liue thus. When the people of Iſrael had ſinned againſt the Lord, Moſes ſaith, they were naked, that is open to all the iudgements of God; euen deſtitute of the guard of his good angels. Wretched Balaam that wizzard went to Balaac to curſe the children of Iſrael: and as he went it is ſaid, the Angell of the Lord ſtood in his way with a drawne ſword: and if the aſſe had beene no wiſer then his maſter, the angel had ſlaine him. Whereby it appears, that when wee ruſh on into the practiſe of any ſinne, we doe as much as in vs lieth to cauſe God to ſend downe his iudgements vpon vs for our ſinnes, and that by the miniſterie of his angels. Secondly, wee are taught another leſſon by Chriſt himſelfe: See (ſaith hee) that you deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones: now marke his reaſon: for I ſay vnto you, that in heauen their angels doe alwaies behold the face of my father. By little ones he meaneth young infants which are within the couenant; or others which are like to young infants in ſimplicitie and innocencie of life and humilitie, And Chriſt will not haue them to be deſpiſed. A dutie verie needfull to bee ſtood vpon in theſe times. For nowe a daies if a man carrie but a ſhewe of humilitie, of good conſcience, and of the feare of God, hee is accounted but a ſilly fellowe, hee is hated, mocked, and deſpiſed on euery hand. But this ſhould not be ſo. For him whome God honoureth with the protectiō of his good angels, why ſhould any mortall man deſpiſe? And it ſtands mockers and ſcorners in hand to take heed whome they mocke. For though men for their parts put vp many abuſes and iniuries, yet their angels may take iuſt reuenge by ſmiting them with plagues and puniſhments for their offences.

Math. 18. 10.

Thirdly, ſeeing angels are about vs, & ſerue for the good of men, wee muſt doe whatſoeuer we do in reuerent and ſeemely manner, as Paul giues counſell to the Philippians, Brethren (ſaith he) whatſoeuer things are true, whatſoeuer things are honeſt, iuſt, pure, and pertaine to loue, of good report: if there be any vertue, if there bee any praiſe, thinke on theſe things: many men doe all their affaires orderly for auoiding ſhame, but we muſt doe the ſame vpon a further ground, namely, becauſe Gods holy Angels waite on vs. And conſidering that men haue care to behaue themſelues well when they are before men, what a ſhame is it for a man to behaue himſelfe vnſeemly either in open or in ſecret, hee then being before the glorious angels. Paul ſaith, that the woman ought to haue power on her head, becauſe of the Angels, that is, not only the miniſters of the church, but Gods heauenly angels, which daiely waite vpon his children, and guard them in al their waies.

Phil. 4. 8.

1. Cor. 11. 10.

Fourthly, this muſt teach vs modeſtie, and humilitie: for the angels of God, are verie notable and excellent creatures; and therefore they are called in the Pſalmes Elohim, Gods: yet how excellent ſoeuer they be, they abaſe themſelues to become guardians and keepers vnto ſinneful men. Nowe if the Angels doe ſo abaſe themſelues; then much more ought euery man to abaſe and humble himſelfe in modeſtie and humilitie before God: and whatſoeuer our calling is, wee muſt not be puffed vp but be cōtent. This is a neceſſarie dutie for all, but eſpecially for thoſe which are in the ſchooles of the Prophets; whatſoeuer their gifts or birth be, they muſt not thinke themſelues to good for the calling of the miniſterie. And if God haue called vs thereunto, we muſt be content to become ſeruants vnto all in the matter of ſaluatiō: though the men whome we teach be neuer ſo baſe or ſimple; for no mā doth ſo farre excell the baſeſt perſon in the world, world, as the glorious Angels of God do exceede the moſt excellent man that is; therfore ſeeing they vouchſafe to become ſeruants vnto vs, we muſt not thinke our ſelues too good to ſerue our poore bretliren.

And thus much of the duties. Nowe follow the conſolatiõs that ariſe from this, that God hath giuen his glorious angels to ſerue for the protection and ſafegard of his Church and people. If mens ſpirituall eies were open, they ſhould ſee the deuill and his angels, and all the wicked of this world to fight againſt them: and if there were no means of comfort in this caſe, thẽ our eſtate were moſt miſerable. But mark; as Gods ſeruant hath all theſe wicked ones to be his enemies: ſo he hath garriſons of Angels that pitch their tents about him and defend him from them all. So Dauid ſaith, He ſhall giue his angels charge ouer thee, and they ſhall keepe thee in all thy waies, that thou dash not thy foote againſt a ſtone: where the angels of God are compared to nources, which carrie litle childrẽ in their armes, feed them, and are alwaies readie at hand, to ſaue them from fals and many other dãgers. When the king of Syria ſent his horſes and chariots to take Eliſha the Lords propher, becauſe he reuealed his councell to the king of Iſrael: his ſeruant ſawe thẽ round about Dothan where he was, and he cried, Alas, maſter what ſhal we doe? then Eliſha anſwered, Feare not, for they that be with vs, are more then they that be with them: and he beſought the Lord to open his ſeruants eies that he might ſee & the Lord opened his eies, and he looked, and beholde, the mountaines were full of horſes and chariots of fire round about Eliſha. So likewiſe not many yeares agoe, our land was preſerued from the inuaſion of the Spaniards, whoſe huge Nauie laie vpõ our ſea coaſts: but howe were we deliuered from them: ſurely by no ſtrẽgth nor power, nor cunning of man; but it was the Lord, no boubt, by his angels that did keepe our coaſts, and did ſcatter our enemies, and drowne them. Let enemies rage, and let them doe what they will, if a man keepe himſelfe in the waies which God preſcribeth, he hath Gods angels to guide and perſerue him: which thing muſt mooue men to loue and embrace the true religion, and to conforme themſelues in al good conſcience to the rule of Gods worde. For when a man doth not ſo, all the Angels of God are his enemies; and at all times readie to execute Gods vengeance vpon him: but when men carrie themſelues as dutifull children to God, they haue this prerogatiue, that Gods holy Angels doe watch about them, and defend them day and night from the power of their enemies, euen in common calamities and miſeries. Before God ſendes his iudgementes on Hieruſalem, an angel is ſent to marke them in the foreheades that mourne for the abominations of the people. And this priueledge none can haue, but he whoſe heart is ſprinckled with the blood of Chriſt, and that man ſhal haue it vnto the end

Exod. 12. 2. with 1. Cor. 5. 7.

And thus much of the creation of Angels. Now it followes to ſpeake of the creation of Man: wherein we muſt conſider two things: I. the points of doctrine. II. the vſes. For the points of doctrine. Firſt, Man was created and framed by the hand of God, and made after the image of God: For Moſes brings in the Lord ſpeaking thus, Let vs make man in our image, &c. in the image of God created he them, which alſo muſt be vnderſtood of Angels. The image of God is nothing els but a conformitie of man vnto God, whereby man is holy as God is holy: for Paul ſaith, Put on the new man which after God, that is, in gods image, is created in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. Nowe I reaſon thus: wherein the renuing of the image of God in man doth ſtand, therein was it at the firſt: but the renuing of Gods image in man doth ſtand in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe: therfore Gods image wherein man was created at the beginning, was a conformitie to God in righteouſneſſe and holynes. Now whether Gods image doth further conſiſt in the ſubſtance of mans bodie and ſoule, or in the faculties of both, the ſcripture ſpeaketh not. This image of God hath two principal parts: I. wiſdome: II. holyneſſe. Concerning wiſedom Paul ſaith, Put ye on the newe man which is created in holineſſe after the image of him which created him. This wiſedome conſiſteth in three points: I. in that he knewe God his creator perfectly: for Adam in his innocencie knewe God ſo farre forth as it was conuenient for a creature to knowe his creator. II. He knewe Gods will ſo farre forth as it was conuenient for him, to ſhew his obedience thereunto. III. He knewe the wiſdome and will of his creator touching the particular creatures: for after Adam was created, the Lord brought euery

Gen. 1. 26

Eph. 3. 23.

Col. 3. 10.

creature vnto him, preſenting them vnto him as beeing Lord and king ouer them, that he might giue names vnto them. Whereby it appeares that Adam in his innocencie did knowe the nature of all creatures, and the wiſedome of God in creating them, elſe he could not haue giuē them fitte names: and when God brought Eue vnto Adam, he knewe her at the firſt,

Gen.2.23. and ſaid, This is nowe bone of my bone, and fleſh of my fleſh, ſhee ſhal be called woman, &c. The ſecond part of Gods image in man, is holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; which is nothing els but a conformitie of the will and affections, and of the whole diſpoſition of man both in bodie and ſoule, to the will of God his creatour. Yet we muſt remember that Adam in his innocencie had a chāgeable will, ſo as he could either will good or euill: he was created with ſuch libertie of will, as that he could indifferently will either. And we muſt not thinge that the will of the creature was made vnchangeably good for that is peculiar to the wil of God, and hereby is the Creatour diſtinguiſhed from the creature.

And here two things offer themſelues to be conſidered. The firſt, why the man is called the image of God, and not the woman? Anſw. He is ſo called, not becauſe holineſs and righteouſneſſe is peculiar to him

1.Cor.11.7. which is commō to both: but becauſe god hath placed more outward excellencie & dignity in the perſō of a man thē of a woman. The ſecond, howe Chriſt ſhould bee

Col.1.16. called the image of God. Anſw. He is ſo called for two ſpecial cauſes. Firſt becauſe he is of the ſame ſubſtance with the Father; & therfore is his moſt abſolute image, and as Heb.1.3. the author of the Hebrewes ſaith, the brightneſſe of his glory, & the ingraued forme of his perſon. Secondly, becauſe God being inuiſible doeth manifeſt himſelfe in Chriſt, in whom as in a glaſſe we may behold the wiſdome, goodnes, the iuſtice and mercie of God.

The ſecond point to be conſidered in the creation of man is the dignitie of his perſon: for Dauid ſaith, Thou haſt made mā

Pſa.8.5. little inferiour to the Angels, and crowned him with glorie, and worſhip. This dignitie ſtands in foure points. I. A bleſſed communion with the true God: for Paul ſpeaking of the Gentiles which were not called, ſaith they were ſtraungers frō the life of

Eph.4.18. God. Where by the contrarie we may gather, that our firſt parents in their innocēcie liued the life of God, which is nothing els but to leade a life here on earth, as that the creature ſhal haue a bleſſed and immediate fellowſhip with God, which ſtandes in this, that before the fall of man, God reuealed himſelfe in a ſpeciall manner vnto him, ſo as his very bodie and ſoule was a temple and dwelling place of the Creator. This fellowſhip betweene God and man in his innocency, was made manifeſt in the familiar conference which God vouchſafed to man: but ſince the fall, this communion is loſt: for man cannot abide the preſence of God. And therefore when Peter had fiſhed all night, and caught nothing,

Luk.5.8. our Sauiour bad him caſt downe his nette to make a draught, who did ſo; but when he ſawe the great multitude of fiſhes that were taken, at this ſight beholding but as it were ſome ſparkes of the glorious maieſtie of God in Chriſt, hee fell downe at his feete, ſaying, Lord, depart from me for I am a ſinner. The ſecond point wherein mans dignitie conſiſteth, is, that man was made Lord and king ouer all creatures, as Da-

Pſal.8.6. uid ſaith, Thou haſt made him to haue dominion in the workes of thy hands: and therefore God hauing created him in his image, bid-

Gen.1.28. deth him, rule ouer the fiſhes of the ſea, ouer the foules of the heauen, and ouer euery beaſt that mooueth vpon the earth: and afterward he brought thē al to him, as to a ſoueraign Lord & king to be named by him: & anſwerably euery creature in his kind gaue reuerence and ſubiection vnto man before his fall, as vnto their lord and king. Where by the way we muſt remember, that when we ſee any creature that is hurtful & noyſome vnto man, & would rather deuoure then obey him; it muſt put vs in minde of our ſin: for by creatiō we were made lords and kings ouer all creatures. & they durſt not but reuerence and obey vs: but the rebellion of man vnto god is the cauſe of the rebelliō of the creatures vnto vs. The third part of mans dignity by creation is, that before his fall hee had a wonderfull beautie and maieſtie aboue all creatures in his bodie: whereupon Dauid ſaith, the Pſal.8. Lord hath crowned him with glory and worſhip. And in the renuing of the Coue-

Pſal.9.2. nant with Noe; God ſaith, that the dread and feare of man ſhall bee vpon all creatures: which nowe though it be but ſmall, yet doeth it plainely ſhew what was the glory and maieſtie of mans perſon at the firſt. The fourth dignitie of mans eſtate in innocency is, that his labour was without paine or wearineſſe: if he had neuer fallen

he

he ſhould haue laboured in the garden; but ſo as he ſhould neuer haue bene wearied therewith. For when Adam was fallen, God ſaid, In the ſweat of thy face ſhalt thou eate thy bread. Now if the paine in labour come after as a curſe vpon man for his tranſgreſſion, then before his fall man felt no paine in his affaires. And in theſe foure things cõſiſteth mans dignity which he had in the creation.

Now in the third followeth mans calling before his fall; which is twofold: I. particular: II. generall. Mans particular calling was to come into the garden of Eden, to keepe it, and to dreſſe the trees and fruits thereof. This ſhewes vnto vs a good leſſon, that euery man muſt haue a particular calling wherein hee ought to walke: and therefore ſuch as ſpend their time idlely in gaming and vaine delights, haue much to anſwer to God at the day of iudgment. This will not excuſe a man to ſay thē, that he had land & liuing to maintaine himſelfe, and therefore was to liue as he liſte, for euen Adam in his innocencie had all things at his will, and wanted nothing; yet euen then God imployed him in a calling: therefore none muſt be exẽpted, euery man both high and low muſt walke in his proper calling. Adams generall calling, was to worſhip his Creator, to which he was bound by the right of creation, conſidering the morall law was written in his heart by nature. Which is ſignified in the Decalogue; where the Lord requires worſhip and obedience of his people, becauſe he is Iehouah, that is, one which hath beeing in himſelfe, and giues beeing to all men by creation. For the better vnderſtanding of this point, we are to conſider three things. I. The place where Adam did worſhippe. II. The time. III. The ſacraments. For the firſt, God euer ſince the beginning had a place where he would be worſhipped, and it is called Gods houſe, which then was the garden of Eden. For it was vnto Adam a place appointed by God for his worſhip, as Church-aſſemblies are vnto vs: where alſo the Lord at ſome time did in a ſpeciall manner ſhewe himſelfe vnto his creature. Touching the time of Gods worſhip, it was the ſeauenth daie from the beginning of the creation, the Sabboth day. And here we muſt note that the keeping of the Sabboth is morall. Some indeed doe plead that it is but a ceremonie; yet falſly: for it was ordained before the fall of man, at which time Ceremonies ſignifying ſanctification had no place. Nay marke further: Adam in his innocencie was not clogged with ſinne as wee are; and yet then he had a ſet Sabboth to worſhippe God his creator: and therefore much more neede hath euery one of vs of a Sabboth day, wherein we may ſeuer our ſelues from the workes of our callings, and the workes of ſinne, to the worſhip of God in the exerciſe of religion, and godly meditation of our creation. This point muſt be learned of vs, for when no occaſion is offered of buſineſſe, then men will formally ſeeme to keepe the Sabboth: but if there come occaſion of breaking the Sabboth as traffike, gaming, and vaine ſhewes, then Sabboth farewell, men will haue their pleaſures, let them worſhip God that will. But let vs remember in the feare of God that whoſoeuer continueth in the breach of this lawe being morall, God will no leſſe poure forth his puniſhments vpon them, then for the breach of any other commandement: the conſideration whereof muſt moue euery man to a reuerent ſanctifying of the Lords daie.

Gen. 2. 8. 15.

Now for Adams Sacraments they were two: the tree of life, and the tree of knoweledge of good and euill: theſe did ſerue to exerciſe Adam in obedience vnto God. The tree of life was to ſignifie aſſurance of life for euer, if he did keepe Gods commandements: the tree of knowledge of good and euil, was a ſacrament to ſhew vnto him, that if he did tranſgreſſe Gods commandements, he ſhould die: and it was ſo called, becauſe it did ſignifie that if hee tranſgreſſed this lawe, he ſhould haue experience both of good & euil in himſelfe.

Now in the fourth place followeth the ende of the creation of man, which is twofold. Firſt, that there might be a creature to whom God might make manifeſt himſelfe, who in a ſpeciall manner ſhould ſet foorth and acknoweledg his wiſdome, goodneſſe, mercie, in the creation of heauen and earth, & of things that are in thē, as alſo his prouidence in gouerning the ſame. Secondly, God hauing decreed to glorifie his name in ſhewing his mercie & iuſtice vpõ his creature, hereupon in time createth men to ſhew his mercie in the ſaluation of ſome, and to ſhewe his iuſtice in the iuſt and deſerued damnation of other ſome. And therefore he hath appointed the creatiõ ſpecially of man, to be a means of manifeſtation and beginning of the execution

Thus much concerning mans creation in generall. The speciall parts of man are two; bodie, and soule. And the reason why the Lord would haue him stand on these two parts is this: Some creatures made before him were onely bodily; as beastes, fishes, foules: some spirituall, as Angels: now man is both; spirituall in regarde of his soule, corporall and sensible in regarde of his bodie; that nothing might be wanting to the perfection of nature. If it be alleadged that man consists of three parts; body. soule, and spirit; becausse Paul praies that
1. Thess. 5. 23. the Thessalonias may be sanctified in bodie, soule, and spirit: the answere is, that the spirit signifies the minde whereby men conceiue and vnderstand such things as may be vnderstood: and the soule is there taken for the will and affections: and therfore these twaine are not two parts, but onely two distinct faculties of one and the same soule.

The bodie of man at the first was formed by God of clay or of the dust of the earth, not to be the graue of the bodie, as Plato said, but to be an excellent and most fitte instrument to put in execution the powers and faculties of the soule. And howsoeuer in it selfe considered, it is mortall; becausse it is compounded of contrary natures called Elements: yet by the appointment & blessing of God in the creation, it became immortall til the fal of man.

As for the soule, it is no accidentarie qualitie, but a spirituall and inuisible essence or nature, subsisting by it selfe.
Zach. 12. Which plainely appears in that the soules of men haue beeing and continuance as well forth of the bodies of men as in the same; and are as wel subiect to torments as the bodie is. And whereas we can and doe put in practise sundry actions of life, sense, motion, vnderstanding, we doe it onely by the power and vertue of the soule.

Hence ariseth the difference betweene the soules of men, & beasts. The soules of men are substances: but the soules of other creatures seeme not to be substances; becausse they haue no beeing out of the bodies in which they are: but rather they are certaine peculiar qualities arising of the matter of the bodie, and vanishing with it.
Gen. 9. 5. And it may be for this cause that the soule of the beast is said to be in the blood whereas the like in not said of the soule of man.

And though mens soules bee spirits as angels are, yet a difference must be made. For angels can not be vnited with bodies so as both shall make one whole and entire person; whereas mens soules may: yea the soule coupled with the bodie is not onely the mouer of the bodie, but the principall cause that makes man to be a man.

The beginning of the soule is not of the essence of God; vnlesse we will make euery mans soule to be God; neither doeth it spring of the soule of the parents, for the soule can no more beget a soule, then an angel can beget angell. And Adam is called a liuing soule, and not a quickning soule. And earthly fathers are called the fathers of our bodies, and not of our soules. It remaines therefore as beeing most agreeable to the Scriptures, that the soules of men are then created by God of nothing, whē they are infused into the bodie.
1. Cor. 15.
Heb. 12.

And though the soules of men haue a beginning, yet they haue no ende, but are eternall. And when they are said to die, it is not becausse they cease at any time to subsist or haue being in nature, but becausse they cease to bee righteous or to haue fellowship with God.

Whereas our bodies are Gods workemanship, we must glorifie him in our bodies, and all the actions of bodie and soule, our eating and drinking, our liuing and dying, must be referred to his glorie: yea we must not hurt or abuse our bodies, but present them as holy and liuing sacrifices vnto God. And whereas God made vs of the dust of the earth, we are not to glorie and boast our selues, but rather to take occasion to praise the great goodnesse of God, that hath vouchsafed to honour vs being but dust and ashes. And after that man is created, what is his life? alas, it is nothing but a little breath: stoppe his mouth and his nostrils, and he is but a dead man. By this we are put in mind to consider of our fraile and vncerten estate, and to lay aside all confidence in our selues: and for this cause the Prophet Esay teacheth vs to haue no confidence in man, becausse his breath is in his nostrells. Againe, let vs marke the frame and shape of mans bodie. All other creatures goe with their bodies and eies to the ground ward; but man was made to goe vpright; and whereas all other creatures haue but foure muscles to turne their eies round about, man hath a fifth to pull his eies vp to heauen-warde. Columb. 5. c. 9.
1. Cor. 15. 31.
Esai. 2. 22.
Nowe what doeth this teach vs? surely that howsoeuer we seeke for other things,

yet firſt of all, and aboue all, we ſhould ſeeke for the kingdome of heauen, and the righteouſnes thereof: and that our whole deſire ſhould be ſet to enioy the bleſſed eſtate of Gods children in heauen. Secondly, it teacheth vs in receiuing Gods creatures, to returne thankfulnes vnto God by lifting vp the heart to heauen for the ſame. Theſe are very needefull and profitable leſſons in theſe daies; for moſt men indeed goe vpright: but looke into their liues, and they might as well goe on all foure: for in their conuerſation they ſet their whole hearts vpon the earth, as the beaſt doth, and their eyes vpon the things of this world: hereby they doe abaſe themſelues, and deface their bodies, and beeing men make themſelues as beaſts: we ſhall ſee great numbers of men that runne and ride from place to place, to prouide for the bodie, but to ſeeke the kingdome of heauē where their ſoules ſhould dwell after this life in ioy for euer, they will not ſtirre one foote.

1. Cor. 6. 15. Thirdly, mans bodie by creation, was made a temple framed by Gods owne hands for himſelfe to dwell in; therefore our dutie is to keepe our bodies pure and cleane, and not to ſuffer them to be inſtruments whereby to practiſe the ſinne of the heart. If a man had a faire houſe wherein he muſt entertaine a prince, and ſhould make hereof a ſwineſtie, or a ſtable, would not all men ſay, that he did greatly abuſe both the houſe and the prince? euen ſo mans bodie beeing at the firſt made a pallace for the euerliuing God; if a man ſhall abuſe it by drunkennes, ſwearing, lying, fornication, or any vncleannes, he doth make it in ſtead of a temple for the holy Ghoſt, to be a ſtye or ſtable for the deuill. For the more filthie a mans bodie is, the more fit it is to be a dwelling place for ſin and Satan.

Fourthly, man by creation was made a goodly creature in the bleſſed image of God: but by Adams fal men loſt the ſame, and are now become the deformed children of wrath: our dutie therefore is, to labour to get againe our firſt image, and indeauour our ſelues to become new creatures. If a noble man ſhould ſtaine his blood by treaſon, after his death the poſteritie will neuer be at reſt, till they haue got away that ſpot: Man, by Adams fall, is become a limme of the deuill, a rebell and a traytour againſt Gods maieſtie: and thus is the ſtate of euery one of vs; by nature we are at enmitie with God, and therefore we ought to labour aboue all things in the world, to be reſtored in Chriſt to our firſt eſtate and perfection, that ſo we may become bone of his bone, fleſh of his fleſh, beeing iuſtified and ſanctified by his obedience, death, and paſſion.

Fifthly, man was created that there might be a way prepared, whereby God might ſhew his grace and mercy in the ſaluation of ſome, and his iuſtice in the deſerued damnation of others for their ſinnes: and in the creation of man Gods eternall counſell begins to come into execution. Hereupon it ſtands vs in hand to make conſcience of euery euill way, beeing repentant for all our ſinnes paſt, and hauing a conſtant purpoſe neuer to ſinne more as we haue done, that by our good conuerſation here in this life we may haue aſſurance that we be eternally choſen to ſaluation by the Lord himſelfe.

Laſtly, whereas we haue learned that the ſoule of man is immortall, we are hereby taught to take more care for the ſoule then for the bodie. For it can not be extinguiſhed. When it is condemned, euen then it is alwaies in dying, & can neuer die. But alas, in this point the caſe is flat contrary in the world: for men labour all their liues long to get for the bodie, but for the ſoule they care little or nothing at all: whether it ſinke or ſwimme, goe to heauen or to hell, they reſpect not. This doth appeare to be true, by the practiſe and behauiour of men on the Lords day: for if the number of thoſe which come to heare Gods word, were compared with thoſe which runne about their worldly wealth and pleaſure, I feare me the better ſort would be found to be but a little handfull to a huge heape, or as a droppe to the Ocean ſea, in reſpect of the other. But wilt thou goe a hundred myle for the increaſe of thy wealth, & delight of thy body? then thinke it not much to goe ten thouſand myles (if neede were) to take any paines for the good of thy ſoule, and to get foode for the ſame, it beeing euerlaſting.

And thus much for the duties. Nowe follow the conſolations. Although by reaſon of the fal of man we can haue but little comfort now: yet the creation doth confirme the vnſpeakable prouidence of God ouer his creatures, but eſpecially ouer man, in that the Lord created him the ſixt day: and ſo before he was made prepared for him a Paradiſe for his dwelling place, and all creatures for his vſe and comfort.

And

And if he were thus carefull for vs when we were not, then no doubt he will be much more carefull for vs at this present, in which we liue and haue beeing. Nay, marke further, since the fall man eates & drinkes in quantity a great deale, which in common reason should rather kill him, then turne to the strength & nourishment of his body: yet herein doth the wonderfull power of the Creatour most notablie appeare, who hath made mans stomack as a lymbecke or still to digest all meats that are holesome for his nourishment & preseruation.

And thus much for the Creation. Now in these words, maker of heauen and earth] is more to be vnderstood then the worke of creation, namely Gods prouidence in gouerning al things created, as he appointed in his eternall decree: and therfore S. Peter saith God is a faithfull Creatour, that is, God did not only make heauen and earth, and so leaue them, as Masons and Carpenters leaue houses when they are built: but by his prouidence doth most wisely gouerne the same. Now therefore let vs come to speake of Gods prouidence. And first of all the question offers it selfe to be considered, Whether there be any prouidence or no? for the minds of men are troubled with many doubtings hereof. And to make the question out of all doubt, I will vse foure arguments to confirme the prouidence of God. The first is the testimony of the Scripture, which ascribeth the event of all particular actions, euen such as are in themselues casuall, as the casting of lots and such like, to the dispostion of God: which very thing also teacheth that euen men themselues, indued with reason & vnderstanding, haue need to be guided in al things and gouerned by God: and it serueth to confute those that deny Gods prouidence. Why sayest thou, O Iacob, and speakest, O Israel, my way is hidde from the Lord, and my iudgement is past ouer by my God? The second argument may be taken from the order which appeareth in the whole course of nature. First to begin with families; there is to be seene an eutaxie or seemely order, in which some rule and some obey: and the like is to be found in townes, cities, countries, & kingdoms: yea euen in the whole world: in which all things are so disposed, that one serueth for the good of another. Trees and hearbes, and grasse of the field serue for beasts and cattell, beasts & cattell serue for men: the heauens aboue serue for them which are beneath: and al the creatures which are aboue and beneath serue for God. This argueth that God is most wise and prouident in ordering and disposing all things whatsoeuer. The third argument is taken from the conscience specially of malefactours. Suppose a man that commits a murder so closely that noe man knowes thereof, and that the party himselfe is free from al the danger of the law: yet shall he haue his owne conscience to accuse, vpbraide, and condemne him, yea euen to fright him out of his wit, and to giue him no more rest then he can finde vpon the racke or gybbet. Now this accusation & terrour of conscience, is nothing else but the forerunner of an other most terrible iudgement of God, who is Lord of all creatures and iudge of all men. And this also prooues the prouidence of God. For if the conscience can finde a man out, and laye his faults to his charge, how much more shall God himselfe the creator of the conscience see and consider al his doings? The fourth and last argument is this. The propheſies of things to come should bee vncertaine or false, if God gouerned not the world. But now considering thinges many yeares agoe foretold, come to passe in the same manner as they were foretold by the Prophets & Apostles: hereby we must certainely conclude that there is a prouidence of God whereby all and euery thing is gouerned.

Pro. 16, 33

Ier. 10, 23. Isa. 40, 27.

Against the prouidence of God sundry things be alleaged. The first and speciall is, that prouidence and disorder, confusion and order cannot stand together. Now in the world there is nothing but disorder and confusion in seditions, treasons, conspiracies, & subuersions of kingdomes: where also sinne and wickednesse preuailes. Answ. It is true indeede there hath bin confusion in the world euer since the fall of man and angels; and it ariseth not from God, but from them alone: who as they did at the first transgresse the will of God, so they do what they can to turne all vpside downe. Now then confusion, and disorder is onely in respect of the deuill and his instruments: but in regard of God in the very middest of all confusion there is order to be found, because he can and doth dispose it to the glory of his owne name, and to the good & saluation of his chosen, as also to the confusion of his enemies.

Against

Againe it may be obiected, that with vngodly and wicked men all thinges goe well, and contrariwise with the godly all things goe hardly. For through the world, none are more molested and more vnder outward misery then they: but if there were any prouidence in God, thē it should be otherwise; the godly should flourish, and the wicked perish. Anſ. the conſideration of the outward eſtate of men in the world, was to Dauid an occaſion of a ſore temptation. For when he ſaw the wicked to proſper alway, and their riches to encreaſe, he brake forth and ſaid, Certainly I Pſa.73.13, 14, ver.17. haue clenſed my heart in vaine, and waſhed mine hands in innocency. Now if we would repell this temptation, as Dauid afterward did, then we muſt goe into the Lords ſanctuary with him, & learne to be reſolued in theſe points. I. Though the godly be laden with miſeries, yet euen that, by the eſpeciall prouidence of God, turnes to their great good. For euery man ſince the fall of Adam is ſtained with the lothſome contagion of ſinne. Now the child of God that is truly regenerate, and muſt be fellow heire with Chriſt after this life in the kingdome of glory, muſt in this life be caſt into the Lords furnace, that in the fire of affliction he may more and more be skoured and purified from the corruptiō of his nature, and be eſtranged from the wickednes of the world. II. The proſperous ſucceſſe of the wicked, their ſpoiles, their reuenewes, & all their honour turnes to their greater woe in the ende: as doth appeare in Iobs hiſtory, and in the examples of the Chaldeans, of Dauids enemies, and of Diues and Lazarus.

Thirdly, it may be obiected, that many things come to paſſe by chance, and therfore not by Gods prouidence: becauſe chance and prouidence can not ſtand togither. Anſ. We muſt diſtinguiſh betwene chance and meere chance. Chance is, when any thing comes to paſſe, the cauſe thereof being vnknowne not ſimply but in reſpect of man: and therefore in regarde of men which know not the reaſō of things, we may ſay there is chance: and ſo the ſpirit of God ſpeaketh. Time and chance Eccle.9.11. commeth to them all. And againe, By chance Luk.10.31. there came downe a prieſt the ſame way: Now this kinde of chance is not againſt the prouidence of God, but is ordered by it. For things which in regard of men are caſuall, are certainly knowne and determined by God. Meere chance is, when things are ſaide or thought to come to paſſe without any cauſe at all. But that muſt be abhorred of vs as ouerturning the prouidence of God.

Thus ſeeing it is plaine that there is a prouidence, let vs in the next place ſee what it is. Prouidence is a moſt free and powerfull action of God, whereby he hath care ouer all things that are.

Prouidence hath two partes; knowledge and gouernment. Gods knowledge is whereby all thinges from the greateſt to the leaſt are manifeſt before him at all times. As Dauid ſaith, His eies will conſider: his eye liddes will trie the Children of men. Pſal. 11.4. And againe, He abaſeth himſelfe to behold the thinges that are in the heauen and the earth. Pſa.113.6. And the Prophet Hanani ſaide to Aſa, The eyes of the Lord beholde all the earth. 2.Chr.16.9. And Saint James ſaith, From the beginning of the world GOD knoweth all his workes. Act.15.18 This point hath a double vſe. Firſt as Saint Peter ſaith, it muſt moue vs to eſchewe euill and doe good: Why? Becauſe, ſaith he, the eyes of the Lord are vpon the iuſt, and his countenance againſt euill doers. 1.Pet.3.12. Secondly it muſt comfort all thoſe that labour to keepe a good conſcience. For the eyes of GOD behold all the earth to ſhewe himſelfe ſtronge with them that are of perfect heart towardes him. 2.Chr.16.9.

Gouernment is the ſecond part of Gods prouidence, whereby hee ordereth all things and directeth them to good ends. And it muſt be extended to the very leaſt thing that is in heauen or earth, as to the ſparrowes, and to oxen, and the haire of Mat.6.26. our heads. Deut.15.4. And here wee muſt conſider Mat.10.10 two things, the manner of gouernment, and the meanes.

The manner of gouernment is diuers, according as things are good or euill. A good thing is that which is approoued of God. As firſt of all the ſubſtances of all creatures; euen of the deuils themſelues: in whom whatſoeuer is remaining ſince their creation is in it ſelfe good. Secondly, the quantities, qualities, motions, actions, and inclinations of the creatures in themſelues conſidered withall their euents are good. Againe, good is either naturall or morall. Naturall, which is created by God for the lawfull vſe of man. Morall, which is agreeable to the eternal and vnchangeable wiſedome of God, reuealed in the morall law.

Now God gouerneth all good things

two waies. Firſt by ſuſtaining and preſeruing them that they decay not: ſecondly by mooning them that they may attaine to the particular endes for which they were ſeuerally ordained. For the qualities and vertues which were placed in the Sunne, Moone, ſtarres, trees, plants, ſeedes, &c. would lie dead in them and be vnprofitable, vnles they were not onely preſerued, but alſo ſtirred vp and quickned by the power of God ſo oft as he imploies them to any vſe.

Euill is the deſtruction of nature: and it is taken for ſinne, or for the puniſhment of ſinne. Now ſinne is gouerned of God by two actions: the firſt is an operatiue permiſſion. I ſo call it, becauſe God partly permitteth ſinne, and partly worketh in it. For ſinne as it is commonly taken hath two parts; the ſubiect or matter, and the forme of ſinne: the ſubiect of ſinne is a certaine qualitie or action; the forme is the anomie or tranſgreſſion of Gods law. The firſt is good in it ſelfe and euery qualitie or action ſo farre forth as it is a qualitie or action is exiſting in nature, and hath God to bee the author of it. Therefore ſinne though it be ſufficiently euil to eternall damnation, yet can it not be ſaid to be abſolutely euill as God is abſolutely good, becauſe the ſubiect of it is good, and therefore it hath in it reſpects and regards of goodnes. In reſpect of the ſecond, that is, the breach of the lawe it ſelfe, God neither willeth, nor appointeth, nor commandeth, nor cauſeth, nor helpeth ſinne; but forbiddeth, condemneth, and puniſheth it: yet ſo, as withall he willingly permitteth it to be done by others, as men and wicked angels, they beeing the ſole authors and cauſes of it. And this permiſſion by God is vpon a good end: becauſe thereby he manifeſteth his iuſtice and mercie. Thus it appeares that in originall ſinne, the naturall inclination of the minde, will, and affections in it ſelfe conſidered, is from God, and the ataxie or corruption of the inclination in no wiſe from him, but only permitted: againe that in actual ſinne the motion of the bodie or minde is from God, but the euilneſſe and diſorder of the motion is not from him, but freely permitted to be done by others. As for example in the act of murder, the actions of mooning the whole bodie, of ſtirring the ſeueral ioynts, and the fetching of the blow whereby the man is ſlaine, is from God: for in him wee liue, moone, and haue our beeing: but the diſpoſing and applying of all theſe actions to this ende, that our neighbours life may be taken away, & we thereby take reueng vpon him, is not from God, but from the wicked will of man and the deuill.

Gods ſecond action in the gouernment of ſinne, is after the iuſt permiſſion of it, partly, to reſtraine it more or leſſe according to his good will and pleaſure, and partly to diſpoſe and turne it againſt the nature thereof to the glorie of his owne name, to the puniſhment of his enemies, and to the correcting and chaſtiſment of his elect.

As for the ſecond kind of euill, called the puniſhment of ſinne, it is the execution of iuſtice, and hath God to be the author of it. And in this reſpect Eſai ſaith, that God createth euill: and Amos, That there is no euill in the cittie which God hath not done. And God as a moſt iuſt iudge may puniſh ſinne by ſinne himſelfe in the meane ſeaſon free from all ſinne. And thus the places muſt bee vnderſtoode in which it is ſaid, that God giueth Kings in his wrath, hardeneth the heart, blindeth the eyes, mingleth the ſpirit of errours, giueth vp men to a reprobate ſenſe, ſends ſtrange illuſions to beleeue lies, ſends euill ſpirits giuing them commandement to hurt, and leaue to deceiue, &c.

Thus hauing ſeene in what manner God gouerneth al things, let vs now come to the meanes of gouernment. Sometimes God worketh without meanes, thus hee created all things in the beginning; and he made trees and plants to grow and flouriſh without the heate of the ſun or raine: ſometimes hee gouernes according to the vſuall courſe and order of nature, as when he preſerues our liues by meat and drinke: yet ſo, as hee can and doth moſt freely order all things by meanes either aboue nature or againſt nature, as it ſhall ſeeme good vnto him. As when hee cauſed the ſunne to ſtand in the firmament, and to go backe in Achaz diall: when he cauſed the fire not to burne the three children: when he kept backe dew and raine three yeares in Iſraell, when hee made waters to flow out of the rocke: when he cauſed Elias cloake to deuide the waters of Iorden: when he cauſed yron to ſwimme: when he preſerued Ionas aliue three daies and 3. nights in the whalls bellie: when he cured diſeaſes, by the ſtrength of nature incurable, as the leproſie of Naaman, the iſſue of blood, and blindneſſe, &c.

Among

Among all the meanes which God vseth, the speciall are the reasonable creatures, which are no passiue instruments, as the toole in the hand of the workman, but actiue: because as they are mooued by God, so againe beeing indued with will and reason, they moue themselues. And such instruments, are either good or euill, Euil, as wicked men and angels. And these he vseth to do his good will and pleasure, euen then when they doe least of all obey him. And considering that the sinning instrument which is mooued by God, doth also moue it selfe freely without any constraint on Gods part: God himselfe is free from all blame, when the instrument is blame-worthy. In directing the instrument, God sinneth not: the action indeede is of him, but the defect of the action from the instrument: which beeing corrupt, can it selfe doe nothing but that which is corrupt: God in the meane season by it brining that to passe which is very good. The whole cause of sinne is in Satan and in vs: as for God, he puts no wickednes into vs, but the euil which he finds in vs he moues, that is, orders and gouernes, and bends it by his infinite wisdome, when & in what manner it pleaseth him, to the glory of his name, the euill instrument not knowing so much, nay intending a farre other ende. As in the mill the horse blindfolded goes forward, and perceiues nothing but that he is in the ordinary way, whereas the miller himselfe whips him and stirres him forward for an other ende, namely for the grinding of corne. And this is that which we must hold touching Gods prouidence ouer wicked men and angels: and it stands with the tenour of the whole Bible. Iosephs brethren sold him into Egypt very wickedly, euen in the testimony of their owne consciences: yet Ioseph hauing respect to the counsell and worke of God, which he performed by his brethrē, saith that the Lord sent him thither. And the Church of Ierusalem saith, that Herod & Pontius Pilate did nothing in the death of Christ but that which the hand & counsell of God had determined to be done: because though they wickedly intended nothing but to shew their malice and hatred in the death of Christ: yet God propounding a further matter by them then euer they, dreamed of, shewed forth his endles mercy to man in the worke of redemption. On this manner must al the places of scripture be vnderstood, in which it is said, that God gaue the wiues of Dauid to Absolon, that God mooued Dauid to number the people; that he commanded Shemei to raile on Dauid; that the Medes and Persians are his sanctified ones: that the reuolt of the ten tribes was done by God, &c. By all these examples it appeares, that we must not seuer Gods permission fro his wil or decree, & that we must put difference betweene the euil worke of man, & the good worke of God which hee doth by man: and the whole matter may yet be more clearely perceiued by this comparison: A theefe at the day of assise is condemned, and the magistrate appoints him to bee executed; the hangman owing a grudge to the malefactour, vseth him hardly and prolongeth his punishment longer then he should. Now the magistrate and the hangman do both one & the same worke, yet the hangman for his part is a murderer, the magistrate in the meane season no murderer, but a iust iudge putting iustice in execution by the hangman: so God though he vse euill instruments, yet is he free from the euill of the instruments.

And further we must here marke the difference which must bee made in Gods vsing of al kinds of instruments. When he vseth good creatures, as angels, he worketh his will not onely by them but also in thē: because he inspires them and guides them by his spirit, so as they shall will, and doe that which he willeth and intendeth. As for euill instruments, he worketh by them onely, and not in them: because he holdes backe his grace from them and leaues thē to themselues, to put in practise the corruption of their owne hearts.

Thus much of the parts of Gods prouidence: now to follow the kinds thereof. Gods prouidence is either generall or speciall. Generall, is that which extends it selfe to the whole world and all things indifferently, euen to the deuils themselues. By this prouidence God continues and maintaines the order which he set in nature in the creation, and he preserues the life, substance, and the being of all and euery creature in his kinde.

Act. 4. 28.

The speciall prouidence is that, which God showeth and exerciseth towards his Church and chosen people, in gathering and guiding them, and in preseruing them by his mighty power against the gates of hell. And therfore Gods Church here vpō earth is called the kingdome of grace, in which he shewes not only a general power ouer his creatures, but withall the ſpeciall operation of his ſpirit in bowing and bending the hearts of men to his will.

Thus much concerning the doctrine of Gods prouidence. Now followes the duties. Firſt, ſeeing there is a prouidence of God ouer euery thing that is, we are hereby taught to take good heed of the tranſgreſſion of the leaſt of Gods commandements. If men were perſwaded that the Prince had an eye euery where, doubtleſſe many ſubiects in England would walke more obediently to the lawes of the land then they do: and durſt in no wiſe worke ſuch villanies as are daily practiſed. Well, howſoeuer it is with earthly princes, yet this all-ſeeing preſence is leaſt wanting in God: he hath an eye euery where: whereſoeuer thou art, there God beholdeth thee, as Dauid ſaith, God looked downe from heauen vpon the children of men, to ſee if there were any that would vnderſtand and ſeeke God. Therefore except thou be brutiſh and paſt ſhame, take heed of ſinne. If men had but a ſparke of grace, the conſideration of this would make them loath the practiſe of any euill worke. Eliah ſaith to Ahab, As the Lord God of Iſrael liueth before whome I ſtand, there ſhall be neither dewe nor raine theſe three yeares. Where the Prophet confirmeth his ſpeach with an oath, ſaying, As the Lord of hoſts liueth it ſhall be ſo. And leaſt Ahab ſhould thinke he made no cõſcience what he ſaid, he addeth this clauſe, that he ſtood in the preſence of God. As if he ſhould ſay: howſoeuer thou thinkeſt of me, yet as it ſtands me in hand, ſo doe I make conſcience of my word: for I ſtand in the preſence of God, and therfore know it, as the Lord liueth there ſhall be no raine nor dew theſe three yeares. So Cornelius hauing an eye to Gods prouidence, doth mooue himſelfe, and all his houſhold to a ſolemne hearing of the word of God deliuered by the mouth of Peter, ſaying, that they were all preſent before God, to heare all things commanded of him. As theſe men had regard to Gods prouidence, ſo we likewiſe muſt behaue our ſelues reuerently, making conſcience of our behauiour both in words and workes: becauſe whereſoeuer we be, we are in the preſence of God. Secondly, if there be a prouidence of God ouer euery thing, then we muſt learne contentation of minde in euery eſtate; yea, in aduerſitie vnder the croſſe when all goes againſt vs we muſt be content, becauſe Gods prouidence hath ſo appointed. So Dauid in the greateſt of his griefes was dumbe and ſpake nothing; his reaſon was, becauſe thou Lord didſt it. And when Shemei curſed Dauid, Abiſha would haue had the king to haue giuen him leaue to haue ſlaine him: but Dauid would not ſuffer it, but ſaide, Hee curſeth euen becauſe the Lord hath bidden him curſe Dauid: who dare then ſay, Wherefore haſt thou done ſo? In whoſe example we may ſee a patterne of quietneſſe of minde. When a croſſe cõmeth it is a hard thing to be patient; but wee muſt drawe our ſelues thereunto by conſideration of Gods eſpeciall prouidence. Thirdly, when outward meanes of preſeruation in this life doe abound, as health, wealth, honour, riches, peace, and pleaſure, then we muſt remember to bee thankefull; becauſe theſe things alwaies come by the prouidence of God. Thus Iob was thankfull both in proſperitie and aduerſitie: The Lord, ſaith he, gaue, and the Lord taketh away, bleſſed bee the name of the Lord. Indeede to be patient in euery eſtate and thankfull to God, is a very hard matter: yet will it be more eaſie, if we learne in all things that befall vs in this life, neuer to ſeuer the conſideration of the things that come to paſſe from Gods prouidence. For as the bodie and the ſoule of man (though wee ſee onely the bodie) are alwaies together, as long as a man liueth: ſo is Gods prouidence ioyned with the thing done: wherefore as we looke on the thing done, ſo wee muſt alſo in it, labour to ſee and acknowledge the good pleaſure and appointment of God. As for example: a mans houſe is ſet on fire, and all his goods conſumed; this very ſight woulde make him at his wits end: but now as he beholds this euent with one eye, ſo with the other eye he muſt at that very inſtant looke vpon Gods bleſſed prouidence. When a man beholds and feeles the loſſe of his friends, hee can not but grieue thereat, vnleſſe hee bee more ſenſles then ſtocke or ſtone: yet that he may not be ouerwhelmed with griefe, he muſt euer with one eye looke at the pleaſure of God herein. This will bee an eſpeciall meanes to ſtay the rage of any headſtrong affection in all our afflictions. In the world the manner of men is, if health, wealth, and eaſe aboũd to thinke all is well: but if croſſes come, as loſſe of friends, and loſſe of goods, then men crie out, as beeing ſtraught of their witts: the reaſon is, becauſe they looke onely onely at the outward meanes, and tie Gods prouidence to them; not being able to see any goodnesse or prouidence of God out of ordinary meanes. Againe, when a man is stored with riches, honour wealth, and prosperity, he must not barely looke on them, but behold withall Gods goodnesse, and blessing in them: for if that be wanting, all the riches in the world are nothing. Likewise in receiuing thy meate and drinke, thou must looke further into the blessing of God vpon it: which if it be away, thy meate and thy drinke can no more nourish thee then the stone in the wall. And the same must we doe in euery busines of our callings: which if men could learne to practise, they would not so much trust to the meanes, as honour, wealth, fauour, &c. But rather to God himselfe. The Lord by the Prophet Habaccuc reproueth the Chaldeans for offering sacrifices vnto their nets; which sinne they committed, because they looked onely vpon outward things: and like moles had no power to see further into them, and to behold the worke of God in all their proceedings. And this is the very cause why we are vnthankfull for Gods benefits: for though we behold the bare creatures, yet are we so poreblind that we can not discerne any blessing and prouidence of God in them. Therefore let vs learne to looke vpon both ioyntly together, and so shall we be thankfull vnto God in prosperity, and patient in aduersity with Iob and Dauid. This lesson Paul learned; I can be abased (saith he) And I can abound euery where, in all things I am instructed, both to be full and to be hungrie: and to abound, and to be in want.

Phil 4.12. 13.

Fourthly, seeing Gods prouidence disposeth all things, we are taught to gather obseruations of the same, in things both past, and present that we may learne thereby to be armed against the time to come. Thus Dauid when hee was to encounter with Goliah, gathered hope and confidence to himselfe for the time to come, by the obseruatiō of Gods prouidence in the time past: for, saith he, when I kept my Fathers sheepe, I slue a Lyon and a Beare that deuoured the flocke: now the Lord that deliuered me out of the paw of the Lion, and out of the paw of the Beare, he will deliuer me out of the hand of this Philistim.

1.Sa.17.37

Fifthly, because Gods prouidence disposeth all things, when wee make lawfull promises to doe any thing, we must put in, or at the least conceiue this condition [if the Lord wil:] for S. Iames saith, that we ought to say, If the Lord wil, and if wee liue, we will doe this or that. This also was Dauids practise: for to all the congregation of Israell he saide, If it seeme good to you, and if it proceede from the Lord our God, wee will send to and fro.

Iam. 4. 15.

Sixtly, seeing Gods prouidence is manifest in ordinary meanes, it behoooueth euery man in his calling to vse them carefully: and when ordinary meanes be at hand, we must not looke for any helpe without them, though the Lord be able to doe what he will without meanes. Ioab when many Aramites came against him, he heartned his souldiers though they were but few in number, bidding them be strong and valiant for their people, and for the cities of their God, and then let the Lord doe that which is good in his eyes. And our Sauiour Christ auoucheth it to bee flat tempting of God for him to leape downe from the pinacle of the Temple to the ground, whereas there was an ordinary way at hand to discend by staires. Hence it appeares that such persons, as will vse noe means wherby they may come to repent and beleeue, doe indeede no more repent and beleeue, then they can be able to liue which neither eate nor drinke.

2.Sam.10. 12.

Mat.4.6.

And thus much of the duties. Now follow the consolations. First this very point of Gods speciall prouidence is a great comfort to Gods Church: for the Lord moderateth the rage of the deuill and wicked men, that they shall not hurt the people of God. Dauid saith, The Lord is at my right hand, therefore I shall not slide. And When Iosephs brethren were afraide because they had sold him into Egypt, hee comforteth them saying, that it was GOD that sent him before them for their preseruation. So king Dauid when his souldiours were purposed to stone him to death, hee was in great sorrow; but it is said, he comforted himselfe in the Lord his God. Where we may see, that a man which hath grace to beleeue in God, and relye on his prouidence in all his afflictions and extremities, shall haue wonderfull peace and consolation.

1.Sam.30. 6.

Before we can proceede to the articles which follow, it is requisite that we should intreat of one of the greatest workes of Gods prouidence that can be; because the opening of it giueth light to all that insueth. And this worke is a Preparation of such meanes whereby God will manifest his iustice and mercie. It hath two parts, the iust permission of the fall of man, and the giuing of the Couenant of grace. For so Paul teacheth when he saith, That God shut vp all vnder vnbeleefe, that hee might haue mercie vpon all. And againe, The scripture hath concluded all vnder sinne, that the promise by the faith of Christ Iesus should bee giuen to them that beleeue.

Rom.11 32. Gal.3.22

Touching the first, that we might rightly conceiue of mans fall, wee are to search out the nature and parts of sinne. Sinne is any thing whatsoeuer is against the will and word of God: as S. Iohn saith, Sinne is the transgression of the law. And this definition Paul confirmeth when he saith, that by the Law comes the knowledge of sinne: and, Where no Law is there is no transgression: and, Sinne is not imputed where there is no law.

1.Ioh 3.4. Rom.3 20 & 4.15.& 5.13.

In sinne we must consider three things: the fault, the guilt, the punishment. The fault is the anomie or the inobedience it selfe, and it comprehends nôt onely huge and notorious offences, as idolatrie, blasphemie, theft, treason, adulterie, and all other crimes that the world cries shame on: but euery disordered thought, affection, inclination: yea, euery defect of that which the law requireth.

The guilt of sinne is, whereby a man is guiltie before God, that is, bound & made subiect to punishment. And here two questions must bee skanned: where man is bound? and by what? For the first, Man is bound in conscience. And hereupon the conscience of euery sinner sits within his heart as a little iudge to tell him that he is bound before God to punishment. For the second, it is the order of diuine iustice set downe by God which binds the conscience of the sinner before God: for he is Creator and Lord, and man is a creature, and therefore must either obey his will and commandement, or suffer punishment. Now then by vertue of Gods lawe, cõscience binds ouer the creature to beare a punishment for his offence done against God: yea it tells him, that he is in danger to be iudged and condemned for it. And therefore the conscience is as it were the Lords Sergeant to informe the sinner of the bond and obligation whereby he alwaies stands bound before God.

The third thing which followeth sinne is punishment, and that is death. So Paul saith, The stipend of sinne is death: where, by death we must vnderstãd a double death, both of body and soule. The death of the body is a separation of the body from the soule. The second death is a separation of the whole man, but especially of the soule frõ the glorious presence of God. I say not simply frõ the presence of God, for God is euery where: but onely from the ioyfull presence of Gods glory. Nowe these two deaths are the stipends or allowance of sinne: and the least sinne which a man cõmitteth, doth deserue these two punishments. For in euery sinne the infinite iustice of God is violated: for which cause there must needes be inflicted an infinite punishment, that there may bee a proportion betweene the punishment and the offence. And therefore that distinction of sinne which Papists make, namely, that some are in themselues veniall, and some mortall, is false, and hereby confuted: otherwise in respect of the diuers estate and condition of men, sinnes are either venial or mortall. Veniall they are to the elect, whose sinnes are pardonable in Christ: but to the reprobate all sinnes are mortall.

Neuertheless we hold not all sinnes equall, but that they are greater or lesse according to the diuersitie of obiects and other circumstances.

Thus much of sinne in generall: now we come to the parts of it. The first sinne of all that euer was in man, is the sinne of Adam, which was his disobedience in eating the forbidden fruit. In hãdling wherof sundrie points are to be opened, but let vs begin with the causes thereof. Rom.5.5.

The outward efficient cause was the deuill. And though he be not named by Moses in the historie of the fall, yet that is not to trouble vs: for wee must not conceiue otherwise of the serpent, then of the instrument and mouth of the deuill. For it is not likely that it being a bruit creature should be able to reason and determine of good and euill, of truth and falshood. Now in this temptation the deuill shewes his malice and his fraud. His malice, in that, whereas hee can not ouerturne God himselfe, yet hee labours to disturbe the order which hee hath set downe in the creation, and especially the image of God in the most excellent creatures on earth, that they may bee in the same miserable condition with himselfe. His fraud, first in that hee beginnes his temptation with the woman being the weaker person, & not with the man, which course he still continues: as may appeare by this, that (a) more women are intangled with witchcraft and sorcerie then men. Secondly he shewes his fraud, in that he proceeds very slily & intangles Eve by certaine steppes and degrees. For first by mouing a question, he drawes her to listen vnto him, and to reason with him of Gods commandement. Secondly, he brings her to looke vpon the tree, and wishly to view the beautie of the fruite. Thirdly, he makes her go doubt of the absolute truth of Gods word and promise, and to beleeue his contrarie lies. Fourthly, hauing blinded her minde with his false perswasion, shee desires and lusts after the forbidden fruite, and thereupon takes it, eates it, & giues it to her husband.

The inward cause, was the will of our first parents, euen in the testimony of their owne consciences as Salomon saith, This haue I found that God made man righteous, but they haue found many inuentions. But it may be obiected, that if Adam were created good, he could not be the cause of his owne fal, because a good tree cannot bring forth euill fruit. Anſ. Freedome of will is fourefold: I. Freedome to euill alone. this is onely in wicked men and angels. and is indeede a bondage: the second is freedom to good alone, and that is in God and the good Angels by Gods grace: the third is freedome to good in part, ioyned with some want of libertie by reason of sinne: and this is in the regenerate in this life: the fourth is freedome either to good or to euil indifferently. And this was in Adam before his fall, who though he had no inclination to sinne, but onely to that which was acceptable to God: yet was he not bound by any necessitie, but had his libertie freely to choose or refuse either good or euill. And this is euident by the very tenour of Gods commandement in which he forbids Adam to eat the forbidden fruit: and therby shewing that he being created righteous and not prone to sinne, had power to keepe or not to keepe the commandement: though since the fall both he and we after him cannot but sin. Wherefore Adam beeing allured by Satan, of his owne free accord changed himselfe and fell from God. Now then, as the good tree changed from good to euill brings forth euill fruit: so Adam by his owne inward and free motion changing from good to euill.

Eccl. 7.31.

As for God, he is not to be reputed as an author or cause any way of this sinne, For he created Adam and Eve righteous, indued them with righteous wills: and he told them what he would exact at their hands and what they could performe: yea he added threatnings, that with the feare of daunger he might terrifie them from sinne. Some may say, whereas God foresaw that Adam would abuse the liberty of his will, why would hee not preuent it? Anſ. There is a double grace, a the one to be able to will and doe that which is good, the other to bee able to persuere in willing and doing the same. Now God gaue the first to Adam, & not the second. And he is not to be blamed of vs, though he confirmed him not with new grace, for he is debter to no man to giue him so much as the least grace; wheras he had alreadie giuen a plentifull measure thereof to him. And God did hold backe to conferre any further grace vpon iust cause. I. It was his pleasure that this fact should be an occasion or way to exercise his mercie in the sauing of the Elect, and his iustice in the deserued condemnaton of impenitēt sinners. And vnlesse Adam had fallen for himselfe and others, there should haue beene found no miserie in men, on whom God might take pittie in his Sonne, nor wickednesse which he might condemne; and therefore neither manifestation of iustice, nor mercie. II. It was the will of God in part to forsake Adam, to make manifest the weaknesse that is in the most excellent creatures, without the speciall and continuall assistance of God. III. There is a double libertie of will, one is to will good or euill: this belongs to the creature in this world, & therefore Adam receued it. The other, is to will good alone. This he wanted, because it is reserued to the life to come. And though hee knew no cause of this dealing of God, yet is it one steppe to the feare of God for vs to hold that good and righteous which he appointeth or willeth: and not to square the workes and iudgements of God by our crooked reason. And yet to come to reason it selfe. Who can here complaine of God? Can the deuill? but God did not cause him to tempt or deceiue our first parents? Can Adam and Eve? but they fell freely without any motion or instigation from God, and their owne consciences accused them for it. Can the posteritie of Adam? but the Elect receiue more in Christ then they lost in Adam: and the reprobate, ouerwhelmed with the burden of their their owne sinnes, & thereupon receiuing nothing but due and deserued damnation can not finde fault. But some may further replie and say, he that foreseeth an euill and doth not preuent it, is a cause of it: but God did foresee the fall of man, and did not preuent it. Ans. The rule is generally true in man, that the foreseer of an euill not preuenting it, is in some sort a doer of it: for it is the sentence of the law of God, to which man was bound from the first creation. But God is aboue all his lawes and not bound to them: he is an absolute lord and law-giuer; and therefore his actions are not within the compasse of morall lawes, as mens are. Whereupon it followes, that though he did foresee mans defection, yet is he free from all blame in not preuenting it. For with him there be good causes of permitting euill.

And though God be no cause of mans fall, yet must we not imagine that it came to passe by chance or fortune, wheras the least things that are, come to passe with Gods prouidence. Neither was it by any bare permissiō without his decree & will: for that is to make an idle prouidence: neither did it happen against the wil of God: he vtterly nilling it: for then it could not haue bin, vnles we denie God to be omnipotent. It remaines therefore that this fall did so proceede of the voluntarie motion of Adam, as that God did in part ordaine & will the permitting of it, not as it was a sinne against his commandement, but as it was further in the counsell of God a way to execute his iustice and mercie. Against this which I say, diuers things are obiected. First, that if Adā did that which God in any respect willed, then he did not sin at all. Ans. He that willeth, and doth that which God willeth, for all that sinnes; vnles he wil it in the same manner with God & for the same ende. Now in the permitting of this fact, God intended the manifesting of this glorie: but our first parents intending no such thing, sought not onely to be like but also to be equall with God. Secondly, it is alleadged that Adam could not but fal necessarily, if God did decree it. Ans. Adams fall that came not to passe without Gods decree, and therfore in that respect was necessarie; was neuertheles in repect of Adams freewill contingent and not necessarie: Gods decree not taking away the freedome of will but onely ordering it. Lastly, it is alleadged that Gods will is the cause of Adams wil, and Adams will the cause of his fall, and that therefore Gods wil shall be the cause of the fall. Ans. It must be grāted that Gods will is a moouing cause of the wills of euill men; yet marke how: not as they are euill wills simply, but as they are wills: & therefore when God inclines the euill will of his creature to his good purpose, he is nothing at al intangled with defect or euill of his will.

Aug. Ench. ad Laur. c. 99.

Touching the time of the fall the receiued opinion in former ages hath beene, that our first parents fell the same day in which they were created, and therefore Augustine writes that they stood but sixe houres. And though we can not determine of the certen time, yet in all likelihoode was it very short. For Moses presently after that he had set downe the creation of mā, without the interpositiō of any thing else, comes immediatly to the fall. And considering the nature of the deuill is without ceasing to shew his malice, no doubt he tooke the first occasiō that possibly might be had to bring man to the same damnation with himselfe. And our Iohn. 8. Sauiour Christ saith, that the deuill was a man-slayer from the beginning, namely from the beginning not of the creation of the world, or of time, but of man. And Eve Gen. 3. 2. saith, We shall eate of the fruit of the trees of the garden, it may be, insinuating that as yet she had not eaten whē the deuil tempted her.

Touching the greatnesse of mans fall, some haue made a small matter of it, because it was the eating of an apple or some such fruit. But we must not measure the greatnes or the smalnes of a sinne by the obiect or matter whereabout it is occupied, but by the commandement of God, and by the disobedience or offence of his infinite maiestie. And that this fact of Adā and Eve was no small fault, but a notorious crime and Apostasie in which they withdraw thēselues frō vnder the power of God, nay reiect and denie him, will euidently appeare if we take a view of all the particular sinnes that be contained in it. The first is vnbeleefe, in that they doubted and distrusted of the truth of Gods word which he spake to them. The second is contempt of God, in that they beleeued the lies of the deuill rather then him. For when God saith, In the day that ye shall eate thereof, ye shall die the death, it is as nothing with Eve: but when the deuill comes and saith, Ye shall not die at all, that shee takes hold on. The third, is pride Gen. 3. 4.

and ambition. For they did eate the forbidden fruite that they might bee as gods, Gen. 3.5. namely as the Father, the Sonne, the holy Ghost. The fourth, is vnthankfulnes. God had made them excellent creatures in his owne image. that is nothing with them to be like vnto him, vnlesse they may be equal with him. The fifth is curiosity whereby they affected greater wisedome then God had giuen them in creation, and a greater measure of knowledge then God had reuealed to thē. The sixth is reprochfull blasphemy, in that they subscribe to the saying of the deuill, in which he charged God with lying and enuie. The seauenth is murder. For by this meanes they bereaue themselues and their posteritie of the fellowship and graces of Gods spirit, and bring vpon their own heads the eternall wrath of God. The eight is discontētation, in that they sought for an higher condition then that was, in which GOD had placed them. In a word, in this one single fact is compriſed the breach of the whole law of God. And we should often thinke vpon this, that we may learne to wonder at the iust iudgements of God in punishing this fall, and his vnspeakable goodnesse in receiuing men to mercy after the same.

And here we must not omit to remember the largenesse of Adams fall. Sinnes are either personall or generall. Personall are such, as are peculiar to one or some fewe persons and make them alone guilty. Generall, that is common to all men: and such is Adams fall. It is a sinne not onely of the person of one man, but of the whole nature of man. And Adam must be considered not as a priuate man, but as a roote or head bearing in it all mankind; or as a publike person representing all his posterity, and therefore when he sinned, all his posterity sinned with him; as in a Parliament whatsoeuer is done by the burgesse of the shiere, is done by euery person in the shiere. As Paul saith, By one Rom. 5.12. man sinne entred into the world, and so death went ouer all for as much as all haue sinned. And here lies the difference betweene Adames fall and the sinnes of men, as Cains murder, which makes not the posterity of Cain guilty, because he was neuer appointed by God to be the roote of his posterity, as Adam was: and therefore his sinne is personall, whereas Adams is not. Yet this which I say, must not bee vnderstood of all the sinnes of Adam, but onely of the first.

From the fall of Adam, springeth originall sinne, so commonly called not onely as a fruite thereof, but also as a iust punishment of it. And after the foresaide fall, it is in Adam and his posteritie, as the mother and roote of al other sinne: yet with this distinction, that actuall sinne was first in Adam, and then came originall; but in vs first is originall sinne, and then after followes actuall.

Originall sinne is tearmed diuersly in Scriptures, as the flesh, the old man, because it is in vs before grace: concupiscence, sinne that is readie to cōpasse vs about, the sinning sinne: and it is tearmed originall, because it hath bin in mans nature euer since the fall, and because it is in euery man at the very instant of his conception and birth, as Dauid plainely saith, Behold I was Psal. 51.5. borne in iniquity and in sinne hath my mother conceiued me: not meaning properly his parents sinne (for he was borne in lawfull marriage) but his owne hereditary sinne. whereof he was guilty in his mothers wombe. Heb. 12.1. Rom. 7.19.

But let vs a little search the nature of it. Considering it hath place in man, it must be either the substance of body or soule, or the faculties of the substance, or the corruption of the faculties. Now it can not be the substance of man corrupted: for then our Sauiour Christ in taking our nature vpon him, should also take vpon him our sinnes, and by that meanes should as well haue neede of a redeemer as other men: and againe the soules of men should not be immortall. Neither is it any one or all the faculties of man. For euery one of them as namely the vnderstanding, will, affections, and all other powers of body or soule were in man from the first creation; whereas sinne was not before the fall. Wherefore it remaines that original sinne is nothing els but a disorder or euill disposition in al the faculties and inclinations of man, whereby they are al carried inordinately against the law of God.

The subiect or place of this sinne, is not any part of man, but the whole body and soule. For first of all, the naturall appetite to meate and drinke, and the power of nourishing is greatly corrupted as appeares by diseases, aches, surfets, but specially by the abuse of meat and drinke. Secondly, the outward senses are as corrupt, and that made Dauid to pray that God would turne his eyes from beholding of vani- Psal. 119. tie:

tie: and Saint Iohn to ſay, Whatſoeuer is in
1.Ioh.2.16. the world is the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eie, and the pride of life. Thirdly, touching the vnderſtanding, the ſpirit of God ſaith, that the frame of the heart of man is onely euill continually: ſo as we are not able of our

2.Cor.3.5. fore withall, the will of man and his affections are anſwerably corrupt; and hereupon the doctrine of Chriſt is, that we muſt renounce our owne wills. Laſtly, all mans ſtrength in good thinges is nothing out of Chriſt.

The propagation of this ſinne, is the deriuing of it from Adam to all his poſterity, whereby it runneth as a leproſie ouer all mankinde. But in what manner this propagation is made, it is hard to define. The common opinion of diuines is, that it may be done two waies. The firſt is this. God when he created Adam in the beginning, ſet downe this appointment and order touching the eſtate of mā, that whatſoeuer Adam receiued of God, hee ſhould receiue it not only for himſelfe, but for his poſterity, and whatſoeuer grace of God he loſt, he ſhould looſe not onely to himſelfe, but to all his poſterity. And hereupon Adam when he ſinned, hee depriued firſt of al himſelfe & then ſecondly al his poſteritie of the Image of God; becauſe all mankinde was in his loynes when he ſinned. Now then vpon the former appointment when the ſoules of men are created & placed in the body, God forſakes them, not in reſpect of the ſubſtance of the ſoule or the faculties, but onely in reſpect of his owne image, whereof the ſoules are depriued; after which follows the defect or wāt of righteouſnes, which is originall ſinne. And God in depriuing man of that which Adam loſt, is not therefore to be thought to be the author or maintainer of ſinne, but a iuſt iudge. For this depriuation of the image of God, ſo farre forth as it is inflicted by him vpon mankind, it muſt be cōceiued as a deſerued puniſhment for the Rom.5.12. ſinne of Adam & all men in him, which puniſhment they pulled vpon themſelues. The ſecond way is, that the corruption of nature is deriued from the parents in generation by the body; for as ſweete oyle powred into a fuſty veſſell, looſeth his purenes & is infected by the veſſell: ſo the ſoule created good, & put into the corrupt body, receiues contagion thence. And this cōiunction of the pure ſoule with the corrupt body, is not againſt the goodnes of God; becauſe it is a iuſt puniſhment of the ſinne of all men in Adam. It may be this which hath beene ſaid will not ſatisfie the minds of all: yet if any will be curious to ſearch further into this point, let thē know that there is an other matter which more concernes them to looke vnto. When a mans houſe is on fire, there is no time then to inquire how and which way & whence the fire came, but our dutie is with al ſpeed and expedition to vſe all good meanes to ſtay it. And ſo conſidering that our whole natures are really infected and poiſoned with the loathſome contagion of originall ſinne, which is a weight ſufficient to preſſe downe the ſoule to the gulfe of hell, it ſtands vs in hand a thouſand fold more to vſe the meanes wherby it may be taken away, then to diſpute how it came.

Some may allcadge againſt the propagation of ſinne, that holy parēts beget holy childrē, which are void of original ſin, becauſe it ſtands not with reaſon, that parents ſhould conuey that to their children which they thēſelues wāt, namly the guilt and the puniſhment & the fault of ſinne in part. Anſ. I. Men are not in this life perfectly holy. For ſanctificatiō is but in part, and therfore they can not poſſibly beget children pure from all ſinne. Secondly, parents beget children as they are men, & not as they are holy men; & by generation they deriue vnto their childrē nature with the corruption thereof, & not grace which is aboue nature, Take any corne, yea the fineſt wheat that euer was, winow it as cleane as poſſibly may be: afterward ſow it, weede it alſo when it is ſowen, reape it in due time, and carrie it to the barne; whē it is threſht, you ſhal finde as much chaffe in it as euer was before, and why? becauſe God hath ſet this order in the creatiō that it ſhal ſpring & grow ſo oft as it is ſowed with the ſtalke, eare, blade, and al: ſo likewiſe though the parēts be neuer ſo holy, the children as they come of them are cōceiued and borne wholly corrupt, becauſe God tooke his order in the creation, that whatſoeuer euill Adam procured, he ſhould bring it not onely on himſelfe, but vpon al his poſteritie: by vertue of which decree, the propagation of ſinne is continued without any interruption, though parents themſelues be borne anew by the ſpirit of God.

And here we muſt not omit to ſpeake of the quantitie or greatneſſe of originall ſinne for the opening whereof we muſt conſiconſider three points. The firſt, that originall ſinne is not diuers, but one and the ſame in kinde in euery man, as the generall and common nature of man is one & the ſame in all men. The ſecond, that this ſin is not in ſome men more, in ſome men leſſe, but in euery man equally, as all men do equally from Adam participate the nature of man, and are equally the children of wrath. Some, it may be will ſay, that this cā not be true, becauſe ſome men are of better natures then others are: ſome of diſpoſition cruell and ſeuere, ſome againe gentle and milde: ſome very licentious and diſordered, ſome very ciuil. Anſw. The differences that bee in men wanting the feare of God, ariſe not of this that they haue more or leſſe originall corruption, but of the reſtraint and limitation of mans corruption. For in ſome God bridleth ſinne more then in others, and in them is found ciuility: and againe in ſome leſſe, & in ſuch the rebellion of nature breakes forth vnto all miſdemeanour. And indeed if God ſhould not keepe the vntoward diſpoſition of men within compaſſe, otherwhiles more, otherwhiles leſſe, as it ſhall ſeeme good vnto his maieſty; impietie, cruelty, iniuſtice, and al manner of ſins would breake out into ſuch a meaſure that there ſhould be no quiet liuing for men in the world, and no place for Gods church. And thus it is manifeſt that although all men be not equall in the practiſe of wickedneſſe, yet that is no hinderance but they may bee equall in the corruption of nature itſelfe. The third point is, that originall ſinne is ſo huge & large euery way, that it may truely be tearmed the roote or ſeede not of ſome few ſins, but of all ſinns whatſoeuer, euen of the very ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt. We muſt not imagine it to be an inclination or proneneſſe to one or two faults, but a proneneſſe to all and euery ſinne that is practiſed in the world; and that in all perſons young and olde, high and low, male and female. It is a moſt horrible villany for a man to kill his father or mother, or his childe: yet ſome there be that doe ſo: at the hearing whereof we vſe to wonder, and to teſtifie our diſlike by ſaying, that the doers thereof were wicked and deuilliſh perſons, and it is truely ſaid. Neuertheleſſe we muſt vnderſtand, that although wee abſtaine from ſuch heinous practiſes, yet the very roote of ſuch ſinnes, that is, a diſpoſition vnto them, is found in vs alſo. Iulian the Apoſtata both liuing and dying blaſphemed Chriſt. Herod and Pontius Pilate and the wicked Iewes crucified him, & Iudas betrayed him. Men vſe to ſay that if Chriſt were now aliue, they would not doe ſo for al the world. But let vs better conſider of the matter. The ſame naturall corruption of heart that was in them, is alſo in vs, wee being the childrē of Adam as well as they: and by force of this corruption, if Chriſt were now liuing on earth, thou wouldſt if like occaſion were offered, either doe as Iudas did in betraying him, or as Pilate did, deliuer him to be crucified, or as the ſouldiers, thruſt him through with their ſpeares, or as Iulian, pierce him with al maner of blaſphemies, if God withheld his graces from thee, & leaue thee to thy ſelfe. In a word, let men conceiue in minde the moſt notorious treſpaſſe that can be, though they do it not, nor intēd to do it, & neuer do it: yet the matter, beginning, and ſeed thereof is in themſelues. This made Ieremie ſay, The heart of man is deceitful & wicked aboue all things, who can know it? It is like a huge ſea, the banks whereof cannot be ſeene, nor the bottome ſearched. In cōmon experience wee ſee it come to paſſe, that men, Proteſtans to day, to morrowe Papiſts, of Chriſtians, heretickes; nowe friendes, but preſently after foes; this day honeſt and ciuill men, the next day cruell murderers. Nowe what is the cauſe of this difference ſurely the hidden corruption of the heart, that will thruſt a man forward to any ſinne when occaſion is offered. This point muſt be remembred & often thought vpon. Ier. 17. 9.

Frō Original ſin ſpringeth actual, which is nothing els but the frute of the corrupt heart, either in thought, word, or deede.

Thus much touching mans fall into ſinne by Gods iuſt permiſſion. Nowe followes the good vſe which we muſt make thereof. Firſt by this we learne to acknowledge and bewaile our owne frailty. For Adam in his innocency beeing created perfectly righteous, whē he was once tēpted by the deuill fel away from God: what ſhal we doe then in the like caſe which are by nature ſolde vnder ſinne, and in our ſelues a thouſand times weaker then Adā was? Many men there be that mingle thēſelues withall companies, tell them of the danger thereof, they will preſently reply that they haue ſuch a ſtrong faith that no badde company can hurt them. But alas, ſilly people, Sathan bewitcheth them, and makes them to beleeue falshood to be trueth: they knowe not their miserable estate. If Adam, saith Bernard, had a downfall in Paradise, what shal we doe that are cast forth to the dunghil? Let vs therefore often come to a serious consideration of our owne weakenesse, and followe withall the practise of Dauid, who beeing priue to himselfe touching his owne corruptiõ, prayeth to God in this manner, Knit my heart to thee, O Lord, that I may feare thy name. Secondly, we learn hereby absolutely to submit our selues to the authority of God, and simply to resolue our selues, that whatsoeuer he commands is right & iust, though the reason of it be not knowne to vs. For Eue condescended to listen to the speech of the serpent, and without any calling shee reasoned with it of a most waighty matter, and that in the absence of Adam her head and husband, namely of the trueth and glory of God: and hereby was brought to doubt of Gods word, and so ouerturned. Thirdly, if all men by Adams fall be shutte vp vnder damnation, there is no cause why any of vs should stand vpon his birth, riches, wisdome, learning, or any other such gifts of God: there is nothing in vs that is more able to couer our vilenesse and nakednesse, then figtree leaues were able to couer the offence of Adam from Gods eies. We are vnder the wrath of God by nature, & cãnot attaine to euerlasting life of our selues. Wherfore it doth stand euery one of vs in hand to abase our selues vnder the mighty hand of God, in that we are become by our sinnes the very baseſt of all the creatures vpon earth, yea vtterly to dispaire in respect of our selues, and with bleeding hearts to bewaile our owne cases. There is no daunger in this: it is the very way to grace: none can be a liuely member of Christ till his conscience condemne him, & make him quite out of heart in respect of himselfe. And the want of this is the cause why so few perceiue any sweetnesse or comfort in the gospel: and why it is so little loued and embraced now a dayes. Lastly, if all mankinde be shutte vp vnder vnbeleefe, the duty of euery man is, to labour in vsing all good meanes wherby we may be deliuered from this bondage, and to pray to God with Dauid, Create in me a cleane heart, O God, and renewe a right spirit within me. And crie out with Paul, O wretched man that I am, who shall deliuer mee from this body of death? And wee must neuer be at rest till we haue some assurance in conscience that in Christ we haue freedome from this bondage, and can with the Colossians giue thankes that wee are deliuered from the power of darknesse, and translated into the kingdome of Christ. This should be the affection of euery man; becauſe the spirituall thraldome vnder sinne is of all miseries most loathsome and burdensome. And in this respect the day of death should be vnto vs most welcome, becauſe it doth vnlooſe vs from this miserable estate, in which wee doe almost nothing but displeaſe GOD. For this is the greatest griefe that can bee to such as are indeed the children of God, by their sinnes to offend their mercifull father. As for those which feele not the weight of their naturall guiltinesse & corruption, but lie slumbering in the security of their owne hearts, they are therefore the more miserable, in that beeing plunged in the gulfe of all misery, yet they feele no misery.

Col. 1. 13.

Thus much of the permission of the fall of man. Nowe we come to the Couenant of grace. Which it nothing elſe but a compact made betweene God and man touching reconciliation and life euerlasting by Christ. This couenant was first of all reuealed & deliuered to our first parents in the garden of Eden, immediatly after their fall by GOD himselfe, in these words, The seede of the woman shall bruiſe the serpents head, and afterward it was continued and renued with a part of Adams prosperity, as with Abraham, Isaac, Iacob Dauid, &c. but it was most fully reuealed and accomplished at the comming of Christ.

Gen. 3. 15.

In the Couenant I will consider two things; the parties reconciled betweene whom the couenant is made, & the foundation thereof. The parties are God and man. God is the principal, and he promiseth righteousnesse and life eternall in Christ: Man againe bindes himselfe by Gods grace to beleeue and to rest vpon the promise. Here it may be demaunded why man is more in the couenant then Angels. Anſ. The will of God in this point is not reuealed vnlesse it be becauſe angels fell of themselues, not moued by any other: but man did fall by them. Againe, it may be asked, whether all mankind were euer in the couenant or no? Anſ. Wee can not say that al and euery man hath beene and now is in the couenant, but onely that little

Heb.11.6. to all men] but to them that beleeue. Without faith no man can please God; & therfore God makes no couenant of reconciliation without faith. Againe since the beginning of the world there hath beene alwaies a distinction betweene man & man. This appeares in the very tenour of the words of the couenant made with our first parents, where God saith he wil put difference betweene the seede of the woman and the seed of the Serpent: meaning by the seed of the woman, Christ withall the elect, whome the Father hath giuen vnto him. who shal bruise the serpents head, & tread

And again, the Iewes a people of God in the couenant, the Gētiles no people. For Paul makes it a priuiledge of the Iewes to haue the adoption, and couenants; and the seruice of God, &

Rom.9.24 phet Ose, I will call them my people which were not my people: and her beloued which was not beloued, is alleadged by Paul to prooue the calling of the Gentiles. Some doe alleadge to the contrary, that when the Couenant was made with our first parents, it was also in them made with all mankinde, not one man excepted: & that the distinction and difference betweene man and man ariseth of their vnbeleefe and contēpt of the couenant afterward. Ans. Indeed in the estate of innocency, Adam by creation receiued grace for himselfe and his posterity: and in his fall he transgressed not onely for himselfe but for all his posterity: but in receiuing of the couenant of grace it cannot bee prooued that he receiued it for himselfe and for al mankinde: nay the distinction betweene the seede of the woman and the seede of the serpent, mentioned in the very first giuing of the couenāt, shewes the contrary; for if after the fall, all and euery part of mankind were receiued into the couenant: then all men without restraint should be the seede of the womā, bruising the serpents head, & the serpent should haue no seede at all. And againe, al men cannot be charged with vnbeleefe & contempt in respect of the Euangelicall couenant, but onely such persons as haue knowne it, or at the least heard of it. And therfore sundry heads of the nations may be charged with vnbeliefe, as Cain, Cham, Iaphet, Ammon, Moab, Ismael, Esau, Madian, for they beeing neere to the fathers heard the promises concerning Christ, offered sacrifices, & obserued externall rites of the Church, but afterward fell away frō the sincere worship of the true God to idolatry and all manner of wickednesse, & became enemies of God and his people. But wee plainely deny, that there was or could be the like vnbeleefe and contempt of Gods grace in their posterity, which for the most part neuer so much as heard of any couenant; their ancestours indeauouring alwaies to bury and extinguish the memory of that which they hated. It is obiected againe, that the Couenant was made with Abraham and with all mankind after him, Because (saith the Lord) thou hast obeyed my voice, in thy seede shall all Gen.18.18 the nations of the earth be blessed. Answer, Paul giues a double answer, first that the place must be vnderstood of many natiōs: secondly, that it must bee vnderstood not of all nations in all ages, but of all nations of the last age of the world. For saith he, The scripture foreseeing that God would Gal.3.8. iustifie the Gentiles through faith, preached before the Gospell vnto Abraham, saying, in thee shall all the nations bee blessed. Well, to conclude this point, in the making of the couenant there must, be a mutual consent of the parties on both sides, and beside the promise on Gods part, there must be also a restipulation on mans part; otherwise the couenant is not made. Nowe then, it must needes followe that al vnbeleeuers contemning grace offered in Christ are out of the Couenant, as also such as neuer heard of it; for where there is no knowledge, there is no consent; and before the comming of Christ, the greatest part of the world neuer knew the Messias, nor heard of the Couenant, as Paul saith to the learned Athenians, The time of this ignorance, God regarded not, but nowe he admonisheth all men euery where to repent. Act.17.30.

The foundation and ground worke of the couenant is Christ Iesus the Mediatour, in whom all the promises of God are yea and amen, and therefore hee is called the angell of the couenant, and the couenant of the people to be made with all nations in the last age. Malac.3.1. Esa.49.8. Nowe then that we may proceede at large to opē the substance of the Couenant, wee are in the next place to come to that part of the Creede which concernes the second person in Trinitie, set downe in these wordes. And in Iesus Christ his only sonne, &c. from which words to the very ende of the Creede, such points onely are laide downe as doe notably vnfold the benefits and the matter of the couenant. Nowe the second person is described to vs by three things; first his titles; secondly, his incarnatiō, thirdly, his two-fold estate. His titles are in number foure. I. Iesus. II. Christ. III. his onely sonne. IV. our Lord. His incarnation and his twofold estate are set downe afterward.

To come to his titles, the first is Iesus, to which if we adde the clause, I beleeue, on this manner, I beleeue in Iesus, &c. the article which we nowe haue in hand wil appeare to be most excellent; because it hath most notable promises annexed to it. Whē Peter confessed Christ to be the sonne of the liuing God, he answered, vpon this rock wil I build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not preuaile against it. Mat.16.18 And againe, Hee that confesseth that Christ is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him and he in God. 1.Ioh.4.15 And againe, To him giue all the prophets witnesse that through his name all that beleeue in him shall receiue remission of sinnes. Act.10.43 Paul saith, Beleeue in the Lord Iesus and thou shalt bee saued and all thy houshold. Act.16.31. Thus then the confession in which we acknowledge that we beleeue in Iesus Christ, hath a promise of fellowship with God and of life euerlasting. But it may be obiected, that euery spirit (as Saint Iohn saith) which confesseth that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God. 1.Ioh.4.2. Nowe the deuill and all his angels & vnbeleeuers doe thus much: therefore why may not they also haue the benefit of this confession? Ans. By spirit in that place is neither meant angels nor men, nor any creature, but the doctrine which teacheth that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh; & it is of God, because it is holy and diuine, & hath God to be the author of it. As for the deuill and his angels they can indeed confesse that Christ the sonne of GOD was made man, and a wicked man may teach the same; but vnto the confession whereunto is annexed a promise of eternall life, is required true faith, whereby we doe not onely knowe and acknowledge this or that to be true in Christ, but also rest vpon him: which neither Satan nor wicked men can doe. And therefore by this confession the Church of God is distinguished from all other companies of men in the worlde which beleeueth not; as Panyms, Hereticks, Atheists. Turkes, Iewes, and all other infidels.

This name Iesus, was giuen to the son of God by the Father, and brought from heauen by an angel vnto Ioseph and Marie; and on the day when he was to be circumcised as the maner was, this name was giuen vnto him by his parents, as they were commaunded from the Lord by the angel Gabriel. And therefore the name was not giuen by chance, or by the alone will of the Parents, but by the most wise appointment of God himselfe. Mat.1.22. Luk.1.31.

The name in hebrewe is Iehoscua, & it is chāged by the Grecians into Iesus which signifieth a Sauiour. And it may be called the proper name of Christ, signifying his office and both his natures, because he is both a perfect and absolute Sauiour, as also the alone Sauiour of man, because the worke of saluation is wholly and onely wrought by him, and noe part thereof is reserued to any creature in heauen or in earth. As Peter saith, For among men there is no other name giuen vnder heauen wherby we may be saued but by the name of Iesus. Act.4.12. And the author to the Hebrewes saith, That he is able perfectly to saue them that come vnto God by him, seeing he euer liueth to make intercession for them. Heb.7.25. If any shal obiect, that the promises of saluation are made to them which keepe the commandements dements: the anſwer is, that the law of god doth exact moſt abſolute and perfect obedience, which can be found in no man but in Chriſt, who neuer ſinned and therfore it is not giuen vnto vs now that wee might by our ſelues fulfil it, and worke out our owne ſaluatiō. but that being codēned by it, we might wholly depend on Chriſt for eternal life. If any further alleadge, that

1. Tim. 4. 8 ſuch as walke according to the commandements of God, though their obedience be imperfect, yet they haue the promiſes of this life and of the life to come. The anſwer is, that they haue ſo indeed, yet not for their workes, but according to their works which are the fruites of their faith, whereby they are ioyned to Chriſt, for whoſe merits onely they ſtand righteous, and are acceptable before God. And
1. Pet. 3. 21 whereas it is ſaid by Peter, that baptiſme ſaueth vs his meaning is not to ſignifie that there is any vertue in the water to waſh away our ſins and to ſanctifie vs, but that it ſerues viſibly to repreſent and confirme vnto vs the inward waſhing of our ſoules by the blood of Chriſt. It may further bee ſaid, that others haue beene Sauiours beſide Chriſt as Ioſuah the ſonne of Nun, who for that cauſe is called by the ſame name with Chriſt. Anſ. Ioſua after the Heb. 4. 8 death of Moſes was appointed by God to be a guide to the children of Iſrael, which might defend them from their enemies & bring them to the land of Canaan: but this deliuerance was onely temporall, and that onely of one people. Now the ſonne of God is called Ieſus, not becauſe he deliuereth the people of the Iewes onely, or becauſe he ſaueth the bodies of men onely, but becauſe he ſaueth both body and ſoule, not onely of the Iewes but alſo of the Gentiles, from hell, death, and damnation. And whereas prophets and miniſters of the worde are called Sauiours; it is becauſe they are the inſtruments of God to publiſh the doctrine of ſaluation which is powerfull in mens hearts, not by any vertue of theirs but only by the operati-Obed. v. 21 on of the ſpirit of Chriſt. Laſtly, it may
1. Tim. 4. 16. be obiected that the father and the holy Ghoſt are Sauiours, and therefore not onely the ſonne. Anſw. True it is, that in the worke of ſaluation all the three perſons muſt be ioyned togither, and in no wiſe to be ſeuered: the Father ſaueth, the Sonne ſaueth, the holy Ghoſt saueth: yet muſt we diſtinguiſh them in the manner of ſauing: the Father ſaueth by the Sonne; the Sonne ſaueth by paying the ranſome & price of our ſaluation; the holy Ghoſt ſaueth by a particular applying of the ranſome vnto men. Nowe therefore whereas the ſonne paies the price of our redemption and not the father or the Holy Ghoſt, therefore in this ſpeciall reſpect he is called in Scriptures and intituled by the name of Ieſus, and none but he.

By this which hath beene ſaid, the Papiſts are faultie two waies. Firſt, that they giue too much to the name of Ieſus: for they write in plaine tearmes, that the bare name it ſelfe beeing vſed hath great pow- Thymh. de demon thel. 567. 569.
er and doth driue away deuils, though the parties that vſe it be void of good affection: whereas indeed it hath noe more vertue then other titles of God or Chriſt. Secondly, they are faulty that they giue too little to the thinge ſignified. For Chriſt muſt either be our alone and whole Sauiour or no Sauiour. Now they make him but halfe a Sauiour, and they ioyne others with him as partners in the work of ſaluation, whē they teach, that with Chriſts merits muſt be ioyned our workes of grace in the matter of iuſtification: & with Chriſts ſatisfaction for the wrath of God, our ſatisfaction for the temporall puniſhment; and when they adde to Chriſts interceſſion, the interceſſion & patronage of Saints, Officium B. Mariæ reform. a pio. 5. Pontif.
eſpecially of the virgin Marie, whom they call the Queene of heauen, the mother of mercy, withall requeſting her, that by the authority of a mother ſhee would command her ſonne. If this doctrine of theirs may ſtand, Chriſt cannot be the only Sauiour of mankind, but euery man in part ſhall be Ieſus to himſelfe.

But let vs goe on yet further to ſearch the ſpeciall reaſon of the name, which is notably ſet down by the Angel. Thou ſhalt (ſaith he) call his name Ieſus, for he ſhall ſaue Mat. 1. 21. his people from their ſinnes. In which words we may conſider three points, I. Whome the ſonne of God ſhall ſaue. II. By what? III. From what? For the firſt, he ſhall ſaue his people, that is, the elect of the Iewes & Gentiles; and therefore hee is called the Sauiour of his bodie. We muſt not here imagine that Chriſt is a Sauiour of all and Eph. 5. 23.
euery man, for if that were true, then Chriſt ſhould make ſatisfaction to Gods iuſtice for all and euery mans ſinnes: and Gods iuſtice beeing fully ſatisfied hee could not in iuſtice condemne any man: nay, all men ſhould bee bleſſed becauſe ſatisſatisfaction for ſinne and the pardon of ſinne depend one vpon another inſeparably. Againe, if Chriſt be an effectuall Sauiour of all and euery particular man, why is any man condemned? It will be ſaid, becauſe they will not beleeue; belike then mans will muſt ouerrule Gods wil, whereas the common rule of diuines is, that the firſt cauſe ordereth the ſecond.

Actus primæ cauſæ ordinat actum ſecundæ cauſæ.

The meanes of ſaluation by Chriſt are two; his merit, and his efficacie. His merit, in that by his obedience to the lawe and by his paſſion, he made a ſatisfaction for our ſins freed vs, from death, and reconciled vs vnto God. Some may obiect, that the obedience and the paſſion of Chriſt being long agoe ended, can not be able to ſaue vs now: becauſe that which he did 1600. yeares agoe may ſeeme to be vaniſhed and come to nothing at this day. Anſ. If Chriſts obedience be conſidered as an action, and his paſſion as a bare ſuffering, they are both ended long agoe: yet the value and price of them before God is euerlaſting: as in Adams fall the action of eating the forbidden fruite is ended, but the guilt of his tranſgreſſion goes al ouer mākinde, & continues ſtil euen to this houre, and ſhall doe to the end of the worlde in thoſe which ſhall be borne hereafter. The efficacie of Chriſt is, in that he giues his ſpirit to mortifie the corruption of our natures, that we may die vnto ſinne and liue to righteouſneſſe, and haue true comfort in terrous of conſcience and in the pangs of death.

The euils from which we are ſaued are our owne ſinnes, in that Chriſt freeth vs from the guilte and the puniſhment and fault of them all, when we beleeue.

Thus much for the meaning of this title Ieſus. Now followe the vſes which ariſe of it. Firſt of all, whereas we are taught to make confeſſion that the ſonne of God is Ieſus, that is, a Sauiour; hence it muſt needs followe that we are loſt in our ſelues. And indeed before we can truely ackowledge that Chriſt is our Sauiour, this confeſſion muſt needes goe before, that we are in truth, and therewithall doe feele our ſelues to be miſerable ſinners vnder the wrath of God, vtterly loſt in regard of our ſelues: for Chriſt came to ſaue that which was loſt. And when he talked with the woman of Canaan, he checked her and ſaid, he was not ſent, but to the loſt ſheepe of the houſe of Iſrael. Chriſt Ieſus came, to poure oile into our woundes: Chriſt came to ſet them at libertie which are in priſon: and to place them in freedome that are in bondage. Now a man cannot poure oile into a wound before there be a wound, or before it be opened and we feele the ſmart of it. And how can we be ſet at libertie by Chriſt, except we feele our ſelues to be in bondage, vnder hell, death, and damnation? When the Diſciples of Chriſt were vpon the ſea in a great tempeſt, they cried, Maſter, ſaue vs, we periſh. So no man can heartily ſay, I beleeue Ieſus Chriſt to be my Sauiour, before he feele, that in himſelfe he is vtterly loſt and caſt away without his helpe. But after that wee perceiue our ſelues to be in danger and to be ouerwhelmed in the ſea of the wrath of God, then we crie out with the Diſciples, Lord Ieſus ſaue vs, we periſh. Many proteſtants in theſe daies holde Chriſt to bee their Sauiour, but it is onely formally frō the teeth ourward and no further: for they were neuer touched with the ſenſe of their ſpirituall miſerie that they might ſay with Daniel, Shame and confuſion belongeth vnto vs: and with the Publicane, I am a ſinner, Lord be merciſull to me. And therefore the concluſiō is this, that if we wil haue Chriſt to bee our Sauiour, wee muſt firſt beleeue that in our ſelues we are vtterly loſt; and ſo muſt that place bee vnderſtood where Chriſt ſaith, he is not ſent, but to the loſt ſheepe of the houſe of Iſrael; that is, to thoſe which in their owne ſenſe and feeling are loſt in themſelues.

Math. 8. 25.

Secondly, if Chriſt be a Sauiour, then we muſt ackowledge him to be ſo. But howe ſhall we doe this? I anſwer, Thus, A man is taken to bee a skilfull Phiſition by this, that many patients come vnto him and ſeeke for helpe at his hands. And ſo ſhould it be with Chriſt. But alas, the caſe is otherwiſe. Euery mā can talke of Chriſt, but fewe acknowledge him to be a Sauiour, by ſeeking to him for their ſaluation, becauſe they iudge themſelues righteous, and feele not themſelues to ſtand in neede of the helpe of Chriſt. Nay which is more, If a man be knowne that can cure ſtrange diſeaſes, men will ſeeke to him by ſea and land, and ſell both goods and lands to get helpe at his hands. Euen ſo, if men were perſwaded that Chriſt were a perfect Sauiour, and that they were ſicke and vtterly vnable to be ſaued without him, they would neuer reſt nor be in quiet but ſeeke vnto him for his helpe, and crie with Dauid, O Lord, ſay vnto my ſoule that thou art

my

my ſaluation. The woman that was diſeaſed with an iſſue of bloode, came behind our Sauiour Chriſt, and when ſhee had but touched him, ſhee was healed. In the ſame manner, if we ſhall ſeeke to come to Chriſt, and doe but touch his pretious bodie and blood by the hand of faith, the iſſues & the bleeding wounds of our ſoules ſhall be dried vp. When a man that had beene ſicke eight and thirtie yeares was come to the poole of Bethesda, he was fain to lie there vncured; becauſe whē the angel troubled the water euermore ſome ſtept before him: but if we will ſeeke to Chriſt for the ſaluation of our ſoules, no man ſhal preuent vs or ſteppe before vs. And if wee find our ſelues to be ſo ladē with the burden of our ſinnes that we cannot drawe neere vnto him, let vs then doe as the palſie man did: he got foure men to carrie him on their ſhoulders to the place where Chriſt was: and when they could not by reaſon of the preſſe of the people enter into the houſe, they opened the roofe and let him down in his bed by cords to Chriſt that he might be healed. And ſo let vs vſe the helpe of ſuch as be godly, that by their inſtructions and conſolations they may as it were put to their ſhoulders, and by their praiers as with cordes bring vs to Chriſt, that we way receiue eternal ſaluation, being otherwiſe dead in ſinne and ſubiect to damnation.

Mark. 2. 4.

Laſtly, whereas Ioſeph and Marie gaue this name not at their owne pleaſure, but at the appointment of God himſelfe; this miniſters a good inſtruction to al parentes touching the naming of their children whē they are baptized, that they are with care and deliberation to giue conuenient names vnto them, which may put them in mind of duties either to God or men. This is worthy of our obſeruation, for many care not how they name their childrē, yea it is at this day and euer hath beene, that ſome giue ſuch names to them, as that at the very rehearſing thereof laughter enſueth. But this ought not to be ſo; for the name is giuen vnto children at the time of their baptiſme in the preſence of God, of his Church, and angels, euen then when they are to be entred into the Church of God, and that in the name of the Father, the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt: therefore though we doe not place religion in titles or names, yet neuertheleſſe, a wiſe & godly choice in this matter is to be had, that the names impoſed may be in ſtead of inſtructions and admonitions to the parties named: and for this cauſe in the olde teſtament names are giuen either by propheticall inſtinct, or according to the euent of things which came to paſſe about the time of the birth of children, or they were borrowed from the holy anceſtors, to put the poſterity in mind to follow their ſteps.

Luk. 1. 5. 9.

And thus much of the duties: Nowe follow the conſolations that Gods church and people reape from this, that the ſonne of God is our Sauiour. When as all mankinde was included vnder ſinne and condemnation, then the Lord had mercie vpon vs, and gaue vnto man the couenant of grace in which he promiſed that his own ſonne ſhould be our redeemer. This is a great and vnſpeakable comfort, as may appeare in that the angels ſo greatly reioyced herein when Chriſt was borne, Behold ſay they, I bring you tidings of great ioy that ſhall be to all the people, that is, that vnto you is borne in the cittie of Dauid a Sauiour which is Chriſt the Lord. Now if they reioyce thus exceedingly at Chriſts birth, who was not their Sauiour, becauſe they ſtood not in neede to be redeemed: then much more ought the Church of God to reioyce herein whome it doth principally concerne: & no maruel, for if we had wanted this bleſſed Sauiour, it had bin better to haue bin a bruit beaſt or any other creature then a man: for the death of a beaſt is the end of his woe, but the death of a mā without a Sauiour is the beginning of endleſſe miſerie. Satan and his angels are fallen and haue no Sauiour, but when man was fallen, God of his mercie dealt not ſo with him, but gaue his owne ſonne to reſtore him to a better eſtate, whereas hee might as iuſtly haue damned all men for the fall of our firſt parents, as hee did the wicked angels for theirs; for God is not boūd to any creature: behold thē a matter of vnſpeakeable ioy: let vs therefore receiue and embrace Chriſt our Sauiour, flie to him for the pardon of all ſinnes, and praiſe his name therefore.

Luk. 2. 10. 11.

Now we come to the ſecond title of the ſon of God, whereby he is tearmed Chriſt: which title is as it were the ſurname of the ſecond perſon as ſome doe thinke: yet according to the opinion of ſome others it is no name at al, but onely a meere appellation, as when in the like caſe a particular man is called a Duke or a King. It is al one with Meſſiah in hebrew wherwith the redeemer was named in the old Teſtament, Terml. contra Praeam.

Among the Iewes before the comming of Chriſt: three eſtates or orders of men were annoynted with oyle: Firſt of all Kings, as Saul, Dauid, and the reſt of the kings of Iuda. Secondly, the prieſts that ſerued in the Tabernacle and temple before the Lord when they were ordained, and as it were, inſtalled into the prieſthood, were annointed with oyle, as firſt of all Aaron and his ſonnes, but afterward the high prieſts alone. Thirdly prophets were thus annointed, as Eliſha.

Now this legall annointing was a type and figure of the annointing of Chriſt: which was not with bodily oile, but by the ſpirit, and it was more excellent then al other annointings were. For Dauid ſaith, he Pſal. 45.7. was annointed with the oyle of gladneſſe aboue al his fellowes, ſignifiing, that neither king, prieſt, nor prophet, was euer annointed in the ſame manner as he was.

Chriſts annointing is according to both his natures; for in what nature he is a Mediatour, in the ſame he is annointed: but according to both his natures ioyntly he is a Mediatour: the Godhead is no mediatour without the manhood, nor the manhood without the Godhead: & therefore his annointing extendes it ſelfe both to his Godhead and to his manhood.

Chriſts annointing hath two parts, both of them figured by the annointing of the Iewes. The firſt is his conſecration whereby he was ſet apart to doe the office of a Mediatour betweene God and man: and therefore to be a king, a prieſt, a prophet: a king to gather and withall to gouerne his Church and people: a prieſt, to make ſatisfaction and interceſſion for the ſinnes of the elect: a prophet, to reueale & teach his people the will of God his father. And though it be true that Chriſt is ſet apart to the worke of mediation as he is mediatour or as he is man: yet as he is God he doth deſigne and ſet himſelfe apart to the ſame worke. For to deſigne the mediatour is a common action of the three perſons, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt; & yet conſidering the father is firſt in order, and therefore hath the beginning of the action: for this cauſe he is ſaid eſpecially to deſigne, as when S. Iohn ſaith, Him hath
Ioh. 6. 27. God, the father ſealed.

The ſecond part of Chriſts annointing is the powring out of the fullneſſe of the Iſa. 61. 1. ſpirit or grace into the manhood of Chriſt: and it was particularly figured by the holie oile. For firſt, that oyle had no man but God alone to be the author of it: ſo the moſt excellent and vnſpeakable graces of the manhood of Chriſt haue their beginning from the Godhead of Chriſt. Againe, though the ſame oile was Exod. 30. moſt pretious, yet was it compounded of earthly ſubſtances, as mirrhe, calamus, and Caſia, & ſuch like; to ſignifie, that the ſpirituall oile of grace wherof the manhood of Chriſt was as it were a veſſell or ſtore-houſe, did not conſiſt of the eſſentiall properties of the godhead, as Eutiches & his followers in theſe daies imagine, but in certaine created gifts and qualities placed in his humane nature: otherwiſe we ſhould not haue any participatiō of them. Thirdly, the ſweete ſauour of the holy oile figured, that the riches of al grace with the effect thereof in the obedience of Chriſt, doth take away the noyſome ſent of our loathſome ſinne; from the noſtrils of god, and withall doth make our perſons and all our actions acceptable vnto him as a ſweete perfume, as Paul ſaith we are vnto 2. Cor. 2. 16 God the ſweete ſauour of Chriſt, &c. And Chriſts death is for this cauſe tearmed a ſacrifice of ſweete ſmelling ſauour.

And we muſt further vnderſtand that theſe gifts of Chriſts manhood are not cōferred in a ſmall ſcantling or meaſure; for Iohn ſaith, God giueth the ſpirit not by Ioh. 3. 34. meaſure; becauſe the graces which are in Chriſt are farre more both in number and degree, then all men or angels haue or ſhal haue: though the good angels and the Saints of God in heauen are very excellent creatures ſtored with manifold graces and gifts of God. For this cauſe Chriſt is called the head of man; becauſe he is euery way the moſt principall and glorious man that euer was. Yet for all this are not the gifts of Chriſts manhood infinite any way; becauſe it is a creature and finite in nature, and therefore not capable of that which is infinite. 1. Cor. 4. 1.

By Chriſts annointing the people of God reape great benefit and comfort, becauſe they are to be partakers thereof. For this cauſe the oyle wherewith he was annointed is called the oyle of gladneſſe be- Pſal. 45. 7. cauſe the ſweete ſauour of it gladdeth the harts of all his members, and brings the peace of God which paſſeth all vnderſtāding. The holy oile poured vpon Aarons Pſal. 133. 2 head cāe down to his beard, & to the very skirts of his garments: and it ſignified that the ſpirituall oyle of grace was firſt of all poured vpon our head Christ Iesus, and from thence consequently deriued to all his members, that by this means he might be not onely annointed himselfe, but also our annointer.

Now the benefits which we receiue by his annointing are two. The first is, that al the elect when they are called to the profession of the Gospell of Christ, are in and by him set apart and made spirituall kings, priests, and prophets, as S. Iohn saith, Hee hath made vs kings and priests vnto his father. And S. Peter out of Ioel, I will powre (saith the Lord) my spirit vpon all flesh, and your sonnes and daughters shall prophesie, Apoc. 1.6.

Act. 2.7.

The second benefit is, that all the faithfull receiue the same oile, that is, the same spirit of God in some little and conuenient measure which he receiued aboue measure, as Saint Iohn saith, The annointing which ye receiued of him dwelleth in you and teacheth you all things: where by annointing is meant the holy Ghost. And hence it is, that men are called Christians of the name of Christ, that is, annointed with the same oyle wherewith Christ was annointed. And the holy oyle might not be giuen to a straunger, to signifie, that to haue the spirit of Christ, and to bee guided by it, is peculiar to them that are Christs. Nowe then let vs al lay these things to our hearts and extoll the vnspeakeable goodnesse of God that hath aduanced vs to the dignitie of kings, priests, prophets, before him, and hath giuen his spirit vnto vs to inable vs to be so indeed.

1. Ioh. 2. 27. Psal. 105. 25.

Exod. 30. 33.

Nowe followe the duties which are to bee learned hence. And first, whereas all Christians receiue annointing from the holy one Christ Iesus, to become prophets in a sort, wee must doe our indeauours, that the worde of God may dwell plentifully in vs, and for that cause wee must search the scriptures, euen as hunters seeke for the game, and as men seeke for gold in the very mines of the earth. There is nothing more vnbeseeming a man, then grosse ignorance a Christian. Therefore the author of the epistle to the Hebrewes reproues them, that whereas for the time they ought to haue bin teachers, they had neede againe to be taught the first principles of the word of God.

1. Ioh. 2. 20. Dan. 9. 24. Ioh. 5. 39 τὰς γραφάς. Heb. 4. 12.

Againe, that portion of knowledge which wee haue receiued of God, is further to be applied to the benefit and good of others: this is that most pretious baulme that on our parts should neuer be wanting to the heads of men. And here euery man that is set ouer others must remember within the compasse of his calling and charge to instruct those that be vnder him so farre forth as possibly he can. Gouernours of families must teach their children and seruants & their whole household the doctrine of true religion, that they may knowe the true God and walke in all his waies in doing righteousnesse and iudgement. If housholders would make conscience of this their dutie, and in some sort and measure prepare their families against they come to the publike congregation, the ministers of the gospell with greater comfort and farre more ease should performe their dutie: and see farre more fruite of their ministerie then nowe they doe. But whereas they neglect their dutie, falsly perswading themselues that it doth not belong to them at all to instruct others; it is the cause of ignorance both in townes and families, in masters themselues, in seruants and children and all. Lastly, by this wee are admonished to take all occasions that possibly can bee offered, mutually to edifie each other in knowledge, saying among our selues (as it was foretolde of these times) Come let vs goe vp to the mountaine of the Lord to the house of the God of Iacob, and he will teach vs his waies, and wee will walke in his paths: & withal, we should confirm each others, as Christ saith to Peter, When thou art conuerted confirme thy brethren; and be readie at all times to rēder an account of our faith and religion euen before our enemies, whē we are iustly called so to doe.

Luk. 22. 32.

Secondly, because wee are set apart in Christ, to become Spirituall priests vnto God, we must therefore offer spirituall sacrifices acceptable vnto him: and they be in number seauen. The first is an affiance whereby wee rest vpon God, as Dauid saith, Offer the sacrifice of righteousnesse and trust in the Lord. The second is wholly to subiect our selues to the ministerie of the Gospell, that we may be changed and cōuerted by it, as Paul saith, That he ministereth the gospell to the Gentiles, that the offering vp of them might bee acceptable, beeing sanctified by the holy Ghost. The third is, all manner of praiers and supplications made vnto God, Let my praier, saith Dauid, be directed in thy sight as incense, and the lifting vp of my hands as an euening sacrifice. The fourth is prasing and thanksgiuing vnto God. Let vs by him offer the sacrifice of praise alwaies to God, that is, the fruit of the lips which confesse his name. And in the reuelation the golden vials full of odours are the prayers of the Saints. The fift is the releife of our poore brethren according to our ability, as Paul saith, I was euen filled after that I had receiued of Epaphroditus that which came from you, an odour that smelleth sweete, a sacrifice pleasant and acceptable to God. The sixth is the deniall of our selues with a contrite and broken heart. The seauenth is, to resigne our selues, bodies & soules wholly to the seruice of god: Set your selues (saith Paul) to God, as they that are aliue from the dead: and your members as weapons of righteousnesse vnto God. In which wordes he alludes to the manner of the old testamēt: when a man offered any sacrifice for himselfe, he brought the beast into the temple or tabernacle and set it before the altar, in token that he did resigne it vnto God: and so we for our parts must not giue our bodies and soules to become the instruments of sinne and Satan, but we must haue them alwaies in readinesse, freely presenting them vnto God that he may haue the whole dispositiō of them according to his good pleasure, to the honour and glory of his name. Againe in the whole burnt offering all was consumed & turned to smoake, no man hauing benefit of it, to signifie, that wee must giue our selues not in part but wholly to the seruice of God, euen to death if neede be. If this be so, miserable is the practise of such that giue vp their bodies and soules to liue in licentious wantonnesse, in the pleasures of their beastly sinnes, in idlenesse. For they offer themselues a sacrifice, not to God, but to the deuill.

Rom. 5. 8. Phil. 4. 18. Psal. 51. 19. Rom. 6. 13.

Thirdly, considering we are annointed to be spirituall kings euen in this life, wee must walke worthy so great a calling. That this may be so first of all such as are gouernours set ouer others, must rule not according to their wills and pleasures, but in the Lord: withall, doing homage to their head and king Christ Iesus himselfe. Secondly, we must euery one of vs rule & beare sway euen as kings ouer our owne thoughts, wils, affections ouer-mastering them as much as we possibly can by Gods word and spirit: withall, maintaining and proclaiming continuall warre against our corrupt natures, the deuill, and the world. And truely hee which can beare rule ouer his owne heart, is a right king indeed: and hauing receiued some measure of grace to raigne ouer himselfe in this life, he shall raigne for euer with Christ in the life to come. As for such as are carried away with the swing of their corruptiōs, hauing blindnes and ignorance to raigne in their mindes, rebellion in their wils and affections, loosenesse in their whole liues, they may carrie the outward forme and shewe of Christians as long as they will, but indeede they are no spiritual kings but very bondmen: the strong man Sathan keepes as yet the hold of their hearts, and as Lord and king holds vp his scepter there.

Lastly, seeing Christ is annointed with the most pretious baulme that euer was, & that for our sakes, he must be sweet and sauourie vnto vs, and all other things must be as vnsauoury drosse & dung in regard of him. We must in this case indeauour to say as the spouse of Christ doth: Because of the sauour of the good ointments, thy name is an ointment poured out: therefore the virgins loue thee. O that we could sauour in the feare of God, that we might feele how all his garments smell of mirrhe, aloes, and cassia, comming forth of his iuory pallaces vnto vs.

Cant. 1. 3. Isai. 11. 3. Psal. 45. 8.

And becaus̄e the holy ointment of Christ is poured forth vpon all his members to make them sauourie and sweete in the presence of God, let vs make conscience of al manner of sin, least by the poisō and stinke thereof we infect not only our selues, but all the creatures of God which we vse, yea heauen & earth it selfe. It stāds not with equitie that after we haue bene embaulmed and sweetned by the pretious merits of Christ that wee should make our selues two-footed swine, to returne to the mire of our old sinnes.

The coupling and combining of these two former titles togither, containes the principall question of the whole Bible which is, whether Iesus the sonne of Marie be Christ or no; as S. Iohn saith, These things are written, that ye might beleeue that Iesus is the Christ the sonne of God, and that in beleeuing ye might haue life euerlasting. This conclusiō was denied by the Iewes, but auouched & cōfirmed both by Christ and by his Apostles: and their principall argumēt was framed thus. He which hath the true notes of Christ is the Messias or Christ indeed: but Iesus the sonne of Marie hath the true notes of Christ: therfore Iesus is Christ. The proposition is opened at large in the prophesies of the olde testament: the assumption is confirmed in the writings of the newe testament: and the the principall reasons of the confirmation are couched in the articles which coeerne the second person. The conclusion followes, and is set downe as I haue said, in the knitting togither of the titles, Iesus and Christ.

Thus much of the second title, nowe followes the third, his onely Sonne; that is, the onely sonne of the first person the father. In this title we must consider two things: the first, that he is the sonne of god: the second, that he is the onely sonne of God. Touching the first, Christ is called the sonne of God because he was begotten of the father. Now for the opening of this eternall generation, we must consider three pointes: the thing begotten, the manner of begetting, & the time. For the thing it selfe, it is Christ; who must be considered two waies, as he is a sonne, and as he is God. As he is a sonne, he is not of himselfe but the sonne of the father begotten of him: neuertheless as he is God, he is of himselfe, neither begottē nor proceeding; for the essence or godhead of the father is of it selfe without all beginning; but the godhead of the sonne is one and the same with the godhead of the father: because by what Godhead the father is God, by the same and no other the sonne is God: therfore the sonne, as he is God, he is God of himselfe without beginning euen as the father. Whereupon it follows, that the son is begotten of the father as he is a sonne, but not as he is God.

Non αὐτόθεος tamē ἀυτοθεος.

The manner of this generation is this. The sonne is begotten of the substance of the father not by any fluxe, as when water is deriued from the head of the spring to the chanell: nor by decision, as whē a thing is cut in peeces: nor by propagation, as whē a graft is transplanted into a new stocke: but by an vnspeakable communication of the whole essence or Godhead from the father to the sonne; in receuing whereof the sonne doth no more diminish the maiestie or godhead of the father, then the light of one candle doth the light of the other from which it is taken, Whereupon the Councill of Nicene hath said wel that the sonne is of the father as light of light not proceeding but begotten.

The time of this generation hath neither beginning middle or ende: & therfore it is eternall before all worlds: & it is a thing to be wōdered at, that the father begetting, & the sonne begotten are coeternall, and therefore equal in time. Wisdom in the Prouerbes (which with one consent of all diuines is said to be Christ) affirmeth that she was before the world was created, that is, from eternitie: for before the world was made there was nothing but eternitie. But it may be alleaged to the contrarie, that the saing of the father, This day haue I begotten thee, is expounded by Paul of the time of Christs resurrection. Ans. We must distinguish betwene generation it selfe, and the manifestation of it: and of the second must the place be vnderstood, which was indeed accomplished at the time of Christs resurrection in which hee was mightily declared to be the sonne of God, and though this be so, yet the generation it selfe may be eternall. If any man alleadge further that the person which begetteth must needs goe before the person begottē the answere is, that there is a double priority; one of order the other of time: now in the generation of creatures there is prioritie both of order and time; but in the generation of the second person in trinity, there is prioritie of order alone: the father beeing first the sonne second, without prioritie of time: because they both in that respect are equall, and neither is before or after other: because the beeing or subsisting of the persons is not measured by time.

Psal. 2. 7.
Act. 13. 30. 33.
Rom. 1. 4.

Hence it followeth necessarily that Iesus Christ is true God: and the whole tenour of the Scriptures confirme it sufficiently: I. He is made equall to GOD the Father, who beeing in the forme of GOD thought it no robbery to be equall with GOD: againe, All things that the father hath are mine. The children of Israel are said to haue tempted Iehouah: & Paul saith, that he whome they tempted was Christ. Iehouah founded the earth, and the same is said of Christ. II. Christ the sonne of God is by name called God; Iesus Christ is very God and life eternall. III. The properties of the godhead are ascribed vnto him. He is eternall because he was then when there was no creature, In the beginning was the Word; and before Abraham was I am. He is omnipresent, where two or three are gathered togither in my name, there am I in the middest amongest them. Lastly, he is omnipotent, Whatsoeuer things the Father doeth, the same doth the sonne also. IV. The workes of creation and preseruation are as well ascribed to the sonne as the father. By him the father made the worlde, and he beareth vp all things by his mighty power: and miracles, which are workes either about or against the order of nature peculiar to God, were done by Christ. V. Diuine worship is giuen to him: for he is adored, inuocated, and beleeued in, as god the father. To him is giuen a name at which Phil. 2. 10. euery knee doth bowe, of things in heauen, and things in earth, and things vnder the earth.

As for the reasons which be alleadged to the contrarie, they are of no moment. I. Obiect. The word of God cannot be God; the sonne is the word of the father: therefore he is not God, Ans. The word is taken two waies: first for a sounding word, standing of letters and syllables vttered eyther by God or by the creatures: now on this maner Christ is not the word of God. Secondly, there is a substantial word, which is of the substance of him whose word it is. And thus Christ is the word of God the father. And he is so termed, I. in respect of the father: for as reason and speech hath his beginning from the minde, without any passion in the mind, so hath he beginning from the father. And as the speech is in the mind and the mind in the speech, so the father is in the sonne, & the sonne in the father. II. In respect of all creatures. The father doth all things by the sonne: by whose powerfull word the world was made, is now preserued, and shall be abolished. III. In respect of the Church. For the father by him speakes vnto vs both in the outward ministery of the word, and by the inward operation of the spirit: and againe we by him speake to the father.

II. It may be obiected thus, God hath no beginning from any other, Christ hath beginning from the father: therefore he is not God. Answ. Christ must be considered both in regard of his Godhead, and in regard of his person: in regard of his Godhead he came not of any but is of himselfe, as well as the father is: yet in regard of his person he is from the father, who is a beginning to the rest of the persons, both in respect of order (for the scripture saith not the holy Ghost, the Sonne, the Father: but the Father, the sonne, the holy Ghost) as also in respect of the communication of the Godhead. And whereas it is said that God is of himselfe, if the name of God be taken for the Godhead it selfe absolutely considered, it is true: but if it be taken for any particular person in the Godhead, it is false. III. Obiect. None is greater then God: but the father is greater then Christ, for so he saith, The father is greater then I. Answ.

Christ there speakes of himselfe as he was a man abased in the forme of a seruant: in which respect he is lesse then the father, who was neuer incarnate & abased in our nature. And though Christ in respect of his nature assumed to be inferiour to the father, yet doth it not hinder but that he may be equall to him, as he is the second person in trinitie, or as he is God by one and the same godhead with the Father. IV. Obiect. He that is made of God, this or that, is not God: but Christ is made of God, as Paul saith, Christ is made vnto vs wisedome, righteousnesse, &c. Ans. Christ is said to be made, not because there was any beginning of his godhead, or any change or alteration in his person: but because in the eternall counsell of the father, he was set apart before all times to execute the office of a Mediatour, & was withall in time called, and as it were consecrated and ordained thereunto in his baptisme: he is made therefore in respect of his office, but not in respect of his person, or nature. V. Ob. God hath no head, Christ hath an head, as Paul saith, God is Christs head. Ans. God, that is, the father, is head of Christ, not as he is God simply, but as he is god incarnate, or made manifest in the flesh, and in respect of the office to which he willingly abased himselfe. VI. Obiect. He which giues vp his kingdome is not God. Christ giues vp his kingdome. Then, saith Paul, shall be the ende, when he hath deliuered vp his kingdome to God euen the Father. Ans. Christ is king two wayes, as he is God, and as he is Mediatour: as he is God, he raignes eternally with the father and the holy ghost: but as he is Mediatour, in the end of the world when all the company of the elect, are gathered, his kingdome shall cease not simply but in respect of the outward maner of administration: for the execution of ciuill and Ecclesiasticall functions shall cease. And whereas in the same place, it is said that Christ shall be subiect vnto God eternally after the end, it must be vnderstood partly in regard of the assumed mahood, partly in respect of his mysticall bodye the Church most neerely ioyned vnto him in heauen. VII. Obiect. The first borne of euery creature, and of many brethren, is a creature and not God: but Christ is the first borne of euery creature, and of many brethren. Answ. He is called the first borne by resemblance or allusion to the first borne in the old testament: for as they were principall heires hauing double ble portions allowed them; and the chiefe or gouernours of the familie: ſo Chriſt is made heire of the world, and the head of Gods familie which is his Church elected and adopted in him. And againe he is called the firſt borne of euery creature, becauſe he was begotten of the ſubſtance of his father before any creature was made, and therfore it is not here ſaid that he was firſt created, but firſt begotten.

By the reaſons which haue bin alleadged, as alſo by the inſufficiencie of the contrarie arguments, it is more then manifeſt againſt all heretikes that Chriſt is very God. Yet to ſtoppe the mouths of all Atheiſts, and to ſatisfie al wauering & doubting minds, I will adde one reaſon further. The Goſpell of S. Iohn was chiefly penned for this ende, to prooue the Deitie of Chriſt: and among other arguments alleadged, this is one, that Chriſt gaue a reſolute and a conſtant teſtimonie of himſelfe, that he was the ſonne of God, and very God. Now if any man ſhall ſay, that ſundrie perſons ſince the beginning of the word haue taken vpon them and that falſly, to bee Gods: I anſwer, that neuer any creature tooke this title and honour vpon him to be called God, but the fearefull iudgements of God were vpon him for it. In the eſtate of mans innocencie the deuill told our firſt parents that by eating the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and euill, they ſhould be as Gods knowing good and euill: now, they beleeued him, and affected diuine honour: but what came of it? ſurely Adam with all his poſteritie is ſhut vp for this very cauſe vnder eternall damnation. Herod likewiſe araied in royal apparel, and ſitting on the iudgement ſeat, made an oration to the men of Tyre, and Sidon, who gaue a ſhout, ſaying, The voyce of God, and not of man. Nowe becauſe hee tooke the glorie of God to himſelfe, and did not returne it to him to whome it was due, immediatly the angell of the Lord ſmote him. And to, if Chriſt had bin but a meere man, and not very God, as hee auouched, vndoubtedly the hand of God would haue been vpon him likewiſe for his confuſion: but when hee ſuffered for vs, and bare the puniſhment due for our ſinnes, he muſt triuphed. And the iudgements of God were vpon Herod, Pontius Pilate, Caiphas, & vpon all thoſe that were enemies to him, & to his Church afterward, and that partly in life and partly in death. Wherefore conſidering God can not abide that his glorie ſhould bee giuen to any creature, & ſeeing for that cauſe he takes reuenge on al thoſe that exalt themſelues to be gods, it remaines that the teſtimonie which Chriſt gaue of himſelfe that he was God, is vnfallibly true and without all queſtion to be beleeued of vs. And to conclude. I would haue all the deuills in hel with the curſed order of Lucians, Porphyrians, and Atheiſts what ſoeuer to anſwer this one point, howe it could come to paſſe, that Chriſt by publiſhing the doctrine of the Goſpel, that is as contrarie to mans reaſon, will, and affection, as water to fire, ſhould winne almoſt the whole world to become his diſciples, and to giue their liues for him, vnleſſe he were God in deede, as he profeſſed himſelfe to be?

There be ſundrie ſpecial reaſons wherefore it was neceſſarie that Chriſt ſhould be God. I. There is none which can be a Sauiour of bodie and ſoule but God. I euen I am the Lord, and beſides me there is no Sauiour. Iſa. 43. 11. And, I am the Lord the God from the land of Egypt, and thou ſhalt knowe no God but me: for there is no Sauiour beſide me. Oſe. 13. 4. II. There muſt bee a proportion betweene the ſinne of man and the puniſhment of ſinne: now the ſinne of man in reſpect of the offence of the maieſtie of God is infinite, in that he is infinitely diſpleaſed with man for the breach of his law: therefore the puniſhment of ſinne muſt be infinite: and hence it followeth, that he which ſuffereth the puniſhment beeing man, muſt withall be God, that the manhood by the power of the Godhead may be ſupported, that in ſuffering it may vanquiſh death, and make a ſufficient ſatisfaction. III. He that muſt bee a Sauiour, muſt bee able firſt to deliuer men from the bondage of their ſpirituall enemie, namely ſinne and Satan: ſecondly to reſtore the image of God loſt by the fall of Adam, and to conferre righteouſneſſe and life euerlaſting: thirdly, to defend them from hel, death, damnatō the fleſh the deuil, the world: fourthly, to giue them full redemption from all their miſeries both in bodie and ſoule, and to place them in eternal happines: al which none can doe, but he which is very God. IV. It was the pleaſure of God, to ſhewe his incomprehenſible goodnes in this, that his grace ſhould not onely be equal to our ſinne, but alſo by many degrees go beyond it. And therefore the firſt Adam being but a meere man, the ſecond Adam muſt be both God and man: that as the ſecond was more excellent then the firſt, ſo our comfort might bee greater in our power: and miracles, which are workes either there about or againſt the order of nature peculiar to God, were done by Chriſt. V. Diuine worſhip is giuen to him: for he is adored, inuocated, and beleeued in, as god the father. To him is giuen a name at which euery knee doth bowe, of things in heauen, and things in earth, and things vnder the earth. Phil. 2, 10.

As for the reaſons which be alleadged to the contrarie, they are of no moment. I. Obiect. The word of God cannot be God; the ſonne is the word of the father: therefore he is not God, Anſ. The word is taken two waies: firſt for a ſounding word, ſtading of letters and ſyllables vttered eyther by God or by the creatures: now on this maner Chriſt is not the word of God. Secōdly, there is a ſubſtantial word, which is of the ſubſtance of him whoſe word it is. And thus Chriſt is the word of God the father. And he is ſo tearmed, I. in reſpect of the father: for as reaſon and ſpeech hath his beginning from the minde, without any paſſion in the mind, ſo hath he beginning from the father. And as the ſpeech is in the mind and the mind in the ſpeech, ſo the father is in the ſonne, & the ſonne in the father. II. In reſpect of all creatures. The father doth althings by the ſonne: by whoſe powerfull word the world was made, is now preſerued, and ſhall be abolished. III. In reſpect of the Church. For the father by him ſpeakes vnto vs both in the outward miniſtery of the word, and by the inward operation of the ſpirit: and againe we by him ſpeake to the father. Ioh. 1. 1. Heb. 1. 3. Ioh. 1. 25. 2. Cor. 13. 3. Ioh. 17.

II. It may be obiected thus, God hath no beginning from any other; Chriſt hath beginning from the father: therefore he is not God. Anſ. Chriſt muſt be conſidered both in regard of his Godhead, and in regard of his perſon: in regard of his Godhead he came not of any but is of himſelfe, as well as the father is: yet in regard of his perſon he is from the father, who is a beginning to the reſt of the perſons, both in reſpect of order (for the ſcripture ſaith not; the holy Ghoſt, the Sonne, the Father: but the Father, the ſonne, the holy Ghoſt) as alſo in reſpect of the communication of the Godhead. And whereas it is ſaid that God is of himſelfe, if the name of God be taken for the Godhead it ſelfe abſolutely conſidered, it is true: but if it be taken for any particular perſon in the Godhead, it is falſe. III. Obiect. None is greater the God: but the father is greater then Chriſt, for ſo he ſaith, The father is greater then I. Anſw. Chriſt there ſpeakes of himſelfe as he was a man abaſed in the forme of a ſeruant: in which reſpect he is leſſe then the father, who was neuer incarnate & abaſed in our nature. And though Chriſt in reſpect of his nature aſſumed to be inferiour to the father, yet doth it not hinder but that he may be equall to him, as he is the ſecond perſon in trinitie, or as he is God by one and the ſame godhead with the Father. IV. Obiect. He that is made of God, this or that, is not God: but Chriſt is made of God, as Paul ſaith, Chriſt is made vnto vs wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, &c. Anſ. Chriſt is ſaid to be made, not becauſe there was any beginning of his godhead, or any change or alteration in his perſon: but becauſe in the eternall counſell of the father, he was ſet apart before all times to execute the office of a Mediatour, & was withall in time called, and as it were conſecrated and ordained thereunto in his baptiſme: he is made therefore in reſpect of his office, but not in reſpect of his perſon, or nature. V. Ob. God hath no head, Chriſt hath an head, as Paul ſaith, God is Chriſts head. Anſ. God, that is, the father, is head of Chriſt, not as he is God ſimply, but as he is god incarnate, or made manifeſt in the fleſh, and in reſpect of the office to which he willingly abaſed himſelfe. VI. Obiect. He which giues vp his kingdome is not God, Chriſt giues vp his kingdome. Then, ſaith Paul, ſhall be the ende, when he hath deliuered vp his kingdome to God euen the Father. Anſ. Chriſt is king two wayes, as he is God, and as he is Mediatour: as he is God, he raignes eternally with the father and the holy ghoſt: but as he is Mediatour, in the end of the world when all the company of the elect, are gathered, his kingdome ſhall ceaſe not ſimply but in reſpect of the outward maner of adminiſtration: for the execution of ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall functions ſhall ceaſe. And whereas in the ſame place, it is ſaid that Chriſt ſhall be ſubiect vnto God eternally after the end, it muſt be vnderſtood partly in regard of the aſſumed māhood, partly in reſpect of his myſticall bodye the Church moſt neerely ioyned vnto him in heauen. VII. Obiect. The firſt borne of euery creature, and of many brethren, is a creature and not God: but Chriſt is the firſt borne of euery creature, and of many brethren. Anſw. He is called the firſt borne by reſemblance or alluſion to the firſt borne in the old teſtament: for as they were principall heires hauing double Ioh. 14. 1. ble portions allowed them; and the chiefe or gouernours of the familie: so Christ is made heire of the world, and the head of Gods familie which is his Church elected and adopted in him. And againe hee is called the first borne of euery creature, because he was begotten of the substance of his father before any creature was made, and therfore it is not here said that he was first created, but first begotten.

By the reasons which haue bin alleadged, as also by the insufficiencie of the contrarie arguments, it is more then manifest against all heretikes that Christ is very God. Yet to stoppe the mouths of all Atheists, and to satisfie al wauering & doubting minds, I will adde one reason further. The Gospell of S. Iohn was chiefly penned for this ende, to proove the Deitie of Christ: and among other arguments alleadged, this is one, that Christ gaue a resolute and a constant testimonie of himselfe, that he was the sonne of God, and very God. Now if any man shall say, that sundrie persons since the beginning of the word haue taken vpon them and that falsly, to bee Gods: I answer, that neuer any creature tooke this title and honour vpon him to be called God, but the fearefull iudgements of God were vpon him for it. In the estate of mans innocencie the deuill told our first parents that by eating the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and euill, they should be as Gods knowing good and euill: now, they beleeued him, and affected diuine honour: but what came of it? surely Adam with all his posteritie is shut vp for this very cause vnder eternall damnation. Herod likewise araied in royal apparel, and sitting on the iudgement seat, made an oration to the men of Tyre, and Sidon, who gaue a shout, saying, The voyce of God, and not of man. Nowe because hee tooke the glorie of God to himselfe, and did not returne it to him to whome it was due, immediatly the angell of the Lord smote him. And so, if Christ had bin but a meere man, and not very God, as hee auouched, vndoubtedly the hand of God would haue been vpon him likewise for his confusion: but when hee suffered for vs, and bare the punishment due for our sinnes, he must triuphed. And the iudgements of God were vpon Herod, Pontius Pilate, Caiphas, & vpon all those that were enemies to him, & to his Church afterward, and that partly in life and partly in death. Wherefore considering God can not abide that his glorie should bee giuen to any creature: & seeing for that cause he takes reuenge on al those that exalt themselues to be gods, it remaines that the testimonie which Christ gaue of himselfe that he was God, is vnfallibly true and without all question to be beleeued of vs. And to conclude: I would haue all the deuils in hel with the curfed order of Lucians, Porphyrians, and Atheists what soeuer to answer this one point, howe it could come to passe, that Christ by publishing the doctrine of the Gospel, that is as contrarie to mans reason, will, and affection, as water to fire, should winne almost the whole world to become his disciples, and to giue their liues for him, vnlesse he were God in deede, as he professed himselfe to be?

There be sundrie special reasons wherefore it was necessarie that Christ should be God. I. There is none which can be a Sauiour of bodie and soule but God. I euen I am the Lord, and beside me there is no Sauiour. Isa. 43. 11. And, I am the Lord the God from the land of Egypt, and thou shalt knowe no God but me: for there is no Sauiour beside me. Ose. 13. 4. II. There must bee a proportion betweene the sinne of man and the punishment of sinne: now the sinne of man in respect of the offence of the maiestie of God is infinite, in that he is infinitely displeased with man for the breach of his law: therefore the punishment of sinne must be infinitie: and hence it followeth, that he which suffereth the punishment being man, must withall be God, that the manhood by the power of the Godhead may be supported, that in suffering it may vanquish death, and make a sufficient satisfaction. III. He that must bee a Sauiour, must bee able first to deliuer men from the bondage of their spirituall enemie, namely sinne and Satan: secondly to restore the image of God lost by the fall of Adam, and to conferre righteousnesse and life euerlasting: thirdly, to defend them from hel, death, damnation, the flesh, the deuil, the world: fourthly, to giue them full redemption from all their miseries both in bodie and soule, and to place them in eternal happines: al which none can doe, but he which is very God. IV. It was the pleasure of God, to shewe his incomprehensible goodnes in this, that his grace should not onely be equal to our sinne, but also by many degrees go beyond it. And therefore the first Adam being but a meere man, the second Adam must be both God and man: that as the second was more excellent then the first, so our comfort might bee greater in our redemption by the second, then our miserie and discomfort was by the fall of the first.

Hitherto we haue shewed that Christ is the sonne of God: now let vs come to the second point, namely that hee is the onely Sonne of God. And he is so tearmed because hee is the sonne of the father, in a speciall manner, so as nothing can be the sonne of Iob 1. God as he is. Angels indeede are tearmed the sonnes of God, but that is onely in respect of their creation: and al that beleeue in Christ are sonnes of God by adoption, beeing receiued into the familie of God which is his church by the merit of Christ, whereas by nature they were the children of warth. Christ also as he is man (I say not his manhood which is a nature and no person) is the sonne of God by the grace of personall vnion, and not by nature or adoption. Lastly Christ as he is the second person in trinitie, the eternall word of the father, coeternall and consubstantiall with him, is also the sonne of God. But howe? neither by creation, nor adoption, nor by the vertue of personall vnion, but by nature; as hee was begotten of the very substance of the father before all worlds: and Ioh.1.18. Rom.8.32 therefore hee is called the proper and onely begotten sonne of God. It may be obiected on this manner. If the father beget the sonne, he doth it either willingly or against his will: if willingly, then the sonne is begotten by the free wil of the father, and no sonne by nature. Ans. The father did communicate to the sonne his whole godhead willingly without constraint, yet not by his will; and therefore hee is the sonne of the father by nature, not by will. It may be further saide, that if Christ be the son of God by nature, as hee is the essentiall word of the father, and by personall vnion as he is man, then is he not one but two sonnes. Ans. As he is but one person, so is he but one sonne: yet not in one but in two respects: two respects make not two things, whereas one and the same thing not altered but stil remaining one may admit sundrie respects.

Thus much of the meaning of the third title: now follow the comforts which may be gathered hence. Whereas Christ Iesus is the sonne of God, it serues as meanes to make miserable and wretched sinners that are by nature the children of wrath and damnation, to be the sonnes of God by adoption: as S. Iohn testifieth. Nowe what a benefit is this to bee the childe of God, no tongue can expresse. Christ saith, Ioh. 1.12.
Blessed are the peacemakers: but why are Math.5.9.
they blessed? for, saith he, they shall bee called the sonnes of God. Whereby he testifieth that the right of adoption is a most excellent priuiledge; and not without cause. For he which is the childe of God, is spiritually allied to Christ, and to all the Saints and seruants of God both in heauen and earth, hauing his own redeemer for his elder brother, and all his members as his brethren and sisters; yea if we be Gods adopted children, wee are also heires, euen heires of God, and heires annexed with Rom.8.17.
Christ. Well, how great soeuer this prerogatiue is, yet few there be that rightly way it and consider of it. Children of noble men and Princes heires are had in accoũt and reputation of all men, they are the very speech and wonder of the world. But it is a matter of no account to bee the sonne of God and fellow-heire with Christ. The deerest seruants of God haue beene esteemed but as the offscouring of the world. And no maruaile, for they which are after the flesh, sauour the things of the flesh. Fewe men haue their vnderstandings inlightened to discerne of such spirituall things as these are, and therefore are they little or nothing regarded. A blind man neuer seeing the sunne, is not brought to wonder at it: and earthly minded men neither seeing nor feeling what an excellent thing it is to be the child of God, can not be brought to seeke after it. But let all such as feare God enter into a serious consideration of the vnspeakeable goodnesse of God, comforting themselues in this, that God the father hath vouchsafed by his owne sonne to make them of the vassals of Satan, to be his owne deere children.

Now follow the duties which are two. First, wee beleeue that Iesus Christ who was to bee the Sauiour of mankind, must needes be God: what is the reason hereof? surely because no creature, no not all the creatures in heauen and earth were able to saue on man: so vile, wretched, and miserable is our estate by Adams fall. And therefore the sonne of God himselfe pitied our estate, and beeing king of heauen and earth, was faine to come from heauen, and lay downe his crowne and become a seruant, and taking vpon him our nature, was also faine to take vpon him our case and condition, and suffer death for our sinnes, which otherwise euery one of vs should haue suffered both in bodie and ſoule world without ende. To make this more plaine, let vs ſuppoſe that ſome one hath cõmitted an offence againſt a prince; and the treſpaſſe to be ſo grieuous that no man can appeaſe the kings wrath, ſaue onely the kings onely ſonne; and which is more, the kings ſonne himſelfe cannot releaſe him, vnleſſe he ſuffer the puniſhment for him in his owne perſon, which is due vnto the malefactour. Now what is to be thought of this mans eſtate? ſurely al men will ſay that hee is in a moſt miſerable taking, and that his treſpaſſe is notorious: and ſo it is with euery one of vs by nature, whatſoeuer wee are. No man could ſaue our ſoules, no not all the angels in heauen, vnleſſe the king of heauen and earth the onely ſonne of God had come downe frõ heauen and ſuffered for vs, bearing our puniſhment. Nowe the conſideration of this muſt humble vs and make vs to caſt downe our ſelues vnder the hand of God for our ſinnes, and pray continually that the Lord would ſende ſome Moſes or other which might ſmite the rockes of our hearts, that ſome teares of ſorrow and repentance might guſh out for this our wofull miſerie.

Secondly, whereas God the father of Chriſt gaue his onely ſonne to be our Sauiour, as we muſt be thankfull to God for all things, ſo eſpecially for this great and vnſpeakable benefit. Common bleſſings of God, as meate, drinke, health, wealth, and libertie, muſt at all times mooue vs to be thankfull; but this, that Chriſt Ieſus the onely ſonne of God, redeemed vs beeing vtterly loſt, this I ſay, muſt bee the maine point of all our thankfulneſſe: but alas, mens hearts are ſo frozen in the dregges of their ſinnes, that this dutie comes little in practiſe now adaies. When our Sauiour Chriſt clenſed tenne lepers, there was but one of them that returned to giue him thanks: and this is as true in the leproſie of the ſoule, for though ſaluation by Chriſt be offered vnto vs dayly by Gods miniſters, yet not one of ten, nay ſcarſe one of a thouſand giues praiſe & thanks to God for it, becauſe mẽ take no delight in things which concerne the kingdome of heauen, they thinke not that they haue neede of ſaluation, neither doe they feele any want of a Sauiour. But wee for our parts muſt learne to ſay with Dauid, What ſhall I render vnto the Lord for all his benefits? yea we are to practiſe that which Salomon ſaith, My ſonne giue me thine heart: for we ſhould giue vnto God both bodie and ſoule in token of our thankfulnes for this wonderful bleſſing that he hath giuen his only ſonne to be our Sauiour; and we are to hold this for truth, that they which are not thankefull for it, let them ſay what they will, they haue no ſoundnes of grace or power of religion at the heart.

Pſal. 116. 12. Prou. 23. 26.

And thus much of the third title. The fourth and laſt title is in theſe words, our Lord. Chriſt Ieſus the onely ſonne of God is our Lord three waies: firſt by creation, in that he made vs of nothing, when we were not: ſecondly hee is our Lord in the right of redemption. In former times the cuſtome hath beene when one is taken priſoner in the fielde, hee that paies his ranſome ſhall become alwaies after his Lord: ſo Chriſt when we were bondſlaues vnder hell, death, and condemnation, paied the ranſome of our redemption, and freed vs from the bondage of ſinne and Satan, and therefore in that reſpect he is our Lord. Thirdly, he is the head of the Church (as the husband is the wiues head) to rule and gouerne the ſame by his word and ſpirit. And therefore in that reſpect alſo Chriſt is our Lord.

And thus much for the meaning. Now follow the duties. And firſt of all, if Chriſt bee our Soueraigne Lord, wee muſt performe abſolute obedience vnto him, that is, whatſoeuer he commands vs, that muſt we doe. And I ſay, abſolute obedience, becauſe Magiſtrates, Maſters, Rulers, and fathers may command, and muſt be obeyed, yet not ſimply, but ſo farre forth as that which they command doth agree with the word and commandement of God; but Chriſts will and word is righteouſneſſe it ſelfe, and therefore it is a rule and direction of all our actions whatſoeuer: and for this cauſe hee muſt be abſolutely obeyed. Thus he requires the obedience of the morall law: but why? becauſe he is the Lord our God. And in Malachie hee ſaith, If I bee your Lord, where is my feare? And againe, wee muſt reſigne both bodie and ſoule, heart, minde, will, affections, and the courſe of our whole liues to be ruled by the will of Chriſt. He is Lord not onely of the bodie, but of the ſpirit and ſoule of man: he muſt therefore haue homage of both. As we adore him by the knee of the bodie, ſo muſt the thoughts and the affections of our hearts haue their knees alſo to worſhip him, and to ſhewe their ſubiection to his commandements. As for

for such as doe hold him for their Lord in word, but in the meane season wil not indeauour to shew their loyaltie in all manner of obedience, they are indeede no better then starke rebels: Secondly, when by the hand of Christ straunge iudgments shall come to passe, as it is vsuall in all places continually; we must stay our selues without murmuring or finding fault, because he is an absolute Lord ouer all his creatures; all things are in his hands, and he may doe with his owne whatsoeuer he will; and therefore we must rather feare and tremble whensoeuer we see or heare of them: so Dauid saith, I was dumbe and opened not my mouth, because thou diddest it. Psl.119. 120. And againe, My flesh trembleth for feare of thee, and I am afraid of thy iudgements. Thirdly, before we vse any of Gods creatures or ordinances, we must sanctifie them by the direction of his word and by prayer: the reason is this, because he is Lord ouer all, and therefore from his word we must fetch direction to teach vs whether we may vse them or not, & when and how they are to be vsed: & secondly we must pray to him that he would giue vs libertie and grace to vse them aright in holy manner. Also we are so to vse the creatures and ordinances of God, as being alwaies readie to giue an account of our doings at the day of iudgement: for wee vse that which is the Lords, not our owne; wee are but stewards ouer them, and we must come to a reckoning for the stewardship. Hast thou learning? then imploy it to the glorie of God, and the good of the Church: boast not of it as though it were thine owne. Hast thou any other gift or blessing of God, be it wisdome, strength, riches, honour, fauour, or whatsoeuer? then looke thou vse it so, as thou maist be alwaies ready to make a good account thereof vnto Christ. Lastly, euery one must in such manner lead his life in this world, that at the day of death he may with cheerefullnes surrender and giue vp his soule into the hands of his Lord, and say with Steuen, Lord Iesus receiue my soule. Act.7. For consider this with thy selfe, that thy soule is none of thine owne, but his who hath bought it with a price, and therefore thou must so order and keepe it as that thou maist in good manner restore it into the hands of God at the ende of thy life. If a man should borrow a thing of his neighbour, & afterward hurt it and make a spoile of it, hee would bee ashamed to bring it againe to the owner in that manner, and if he doe, the owner himselfe will not receiue it. Vngodly men in this life doe so staine their soules with sinne, that they can neuer be able willingly to giue them vp into the hands of God at the day of death: and if they would, yet God accepts them not, but casts them quite away. We must therefore labour so to liue in the world, that with a ioyful heart at the day of death we may commend our soules into the hands of our Lord Christ Iesus, who gaue them vnto vs. This is a hard thing to be done, and he that will doe it truly, must first bee assured of the pardon of his owne sinnes, which a man can neuer haue without true and vnfained faith and repentance: wherfore while we haue time, let vs purge and clense our soules and bodies, that they may come home againe to God in good plight.

1.Cor 10. 26.

And here all gouernours must bee put in mind that they haue an higher Lord, that they may not oppresse or deale hardly with their inferiours. This is Pauls reason, Ye masters, saith he, doe the same things vnto your seruants, putting away threatning: and know that euen your master is also in heauen, neither is there respect of persons with him. Eph.6.9. Inferiours againe must remember to submit themselues to the authoritie of their gouernours, especially of magistrats. For they are set ouer vs by our soueraigne Lord and king Christ Iesus: as Paul saith, Let euery soule be subiect to the higher powers. For there is no power but of God, and the powers that be ordained are of God. Rom.13.1. Eph.6.5. And againe, Seruants be obedient to your masters according to the flesh, with feare and trembling, in singlenes of your hearts, as vnto Christ.

The comfort which Gods Church may reape hence, is very great: for if Christ bee the Lord of lords, and our Lord especially whom he hath created and redeemed, we neede not to feare what the deuill or wicked men can doe vnto vs. If Christ be on our side, who can be against vs? we neede not feare them that can destroy the bodie and doe no more: but we must cast our feare on him that is Lord of body & soule, and can cast both to hell. Math.10. 28.

Thus much of the forth title. Now follows Christs incarnatiō, in these words, Conceiued by the holy Ghost, borne of the virgin Marie. And they containe in thē one of the most principall poins of the doctrine of godlinesse as Paul saith, Without controuersie great is the mystery of godlinesse, 1.Tim.3. 16. which which is, God is made manifeſt in the fleſh, iuſtified in the ſpirit, &c. And that wee may proceede in order, in handling them, I will firſt ſpeake of the Incarnation generally, and then after come to the parts thereof. In generall wee are to propound fiue queſtions, the anſwering whereof will be very needefull to the better vnderſtanding of the doctrine following.

The firſt queſtion is, Who was incarnate, or, made man? Anſ. The ſecond perſon in Trinitie, the ſonne of God alone, as it is ſet down in this firſt article according to the Scripture. S. Iohn ſaith, The Word
Ioh. 1. 14. was made fleſh: and the Angel ſaith, The holy one which ſhall be borne of thee, ſhal be called
Luk. 1. 35. the ſonne of the moſt high. And Paul ſaith, That Chriſt Ieſus our Lord was made
Rom. 1. 3. of the ſeede of Abraham according to the fleſh. And there bee ſundrie reaſons, why the ſecond perſon ſhould rather be incarnate then any other. I. By whom the father created all things, and man eſpecially; by him man beeing fallen is to be redeemed, and as I may ſay recreated: now man was at the firſt created of the father by the ſon: and therefore to bee redeemed by him. II. It was moſt conuenient, that he which is the eſſentiall imagè of the father, ſhould take mans nature that he might reſtore the
Heb. 1. 3. Coloſ. 1. 15. image of God loſt and defaced in man, but the ſecond perſon is the eſſentiall image of the father, and therefore he alone muſt take mans nature. III. It was requiſite that that perſon which was by nature the ſonne of God, ſhould be made the ſonne of mā, that we which are the ſonnes of men, yea the ſonnes of wrath, ſhould againe by grace bee made the ſonnes of God: now the ſecond perſon alone is the ſonne of God by nature, not the Father, nor the holy Ghoſt.

As for the Father, hee could not be incarnate. For to take fleſh is to be ſent of an other, but the Father can not be ſent of any perſon, becauſe hee is from none. Againe, if the Father were incarnate, hee ſhould be father to him which is by nature God, and the ſonne of a creature, namely the virgine Marie, which things can not well ſtand.

And the holy Ghoſt could not be incarnate: for then there ſhould bee more ſonnes then one in the Trinitie, namely the ſecond perſon the ſonne of the father, and the third perſon the holy Ghoſt, the ſonne of the virgin Marie.

It may be obiected to the contrarie on this manner: The whole diuine eſſence is incarnate, euery perſon in Trinitie is the whole diuine eſſence therefore euery perſon is incarnate. Anſ. The whole Godhead indeede is incarnate, yet not as it is abſolutely conſidered, but ſo farre forth as it is reſtrained and limited to the perſon of the ſonne; and to ſpeake properly, the Godhead it ſelfe is not incarnate, but the very perſon of the ſonne ſubſiſting in the godhead. And though all the perſons be one and the ſame eſſence, yet doe they really differ each from other in regard of the peculiar manner of ſubſiſting: and therefore mans nature may bee aſſumed of the ſecond perſon, and be not aſſumed either of the Father or of the holy Ghoſt; as in the like caſe the ſoule of man is wholly in the head & wholly in the feete, yea wholly in euery part: and yet the ſoule can not bee ſaid to vſe reaſon in the feete or in any other part, but onely in the head.

Againe it may be alleadged, that the incarnation beeing an outward action of God to the creature, is not proper to the ſonne. For the rule is, that al outward actions of God are common to al the perſons in Trinitie equally. Anſwer. [a] The incarnation ſtands of two actions, the firſt is the framing and creating of that manhoode which was to be aſſumed by the Sonne, or Word of the Father: and this action is common to all the three perſons equally: the ſecond is the limiting or the receiuing of it into the vnitie of any perſon, and in reſpect of this action, the worke of incarnation is peculiar to the Sonne. To this purpoſe Auguſtine ſpeaketh, That creature (ſaith he) which the Virgin conceiued & brought forth, though it appertaine to the perſon of the ſonne alone, yet was it made by the whole Trinitie: as when three men weaue one and the ſame garment, and the ſecond onely weares it.

Aug. in Ench. ad Laur. c. 38.

The ſecond queſtion is, What manner of man the ſonne of God was made? Anſw. He was made a proper or particular man, and a perfect or a very man. I ſay that he was a particular mā, to ſhew that he tooke not vnto him the generall forme or idea of mans nature conceiued onely in minde, nor the common nature of man as it is exiſting in euery man: but the whole nature of man, that is, both a bodie and a reaſonable ſoule, exiſting in one [b] particular ſubiect. I ſay further that he was and is a true and perfect man, beeing in euery thing that concernes mans nature like to Adam, Abraham, [b] In vno individuo.

Abraham, Dauid, and all other men, saue ing onely in sinne. For first of all hee had the substance of a true bodie and of a reasonable soule: secondly, the properties of bodie and soule: in the bodie length, breadth, thicknesse, circumscription, &c. in the soule, the faculties of vnderstanding both simple and compound: will, affections, as loue, hatred, desire, ioy, feare, &c. the powers also of hearing, feeling, seeing, smelling, tasting, mooving, growing, eating, digesting, sleeping, &c. Thirdly, hee tooke vnto him the infirmities of mās nature, which are certaine naturall defects or passions in bodie or minde, as to be hungrie, thirstie, wearie, sadde and sorrowfull, b ignorant of some things, angrie, to increase in stature, and wisdome, and knowledge, &c. yet this which I say must be vnderstood with two caueats. The first is, that infirmities be either certain vnblameable passions, or else such defects as are sinnes in themselues: now Christ takes the first onely, and not the second. Secondly, infirmities be either general, or personall; generall, which appertaine to the whole nature of man, and are to be found in euery man that comes of Adā: as to be borne vnlearned, and subiect to naturall affections, as sorrow, anger, &c. Personall, are such as appertain to some particular men, and not to all, and arise of some priuate causes and particular iudgements of God, as to be born a foole, to be sick of an ague, consumption, dropsie, plurisie, & such like diseases. Now the first sort bee in Christ, & not the second: for as hee tooke not the person of any man, but only mans nature, so was it sufficient for him to take vnto him the infirmities of mans nature, though he tooke not the priuate infirmities of any mans person. And the reason why Christ would put on not onely the substance and faculties of a true man, but also his infirmities, was; that hee might shew himselfe to be very man indeed, also that he might suffer for vs both in bodie and soule, and that he might giue vs an example of patience in bearing al manner of euil for Gods glorie and the good of our neighbour.

b Ignorātia meræ privationis non præsupp. dispositionis.

Now the things which may be alleadged to the contrarie for the infringing of the truth of Christs manhood, are of no moment. As first, because Christ appeared in the forme of a man in the old testament, beeing no man: therefore he did so at his comming in the new testament: but the reason is not like. For Christ in the old testament as the angel of his father in some speciall affaires, tooke vnto him the bodie of a man for some space of time: but hee did not receiue it into the vnitie of his person, but laid it downe when the businesse which hee enterprised with men was ended. Now in the fulnesse of time he came from heauen, as the angel of the couenant, and for that cause he was to vnite into his owne person the nature of man, which thing was neuer done before. And when as Paul saith, that Christ came in the similitude of sinnefull flesh, his meaning is not to signifie, that he was a man onely in resemblance and shew; but to testifie, that beeing a true man which was indeede void of sinne, he was content to abase himselfe to that condition in which he became like to a miserable sinner in bearing the punishment for our sinne. For Paul doth not say that hee tooke vpon him the similitude of flesh simply as it is flesh, but of the flesh of sinne or sinnefull flesh.

Gen. 18, 19 & 33.

Rom. 8, 3.

The third question is, why the sonne of God must become man? Ans. There be sundrie reasons of this point, and the most principall are these. First of all it is a thing that greatly stands with the iustice of God, that in that nature in which God was offended, in the same should a satisfaction be made to God for sinne: now sinne was committed in mans nature: Adam sinned first and in him all his posteritie: therefore it was necessarie that in mans nature there should bee a satisfaction made to Gods iustice, and for this cause the sonne of God must needes abase himselfe and become man for our sakes. Secondly, by the right of creation euery man is bound in conscience to fulfill euen the very rigour and extremitie of the morall lawe. But considering man is now fallen from his first estate and condition, therefore it was requisite that the Sonne of God should become man, that in mans nature hee might fulfill all righteousnes which the law doth exact at our hands. Thirdly, hee that is our redeemer must die for our sinnes; for there is no remissiō of sinnes without shedding of blood: but Christ as hee is God cannot die. For no passion can befall the Godhead. Therefore it was needefull that he should become man, that in mans nature he might die and fully satisfie Gods iustice for mans offence. Lastly he that must make reconciliation betweene God and man, must be such an one as may make request or speake both to God and man.

For

For a Mediatour is as it were a middle perſon making interceſſion between two other perſons, the one offended the other offending. Therefore it is neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould not onely be God, to ſpeake vnto the father for vs and to preſent our prayers vnto him; but alſo man, that God might ſpeake to vs, and we to GOD by Chriſt. For howſoeuer before the fall, man could ſpeake to God euen face to face, yet ſince the fall, ſuch feare poſſeſſeth mans corrupt nature, that he can not abide the preſence of God, but flyeth from it.

Now whereas I ſay, that it was neceſſarie that the Sonne of God for the cauſes before alleadged muſt become man; the neceſſity muſt be vnderſtood in reſpect of Gods will, and not in reſpect of his abſolute power. For if it had ſo pleaſed God he was able to haue laid down an other kind of way of mans redemption, then by the incarnation of the ſonne of God: and he appointed no other way, becauſe he wold not.

Auguſt de Agone Chriſt.

Thus much of the Incarnation in generall. Now follow the dutes which ariſe of it. And firſt we are taught hereby to come to Chriſt by faith, and withall our hearts to cleaue vnto him. Great is the deadneſſe and ſluggiſhneſſe of mans nature: for skarſe one of a thouſand care for him, or ſeeke vnto him for righteouſneſſe & life euerlaſting. But we ſhould excite our ſelues euery way to draw neare to him as much as poſſible we may: for when he was incarnate, he came neare vnto vs by taking our nature vpon him, that we again whatſoeuer we are, might come neare vnto him by taking vnto vs his Diuine nature. Againe, when Chriſt was incarnate, he was made bone of our bone, and fleſh of our fleſh; and therefore proportionally wee muſt labour to become bone of his bone, and fleſh of his fleſh: which we ſhall be, when we are myſtically vnited vnto him by faith, and borne anewe by his ſpirit. Moreouer Chriſt by his incarnation came downe from Heauen to vs, that we beeing partakers of his grace might aſcende vp to Heauen by him. And thus we ſee how the meditation of Chriſts incarnation ſhould be a ſpurre to pricke vs forward ſtill more and more to come to Chriſt.

Secondly, Chriſts incarnation muſt be a patterne vnto vs of a moſt wonderfull and ſtrange humility. For as paul ſaith, Phil. 2.6.7. Being in the forme of God and thinking it no robbery to be equall with GOD, made himſelfe of no reputation: and tooke on him the forme of a ſeruant: and humbled himſelfe and became obedient to death, euen to the death of the croſſe. Yea ſo farre forth hee abaſed himſelfe, that (as Dauid ſaith) he was a worme and no man. Pſal. 22. And this teacheth vs to lay aſide all ſelfe-loue & pride of heart, and to practiſe the duties of humility, as the Apoſtle exhorts the Philippians in the ſame place, and that ſhall we doe when we beginne to caſt off that high opinion which euery man by nature conceiueth of himſelfe and become vile and baſe in our owne eyes. Secure & drowſie Proteſtants thinke themſelues bleſſed, and ſay in their hearts as the angel of the church of Laodicea ſaid, I am rich and increaſed with goods and haue neede of nothing; whereas indeede they are moſt miſerable and wretched, & poore, and naked, and blind. Rev. 3.17. And the ſame fond opiniō poſſeſſeth the mindes of our ignorant people, who chant it in the very ſame tune, ſaying, that God loues them, and that they loue God with all their hearts, & their neighbours as themſelues; that they haue perfect faith in Chriſt and euer had, not once ſo much as doubting of their ſaluation; that all is well with them, and that they are paſt all daunger whatſoeuer, in the matter of their ſaluation, and therefore neede not take ſo much care for it. Thus ye may ſee how men are commonly carried away with vaine and fond conceits of their owne excellency. And truely ſo long as this ouerweening of our owne righteouſneſſe raignes in our hearts, let preachers ſpeake and ſay what they will, we can neuer become followers of Chriſt in the practiſe of humility. Some will ſay peraduenture, that they neuer had any ſuch opinion of their own righteouſnes; but I anſwere againe, that their was neuer yet any man deſcending of Adam, ſaue Chriſt, but he had this proud phantaſie ruling & raigning in him, til ſuch time as God gaue grace to change and alter his heart: and this inward pride the leſſe wee diſcerne it, the more it is, and the more we diſcerne it the leſſe it is. Therefore though as yet thou ſee it not in thy ſelfe, yet labour both to ſee and to feele it, and to ſtriue againſt it, caſting downe thy ſelfe for thy owne miſery after Chriſts owne example, who beeing God abaſed himſelfe to the condition of a miſerable man. For thou ſhalt neuer be filled with the good things of God, till thou be emptied of ſelfe-loue and selfe-liking. For this cause let vs purge and empty our selues of all conceit of our owne righteousnesse that God may fil our hearts with his grace.

Furthermore, the incarnation of Christ is the ground and foundation of all our comfort, as the names of Christ seruing to expresse the same doe testifie. Iaakob in his last Testamēt saith, that the scepter shal not depart from Iudah till Shilo, that is, the Messias come. Now the name Shilo signifieth the tunicle or skinne that lappeth the infant in the mothers wombe, called by the Physitians the secundine: & by a kind of figure it is put for the son of God in the wombe of the Virgin, made man. And Iob to comfort himselfe in his affliction saith, I know that my redeemer liueth. Nowe the word which he vseth to signifie his redeemer by, is very emphatical, for it signifieth a kinsman neere allied vnto him of his owne flesh that will restore him to life. And the Lord by the Prophet Esai calleth Christ Immanuel, that is, God with vs: which name importeth very much, namely, that whereas by nature wee haue lost our fellowship with GOD, because our sinnes are a wall of partition seuering vs from him: yet neuertheless the same is restored to all that beleeue by the Mediatour Christ Iesus: because his diuine nature is coupled to mans nature, and so the word is made flesh. And this strait coniunction of two natures into one person, ioynes God to men, and men to God: yea by Christ we are brought to God and haue free accesse vnto him, and againe in him we apprehend God and are made one with him.

And further whereas Christ beside our nature tooke our infirmities also, it is a wonderfull comfort to Gods church: for it shewes, that hee is not onely a Sauiour, but also a very compassionate and pitiful Sauiour. As the holy Ghost saith, In all things it became Christ to bee like vnto his brethren, that he might be mercifull and a faithful high Priest in things concerning God. Let a man be sicke of a grieuous disease, & let a friend come that hath beene trouled with the very same disease, he will presently shew more compassion then twentie others: and so Christ hauing felt in his owne soule and body the anguish and the manifold perplexities that we feele in our temptations and afflictions, hath his bowels as it were yearning towardes vs, euermore beeing prest and ready to releeue vs in all our miseries. In the dayes of his flesh, he wept ouer Hierusalem when hee sawe it a farre off, because shee continued in her olde sinnes, and did not knowe the time of her visitation: and no doubt, though now hee bee exalted in glory in Heauen, yet his compassion to his poore members vpon earth is noe whit diminished.

Heb.2.17.

Nowe we come to speake of the Incarnation more particularly: and the Creede yet further expresseth it by two parts; the first is the conception of Christ in these words, Conceiued by the holy Ghost: the second is his birth, in the words following, Borne of the virgin Mary.

The conception of Christ is set downe with his efficient cause, the holy Ghost, as the Angel said to Ioseph, Feare not to take Marie for thy wife, for that which is conceiued in her is of the holy Ghost. Here it may be demaunded why the conception of Christ should bee ascribed to the Holy Ghost alone, which is common to all the persons in Trinity, as all other such actions are. Ans. It is not done to exclude the Father or the Sonne himselfe from this worke; but to signifie that it comes of the free gift and grace of God (which commonly is tearmed by the holy Ghost) that the manhood of Christ beeing but a creature, should bee aduanced to this dignity, that it should become a part of the Sonne of God. And againe, the holy Ghost is the author of this conception in a special maner: for the father and the sonne did cause it by the holy Ghost from them both immediatly.

1. August. ench.c.37. 39.

In the conception of Christ wee must obserue and consider three things. The framing of the manhood, the sanctifying of it, and the personall vnion of the manhood with the Godhead. And howsoeuer I distinguish these three for orders sake, yet must we know and remember, that they are all wrought at one and the same instant of time. For when the holy Ghost frames and sanctifies the manhood in the wombe of the Virgin; at the very same moment it is receiued into the vnity of the second person.

In the framing of Christs mahood two things must be considered, the matter and the manner. The matter of his body was the very flesh and blood of the virgin Marie; otherwise he could not haue beene the sonne of Dauid, of Abraham, and Adam according to the flesh. As for his soule, it was not deriued from the ſoule of the virgin Marie as a part thereof, but it was made as the ſoules of al other men be, that is, of nothing, by the very power of God, and placed in the bodie: both of them from the firſt moment of their beeing, hauing their ſubſiſtance in the perſon of the ſonne. And here we muſt take heede of two opinions: the firſt is of the Anabaptiſts, which hold, that the fleſh of Chriſt came downe from heauen, and paſſed through the virgin Marie as through a pipe, without taking any ſubſtance from her: the places which they alleadge for the purpoſe are manifeſtly abuſed. For whereas Chriſt ſaith of himſelfe that he deſcended from heauē, his ſpeech muſt be vnderſtood in reſpect of his Godhead, which may be ſaid in ſome ſort to deſcend, in that it was made manifeſt in the manhood here vpon earth. And whereas Paul calleth him heauenly and the Lord from heauen, it is not in reſpect of the ſubſtance of his bodie, but in reſpect of his glorious qualities which he receiued after this reſurrection. The other opinion is of the Papiſts, that hold the bread in the ſacrament to be turned ſubſtantially into the bodie of Chriſt: which thing if it be true, then the bodie of Chriſt is made of bread kneaded and tempered by the hand of the baker, and not of the ſubſtance of the virgin Marie.

Ioh. 3. 13.

2. Cor. 15.

As for the manner of the making and framing of the humane nature of Chriſt, it was miraculous; not by generation according to the ordinarie courſe of nature, but by an extraordinarie operation of the holy Ghoſt aboue nature: and for this cauſe, it is not within the compaſſe of mans reaſon either to conceiue or to expreſſe the manner and order of this conceptiō. The Angel aſcribes two actions to the holy Ghoſt in this great worke; the one to come vpon the virgin Marie, the other, to ouerſhadow her: by the firſt is ſignified the extraordinarie worke of the holy Ghoſt in faſhioning the humane nature of Chriſt, for ſo much the phraſe [a] elſwhere importeth. The ſecond ſignifieth, that the holy Ghoſt did as it were [b] caſt a cloud ouer her, to teach vs, that wee ſhould not ſearch ouermuch into the myſterie of the Incarnation.

Luk. 1. 35.

b Act. 1. 8. Luk. 24. 49

It may be obiected againſt this which hath bin ſaid, that if Chriſt be in this manner conceiued by the holy Ghoſt, then the holy Ghoſt ſhall be father to Chriſt, and Chriſt his ſonne. Anſw. The reaſon is not good. For hee that is a father is not abare efficient cauſe, but one which in the effecting of any thing conferres the matter vnto it from himſelfe, whereof it ſhall bee made. Now the holy Ghoſt did not miniſter any matter vnto Chriſt from his own ſubſtance. but did only as it were, take the maſſe and lumpe of mans nature from the bodie of the virgin Marie, and without ordinarie generation made it the bodie of Chriſt: as Baſil ſaith, Chriſt was conceiued not of the ſubſtance, but of the power, not by any generation, but by the appointment and benediction of the holy Ghoſt. Serm. de S. natiuit.

The ſecond point in the conception, is the ſanctifying of that maſſe or lumpe which was to bee the manhood of Chriſt. And that was done vpon ſpeciall cauſe: firſt, that it might be ioyned to the perſon of the Sonne. which could not haue bin if it had bin defiled with ſinne. Secondly, Chriſt was a Sauiour as hee is both God and man: now then beeing man, if he had beene ſinneful himſelfe, he could not haue ſaued others, but ſhold haue ſtood in need of a Sauiour himſelfe.

This ſanctification hath two parts: the firſt is, the ſtay and ſtoppage of the propagation of originall ſinne, and of the guilt of Adams ſinne; which was on this manner. God in the beginning ſet downe this order touching man, that what euil or defect ſoeuer hee brought vpon himſelfe, he ſhould deriue the ſame to euery one of his poſteritie begotten of him: and hereupon when any father begets his child, he is in the roome of Adam, and conueies vnto it beſide the nature of man the very guilt and corruption of nature. Now for the preuenting of this euill in Chriſt, God in great wiſdom appointed that he ſhould be conceiued by the holy Ghoſt without any manner of generation by man. And by this meanes hee takes ſubſtance from the Virgin without the guilt and corruption of the ſubſtance. But it may further bee obiected thus. All that be in Adam haue ſinned in him: but Chriſt was in Adam as he is man: therefore hee ſinned in him. Anſw. The propoſition is falſe, vnleſſe it be expounded on this manner: All that were in Adam haue ſinned in him ſo be it they come of him by generation. Paul ſaith not, out of one man, but, by one man ſinne entred into the world, to ſhew, that man propagates his corruption to no more then hee begets. Againe, Chriſt is in Adam not ſimply as other men are, but in Rom. 5. 12.

some part: namely in respect of substance which he tooke from him, and not in respect of the propagation of the substance by ordinary generation: other men are Both from Adam and by Adam. But Christ is from him alone and not by him as a begetter or procreant cause. The second part of sanctification is the infusion of al pureness and holiness into the manhood of Christ, so farre forth as was meete for the nature of a redeemer.

The duties to be learned hence are these. First, whereas Christ was sanctified in the wombe of the virgin Mary, wee likewise must labour to be sanctified in our selues, following the commandement of GOD,

1. Ioh. 3. 3. Be ye holy as I am holy. Saint Iohn saith, that he which hath hope to be with Christ in glory in heauen, purifieth himselfe euen as he is pure: no doubt setting before himselfe the example of Christ as a patterne to follow in all his wayes. And because our hearts are as it were seas of corruptions, wee must dayly clense our selues of them by little and little, following the practise of the poore begger that is alwaies peecing and mending, and day by day puls away some ragges and puts better cloath in the roome. And if wee shall continually indeauour our selues to cast off the remnants of corruption that hang so fast on, and make a supply thereof by some newe portions of Gods heauenly grace; wee shall be vessels of honour sanctified and meete for the Lord, and prepared vnto euery good worke. Christ could not haue beene a fitte Sauiour for vs, vnlesse he had first of all beene sanctified, neither can we be fit members vnto him, vnlesse we bee purged of our sinnes and in some measure truly sanctified.

The comfort which Gods people may reape of the sanctification of Christs mahood is great. For why was he sanctified? surely if we marke it well, we shall finde it was for the good and benefit of his Elect. For Adam and Christ be two rootes as hath beene shewed. Adam by creation first receiued Gods image, and after lost the same for himselfe and his posterity. Now Christ to remooue the sinne of man is made the second Adam, and the roote and very head of all the Elect. His manhood was filled with holines aboue measure: that from thence as from a storehouse it might be deriued to all his members. And therefore by his most holy conception, our sinfull birth and conception is sanctified, and his holines serues as a couer to hide our manifold corruptions frō the eyes of God. Yea it serues as a buckler to award the temptations of the deuill: for when he shall say to our heartes on this manner; no vncleane thing can enter into the kingdome of heauen; but thou by reason of the remnants of originall sinne art vncleane: therefore thou canst not enter into the kingdome of heauen: we returne our answer, saying, that Christs righteousnes is our righteousnesse, seruing to make vs stand without blame or spot before GOD. And as Iacob put on Esaus garments that he might get his fathers blessing: so if by faith we doe put on the white garment of righteousnesse of our elder brother Christ Iesus, and present our selues in it vnto our heauenly Father, wee shall obtaine his blessing which is eternall happinesse.

Now remaines the third and last part of the conception, which is the Vnion of the Godhead and the manhood: concerning which, many points are particularly to be handled. The first is, what kind of Vnion this is? Ans. In the Trinity there be two sorts of vnions: vnion in nature, and vnion in person. Vnion in nature is, when two or moe things are ioyned and vnited into one nature, as the Father, the Sonne, the holy Ghost beeing and remaining three distinct persons, are one and the same in nature or Godhead. Vnion in person is, when two things are in that maner vnited, that they make but one person or subsistance: as a bodie created by God and a reasonable soule ioyned both togither make one particular man, as Peter, Paul, Iohn, &c. And this second, is the vnion whereof we intreat in this place: by which the second person in Trinity the sonne of God did vnite vnto himselfe the humane nature, that is, the body and soule of man: so as the Godhead of the Sonne and the manhood concurring togither made but one person.

The second point is, In what thing this vnion doth consist. Ans. It consists in this, that the second person the sonne of God doth assume vnto it a manhood in such order, that it beeing voide of all personall beeing in it selfe, doth wholy and onely subsist in the same persō. As the plant called Misell or Misselto hauing no roote of his owne, but growes and liues in the stocke or body of the Oke or some other tree: so the humane nature hauing noe Viscus Matthiol.

proper ſubſtance, is, as it were, ingrafted into the perſon of the ſonne, and is wholly ſupported & ſuſtained by it ſo as it ſhould not be at all, if it were not ſuſtained in that manner. And for the better vnderſtanding of this point, wee muſt conſider, that there be foure degrees of the preſence of God in his creatures. The firſt is his generall preſence, and it may be called the preſence of his prouidence, whereby he preſerueth the ſubſtances of all creatures, and giueth vnto them to liue, moue, and haue beeing: and this extendeth it ſelfe to all creatures good and bad. The ſecond degree is the preſence of grace, wherby he doth not onely preſerue the ſubſtances of all his creatures but alſo giueth grace vnto it: and this agreeth to the church and people of God vpon earth. The third degree is the perſence of glory, peculiar to the Saints and Angels in heauen: and this ſtands in three things, for God not onely preſerues their ſubſtances, and giues them plentie of his grace, but alſo admits them into his glorious preſence, ſo as they may behold his maieſtie face to face. The fourth and laſt is that, whereby the Godhead of the ſonne is preſent and dwells with and in the manhood, giuing vnto it in ſome part his own ſubſiſtance. Whereby it comes to paſſe that this manhood is proper to the ſonne, and can not be the manhood of the Father, or of the holy Ghoſt, or of any creature whatſoeuer. And this is a thing ſo admirable and ſo vnſpeakable, that among all the works of God there can not be found an other example hereof in all the world.

Act. 17. 28

Hence it followes neceſſarily, that the manhood of Chriſt conſiſting of bodie & reaſonable ſoule, is a nature onely and not a perſon: becauſe it doth not ſubſiſt alone as other men, Peter, Paul, Iohn doe; but wholly depends on the perſon of the word into the vnitie wherof it is receiued.

The third point is, in what order the diuine and humane nature of Chriſt are vnited together. Anſ. The common conſent of Diuines is, that, albeit all the parts of the manhood and the godhead of Chriſt be vnited at one inſtant: yet in reſpect of order he vnites vnto himſelfe firſt and immediately the ſoule, and by the ſoule the bodie. And it ſeemes vnneere that God beeing a moſt ſimple eſſence ſhould immediatly be ioyned to a compound bodie: and therefore it may well be ſaid that hee is vnited vnto it by the more ſimple part of man, which is the ſoule. Againe the manhood of Chriſt is firſt & immediately ioyned to the perſon of the ſonne himſelfe, and by the perſon to the godhead of the ſonne.

Damaſc. l. 3 c. 6. Cypr. in ſymb.

The fourth point is, whether there remaine any difference or diuerſitie of the two natures after that the vnion is made. Anſ. The two natures concurring make not the perſon of the ſonne to be compounded properly, but onely by analogie for bodie and ſoule make one man, ſo God and man make one Chriſt: neither are they turned one into an other, the Godhead into the manhood or the manhood into the Godhead, as water was turned into wine at Cana in Galile: neither are they confuſed and mingled togither as meates in the ſtomacke: but they now are, and ſo remaine without compoſitiō, conuerſion, or confuſion, really diſtinct and that in three reſpects. Firſt in regard of eſſence. For the godhead of Chriſt is the godhead and cannot be the manhood: & againe, the manhood of Chriſt is the manhood and not the godhead. Secondly, they are diſtinguiſhed in proprieties: the godhead is moſt wiſe, iuſt, mercifull, omnipotent: yea wiſdome, iuſtice, mercie, and power it ſelfe: and ſo is not the manhood, neither can it be. Againe, Chriſt as he is God hath his will eternall, and vncreated, which is all one with the will of the father and the holy Ghoſt. And as he is man he hath an other wil created in time, and placed in his reaſonable ſoule: and this Chriſt ſignifieth when he ſaith, Not my will, but thy will be done. Thirdly, they are diſtinct in their actions or operations; which though they goe togither inſeparably in the work of redemptiō; yet they muſt in no wiſe be cōfoūded but diſtinguiſhed as the natures. theſelues are. Chriſt ſaith of himſelf, I haue power to lay downe my life, and I haue power to take it vp againe: and hereby he ſhewes the diſtinction of operations in his two natures. For to lay downe his life is an action of the manhood, becauſe the Godhead can not die: and to take it vp againe is the worke of the Godhead alone, which reunites the ſoule to the bodie after death.

Ioh. 10. 18

The fifth and laſt point is, What ariſeth of this vnion? Anſ. By reaſon of this hypoſtaticall vnion, though the godhead receiue nothing from the manhood, yet the manhood it ſelfe, which is aſſumed, is thereby perfected and enriched with vnſpeakable dignitie. For firſt of al it is exalted aboue all creatures whatſoeuer, euen angels themſelues, in that it hath ſubſiſtāce in the ſecond perſon in Trinitie. Secondly, together with the godhead of the ſonne, it is adored and worſhiped with diuine honour, as in like caſe the honour done to the King himſelfe, redounds to the crowne on his head. Thirdly by reaſon of this vnion, the godhead of Chriſt works al things in the matter of our redemption, and by the manhood. And hereupon the fleſh of Chriſt though it profit nothing of it ſelfe, yet by the vertue which it receiueth from that perſō to which it is ioyned, it is quickning fleſh and the bread of life.

Againe from this vnion of two natures into one perſō, ariſeth a kind of ſpeech or phraſe peculiar to the Scriptures, called the communication of proprieties, whē the propertie of one nature is attributed to the whole perſon or to the other nature, as when Paul ſaith, that God ſhed his bloode, Act.20.28. that the Lord of glorie was crucified. And 1.Col.2.8. when Chriſt ſaith, that he talking with Ni- Ioh.3.13. chodemus was then in heauen.

The vſe of the perſonall vnion is threefold. Firſt it ſerues to ſhew the hainouſnes of our ſinnes, and the greatneſſe of our miſery. For it had not beene poſſible to make a ſatisfactiō to Gods iuſtice in mans nature for the leaſt offence, vnles the ſame nature had firſt of al beene nearely ioyned to the Godhead of the Sonne; that thereby it might bee ſo farre forth ſupported and ſuſtained that it might ouercome the wrath of God. Secondly it ſets forth vnto vs the endleſſe loue of God to man. For whereas by reaſon of Adams fall we were become the vileſt of all creatures, except the deuill and his angels: by his myſticall coniunction, our nature is exalted to ſuch an eſtate and condition as is farre aboue al creatures euen the Angels themſelues. Thirdly it is as it were the key of all our comfort: for all ſound comfort ſtands in happineſſe, all happineſſe is in fellowſhip with God, all fellowſhip with God is by Chriſt, who for this cauſe being very God, became very man, that he might reconcile man to God, and God to man.

Thus much of the conception of Chriſt: now followes his birth: whereby in the ordinary time of trauell according to the courſe of nature he was brought forth in- Luk.2.6. to the world by the virgin Mary. And it was the will of God, that Chriſt ſhould not onely be conceiued, but alſo borne, and that after the manner of men, that he might be knowne to be very man indeed. In the birth we may conſider foure things; the time, the place, the manner, the manifeſtation of it.

The time, was in the laſt dayes, toward Iſa.2. the end of the 70. weekes of Daniel, which Dan.9.24. are to be accounted from the ende of the captiuity of Babylon, and make in all 490 yeares: or more plainely 3900 yeares & more from the beginning of the world, Gal.4.4. and as Paul ſaith, in the fulneſſe of time. And the Euangeliſts haue noted of purpoſe the time to haue beene when Auguſtus Cæſar taxed the Iewes and all nations vnder Luk.2.1. his dominions; to ſignifie that Chriſt was borne at the very time foretold by Iacob, when the crowne and ſcepter was taken from Iuda: and withall, to ſhew that his kingdome was not of this world. And it was the good pleaſure of God that Chriſt ſhould not be borne either later or ſooner, but ſo many ages from the beginning of the world. And this conſideration of the very time it ſelfe ſerues greatly for the confirmation of our faith. For thus may we reaſon with our ſelues: If GOD who in the beginning made a promiſe to our firſt parents concerning the ſeede of the Woman, deferred it almoſt 4000. yeares, and yet at length accompliſhed the ſame to the very full: then no doubt God hauing promiſed the reſurrectiou of the dead and life euerlaſting, will in his good time bring them to paſſe, though as yet we ſee them not. And thus by the accompliſhment of all things paſt, ſhould wee confirme our hope concerning things to come.

The place was not at Hieruſalem nor Nazareth, nor any other citie, but onely a village of Iuda called Bethleem, that the propheſie of Micheas might be fulfilled. Thou Bethlehem Ephrata art little to be amōg the thouſands of Iuda, yet out of thee ſhall he come forth vnto me, that ſhal be ruler in Iſrael. And here we may obſerue a memorable example of Gods prouidence which ouerruleth the proceedings of cruell tyrants, to the accompliſhing of his own wil, they themſelues for their parts intending nothing leſſe. Auguſtus not ſo much as dreaming of the birth of the Meſſias, gaue commandement that euery man ſhould goe to his owne cittie to be taxed: & hereupon Ioſeph and Mary take their iourney from Nazareth to Bethlehē: which iourney God himſelfe appointed and diſpo-fed to this ende, that the Messias might be borne in the place which he preordained and foretold by his prophets.

The manner of Christs birth was very base and poore: for the place where he was borne was a stable, and the cradle where he lay was a cratch. And hee willingly tooke vpon him this powerty for sundry causes. I. That the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, that he should bee Psal 22.6. the shame and contempt of the people: & that Isa 53.2. he shall grow vp as a root out of a dry ground and haue neither forme nor beauty. II. That he might afterward from this base condition be exalted euen in his manhood to that rich and glorious estate in which hee should manifest himselfe to bee Lord of heauen and earth. III. He was borne in exceeding powerty that hee might shame the wise men of this world, who exceedingly esteeme of their riches, power, and glorie, perswading themselues that without such means nothing can be done. And yet for all this they cannot so much as reconcile one man to God by al their might and wealth; whereas Christ himselfe hath done the same both in powerty and weaknesse; and can enlarge and preserue his kingdome without earthly helpes. When he hung vpon the crosse the Souldiers stript him of his garments; & beeing naked he brought that to passe which all the Monarchs of the earth in all their royalties could neuer haue performed. And whether Christ lie in the manger betwene the Oxe and the Asse, or in the pallace of the king, it matters not in regarde of our saluatiō. IV. He came in this manner that there might be a difference betweene his first comming in the flesh and his last cōming to iudgement. In the first hee came onely for this ende, not to make any outward alteratiōs in the world, but to chāge the conscience and to put in execution the worke of our spirituall redemption: & therefore hee hath reserued the ouerturning of all earthly estates with the manifestation of his owne glory to the latter. V. Lastly he was borne in a poore estate that he might procure true riches for vs in heauen: and withall sanctifie vnto vs our powerty vpon earth. As Paul saith Ye know the grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, that hee 2. Cor. 8. 9. being rich for your sakes became poore, that ye through his powerty might be made rich. Hee was content to lie in the manger that we might rest in heauen.

This serues to teach vs to be content to beare any meane condition that the Lord shall send vpon vs: for this is the very estate of the sonne of God himselfe. And if for our cause he did not refuse the basest condition that euer was, why should wee murmure at the same? for what is the best of vs but miserable sinners, and therefore vtterly vnworthie either to goe or lie vpon the bare earth? and though we fare & lie better then our Lord himselfe, yet such is our daintinesse, we are not pleased therwith: whereas he for his part disdained not the manger of the Oxe. And if the Lord of heauen and earth comming into the world finde so little entertainment or fauour, we for our parts beeing his members, should willingly perpare our selues to take as harde measure at the hands of men.

The last point is the manifestation of Luk. 2. Christs birth that it might be knowne to the world. Where consider two circumstances, the first, to whome? namely to poore sheapheards tending their flockes by night, and not to great or mightie men, louers of this world, nor to the priestes as Ierusalem contemners of Gods grace; and that for two causes: one, because the shepheards were the fittest persons to publish the same at Bethlehem: the other, it was Gods pleasure to manifest that in the birth of Christ which Paul saith, Not many wise 1. Cor. 1. 27. men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the worlde to confound the wise. The second is, by whom: by the Angels of the Lord appearing in great glory vnto the shepheards. For the priests of Ierusalē & the rulers of the Synagogues, to whom this office did belong, held their peace: being blinded in their manifold errours and wicked waies.

The duties to be learned of the birth of Christ are these. First we are admonished hereby to magnifie and praise the name of God, saying with Mary, My soule doeth magnifie the Lord, and my spirit reioyceth in God my Sauiour. And with Zacharie, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for he hath visited and redeemed his people. And with the Angels of heauen, Glory to God in the highest heauens. For in this birth is made manifest the wisedome, the trueth, the iustice & mercy, and goodnesse of God towardes vs, more then euer it was before: yea as Christ God and man, is more excellent then the first Adam created according to Gods owne image: and as the spiri-

tuall life is better then the naturall life, and as the eternall and moſt holy marriage of Chriſt the husband and his ſpouſe the Church ariſing as it were out of the blood that trickled out of his ſide; is more wonderfull then the creation of Eue of the rib of Adam: laſtly, as it is a farre greater matter by death to ouercome death, & to turne it into eternal life, then to command that to exiſt & be which was not before: ſo is the worke of redemption begunne in the birth of Chriſt more vnſpeakeable & admirable then the firſt creation of man. Herevpon not 6 cherubims as in the viſiõ of Iſaiah, not 24. elders as in the Apocalyps, but a great multitude of angels like armies were heard to praiſe GOD at the birth of Chriſt, and no doubt the like ſight was not ſeene ſince the beginning of the world. And the angels by their example put vs in minde to conſider right of this benefit, and to praiſe God for it. But alas, this practiſe is very rare in this fruitleſſe and barren age of the world: where ſinne and iniquity abounds, as may be ſeene by experience; for by an olde cuſtome we retaine ſtill in the Church the feaſt of the nativity of Chriſt, ſo cõmonly called: which neuertheleſſe is not ſpent in praiſing the name of God who hath ſent his ſonne from his owne boſome to be our redeemer, but contrariwiſe in riſling, dicing, carding, masking, mumming, and in all licentious liberty for the moſt part, as though it were ſome heathen feaſt of Ceres or Bacchus.

Secondly, Chriſt was conceiued and borne in bodily manner, that there might be a ſpirituall conception and birth of him in our hearts, as Paul ſaith; My little children of whom I trauell till Chriſt be formed in you: and that is, when we are made newe creatures by Chriſt, and performe obedience to our creator. When the people ſaid to Chriſt that his mother and his brethren ſought him, he anſwered, He that doeth the will of God, is my brother, my ſiſter, and mother. Therefore let vs goe with the ſhepheards to Bethlehem, and finding our bleſſed Sauiour ſwadled and lying in the cratch, let vs bring him thẽce & make our owne hearts to be his cradle: that we may be able to ſay that wee liue not, but Chriſt liues in vs: and let vs preſent vnto him our ſelues, our bodies, and ſoules, as the beſt golde, mirrhe, and frankincenſe that may be: and thus conceiuing him by faith, he remaining without chaunge, we ſhall be changed into him, & made bone of his bone, and fleſh of his fleſh. The world, I know, neuer ſo much as dreameth of this kinde of conception and birth; For as Dauid ſaith, Men trauell with wickednes, conceiue miſchiefe, and bring forth a lie. And S. Iames ſaith, Men are drawne away by their owne concupiſcence, which when it hath conceiued bringeth forth ſinne. And theſe are the ougly and monſtrous births of theſe dayes. But let vs, I pray you, contrariwiſe waile & mourne for the barrenneſſe of our hearts that doe ſo little conceiue the grace of Chriſt in heart, & bring it forth in action. The mother of Chriſt vndoubtedly was a bleſſed woman: but if ſhe had not as well conceiued Chriſt in her heart, as ſhee did in her wombe, ſhee had not beene ſaued, and no more can we vnleſſe we do the ſame.

The birth of Chriſt to them that haue touched hearts, is the comfort of comforts and the ſweeteſt baulme of conſolation that euer was. Behold ſay the angels to the ſhepheards, I bring tidings of great ioy that ſhall be to all people: but wherein ſtands the ioy? they adde further, vnto you this day is borne in the citty of Dauid a Sauiour, which is Chriſt the Lord. And no maruell: for in that birth is manifeſted the good will of God to man, and by it we haue peace, firſt with God, ſecondly with our ſelues in cõſcience, thirdly with the good Angels of God, fourthly with our enemies, laſtly with all the Creatures. For this cauſe the Angels ſang, Peace on earth good will towards men.

In the laſt place the Creede notes vnto vs the parent or mother of Chriſt, the virgin Marie. And here at the very firſt it may be demanded, how he could haue either father or mother; becauſe hee was figured by Melchiſedech who had neither father nor mother. Anſw. Melchiſedech is ſaid to be without father and mother, not becauſe he had none at all. For according to the auncient and receiued opinion, it is very likely that he was Sem the ſonne of Noe: but becauſe where he is mentioned vnder this name of Melchiſedech in the 14. chapter of Geneſis, there is no mentiõ made of Father or Mother; and ſo Chriſt in ſome ſort is without father or Mother: as he is man he hath no father, as he is God he hath no mother. And whereas Chriſt is called the Sonne of Ioſeph, it was not becauſe he was begotten of him, but becauſe Ioſeph was his reputed father; or, which is more, becauſe he was a legall father, namely according to the Iewes lawes: in that (as ſundrie diuines thinke) he was the next of his kinne. and therfore to ſucceed him as his lawfull heire.

Mary became the mother of Chriſt by a kind of calling thereto, which was by an extraordinarie meſſage of an angell concerning the conception & birth of Chriſt in and by her: to which calling and meſſage ſhee condeſcended, ſaying, Behalde the handmaid of the Lord, be it vnto me according to thy worde. And hereupon ſhee conceiued by the holy Ghoſt. This being ſo, it is more then ſenſleſſe folly to turne the ſalutation of the angell, Haile freely beloued, &c. into a praier. For it is as much as if we ſhould ſtill call her to become a mother of Chriſt.

And ſhe muſt be helde to be the mother of whole Chriſt God and man: and therefore the ancient Church hath called her the mother of God, yet not the mother of the godhead.

Furthermore the mother of Chriſt is deſcribed by her qualitie; a vergin, and by her name Marie. Shee was a virgin, firſt that Chriſt might be conceiued without ſinne and be a perfect Sauiour: ſecondly, that the ſaying of the prophet Eſay might be fulfilled, Behold a virgin ſhall conceiue & beare a ſonne: according as it was foretolde by God in the firſt giuing of the promiſe, the ſeede of the woman, not the ſeede of the man, ſhall bruiſe the Serpents head. Now the Iewes to elude the moſt pregnant teſtimonie of the prophet, ſay, that Alma ſignifies not a virgin, but a yong woman which hath knowne a man. But this is indeed a forgerie. For Eſay there ſpeakes of an extraordinarie worke of God aboue nature, whereas for a woman hauing knowne man to conceiue, is no wonder. And the word Alma, through the whole bible is taken for a virgin, as by a particular ſearch wil appeare.

Gen. 24. Exod. 2.

As Marie conceiued a virgin, ſo it may be well thought that ſhee continued a virgin to the ende, though we make it no article of our faith. When Chriſt was vpon the croſſe, he commended his mother to the cuſtodie of Iohn; which probably argueth that ſhee had no child to whoſe care and keeping ſhe might be commended. And though Chriſt be called her firſt borne, yet doth it not follow that ſhee had any child after him, for as that is called laſt after which there is none, ſo that is called the firſt before which there was none. And as for Ioſeph, when he was eſpouſed to Marie, he was a man of eighte yeares olde.

Epiph. l. 2 to 1.

And here we haue occaſion to praiſe the wiſdome of God, in the forming of man. The firſt man Adā was borne of no man; but immediately created of God: the ſecond, that is Eve, is formed not of a woman, but of a man alone: the third and all after, begotten both of woman and man: the fourth, that is, Chriſt, God and man, not of no man as Adam, not of no woman as Eue; not of man and woman as we: but after a new manner, of a woman without a man he is conceiued and borne.

And hereupon our dutie is not to deſpiſe, but highly to reuerence the virgin Marie, as being the mother of the ſonne of God, [a] a propheteſſe vpō earth, a Saint in heauen. And we doe willingly condeſcend to giue her honour three waies, firſt by thanksgiuing to God for her, ſecondly by a reuerent eſtimation of her, thirdly by imitation of her excellent vertues, yet farre be it from vs to adore her with diuine honour, by praier to call vpon her, as though ſhee knewe our hears, and heard our requeſts, and to place her in heauen as a Queene aboue the ſonne of God.

[a] Luk. 1. 48

The name of the mother of Chriſt is added, to ſhew that he came of the linage of Dauid, and that therefore he was the true Meſſias before ſpoken of. It may be obiected, that both Matthew and Luke ſets downe the genealogie of Ioſeph, of whome Chriſt was not. Anſw. Matthew ſets downe in deede in Chriſts genealogie, the natural deſcent of Ioſeph, the husband of Mary, hauing Iaakob for his natural father: but Luke taking another courſe, propounds the naturall deſcent of Marie the mother of Chriſt: and when he ſaith that Ioſeph was the ſonne of Eli, he means of a legall ſonne. For ſonnes and daughters in law, are called ſonnes & daughters to their fathers and mothers in lawe. Mary her ſelfe and not Ioſeph beeing the naturall daughter of Eli. And whereas Luke doth not plainely ſay, that Marie was the daughter of Eli, but puts Ioſeph the ſonne in law in her roome, the reaſō hereof may be, becauſe it was the manner of the Iewes to account & continue their genealogies in the male and not in the female ſext, the man being the head of the familie, and not the woman. And though Ruth, and Rahab, and other women be mentioned by Matthew,

Aphric. apud Euſeb. Damaſ. lib. 4. c. 15.

Matthew, yet that is onely by the way: for they make no degrees herein. Againe it may be further demanded, howe Christ could come of Dauid by Salomon, as Mathew saith, and by Nathan as Luke saith; they twaine beeing two distinct sonnes of Dauid. Ans. By vertue of the law, whereby the brother was bound to raise vp seed to his brother, there was a bouble descent in vse among the Iewes, the one was natural, Deut. 25. the other legall. Naturall, when one man descēding of another by generatiō, as the child from the natural father. Legal, when a man not begotten of another, yet did succeede him in his inhabitance; and thus Salathiel is the naturall sonne of Neri, and the legall sonne of Iechonias. Nowe Saint Mat. 1. 12. & Luk. 3. 27. Luke sets downe the naturall descent of Christ from Dauid by Nathan, and Saint Matthew the other descēt, which is legal, by Salomon; whome Christ succeeded in the right of the kingdome, beeing borne the king of the Iewes: none that could possibly be named, hauing more right to it then he.

By this descent of Christ we haue occasion to consider, that Christ was euen in his birth the most excellent and notable man that euer was, descending of the eternall father as he is the sonne of God, and as he is man, descending of the Patriarks, and of the renowmed kings of Iuda. And this his nobilitie he conuaies in part to his members, in that he makes them the sonns of God, a royal priesthood, and a peculiar people to himselfe: inriching them also with the reuenewes of the whole world, & with title and right to the kingdome of glorie in heauen, and their inheritance.

And withall, Christ beeing the liuely patterne of true nobilitie, by his example men of blood are taught not to stand so much on their pedigree, and their aunce-stors, as though nobility stood in this, that man descends of man: but to labour with all that they may be the sonnes & daughters of God by regeneration in Christ. This indeed is the ornament of the blood, the best part in the noble mans skutchin, and the finest floure in his garland. And though a man be neuer so noble or great an estate, yet if he be not a repentant sinner, he is base and vile, and his nobilitie stinkes in the nosthrils of God. Christ in his genealogy doth not so much as vouchsafe to name those his ancestors that ruled wickedly: and hereupon Saint Matthewe omitteth three kings of Iudah, Achaziah, Ioas, and Amaziah: whereas neuertheless hainous offendours that repented are mētioned, as Ruth, and Thamar, and Bathshabe.

Thus much of the Incarnatiō of Christ: nowe followeth the third and last point which is to be considered in the description of Christ, namely, the estate of Christ after his birth, which is two-fold, the estate of humiliation and the estate of exaltation.

The estate of humiliation, is the condition of Christ the Mediatour, in which he abased himselfe euen to the death of the crosse, that by that meanes he might performe the office of a priest in making satisfaction to the iustice of his father.

This estate agrees to the whole person of Christ according to both natures. For first of all his manhood was abased and hūbled, in that it was made subiect to the infirmities of mans nature, as also to the miseries and punishments which were due vnto man for sinne. Secondly, his Godhead was abased; not as it is considered in it selfe. For so it admits no alteration or change But in respect of the flesh or manhood assumed; vnder the which as vnder a vaile, the godhead lay hidde from the first moment of the Incarnation to the time of his resurrection, without any great manifestation of his power and maiestie therein.

The order of these two estates must be marked. First is the estate of humiliation, and then in the second place followes the estate of exaltatiō. As Christ saith of him selfe, O fooles, and slowe of heart to beleeue, &c. ought not Christ to haue suffered these things and to enter into his glorie? Luk. 24. 26 And here we for our parts must learne a lesson. The same which was true in Christ the head, must be verified in all his members; they must all haue their twofold estate: first in this life the estate of humiliation: secondly after this life the estate of glorie. And as Christ first entred into the state of his humiliation, and then into glory: so it is with his members, first they must be abased in this life, and secondly exalted in the world to come. He that wil raigne with Christ & be exalted, must first suffer with him, & be humbled: he that wil weare the crowne of glory, must weare first a crowne of thornes; they that wil haue all teares wiped from their eies, must here first in this life shedde them. Reu. 15. 3. And the children of God before they can sing the song of Moses, ſes, and of the ſeruants of God, and of the lambe, muſt firſt ſwimme through the ſea of burning glaſſe: whereby it is ſignified, that thoſe which after this life would ſing ſongs of praiſes to Chriſt, muſt in this life be caſt into a ſea of miſerie. And if this be true, then wee may here learne, that it is a wretched caſe for a man in this life to haue perpetuall eaſe, reſt and quietneſſe both in bodie and ſoule, goods, and good name: for wee ſee by Chriſts example, that thorough aduerſitie we muſt come to happines: and if a man would haue reſt & peace in the life to come, then in this life he muſt looke for trouble, perſecution, & ſorrow. Indeede in the iudgement of the worlde, they are bleſſed that alwaies liue at reſt; but before God they are moſt miſerable, and (as oxen which are made fatte in the beſt paſture) ready for the ſlaughter houſe euery day. Secõdly, here is an excellent cõſolatiõ for thoſe which profeſſe the goſpel of Chriſt; in the time of trouble & perſecutiõ they muſt reioyce, becauſe the ſtate of humiliatiõ in this life is a ſigne that they ar in the plaine and right way to ſaluation & glorie. A man is to take his iourney into a farre countrie, and inquiring for the way it is told him that there are many plaine waies; but the ſtraight and right way is by woods, and hils, and mountaines, & great dangers: nowe when he is trauelling, and comes into thoſe places, he gathereth certainely that hee is in the right way: ſo the child of God that is going to the kingdom of heauen, though there be many waies to walke in, yet hee knowes that there is but one right way; which is very ſtraight and narrowe, full of trouble, ſorrowe and perſecution: full of all manner of croſſes and afflictions: and when in this life he is perſecuted and afflicted for good cauſes, whether in bodie or in minde, if he be content to beare his croſſe, it argueth plainly that he is in the right way vnto ſaluation: for through many afflictions we muſt enter into the kingdome of heauen. Act 14.22.

The humiliation of Chriſt is firſt of all ſet downe in the Creede generally, and ſecondly by his parts or degrees. Generally, in theſe words, Suffered vnder Pontius Pilate. Where we muſt conſider two things; the Paſſion it ſelfe, and vnder whome it was. For the firſt, that wee may the better conceiue the paſſion in his owne nature, ſeauen ſpeciall points muſt bee opened. I. The cauſe efficient. The principall cauſe of the paſſion, as it is the price of our redemption, was the decree and prouidence of God; as Peter ſaith expreſſly that Chriſt was deliuered by the determinate counſell and foreknowledge of God. The impulſiue cauſe that mooued God to work our ſaluation by this means, was nothing in man (for all mankind was ſhutte vp vnder vnbeleefe, and therefore vnable to procure the leaſt fauour at gods hands) but the will and good pleaſure of God within himſelfe. The inſtruments which the Lord vſed in this buſineſſe, were the wicked Iewes and Gentiles, and the deuill himſelfe, by whome he brought to paſſe the moſt admirable worke of redemption, euen then when they according to their kinde did nothing els but practiſe wickedneſſe and malice againſt Chriſt. II. The matter of the paſſion, is the whole malediction or curſe of the Lawe, containing in it all manner of aduerſities and miſeries both of bodie and minde. All which may bee reduced to three heads; the temptations of Chriſt, his ignominies and ſlaunders, his manifold ſorrowes, and griefes, eſpecially thoſe which ſtand in the apprehenſion of the vnſupportable wrath of God. III. The forme of the paſſion, is that excellent and meritorious ſatisfaction which in ſuffering, Chriſt made vnto his father for mans ſinne. We doe not rightly conſider of the paſſion, if we conceiue it to be a bare and naked ſuffering of puniſhment, but withall we muſt conceiue it as a propitiation or a meanes ſatisfactorie to Gods iuſtice. The paſſion conſidered as a paſſion, miniſters no comfort: but all our ioy and reioycing ſtandes in this, that by faith we apprehend it as it is a ſatisfactiõ or a meanes of reconciliation for our offẽces. In this very point ſtands the dignity of the paſſion, whereby it differs from all other ſufferings of men whatſoeuer. Therefore moſt damnable and wicked is the opinion of the Papiſts, who beſides the alone paſſion of Chriſt maintaine works of ſatisfaction partly of their own, & partly of the Saints departed: which they adde to the paſſion as an appendance thereof. IV. The end of the paſſion is, that God might bring to paſſe a worke in which he might more fully manifeſt his iuſtice and mercie, then hee did in the creation, and that is the reconciliation betweene God and man. And here remember with the paſſiõ to ioyne the actiue obedience of Chriſt in fulfilling the lawe; for Chriſt in ſuffe- Act. 2. 23.

ring obeyed, & in obeying ſuffered. And they muſt bee ioyntly conceiued togither for this cauſe. In reconciliation with God, two things are required: the remooving of ſinne in regard of the guilt, of the fault, and the puniſhment, and the conferring or giuing of righteouſneſſe. Now the paſſion of Chriſt conſidered apart from his legall obedience, onely takes away the guilt & puniſhment, frees man from death, and makes him of a ſinner to be no ſinner: and that hee may bee fully reconciled to God, and accepted as righteous to life euerlaſting, the legall obedience of Chriſt muſt alſo be imputed. And therefore in the Scriptures, where all our redemption is aſcribed to the death and paſſion of Chriſt, this very obedience which ſtandes in the perfect loue of God and man muſt be included and not excluded. V. The time of the paſſion was from the very birth of Chriſt to his reſurrection; yet ſo, as the beginnings onely of his ſufferings were in the courſe of his life, and the accõpliſhment thereof to the very full vpon the croſſe. VI. The perſon that ſuffered was the ſonne of God himſelfe: cõcerning whome in this caſe two queſtions muſt be reſolued. The firſt, how can it ſtand with Gods iuſtice to lay puniſhment vpon the moſt righteous man that euer was, and that for grieuous ſinners: conſidering that tyrants themſelues will not doe ſo. Anſwer. In the paſſion, Chriſt muſt not be conſidered as a priuate perſon: for then it could not ſtand with equity that he ſhold be plagued & puniſhed for our offences; but as one in the eternal coũſell of God ſet apart to bee a publike ſuretie or pledge for vs, to ſuffer & perform thoſe things which wee in our owne perſons ſhould haue ſuffered and performed. For this cauſe God the father is ſaid to giue his ſonne vnto vs, and the ſonne againe to giue his life for his friendes. The ſecond queſtion is, howe by the ſhort and temporarie death of the ſon of God, any man can poſſibly be freed frõ eternal death and damnatiõ, which is due vnto him for the leaſt ſinne. Anſw. When we ſay that the ſonne of God ſuffered, it muſt bee vnderſtood with diſtinction of the natures of Chriſt not in reſpect of the Godhead, but in reſpect of the aſſumed mãhood: yet neuertheles the paſſion is to be aſcribed to the whole perſon of Chriſt God and man: and from the dignitie of the perſon which ſuffered, ariſeth the dignitie and excellencie of the paſſion, whereby it is made in value and price, to counteruaile euerlaſting damnation. For when as the ſonne of God ſuffered the curſe for a ſhort time, it is more then if all men and angels had ſuffered the ſame for euer. VII. The difference of the paſſion of Chriſt, & the ſufferings of Martyrs: and that ſtandes in two things. Firſt Chriſts paſſion was a curſed puniſhment; the ſufferings of the Martyres are no curſes, but either chaſtiſments or trials. Secondly, the paſſion of Chriſt is meritorious for vs euen before God, becauſe hee became our Mediatour and ſuretie in the couenant of grace, but the ſufferings of Martyrs are not of value to merit for vs at Gods hand; becauſe in ſuffering they were but priuate men, and therefore they nothing appertaine to vs. By this it appeares that the Treaſurie of the Church of Rome, which is as it were a common cheſt containing the ouerplus of the merits of Saints, mingled with the merits of Chriſt, kept and diſpoſed by the Pope himſelfe, is nothing els but a ſenſleſſe dotage of mans braine. And whereas they ſay that Chriſt by his death did merit that Saints might merit both for themſelues & others, it is as much as if they ſhould ſay, the ſonne of God became Ieſus, to make euery one of vs Ieſus. And it is a manifeſt vntrueth which they ſay. For the very mãhood of Chriſt conſidered apart from the god-head, cãnot merit properly: conſidering whatſoeuer it is, hath, or doeth; it is, hath, and doth the ſame, wholly and onely by grace: whereas therefore Chriſt meriteth for vs, it is by reaſon hee is both God and man in one perſon. For this cauſe it is not poſſible that one meere man ſhould merit for another.

Ioh. 3. 16. & 15. 13.

The vſe of the paſſion followeth. It is the manner of Friers and Ieſuits in the Church of Rome to vſe the conſideration of the paſſion of Chriſt, as a meanes to ſtir vp compaſſion in themſelues, partly towards Chriſt, who ſuffered grieuous torments, and partly towards the Virgin Marie, who for the torments of her deere ſonne was exceedingly troubled; & withall to kindle in their hearts an indignation towards the Iews that put Chriſt to death. But indeede this kind of vſe is meere humane, and may in like manner be made by reading of any humane hiſtorie. But the proper and the ſpeciall vſe of the paſſion indeed is this: firſt of all we muſt ſet it before our eies as a looking glaſſe, in which we may cleerely behold the horribleneſſe of our sinnes, that could not be pardoned without the passion of the sonne of God; and the vnspeakble loue of Christ, that died for vs, and therefore loued his owne enemies more then his owne selfe; & lastly our endlesse peace with God and happinesse: in that, considering the person of our redeemer, who suffered the pangs of hell, we may after a sort finde our paradise euen in the middest of hell.

Secondly, the meditation of Christs passion serues as a most worthy means to begin and to confirme grace, specially when it is mingled with faith; & that two waies. For first, it serues to breed in our hearts a godly sorrow for our sinnes past, when we doe seriously with our selues consider, that our owne sinnes were the cause of all the paines and sorrowes and calamities which he suffered in life and death. When any Leu.4.4. 29. man had sinned vnder the law, he brought vnto the temple or tabernacle some kinde of beast for an offering, according as he was prescribed, laying his hand vpon the head of it, and afterward slaying it before the Lord. Now by the ceremony of laying on the hand he testified that he for his part had deserued death, and not the beast; and that it beeing slaine and sacrificed, was a signe vnto him of the sacrifice of Christ offered vpon the crosse for his sinnes. And hereby we are taught, that so oft as we remember the passion of Christ, we should lay our hands as it were vpon our own heads, vtterly accusing and condemning our selues, euermore keeping this in our hearts, that Christ suffered not for himselfe, but for our offences, which were the proper cause of al his woe and misery. And as Christs passion was grieuous and bitter vnto him, so should our sinnes likewise be grieuous and bitter vnto vs: let vs alwaies remember this; otherwise we shall neuer reape any sound benefit by the passion of Christ.

Againe, the passion of Christ is a notable means to stirre vp in our hearts a purpose and a care to reforme our selues, and liue in holinesse and newnesse of life; on this manner. Hath the sonne of God so mercifully dealt with me, as to suffer the curse of the whole lawe for my manifolde iniquities, and to deliuer me from iust and deserued damnation? yea, no doubt, he hath, I am resolued of it: if I should goe on in mine old course, I should be the most ingratefull of all creatures to this my louing Sauiour: I will therefore by his grace returne and reforme my life. And in this very point of reformation, the passion of Christ is set before vs as a most liuely patterne and example to follow. For as much (saith S. Peter) as Christ hath suffered for vs in the flesh, arme your selues likewise with the same minde, which is, that he which hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sin. Where he teacheth, that there must be in vs a spirituall passion answerable to the passion of Christ. For as his enemies did lade him 1.Pet. 4.1. with miseries euen to the death of the crosse; so should we lade our owne flesh, that is, the corruption of our natures, with al such meanes as may subdue & weaken, crucifie and kill it. To the doing of this, three things especially are required. First, wee must consider that the corruption of our rebellious natures is like the great and mightie Goliah, and the grace of God which we receiue like young & little Dauid: and therefore if we desire that grace should preuaile against corruption, wee must disarme the strong man and strippe him of all his weapons: which is done, by giuing all the members of our bodies to be instrumerits of the seruice of God in righteousnesse and holinesse. Secondly we must indeauour to keepe in the corruption of nature as it were choking and smothering it in the heart; that by it neither the world nor the deuill preuaile against vs. And this must be done by hauing a narrow regard vnto al the powers & faculties of bodie and soule, setting a watch before our eies, eares, lips, & all other parts of the body, that are in any action the instrumēts of the soule; & aboue all, as Salomon saith, Psal.119. 37. by countergarding the heart with all diligence. By the outward senses of the bodie, Iob. 31.1. as through open windowes the deuil Prou.4.23 creepes into the heart; and therefore our dutie is, to stoppe all such waies of entrance. Thirdly, when originall corruptiō begins to rebell either in the minde, wil, or any of the affections, then must we drawe out the sworde of the spirit which is the word of God, and incounter with that hydeous gyant, laying load vpon him by the iudgements and threatnings of the law, & as it were beating him downe with clubs, as Paul speaketh. And if it fall out that cō- 1.Cor.9. 17. cupiscence begin to cōceiue & bring forth any sinne, we must cruise it in the head, and dash it against the ground, as a bird in the shell, least it grow vp to our vtter confusion. These are the duties which wee should learne by the passion of Christ.

But lamentable are our daies, in which all for the most part goes contrary: for commonly men are so farre from killing and subduing the rebellion of the natural concupiscence, that all their studie and care is, how they may feede and cherish it, and make it stronger then the mightie Goliah. But let vs for our parts be conformable to Christ in his passion, suffering in our flesh as he suffered in body and soule for vs. And let vs dayly more and more by the hand of faith, apprehend and apply to our hearts and consciences the passion of Christ, that it may as a fretting corasiue eat out the poison of our sinfull natures and consume it.

Now followeth the second point concerning the passion of Christ, which is, vnder whom he suffered, namely vnder Pontius Pilate.. And Christ may be sayd to suffer vnder him in two respects. First, because he was then the president of Iurie. Luk.3.1. For a little before the birth of Christ the kingdome of the Iewes was taken away by the Romane Emperour, and reduced into a Prouince, and Pontius Pilate was placed ouer the Iewes, not as king, but as the Romane Emperours deputie. And this circumstance is noted in the historie of the Gospell, and here specified in the Creede, to shewe that the Messias was exhibited in the time foretold by the Pro- Gen 49.10 phets. Iacob foretold that Shilo must be borne after the scepter is remooued from Iudah, Esaiah saith, that the familie of Isai Isai.11.1. shall be worne as it were to the roote before Christ as a braunch shall spring out of it Againe, Christ suffered vnder Pontius Pilate as he was a iudge: whereby we are giuen to vnderstand of a wonder, namely, that Christ the sonne of God, King of heauen and earth, was arraigned at the barre of an earthly iudge, and there condemned. For thus much the wordes in meaning import, that Pontius Pilate sate as iudge vpon Christ to examine him, to arraigne him, and giue sentence against him. Wherefore before we come to speake of the degrees of the Passion of Christ, we must needes intreat of his arraignment vpon earth. In handling whereof we must generally consider these points. First that when he was arraigned before Pilate he Heb.7.22. was not as a priuate man, but as a pledge and suretie that stood in the place & stead Isa.52.4. of vs miserable sinners, as the Prophet Esaiah saith, He bare our infirmities, and carried our sorrowes: and withall in him was mankind arraigned before God. Secondly, this arraignmēt was made not priuately in a corner, but openly in the publike court, & that in a great feast of the Iewes, as it were in the hearing of the whole world, Thirdly, though Pilate in citing, examining, and condemning Christ, intended not to worke any part of mans redemption, yet was this wholly set downe, in the counsell and good pleasure of God, in whose roome Pilate sate, and whose iudgement he exercised. 2.Chr.19.6

The generall vse of Christs arraignmēt is twofold. First, it is a terrour to all impenitent sinners: for there is no freedome or protection from the iudgement of God, but by the arraignment of Christ: and therefore such as in this life receiue not him by faith, must at the ende of this world be brought out to the most terrible barre of the last iudgement, there to bee arraigned before the King of heauen and earth. And marke the equity hereof. Christ himselfe could not haue beene our Sauiour and redeemer, vnlesse hee had beene brought out to the barre of an earthly iudge, and arraigned as a guilty malefactour: and there is no man vpon earth that liues and dies out of Christ, but hee must whether he will or no, holde vp his hand at the barre of the great Iudge of all mankind, where he shall see hel vnderneath him burning red hot, and opening it selfe wide to swallow him vp: and on the right hand of God standing all the Prophets, Apostles, and Saints of God giuing iudgement against him: on the left hand, the deuill and all his angels accusing him; and within him a guilty conscience condemning him. And thus one day shal the arraignment of those persons be, that with full purpose of heart cleaue not to Christ; & yet alas, huge and infinit is the number of those which make more account of transitorie and earthly matters, euen of their pigs with the Gaderens, then of him and his benefits: & such persons should rather be pitied then despised of vs all, considering their estate is such, that euery day they are going as traitours pinnioned to their owne iudgemēt, that they may go thence to eternall execution.

Secondly, Christs arraignment is a cōfort to the godly. For he was arraigned before Pilate, that al such as truely beleeue in him, might not bee arraigned before God at the day of the last iudgement: he hee was accused before an earthly iudge, that they might be cleared and excused before the heauenly iudge: lastly, he was here condemned on earth, that we might receiue the sentence of absolution, and be eternally saued in heauen.

The arraignment of Christ hath three parts: his apprehension, his accusation, his condemnation. In the apprehension wee must consider two things: the dealing of Christ, and the dealing of Iudas and the Iewes. The dealing and proceeding of Christ was this: when he saw that the time of his apprehension and death was neere, hee solemnely prepared himselfe therto. And his example must teach euery one of vs, who knowe not the shortnesse of our daies, euery houre to prepare our selues against the day of death, that then we may be found readie of the Lord. What? shall the sonne of God himselfe make preparation to his owne death, and shall not wee most miserable sinners doe the same, who stand in neede of a thousand preparations more then he? wherefore let vs continually think with our selues that euery preset day is the last day of our life, that so we may addresse our selues to death againe the next day.

The first thing which Christ doeth in this preparation, is to make choice of the place, in which he was to be apprehended, as will appeare by conferring the Euangelists together. S. Matthew saith, Hee went to the place called Gethsemane: Saint Luke saith, he went to the mount of Oliues as he was accustomed. And that we might not imagine that Christ did this that he might escape and hide himselfe from the Iewes. S. Iohn saith, that Iudas which betraied him knewe the place, because oftentimes he resorted thither with his Disciples: whereas if he had feared apprehension he would haue rather gone aside to some other secret and vnwonted place. This then is the first point to be considered, that Christ knowing the time of his owne death to bee at hand, doeth willingly of his owne accord resort to such a place in which his enemies in all likelihood might easily finde him, & haue fitte opportunitie to attach him. For if he should haue still remained in Hierusalem, the Scribes and Pharises durst not haue enterprised his apprehēsion, because of the people whome they feared: but out of the cittie in the garden all occasion of feare is cutte off. By this it is manifest, that Christ yeelded himselfe to death willingly, and not of constraint: and vnlesse his sufferings had bin voluntarie on his part, they could neuer haue bin a satisfaction to Gods iustice for our sinnes. Here a question offereth it selfe to bee considered, whether man may lawefully flie in daunger and persecution, seeing Christ himselfe doth not. Ans. When good meanes of flying and iust occasion is offered, it is lawefull to flie. When the Iewes sought to kill Paul at Damascus, the Disciples tooke him by night, and put him through the wall, and let him downe in a basket to escape their handes. When Moses was called by God to deliuer the Israelites, after he had slaine the Egyptian, & the fact was known, and Pharao sought to kill him for it, he fled to the land of Madian. And our Sauiour Christ sundry times when he was to be stoned, and other waies hurt by the Iewes, withdrewe himselfe from among them. It is lawfull then to flie in persecution, these caueats obserued. First, if a man finde not himselfe sufficiently strengthened to beare the crosse. Secondly his departure must be agreeable to the generall calling of a Christian, seruing to the glory of God, and the good of his brethren, and the hurt of none. Thirdly there must be freedome at the least for a time from the bond of a mans particular calling. If he be a magistrate, hee must be freed from ruling: if a Minister, from preaching and teaching, other waies he may not flie. And in this respect Christ, who did withdrawe himselfe at other times, would not flie at this time; because the houre of his suffering was come, wherein he intended most willingly to submit himselfe to the good pleasure and will of his father.

Ioh. 18, 4.

The second part of the preparation, is the praier which Christ made vnto his father in the garden. And herein his example doeth teach vs earnestly to pray vnto God against the daunger of imminent death, and the temptations which are to come. And if Christ, who was without sinne, and had the spirit aboue measure had neede to pray, then much more haue we need to be watchfull in al kind of praiers, who are laden with the burthen of sin, and compassed about with manifold impediments and dangerous enemies.

In this praier sundry points worthy our marking are to be considered. The first, who praied? Answ. Christ the Sonne of God: but still wee must remember the distinction of natures and of their operations in one and the same Christ; he praieth not in his godhead, but according to his manhood. The second is, for whome he praith. Answ. Some haue thought that this and all other his praiers were made for his mysticall bodie the Church; but the truth is, he now praies for himselfe, yet not as he was God, for the godhead feeles no want; but as he was a man abased in the forme of a seruant; and that for two causes. First, in that he was a man, he was a creature, and in that respect was to performe homage to God the creator. Secondly, as he was man, he put on the infirmities of our nature, and thereupon praied that he might haue strength and power in his manhood to support him in bearing the whole brunt of the passion to come.

The third point is, to whome he praied? Anſ. To the father: neither must this trouble vs, as though Christ in praying to the father, should pray to himselfe, because he is one and the same God with him. For though in essence they admitte no distinction, yet in person or in the proper maner of subsisting they doe. The father is one person, the sonne another: therfore as the father saying from heauen, This is my welbeloued sonne spake not to himselfe, but to the Sonne: so, againe the sonne when he praieth, he praies not to himself but to the father.

The fourth point, what was the particular cause of his praier. Anſ. His agonie in which his soule was heauie vnto death; not because he feared bodily death, but because the malediction of the lawe, euen the very heate of the furie and indignation of God was poured forth vpon him, wherewith he was affected and troubled, as if it had beene defiled with the sinnes of the whole world. And this appeares, first by the words whereby the Euãgelists expresse the agonie of Christ, which signifie exceeding great sorrow & griefe: secondly his dolefull complaint to his Disciples in the garden, My soule is heauie vnto the death: thirdly, by his feruent praier thrice repeated, full of dolefull passions: fourthly by the comming of an angel to comfort him: fifthly, by his bloodie sweat, the like whereof was neuer heard. And herein lies the difference betweene Christs agonie, & the death of Martyrs: he put on the guilt of all our sinnes, they in death are freed from the same: he was left to himselfe void of comfort, they in the middest of their afflictions feele the vnspeakable comfort of the holy Ghost: and therefore we neede not maruell why Christ should pray against death, which neuertheless his mẽbers haue receiued and borne most ioyfully. Againe, this most bitter agonie of Christ is the ground of all our reioycing, and the cause why Paul bids all the faithful in the person of the Philippians, to reioyce alwaies in the Lord, and againe to reioyce. And here we are further taught, that when wee are plunged into a sea of most grieuous afflictions, and ouerwhelmed with the gulfes of most dreadfull temptations, euen then, then I say, wee should not be discouraged, but lift vp our hearts by feruent praier to God. Thus did Christ when in the garden he was about to drinke the cuppe of the wrath of God, and to sucke vp the very dregs of it: and Dauid saith, that out of the deepes he called on the name of the Lord and was heard. Pſal. 130.1

The fifth point, what is the matter and forme of this praier. Answ. Christ praies to be deliuered from the death and passion which was to come, saying on this manner, Father, let this cup passe from me: yet with two clauses added thereto, If it be possible, and, Not my will, but thy will be done. But it may be demaunded, how it could be, that Christ knowing that it was his fathers wil and Counsel that he should suffer death for man, and also comming into the world for that ende, should make such a request to his Father, without sinne. Answ. The request proceeds onely of a weakenesse or infirmitie in Christs manhood without sinne, which appeareth thus. We must still consider that when he made this praier to his Father, the whole wrath of God, and the very dolours and pangs of hell seazed vpon him: whereby the senses and powers of his mind were astonished, & wholly bent to releeue nature in this agonie. For as when the heart is smitten with griefe, all the blood in the bodie flowes thither to comfort it: so whem Christ was in this astonishment, the vnderstanding and memorie, and all the parts of his humane nature (as it were for a time suspending their owne proper actions) concurred to sustaine and support the spirit and life of Christ, as much as possibly might be. Nowe Christ being in the middest of this perplexed estate, praieth on this manner. Father if it be possible let this cuppe passe. And these words proceede non from

Ioh.12.27 thers will, but onely from a meere per-turbation of minde, caused onely by an outward meanes, namely the apprehension of Gods anger; which neither blinded his vnderstãding nor tooke away his memory so as he forgot his fathers will, but onely stopped and stayed the act of reasoning and remembring for a little time: euen as in the most perfect clocke that is the motion may be stayed by the ayre, or by mans hand, or by some outward cause without any defect or breach, made in any part of it. It may be obiected that Christs will is flatte contrary to the will of his father. Ans. Christs will as he is man and the will of his father in this agony, were not contrary, but onely diuers, and that without any contradictiõ or contrariety. Now a man may will a diuers thing from that which God willeth, & that without sinne. Paul desired to preach the word of God Act.16.6,7 in Asia and Bythynia, but he was hindred by the spirit. For all this, there is no contrariety betweene Paul and the spirit of God; but in the shewe of discord great consent. For that which Paul willeth well, the spirit of God willeth not, by a better will: though the reason hereof be secret, and the reason of Pauls will manifest. Againe the minister in charity reputing the whole congregation to be elect, in holy manner seeketh and willeth the saluation of euery one, which neuertheles the Lord in his eternall counsell willeth not. Now betweene both these wils there may be & is a difference without contrariety. For one good thing as it is good may differ from another; but it cannot be contrary vnto it. It may further be alleadged, that in this praier there seemes to be a combate and fight in the minde, will, and affections of Christ, and therefore sinne. Ans. There be three kinds of combates: the one betweene reason and appetite, and this fight is alwaies sinnefull, and was not in Christ: the second is betweene the flesh and the spirit, and this may be in Gods child who is but in part regenerate; but it did not befall Christ who was perfectly holy. The third is the combate of diuers desires, vpõ sundry respects drawing a man to and fro. This may be in mans nature without fault: and was in Christ, in whom the desire of doing his fathers will strouing & strugling with another desire; whereby nature seekes to preserue it selfe, caused him to in this manner.

The sixth point is, in what manner Christ prayed. Answ. He prayed to his father partly kneeling, partly lying on his face, and that with strong cries and teares, sweating water and blood. and all this he did for our sinnes. Here then behold the agony of Christ as a cleere christall, in which we may fully see the exceeding greatnes of our sinnes, as also the hardnes of our hearts. Wee goe vaunting with our heads to heauen as though it were nothing to sinne against God, whereas the horror of the wrath of God for our rebellions, brought down euen the son of God himselfe, and laid him groueling vpon the earth. And we cannot so much almost as shed one teare for our iniquities, whereas he sweats blood for vs. Oh let vs therefore learne to abase our selues, and to carrie about vs contrite & bleeding hearts, & bee confoũded in our selues for our sins past.

The last point is the euent of the prayer, which is to be heard, as the authour of the Hebrewes saith, Christ Iesus in the daies of the flesh, did offer vp vnto his Father prayers, and supplications, with strong cries and teares, vnto him that was able to saue him: & was also heard in that thing which he feared. Heb.5.7. But some will say, how was Christ heard, seeing he suffered death & bare the pangs of hell, and the full wrath of God? if hee had beene heard he should haue beene deliuered from all this. Answ. We must know that God heares our prayers two waies: I. When he directly graunts our request. II. When knowing what is good for vs he giues not vs our requests directly, but a thing answerable thereunto. And thus was Christ heard: for he was not deliuered from suffering; but yet hee had strength and power giuen him, whereby his manhood was made able to beare the brunt of Gods wrath. And in the same maner God heareth the prayers of his seruants vpon earth. Paul prayed to be deliuered from the angel Satan that buffeted him: but the Lord answered that it should not so be, because his graee whereby hee was inabled to resist his temptation was sufficient: and Paul finding the fruit of his 2.Cor.12.9. prayers on this manner, protests hereupõ that he will reioyce in his infirmities. Others pray for tẽporall blessings, as health, life, liberty, &c. which not withstanding God holds backe, and giues in stead therof spirituall graces, patience, faith, contẽtation of mind. Augustine saith. God heares not our prayers alwaies according to our wils Audit ad salutem: nõ audit ad voluntatem.

wils & desires, but according as the things asked shall be for our saluation. He is like the Physitian, who goes on to launch the wound and heares not the patient though he crie neuer so, till the cure be ended.

Now followeth the second thing to be considered in Christs apprehension, namly the dealing of the Iewes: wherein we must consider foure things: I. how they consult together concerning Christs apprehension. II. how they came to the place and mette him. III. how they laide hands on him. IV. how they bound him and tooke him away. For the first, before they enterprised this matter, they did wisely and warily laie their heads togither, to consult of the time & place: & also of the manner of apprehending him. So S. Matthewe saith, There assembled togither the chiefe priests, and the Scribes, and the Elders of the people into the hall of the chiefe Priest called Caiphas: and consulted how they might take Iesus by subtiltie. Whence wee learne two good instructions: first, the Iewes hauing a quarrell against Christ, could neuer be at rest till they had his blood: and therfore they consult howe they might take him; but God did so order the matter, and dispose of their purposes and consultations, that euen thereby he did confound them and their whole nation. For by reason of this hainous sinne against Christ, came the iust wrath of God vpon them, & so remaineth vnto this day. Whereby we see, that the Lord will ouerthrowe such in their own wisdome, that wil be wise without the direction of gods word, & against Christ. And thus it was with Achitophel, who for wisedome was as the Oracle of God: yet because he rebelled against the Lords annointed, God confounded him in his owne wisdome. For when his counsell which he gaue against Dauid was not followed, he thought himselfe despised as the text saith, and sadled his asse, & arose & went home into his cittie, and put his household in order and hanged himselfe: and in this action he shewed himselfe more senseless then a bruit beast. And in our dayes the Leaguers that haue bound themselues by oath to roote out the Church of God; by his most wonderfull prouidence turne their swords against themselues and destroy each other. Therefore if we would be wise, we must learn to be wise in Christ: for else our counsell will be our own confusion. Secondly, hence we learne, that if any shall liue in stubbernesse, and rebellion against Christ, the Lord will so carrie and order those men, or that people, that in the end they shall be the very causes of their owne perdition. This we see most plainely in the example of these Iewes: for they euermore enuyed Christ, and nowe they goe on to take counsell against him; but God so disposed thereof, that euen by this meanes they brought destruction vpon themselues and their countrie. This must teach thee to take heed how thou liuest in thy sinnes: for if thou doe so, the Lord hath many waies to worke thy confusion: as, thy conscience to condemne thee; thy friends to forsake thee; the deuil and his angels to torment and molest thee; and his creatures to annoy thee. Yea, the Lord can leaue all these, and make thine owne selfe to be the direct meanes of working thine own confusion both in bodie and soule eternally: and that euen then when thou art most warie & wise in thine owne behalfe: and this is the reward of all those that walke on in their euill wayes without any true conuersion.

Mat. 26. 3. 4. 5.

2. Sam. 17. 23.

Hauing consulted, in the next place they come to the garde, where Christ was to be apprehended. And here wee are to consider who they were that came, namely the Scribes & Pharisies, the high Priests and their seruants; a band of Souldiers, & the seruants of Pontius Pilate, and the Elders of the Iewes: all which came with one consent to the place where Christ was, that they might attach him. Where we learne a good lesson, that all sorts of wicked men disagreeing among themselues, can agree against Christ. The Scribes and Pharisies were two cōtrary sects, & at discord one with another in matters of religion: & Iudas was one of Christs disciples: the Elders differed from them all: the souldiers were Gentiles: all these were at variance among themselues, and could not one brooke another. So also we reade that Herod & Pontius Pilate were not friends: but at the same time when Christ was apprehended, Pilate sent him to Herod, and they were made friends. Now as these wicked men did all conspire against Christ; so doe the wicked ones of this world in all countries and kingdomes band themselues against the Church of Christ at this day. And howsoeuer such bee at discord among themselues, yet they doe all ioyne hand in hand to persecute Christ in his members. And the reason is plaine; because Christ and his religion is as flatte opposite

to

to the corrupt diſpoſition of all men, as light is to darknes.

Againe, whereas we ſee ſo many ſorts of men ſo amiably conſenting to take Chriſt: we may note how all men naturally doe hate and abhorre him, and his religion. And looke as then it was with Chriſt, ſo hath it bin with al his members, & wil bee to the end of the world. They are accounted as the offſcouring of the world, men not worthy to liue on the face of the earth: as Chriſt told his Diſciples, ſaying, Ye ſhall be hated of all nations for my names ſake. Mat. 24.9.

Let vs alſo marke how all theſe came furniſhed to apprehend Chriſt: the text ſaith, They came with clubs and ſtaues as vnto a theefe. Luk. 22.52. All the whole nation of the Iewes knew right wel that Chriſt was no man of violence, but meeke and lowly: and yet they came armed to apprehend him; as though he had bin ſome mighty potẽtate that would not haue bin apprehended, but haue reſiſted them. Where we ſee the propertie of an euill conſcience, which is to feare where there is no cauſe at al. This cauſeth ſome to be afraid of their owne ſhadowes: and if they ſee but a worme peepe out of the ground, they are at their wits ende: and as Salomon ſaith, The wicked flee when none purſueth them. Prou. 28.1

After that they are now come to Chriſt, we are to cõſider two things in their meetings: I. Chriſts communication with them. II. The treaſon of Iudas. Concerning their conference, it is ſaide, Ieſus knowing all things that ſhould come vnto him, went forth, and ſaid vnto them, Whome ſeeke ye? they anſwered him, Ieſus of Nazareth: Ieſus anſwered, I am he. Now ſo ſoone as he had ſaid, I am he, the ſtouteſt of them fell to the ground, as beeing aſtoniſhed at the maieſtie of his word. Where note, that the word of God is a word of power. The ſame power was in his word when he raiſed vp Lazarus: for when he had lien in the graue, and had entred into ſome degree of corruption, he did no more, but ſaid, Lazarus come forth; and he that was dead came forth. And hence we may alſo marke what a wonderfull might & power is in the word preached: for it is the very word of Chriſt, and therfore beeing preached by his miniſters lawfully called by him thereunto; hath the ſame power and force in it which Chriſt himſelfe ſhewed whẽ he ſpake on earth. It is the ſauour of life vnto life to ſaue thoſe that heare it: or the ſauour of death vnto death. It is like to a vapour or perfume in the aire. which in ſome mens noſtrils is ſauorie and pleaſant, and doth reuiue them; and others againe it ſtriketh dead. And therefore euery one that either now, or heretofore hath heard this word preached, ſhall finde it to be vnto them either a word of power to ſaue their ſoules, or through their corruption the miniſterie of death and condemnation. Againe, if a word ſpoken by Chriſt, beeing in a baſe or low eſtate, be able to ouerthrow his enimies, then at the laſt day when he ſhall come in glorie, and power, and maieſtie to iudge both the quike and the dead; what power ſhal his words haue, Goe you curſed of my father into euerlaſting fire which was perpared for the deuil and his angels? The conſideration of this, that the word of Chriſt ſhall euen be as powerfull at that day, muſt be a motiue to euery one of vs to cauſe vs to come vnto him: and while we haue time in theſe daies of grace and mercie to ſeeke to be reconciled vnto him for all our ſinnes, leaſt at the laſt day we heare that dreadfull voyce of Chriſt ſounding againſt vs Go ye curſed into euerlaſting fire, &c.

Ioh. 18.4. 5.6.

And thus much for the communication. Now followeth Iudas his treaſon: wherein we are to obſerue theſe things: I. the qualities & conditions of the man that did the treaſon. He was by calling a diſciple choſen to be an Apoſtle. which is the chiefeſt in Eccleſiaſticall callings: and among the diſciples he was in ſome accoũt becauſe he was as it were a ſteward in Chriſts familie, and bare the bagge: but yet he was a traytour, and did more againſt Chriſt thẽ al the Iewes did. For he brought them to the place where they might apprehend him: and when they were come did point him out vnto them, and deliuered him into their hands: nay he gaue them a ſigne and token, ſaying, Whome I kiſſe, he it is: take him and lead him away warily. Here we ſee the cauſe why Chriſt called Iudas a deuill: for he ſaid, Haue I not choſen you twelue, and one of you is a deuill? He became to be a deuill and a traytor by nouriſhing a wicked and a couetous heart. And here we are taught that the miniſters of the word if they make no conſcience of ſinne, by the iuſt iudgement of God doe prooue deuils incarnate: this example of Iudas doth manifeſt the ſame: & the reaſõ is plaine, for the more knowledge a man hath, the more wicked he is if he wat grace. They are like in this caſe vnto a man that

Againe, whereas we ſee ſo many ſorts of men ſo amiably conſenting to take Chriſt: we may note how all men naturally doe hate and abhorre him, and his religion. And looke as then it was with Chriſt, ſo hath it bin with al his members, & wil bee to the end of the world. They are accounted as the offcouring of the world, men not worthy to liue on the face of the earth: as Chriſt told his Diſciples, ſaying, Ye ſhall be hated of all nations for my names ſake. Mat. 24.9.

Let vs alſo marke how all theſe came furniſhed to apprehend Chriſt: the text ſaith, They came with clubs and ſtaues as vnto a theefe. Luk. 22.52. All the whole nation of the Iewes knew right wel that Chriſt was no man of violence, but meeke and lowly: and yet they came armed to apprehend him; as though he had bin ſome mighty potẽtate that would not haue bin apprehended, but haue reſiſted them. Where we ſee the propertie of an euill conſcience, which is to feare where there is no cauſe at al. This cauſeth ſome to be afraid of their owne ſhadowes: and if they ſee but a worme peepe out of the ground, they are at their wits ende: and as Salomon ſaith, The wicked flee when none purſueth them. Prou. 28.1

After that they are now come to Chriſt, we are to cõſider two things in their meetings: I. Chriſts communication with them. II. The treaſon of Iudas. Concerning their conference, it is ſaide, Ieſus knowing all things that ſhould come vnto him, went forth, and ſaid vnto them, Whoome ſeeke ye? they anſwered him, Ieſus of Nazareth: Ieſus anſwered, I am he. Now ſo ſoone as he had ſaid, I am he, the ſtouteſt of them fell to the ground, as beeing aſtoniſhed at the maieſtie of his word. Where note, that the word of God is a word of power. The ſame power was in his word when he raiſed vp Lazarus: for when he had lien in the graue, and had entred into ſome degrees of corruption, he did no more, but ſaid, Lazarus come forth; and he that was dead came forth. And hence we may alſo marke what a wonderfull might & power is in the word preached: for it is the very word of Chriſt, and therfore beeing preached by his miniſters lawfully called by him thereunto; hath the ſame power and force in it which Chriſt himſelfe ſhewed whẽ he ſpake on earth. It is the ſauour of life vnto life to ſaue thoſe that heare it: or the ſauour of death vnto death. It is like to a vapour or perfume in the aire, which in ſome mens noſtrils is ſauorie and pleaſant, and doth reuiue them; and others againe it ſtriketh dead. And therefore euery one that either now, or heretofore hath heard this word preached, ſhall finde it to be vnto them either a word of power to ſaue their ſoules, or through their corruption the miniſterie of death and condemnation. Againe, if a word ſpoken by Chriſt, beeing in a baſe or low eſtate, be able to ouerthrow his enimies, then at the laſt day when he ſhall come in glorie, and power, and maieſtie to iudge both the quike and the dead; what power ſhal his words haue, Goe you curſed of my father into euerlaſting fire which was perpared for the deuil and his angels? The conſideration of this, that the word of Chriſt ſhall euen be as powerfull at that day, muſt be a motiue to euery one of vs to cauſe vs to come vnto him: and while we haue time in theſe daies of grace and mercie to ſeeke to be reconciled vnto him for all our ſinnes, leaſt at the laſt day we heare that dreadfull voyce of Chriſt ſounding againſt vs Go ye curſed into euerlaſting fire, &c.

Ioh. 18.4. 5.6.

And thus much for the communication. Now followeth Iudas his treaſon: wherein we are to obſerue theſe things: I. the qualities & conditions of the man that did the treaſon. He was by calling a diſciple choſen to be an Apoſtle, which is the chiefeſt in Eccleſiaſticall callings: and among the diſciples he was in ſome accoũt, becauſe he was as it were a ſteward in Chriſts familie, and bare the bagge: but yet he was a traytour, and did more againſt Chriſt thẽ al the Iewes did. For he brought them to the place where they might apprehend him: and when they were come did point him out vnto them, and deliuered him into their hands: nay he gaue them a ſigne and token, ſaying, Whoome I kiſſe, he it is: take him and lead him away warily. Here we ſee the cauſe why Chriſt called Iudas a deuill: for he ſaid, Haue I not choſen you twelue, and one of you is a deuill? He became to be a deuill and a traytor by nouriſhing a wicked and a couetous heart. And here we are taught that the miniſters of the word, if they make no conſcience of ſinne, by the iuſt iudgement of God doe prooue deuils incarnate: this example of Iudas doth manifeſt the ſame: & the reaſõ is plaine, for the more knowledge a man hath, the more wicked he is if he wat grace. They are like in this caſe vnto a man that hath meat and drinke enough, but no ſtomacke to digeſt meate: whereby the more he eateth, the more it turneth to his hurt. This I ſpeake not to deface the callings of miniſters; but that thoſe which preach Gods word, ſhould not doe it with impenitent hearts, liuing in their owne ſinnes. For it is a feareful thing for a man to ſpeak vnto the people, of the pardon of their ſinne, and yet himſelfe not to apprehend the ſame by faith. A lumpe of waxe if you keepe it from heate, or from the fire, it keeps his owne forme ſtill, but if it be held to the fire, it melts and runnes abroad: ſo miniſters who by reaſon of their callings come neare God, if they be lumps of iniquitie and liue in their ſinnes, they ſhall finde that the corruptions of their hearts will melt abroad as waxe at the fire. And therefore euery one that is deſigned to this calling, muſt firſt purge himſelfe of his owne ſinnes, or els Gods iudgments ſhall fal vpō him, as they did on Iudas that betraied Chriſt.

hath

Ier. 15.19

Iſa.6.5. &A.10.28.

Secondly, let vs conſider what mooued Iudas to betray his maſter: namely, the deſire of wealth & gaine: & this couetouſnes, which is an inſatiable deſire of money, is the roote of all ſinne: not that all ſinnes came of it, but becauſe where it is, there all other ſinnes are preſerued, and doe get ſtrength. The deſire of thirtie peeces of ſiluer cauſed Iudas to make an agreement with the Iewes to betray his maſter. Some man will happily ſay, that this practiſe of Iudas was very ſtrange, and that no man now liuing would doe the like for any money. Anſ. Iudas is dead indeede, but his practiſe is yet aliue: for in the high and waightie calling of the miniſterie, he that hath charge of ſoules, and either can not teach and feede his flocke, or els wil not, though he betray not Chriſt in his own perſon, yet he betraies the mēbers of Chriſt vnto the deuill. If a nource ſhould take a mans child to bring vp, and yet ſeldome or neuer giue it milke; in ſo much that the child pineth away for very hunger: is not ſhee the very cauſe of the death of it? yes verily. And ſo it is with him that taketh vpon him the charge of Gods people, and neuer feedes them with the milke of Gods word, or els ſo ſeldome that their ſoules doe famiſh: he is the murtherer of them, and hath betraied them into the hands of their enemies: & ſhalbe condemned for them as a traitour vnto God vnleſſe hee repent. Beſides, thoſe that liue by traffique in buying and ſelling, make gaine by lying, ſwearing, & breaking the Lords Sabboth: and they alſo are very Iudaſſes: for they choppe away their ſoules with the deuill for a little gaine. And more lamentable is their caſe, becauſe it is hard to find one of an hundred in the world that makes conſcience of a lie, or of any bad dealing; if any gaine at all may come thereby. Men vſe to crie out on Iudas for betraying Chriſt and they doe well; yet they themſelues for a little worldly pelfe betray their owne ſoules. If ſuch would not be counted Iudaſſes, they muſt leaue off to ſinne and keepe a good conſcience in Gods worſhip, and the works of their callings.

1. Tim. 6. 10.

Thirdly, let vs conſider what courſe Iudas tooke in betraying Chriſt: he was very ſubmiſſe, ſaying, Haile, Maſter, and kiſſed him. Why did he ſo? herein he plaied the moſt palpable hypocrite: for hauing gotten a peece of money, he thought that neither Chriſt, nor any of his fellow diſciples ſhould haue knowne of it, (though Chriſt knew it well enough) and therefore he comes in this manner to him, thinking that Chriſt would haue conueied himſelfe from amongſt them at the very pinch, as he had done ſomtimes before. And this practiſe alſo of Iudas is common in the world: Iudas an enemie vnto Chriſt ſpeaks him faire, and ſalutes him: and ſo doe moſt of our ſecure and drowſie proteſtants in England: they ſalute Chriſt, both by hearing his word & receiuing his ſacraments: and as the Prophet ſaith, They honour God with their lipps, but their hearts are farre from him. We may ſee daily experience of this: euery man will ſay, Lord, Lord, but in their liues and conuerſations, few there be that denie him not, both in the duties which they owe vnto God, as alſo in their duties towards their brethrē. Many come to heare gods word becauſe they are compelled by the Magiſtrates laws: but when they are come, they worſhip not God in their hearts, which is plainly ſeene by the breach of Gods holy Sabboth in euery place: & that they make more account of a meſſe of pottage with Eſau, then of their birth-right: and of thirtie peeces of ſiluer, then of Chriſt himſelfe.

The third point to be handed in Chriſts apprehenſion is, that they lay hold on him: wherein we muſt conſider two things. I. the reſiſtance made by Chriſts diſciples. II. their flight. For the firſt, Chriſts diſciples ples reſiſted, and ſpecially Peter drawing his ſword, ſtroke one of the high prieſts

Math.26.3 ſeruants, and cut off his eare. This fact our Sauiour Chriſt reprooues: and that for theſe cauſes: 1. becauſe his diſciples were priuate men: and they that came to apprehend them were magiſtrates. Secondly, he was to worke the worke of mans redemption: now Peter by this fact did what he could to hinder him. And from this practiſe of Peter we may learne, that nothing in the world is ſo hard to a man, as to take vp his croſſe & follow Chriſt. One would thinke it ſhould be a hard matter for him to encounter with his enemies, eſpecially they beeing ſtronger then he: but Peter ſtoutly reſiſting makes nothing of it: whereas a little before when Chriſt tolde him and the reſt concerning his paſſion, they were ſo heauie with griefe that they could not hold vp their heads: ſo hard a thing it is to beare the croſſe; & for this very cauſe afterward whē Chriſt reprooued him for ſtriking, both he and all the reſt of the diſciples fled away. Secondly, Peter in al mans reaſon was to be commended, becauſe he ſtrake in the defēce of his maſter; but Chriſt reprooues him for it. Whence we learne, that if a man be zealous for Chriſt, he muſt be zealous within the cōpaſſe of his calling: & not be zealous firſt, and then looke for a calling, but firſt looke for a calling, and then be zealous. Which thing if Peter had marked, he had not dealt ſo raſhly; for beeing without the compaſſe of his calling he could not but doe amiſſe. Here it may be demanded, whether Chriſt and his religion may not be maintained by the ſword? I anſwer, that the Magiſtrate, which is the vicegerent of the Lord, is the keeper of both tables: and therefore is to maintaine religion with the ſword: and ſo may put to death Atheiſts, which hold there is no God, of which ſort there are many in theſe dayes: and hereriques, which malitiouſly maintaine, and hold any thing that ouerthrowes the foūdation of religion in the Churches where-Mar.13.30 of they were members. But ſome obiect, that in the parable of the field, the ſeruants are commanded not to pluck vp the tares from the wheat, but to ſuffer both to grow till harueſt: and that therefore there muſt be no ſeparation of heretiques and true Chriſtians before the laſt day of iudgement. Anſ. The ſcope of that place is not to forbid the execution of heretiques; but it ſpeakes onely of the finall ſeparation which muſt be in the ende of the world. For there the maiſter of the familie doth ſignifie God himſelfe, and the field; the Church militant ſpread ouer the face of the whole earth: & by tares is meant not onely heretiques, but alſo all thoſe that are forth of the church: the ſeruants are Gods holy angels, & the harueſt is the laſt iudgment. Here further it may be demanded, who may vſe the ſworde? Anſ. All men may vſe the ſword to ſtroke and to kill, into whoſe hands God putteth the ſword. Now God putteth it into the hand firſt and principally of the publike Magiſtrate, who when iuſt occaſion ſerues may draw it out. And againe it is put into a priuate mans hand ſometime. A priuate man when he is aſſailed of his enemie may take the ſword in way of his owne defence, and may kill his enemie therewith (if there be no other helpe) not doing it vpon malice, but becauſe he can no otherwiſe eſcape, and ſaue his owne life: and ſo for want of a Magiſtrate, he is a Magiſtrate vnto himſelfe.

In the flight of the Diſciples we may conſider two things: the time, & the quality of the perſons. The time was at the apprehenſion of our lord and Sauiour. And this came to paſſe not without the ſpeciall prouidence of God: that it might bee knowne, that Chriſt had no helper or fellow in the accompliſhment of the worke of our redemption: and that, whereas we for our ſinnes deſerued to be forſaken of all creatures, he beeing our pledge & ſuretie might bee forſaken for vs. As for the qualitie of the perſons that flye, they were the choſen diſciples of Chriſt, ſuch as had beleeued in him, confeſſed him, and preached in his name. And this ſerueth to teach vs that GOD will other whiles forſake his owne children and ſeruants, and leaue them to themſelues in ſome part, that they may feele their wants and miſeries, and their weakeneſſe in themſelues, and by that meanes be humbled thoroughly, and be touched with an hungring deſire after Chriſt. As a mother ſets downe her child & hides her ſelfe, ſuffering it to crie, fall, and breake the face, not becauſe ſhee hates it, but that ſhee may teach it to depend vpon her, and loue her: ſo God giueth grace to his children, and yet againe ſometime he doth in part withdraw it frō them, & then they faile in their duties ſundrie waies: and this he doth to make them aſhamed of themſelues, and to cauſe them to put al their cõfidence out of themselues in the merits of Christ.

The fourth thing to bee considered in Christs apprehension, is their binding of him. In which action of theirs we are to obserue first of all the circumstance of time, when this binding was. When our Sauiour Christ had said vnto them, I am he, they beeing astonished fell to the ground: and withall, when Peter had smittẽ off Malchus eare with his sword, Christ healed the same miraculously. Yet for all this, though they had seene his wonderfull power both in word and deede, they proceede in malice against him; & lay hands on him, and bind him as a malefactour. In this we note what a fearefull sinne hardnesse of heart is: the daunger whereof appeareth in this, that if a man be ouertaken with it, there is nothing that can stay or daunt him in his wicked proceedings: no not the powerfull wordes and deedes of Christ himselfe. And indeede among Gods iudgments there is none more fearfull then this: and yet (how feareful soeuer it bee) it is a rife sinne amongst vs in these our dayes. For it is very euident by common experience, that the more men are taught the doctrine of the law, and of the Gospell, the more hard and senslesse are their hearts: like vnto the stithy; which, the more it is beaten vpon with the yron hãmer, the harder it is. And againe, it is hard to finde men that sorrow for their sinnes, and feele the want of Christ: which argueth the exceeding deadnes of spirit. And let vs be resolued that it is a most terrible iudgment of God, the rather to be feared, because it is like a pleasant sleepe, into which when a man is fallen, he feeles neither paine nor griefe. And therefore wee for our parts must looke vnto it with feare and trembling, least it take such hold of vs that we be past al hope of recouery.

Ioh. 18, 12.

Furthermore, this binding of Christ was prefigured vnto vs in the sacrifices of the old Testament: for the beast that was to be sacrificed, was tied with cordes and bound, and so brought to the altar. And whereas Christ was bound, we must not consider him in his owne person; but as he standing in our roome and stead beares the person of all sinners: and therefore where as he is thus taken captiue by his enemies, to be brought before a mortall iudge, there to be arraigned for vs: hence we learne two good instructions. First, here is a comfort to all the people of God: Christ was boũd by his enemies, that they might be vnlooſed from the bondage of Satan, sinne, and their owne corruptions (vnder which they lie bound by nature) and might haue free liberty in and by him. Secondly al impenitent sinners are taught hereby to reforme and amend their hearts and liues. For what exceeding madnes is this, that they by Christs bonds beeing set at liberty, will yet liue and die in their sinnes, & take pleasure to lie bound hand and foote vnder the power of sinne and Satan. And indeede this sheweth vnto vs the fearefull and dangerous estate of all those that goe on still in their sinnes. For what can the say for themselues at the day of iudgement, when as nowe they haue freedome offered and will not accept of it?

Thus much of Christs apprehension: now followeth the inditement. For they proceede against him iudicially, after the custome of the Iewes. Christs inditement was twofold. One before Caiphas the high priest in the great counsell at Ierusalem; the second before the ciuill Iudge Pontius Pilate, as is plainely set forth by al the Euangelists. And Christs arraignment before Caiphas was a preparation to the second before Pontius Pilate, that the Iewes might throughly proceede against him. In the first we are to consider these pointes: I. The time in which Christ was indited. II. The ende of his inditement. III. The whole tenour and proceeding thereof. For the first: Christ was indited earely in the morning at the breake of the day: for he was apprehended in the night, and with all hast brought into Caiphas hall, where they kept him all night: and at the breake of the day Caiphas the high priest, and the Elders with the Scribes and Pharisies, held a solemne councell against him: and there they receiued accusations and condemned him before morning, at which time they sent him to the common hall, as Saint Matthew saith, when the morning was come, all the chiefe Priests and Elders of the people tooke counsell against Iesus to put him to death: and ledde him away bound, and deliuered him to Pontius Pilate. In which action of theirs we are to marke two points. First the diligence of vngodly men and the quickneſse of their nature to practise sinne and wickednes: as it was said of the old Iewes, their feete run to euill, and they make hast to shed blood. When the Israelites would sacrifice to the golden calfe which they had made; it is said,

Ioh. 18. 19.

Isa. 59. 7.

Exo.32.6. said, they rose vp earely in the morning. Hēce it appeares, that if God leaue vs to our selues, we are as ready to practise any mischiefe as the fire is to burne without delay and that with much violence. Now the consideration of this must moue euery one of vs to take heed of all occasions and prouocations to sinne whatsoeuer they be, that the corruption of our nature breake not forth any way. Secondly, in the circumstance of time of this Counsell, we may marke the rashnes of this solemne assemblie in iudiciall proceedings: whereas they examine him both of his doctrine, and also of his Disciples, omitting such circumstances as should haue beene vsed; as the serious examining of witnesses, & the weying of his contrary answers: for he is taken and brought before the Iudge and condemned of the sudden. Now as this was the practise of this Counsell, so on the contrary the common complaint of these times is of the slow dispatch of matters in law, and of the long delay: in so much that some be almost vndone before their suits be ended; whereas iudiciall proceedings were ordained by God, not for mens vndoing, but for the maintaining of the cōmon peace, and libertie, and wealth. And therefore iustice ought to be dispatched with such speed, as men thereby might be furthered, and not hindered.

Math.26.59. Mar.14.55 The end of Christs inditement was directly to kill him, and to put him to death. Here is no indifferent proceeding to bee looked for, but plotting on euery hand for the very blood of Christ. Where note, that in the hearts of all wicked men, there is an ingrafted hatred of Christ, and as it were bred in the bone: and the same affection the world carrieth to the members of Christ. This hatred is manifested in the first giuing of the promise, I will put enmitie betweene thee and the woman, betweene thy seede and her seede. It appeares in the hatred that Cain bare to his brother Abel, Ismael towards Isaac, Esau towards Iacob: & the Gentiles that were without the couenant, towards the Church of God at all times. And to come neere to our selues, this ingrafted hatred that is in the heart of the wicked against Christ and his members, is as plentifull, and as euident as euer it was, in these our dayes. For among all men none are more maligned and hated then those that professe Christ: and for none other cause, but because they professe Christ. And hereupon the very profession of religion is laden with nicknames and reprochfull tearmes by all sorts of men.

And thus much of the end and intent of their counsell. The proceeding in iudgment stands in these points. I. They examine Christ. II. They bring witnesses against him. III. They adiure him to tell them who he is: of these in order. First, they examine our Sauiour Christ of his doctrine, suspecting him to be a false prophet: secondarily, of his disciples, as suspecting him seditiously to raise vp a new sect vnto himselfe, to make a faction amongst the Iewes. Now to this examination let vs marke Christs answer, in which he saith nothing at all concerning his disciples: whereas notwithstanding he might haue said, that one of thē betraied him, an other denied him, and the rest fled away: whereby we note, that it is not our dutie at all times, & in all places, to speake of the faults and wants that we know by others. Secondly, the answer which he makes is onely concerning his doctrine: whereby the ministers of God & all men els are taught, that beeing called before their enemies, to giue reason of their doctrine: they are (as Saint Peter saith) to be alwaies readie to giue an account of the hope that is in them. And further wee are to consider the wisdome that Christ vseth in answering: for he saith nothing of his doctrine in particular, but saide, I spake openly in the world, I euer taught in the Synagogue, and in the Temple whither the Iewes resorted: in secret haue I taught nothing: aske them therefore what I said which heard me: behold they can tell you what I saide. Now the reason why he answered thus sparingly in generall tearmes is; because their examination serued onely to intangle him: and out of his wordes to gather matter of accusation. After whose example we may learne, that beeing called to make answer of our faith and doctrine before our enemies, wee are to doe it so, as thereby we doe not intangle our selues; nor giue any aduantage vnto our enemies: & hereof we haue a notable example in the Apostle Paul, Act.23.6. Againe, in the wordes of Christs answer we must obserue two things. First, that the place where Christ taught was publike. Nowe hence it may be demanded, whether ministers may handle the word of God priuatly or no? Ans. The state of Gods Church is two-fold: peaceable or troublesome. In the time of peace ministers must preach the

the word publikely: but in time of perſecution, for the ſafety and preſeruation of the Church of God, they may with good warrant preach priuately: and indeede at ſuch times the aſſemblies of the Church
Act.12.12 make priuate places publike. And hence we learne, that in time of peace, all thoſe that are called to the office of the miniſtery, muſt (if it be poſſible) ſpend their labour publikely, ſo as they may doe moſt good. Secondly whereas Chriſt ſaith, hee preached in their ſynagogues and temple, which at that time were places full of diſorder; inſomuch as he called the temple
Mat.21.13 a den of theeues: and the Scribes & Phariſies had corrupted the doctrine of the Math.15.3. Law, tranſgreſſing the commandements of God in their owne traditions: & they taught iuſtification by the workes of the law, as Paul ſaith, They beeing ignorant of the righteouſnes of God, and going about to ſtabliſh
Rom.10.3 their owne righteouſnes which is by workes, and not ſubmitted themſelues to the righteouſnes of God. Beſides all this, they were looſe and wicked men in their liues and conuerſations: and therefore Chriſt commanded the people that they ſhould obſerue, and doe whatſoeuer the Scribes and Mat.23. 2,3. Phariſies bid thē, ſitting in Moſes chaire: but after their workes they muſt not doe; becauſe they ſay and doe not. Nowe although theſe corruptions and deformities were in the Iewiſh Church, yet our Sauiour Chriſt made no ſeparation from it, but came & preached both in their temple & ſynagogues, where theſe ſeducers & falſe teachers were. And hence wee gather that the practiſe of al thoſe men in our Church which ſeparate themſelues from all aſſemblies for the wants thereof, holding that our Church is no Church, that the grace which is wrought by the preaching of the word among vs is nothing els but a ſathanicall illuſion, that Sacraments are no Sacraments, I ſay, this their practiſe is condemned by our Sauiour Chriſts conuerſing among thē Iewes. For if Chriſt ſhould haue followed their opinion, he ought to haue fled from amongeſt the Iewes, and not ſo much as once to haue come into the temple, or taught in their Synagogues; but contrariwiſe he ioyned himſelfe with them: and therefore we can not in good conſcience diſioyne our ſelues from the Church of England. The ſecond thing to be obſerued in Chriſts anſwer is, that hee referres Caiphas to the iudgement of his hearers, beeing reſolued of the truth of his owne doctrine, though ſundry of them were his vtter enemies. Behold thē a good exāple for all the miniſters of Gods word to follow; teaching them to deliuer Gods word ſo purely and ſincerely, that if they be called into queſtion about the ſame, they may be bold to appeale to the conſciences of their hearers although they be wicked men.

uants of Caiphas ſmites Chriſt with a rod; in whome the ſaying is verified, Like maſter, like ſeruant: that is, if the maiſter bee wicked, ſeruants commonly wil be wicked alſo: if the maſter be an enemy to Chriſt, his ſeruant will bee Chriſts enemy alſo. And this is the cauſe why there are ſo many lewd apprentiſes and ſeruants, becauſe there are ſo many lewd maſters. Many maſters complaine of ſeruāts now a daies; but there is more cauſe why they ſhould complaine of themſelues: for vſually ſeruants will not become obedient to their maſters, till their maſters firſt become obedient vnto Chriſt: therefore let maſters learne to obey God, & then their ſeruants will obey them alſo.

Further, Chriſt beeing ſmitten, makes this anſwer: If I haue euill ſpoken, beare witneſſe of the euill: but if I haue well ſpoken, why ſmiteſt thou me? making complaint of an iniury done vnto him. Now hereupon ſcoffing Iulian the Apoſtata ſaith, Chriſt keepes nor his owne lawes, but goeth againſt his owne precept; when as he ſaide, If one ſtrike thee on the one cheeke, turne to Mat.5.39.
him the other alſo. But we muſt know, that in theſe words Chriſts meaning is, that a man muſt rather ſuffer a double wrong, then ſeeke a priuate reuenge. And before Chriſt ſpake in his owne defence, which man may lawfully doe, and not ſeeke any reuenge: for it is one thing to defend his owne cauſe, and another to ſeeke reuenge.

Now followes the ſecond point in their proceeding, which is, the producing of falſe witneſſes againſt him; as S. Matthew ſaith, The whole counſell ſought falſe witneſſe Mat.26.60 againſt him, and though many came yet found they none: for they could not agree together, becauſe they alleadged falſe things againſt him; which they could not prooue. And thus the members of Chriſt haue oftē ſuch enemies as make no bones ſhamefully to auouch that againſt them, which they cannot be able to iuſtifie. The tenne Tertul.

ſhameleſſe reports that men gaue out, which ſayd that Chriſtians liued on mans fleſh: and therefore ſlew their owne children: 2. that they liued on raw fleſh: 3. that they committed inceſt one with an other in their aſſemblies: 4. that they worſhipped the head of an aſſe: 5. that they worſhipped the Sunne & Moone: 6. that they were traytours and ſought to vndermine the Romane Empire: and laſtly, whereſoeuer was thunder or earthquakes, ſeditions or tumults, or any diſquietnes or trouble, Chriſtians were accuſed as the authors thereof. Such enemies haue they had in all ages: and in theſe our daies the ſame is practiſed, and will be to the worlds end. Now when the firſt witneſſes could not agree among themſelues, then two other falſe witneſſes came forth, which auouched that Chriſt ſaid, I will deſtroy this Temple made with hands, and within three dayes will build an other made without hands. Indeede Chriſt ſaid ſome ſuch words: for ſaith he, Deſtroy this Temple, and within three dayes I will build it vp againe. But he ſpake this of the temple of his body: whereas they malitiouſly did interpret him to haue ſpoken of the temple in Ieruſalem. And againe they change the words, for Chriſt ſayde, Deſtroy this temple, &c. but theſe witneſſes affirme he ſayde, I will deſtroye this temple made with hands, &c. And thus they change both words and meaning: and therefore the holy Ghoſt calleth them falſe witneſſes. By this we muſt be aduertiſed to take heede how we report mens words: for if we change the meaning, though in part we retaine the words, wee may ſoone become ſlanderers and falſe witneſſes: & as this dutie muſt be performed towards all men, ſo eſpecially towards the miniſters of the Goſpel: and the neglect of this dutie procureth many ſlanders to them in this our Church: whereof indeede the reporters are the cauſe, and not the miniſters themſelues.

Ioh. 2. 19. verſ. 21.

Now at this falſe accuſation Chriſt was ſilent, ſo as Caiphas asked him why he anſwered nothing. Herein wee are to conſider many things: 1. Why Chriſt was ſilent. The cauſes be two: firſt he was to ſhew himſelfe a patterne of true humilitie and patience, therefore euen then would he be ſilent when he was moſt falſly accuſed of his aduerſaries. Secondly he is ſilent, that ſtanding before the iudge to be condemned, the ſentence might proceed againſt him, and he might ſuffer the death appointed, which was due vnto vs, and ſo become our redeemer. And in Chriſts example we muſt note that it is a ſpeciall dutie to know when to ſpeake, and when to be ſilent. The ordering of the tongue is a rare gift, and few attaine vnto it. Some will peraduenture aske, what rule wee haue to direct vs herein? Anſw. The generall rule for the ordering of the tongue, is the law of God. We are commanded to ſeeke the glorie of God in the firſt table; and in the ſecond the good of our neighbour: when thy ſpeech therefore will ſerue eyther for Gods glory, or the good of thy neighbor, then thou muſt ſpeake: if it ſerue for neither, thē be ſilent. Againe, if thy ſilence be either for Gods glory, or the good of thy neighbour, then be ſilent: if it will not, then ſpeake. And becauſe it is hard for a man to know whē his ſpeech or ſilence will ſerue for theſe two ends: therfore we muſt pray vnto God that he will teach and direct vs herein: as Dauid doth, Set a watch (ſaith he) O Lord, before my mouth, and keepe the doore of my lips: and againe, Open thou my lips, O Lord, and my mouth ſhal ſhew forth thy praiſe.

Pſa. 141. 3.

Pſa. 51. 15.

Thus much for the falſe witneſſes produced. Now followeth the third point, which is, the adiuring of Chriſt: for Caiphas the high prieſt charged him to tell him whether he were the Chriſt the ſonne of God or no. To adiure a mā, is to charge and command him in the name of God to declare a truth, not onely becauſe God is witneſſe thereof, but alſo becauſe he is a iudge to reuenge, if he ſpeak not the truth. Thus Paul adiured the Theſſalonians, charging them in the Lord, that his epiſtle ſhould be read vnto all the brethren the Saints. And the like doth Caiphas to Chriſt. And here is a thing to be wondred at; Caiphas the high prieſt adiureth him in the name of God, who is very God, euen the Sonne of God. And this ſhewes what a ſmal account he made of the name of God; for he did it onely to get aduantage on Chriſts words: and ſo doe many now adaies, who for a little profit or gaine make a matter of nothing to abuſe the name of God a thouſand wayes.

1. Theſſ. 5. 27.

Chriſt beeing thus adiured, though ſilent before, yet now in reuerence to Gods maieſtie, anſwered and ſaid: firſt, Thou haſt ſaid it: and in Saint Marke, I am he. In this anſwer, appeares the wonderfull prouidence of God. For though Caiphas take hence the occaſion of cōdemning Chriſt, yet hath he withal drawn from him a moſt excel-excellent confession, that he is the Sonne of God, & our alone Sauiour. And by this meanes he proceeds to shut heauen against himselfe, and to open the same for vs.

Thus wee haue ended the first inditement of Christ before Caiphas. Now followeth the second, which was before Pontius Pilate, in the common hall at Ierusalem. The history of it is set downe at large in all the Euangelists. In the second inditement of Christ (that we may referre euery matter to his place) we are to obserue foure things: I. The accusation of Christ before Pilate. II. His examination. III. Pilates pollicie to saue Christ. IV. Pilates absoluing of him; and then the condemnation of Christ in both courts, Ecclesiasticall and Ciuill: of these in order. In Christs accusation, wee must consider many points. The first is, who were his accusers, namely the high Priest, the Scribes, and Pharisies, and Elders of the people, and the common people: all these conspired togither to accuse him. The cause that mooued the Pharisies and Elders of the people hereunto, is noted by Saint Matthew, who saith of enuie they deliuered him. Enuie is nothing but a sadnesse in a mans heart, at the prosperitie of his better. And it raigned in the Scribes and Pharisies, and the occasion was this. Christ had taught most heauenly doctrine, and confirmed the same by most wonderful miracles, and did greatly exceede them all, and was in more account among the people: and for this cause the Scribes and Pharisies and high Priests, repined and grudged at him. Now their example serues to admonish vs to take heede of this sinne, as being the mother of many mischiefes. And we must rather follow the example of Moses, who when Ioshua desired him to forbid Eldad and Medad to prophecie, answered, Enuieſt thou for my sake? yea I would to God all the Lords people were Prophets. And wee must be of the same mind with Iohn Baptist, who hearing by his disciples that the people left him and followed Christ, said, his ioy was fulfilled, for Christ must increase, and he must decrease. And so we must bee glad and content when we see the prosperitie of our neighbours any way. Now the cause why the common people ioine with them was, because the chiefe Priestes and the Scribes and Elders had perswaded thē to a badde conceit of Christ. Hence it appeares that it is most requisite for any people, be they neuer so good, to haue good Magistrates, and godly rulers to gouerne them by wise and godly counsell. The necessitie hereof was well knowne to Iethro Moses father in law, though hee were a heathen man: for hee biddeth Moses to prouide among all the people mē of courage fearing God, men dealing truly, hating couetousnesse, and appoint them to be rulers ouer the people. Teaching vs, that if couetous, malitious, and vngodly men, not fearing God, goe before the people, they also shall in all liklihood be carried into the like sinnes by their example.

The next point concernes the place where they accuse him, which was at the doore of the common Hall: for hauing brought him before the counsell at Ierusalem & there condemned him of blasphemie, afterward they bring him into the common hall where Pilate sate iudge. Yet did they not enter in, but stayed without at the doore, least they should be defiled, and be made vnfit to eate the Passeouer. In which practise of theirs, we are to marke an example of most notable both superstition, and most grosse hypocrysie. For they make no bones to accuse & arraigne a mā most iust & innocent, & yet are very strict and curious in an outward ceremonie. And in like maner they make no conscience to giue thirty pieces of siluer to betray Christ: but to cast the same into the treasurie, they make it a great and heinous offence. And for this cause Christ pronoūceth a woe vnto the Scribes and Pharisies calling them hypocrites: for, saith he, you tithe mynt, anyse, and commin, and leaue the weightie matters of the law, as iudgement, and mercie. And the very same thing we see practised of the Church of Rome at this day, and of sundry Papists that liue amongst vs: they wil not eate flesh in Lent, or vpon any of the popes fasting daies for any things and yet the same men make no conscience of seeking the blood of the Lords annointed, & their dread soueraigne. And in this we see the most palpable, and most grosse hypocrisie of those that be of that church. But shall we thinke that our owne church is free frō such men? no assuredly: for take a view of the profession that is vsed amōg the people of England, and it will appeare that they place their whole religion for the most part in the obseruation of certaine ceremonies. The manner of most men is to come to the place of assemblies, where God is worshipped, and there mumble vp the Lords prayer, the commandements, and and the beleefe instead of prayers, which beeing done, God is well serued thinke they: whereas in the meane season they neglect to learne and practise such things as are taught them for their saluatiō by the ministers of Gods word. At the feast of Easter, euery man will be full of deuotion and charitie, & come to receiue the Lords supper, as though he were the holiest man in the world; but when the time is past, all generally turne to their old byas againe: and all the yeare after liue as they list, making no conscience of lying, slandering, fraud, and deceit in their affaires among men. But we must know that there is no soundnes of religion, but grosse hypocrisie in all such men: they worship God with their lippes, but there is no power of godlinesse in their hearts.

The third point is, concerning the partie to whome they make this accusation against Christ, namely, not to a Iewe but to a Gentile: for hauing condemned him in their Ecclesiasticall court before Caiphas the high priest, they bring him to Pontius Pilate the deputie of Tyberius Cæsar in Iudea. Where we must obserue the wonderfull prouidence of God, in that not onely the Iewes, but the Gentiles also had a stroke in the arraignment of Christ, that that might bee true which the Apostle saith, God shut vp all vnder sin, that he might haue mercie vpon all. Rom. 11. 32.

The fourth point is, the matter of their accusation: they accuse our Sauiour Christ of three things: I. That he seduced the people. II. That hee forbad to pay tribute to Cæsar. III. That he said he was a king. Let vs well consider these accusations, especially the two last, because they are flat contrary both to Christs preaching and to his practise. For when the people would haue made him a King, after he had wrought the miracle of the fiue loaues and two fishes, the text saith he departed from among them, vnto a mountaine himselfe alone. Secondly, when tribute was demanded of him for Cæsar, though he were the Kings sonne, and therefore was freed; yet saith he to Peter, Least we should offend them goe to the sea, and cast in an angle and take the first fish that commeth vp, and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt finde a piece of twentie pence, that take and giue vnto them for thee and me. And when hee was called to bee a iudge to deuide the inheritance betweene two brethren, he refused to doe it, saying who made me a iudge betweene you? Therefore in these two things, they did most falsly accuse him. Wherby we learne, that nothing is so false and vntrue, but the slanderer dare lay it to the charge of the innocent. The tōgues of the slanderers are sharpe swords, and venemous arrowes, to wound their enemies: their throates are open sepulchres, the poyson of aspes is vnder their lippes. If a man speake gratious words his tongue is touched with the fire of Gods spirit: but as S. Iames saith, the tongue of the wicked is fire, yea a world of wickednes, and it is set on fire with the fire of hell: therefore let this example be a caueat to vs all to teach vs to take heede of slandering, for the deuill then speakes by vs, and kindles our tongues with the fire of hell. Luk. 23. 2. Ioh. 6. 15. Math. 17. 27. Psal 140. 4. and 59. Iam. 3. 6.

The fifth point is, the manner of their accusation, which is diligently to be marked: for they doe not onely charge him with a manifest vntruth, but they beseech Pilate to put him to death, crying, Crucifie him, crucifie him*: insomuch that Pontius Pilate was afraid of them: where we see how these shameles Iewes goe beyond their compasse, and the bounds of all accusers, whose duty is to testifie onely what they know. Now in the matter of this their accusation, appeares their wonderfull inconstancie. For a little before when Christ came to Ierusalem riding vpon an asse, shewing some signes of his kingly authoritie, they cut downe branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way, crying, Hosanna, Blessed is he that commeth in the name of the Lorde: but now they sing an other song, and in stead of Hosanna, they crie, Crucifie him, crucifie him. And the like inconstancie is to be found in the people of these our times. They vse to receiue any religion that is offered vnto them: for in the dayes of King Edward the sixth, the people of England receiued the Gospell of Christ: but shortly after in Queene Maries time, the same people receiued the wretched and abhominable doctrine of the Church of Rome. And not many yeares after when it pleased God to bring againe the light of his glorious Gospell by our gracious Prince, the same people turned from poperie, and embraced the true religion againe. And thus with the Iewes one while they crye Hosanna to Christ, and receiue his Gospel; and shortly after they crie, Crucifie him, crucifie him, by embracing idolatrous poperie. Let vs therefore learne in the feare of God, by the fickleneſſe of the Iewes, that ſing two contrary ſongs in ſo ſhort a ſpace, to acknowledge our inconſtancie and weakneſſe in the matter of religion: whereby if God leaue vs but a little to our ſelues, wee ſhall ſtraightway forſake Chriſt, his Goſpell, and all.

Thus much of the accuſation. Nowe followeth Chriſts examination before Pontius Pilate: for when the Iewes had thus falſely accuſed him, then Pontius Pilate tooke him and brought him into the common hall, and asked him this queſtiō. Art thou the King of the Iewes? Now Chriſt beeing thus examined, made as Paul alſo teſtifieth, a good confeſſion. The ſumme thereof ſtands in foure heads. The firſt is, that he confeſſeth himſelfe to bee a King; not ſuch an one as they accuſed him to be, yet a true king. Whence we may learne diuers inſtructions: firſt that euery Chriſtiā man in the midſt of his miſeries & affliction, hath one that is moſt ſufficient euery way to defend him againſt al his enemies, the world, the fleſh, and the deuill. For this King can doe whatſoeuer he will: & therefore when the legion of deuils would enter into a herd of ſwine, they could not without his leaue. And when the Centurions daughter was dead, he but ſpake the word and ſhe aroſe. And when Lazarus was dead and had lien in the graue foure dayes, he but ſaid, Lazarus come forth, and he came forth bound hand and foote. Yea euen hell and death giue place to his word, and nothing can reſiſt his power. And therefore he that is a true member of Chriſt needes not to feare any enemies be they neuer ſo great or ſo many. And againe, as Chriſt is able, ſo is he ready and willing to ſaue and defend all that beleeue in him. For he it is that gaue his life for his ſubiects, which no King would doe, and ſhedde his blood for their redemption: which he would neuer haue done, if he had not deſired their ſaluation. Secondly, whereas Chriſt is a mighty King, which can doe whatſoeuer he will, let all ſuch among vs that haue hitherto liued in ignorance, and by reaſon of ignorance liue in their ſinnes, at length begin to come vnto him, and do him homage, and with penitent hearts fall downe before him: otherwiſe if they continue in their old rebellions, let them knowe whatſoeuer they be, high or low, that he hath a rod of yron in his hand to bruiſe them in peices; their ſoules ſhall ſmart for it: as both Pilate, Caiphas, and the reſt of the Iewes were with a full cuppe rewarded for crucifying the Lord of life. And if Chriſt can not draw thee in this life from thy crooked wayes, be ſure at the houre of death he will breake thee in peeces like a potters veſſel. This muſt we learne in regard of the firſt point, that he ſaid plainly Hee was a King.

Mat. 8. 32.

Mark. 5. 41.

Ioh. 11. 43.

Pſal. 2. 9. & Reu. 2.

Now followes the ſecond part of his confeſſion, namely, that his kingdome was not of this world. Where he ſets downe what kinde of King he is; hee is no earthly king, his kingdome ſtands not in the power of men, nor in earthly and outward gouernment; but his kingdome is ſpirituall, and his gouernment is in the very hearts and conſciences of men. His kingdome is not outwarde to bee ſeene of men, but inward in the heart and ſoule; and therefore it is onely begunne in this life, and is continued and accompliſhed in the world to come in the kingdome of glory: where Chriſt ſhall be all in all in the hearts and conſciences of all the Elect. Nowe then, if this be ſo, howſoeuer Satan haue heretofore raigned in vs, and made our hearts as it were his pallaces; yet now let vs prepare a roome for Chriſt that he may come and dwell in vs: let him rule our hearts, wills, and affections, that they may become cōformable to his will: let vs reſigne our ſelues wholly to be ruled by him, that his ſpirituall kingdome may be in vs. This kingdome in the heart and conſcience is the pearle and hidde treaſure, which when a man findeth, he ſelleth all hee hath and buieth it. Let vs therefore in the feare of God, eſteeme it as the moſt precious thing that may be, and ſo liue in this world, as that Chriſt may rule inwardly in vs, by his word and ſpirit. And againe, ſeeing this regiment of Chriſt is heauenly, and the full manifeſtation of it is reſerued till the life to come: wee muſt therefore vſe this world and all things in it, as honour, wealth, eaſe, and liberty, as though wee vſed them not. As a traueller vſeth his ſtaffe in his iourney; as long as it doth further him, ſo longe he will carry it with him: but when it hinder eth him, then hee caſts it away: ſo muſt wee vſe the things of this life, namely as long as they are helpes to further and make vs fitte for the kingdome of heauen, but if they be any hinderance to this ſpirituall regiment of Chriſt, wee muſt renounce them and caſt them away, be they neuer ſo pretious to vs.

to

The third part of Chriſts confeſſion is, concerning the meanes whereby he gouerneth his kingdome: I came (ſaith he) into this world to beare witneſſe of the truth, that is, to preach the Goſpell and doctrine of ſaluation: and hereby he teacheth that the outward adminiſtration of his kingdome, ſtands ſpecially in the preaching of the word, which is a principall ordinance of his, ſeruing to gather his Church from the beginning of the world to the ende thereof. And for this cauſe he hath in all ages ſet apart choſen miniſters for the publiſhing of the doctrine of the Goſpell. And hence it is manifeſt that the gift of prophecie, is the greateſt gift that God beſtowes on his Church for the building thereof. And therefore it ought to bee moſt highly eſteemed, as a moſt pretious iewell. And for this cauſe alſo the ſchooles of learning are to be reuerenced & maintained, and all other meanes vſed for the furthering of them; becauſe they are vnder God the fountaines and welſprings of this gift of prophecie.

The laſt point is, concerning the ſubiects of Chriſts kingdome, expreſſed in theſe wordes, They which are of the truth, heare my voyce. In which he ſets downe the true marke of his ſeruants & ſubiects, that they are hearers of that heauenly and ſauing word which he reueiled from the boſome of his father. It may be alleadged, the moſt wicked men vpon earth, yea the deuils themſelues may be hearers of the truth
Mar. 13. 9. of Chriſt. Anſ. There be two kind of hearers: one which heareth onely the outward ſound of the word with his bodily eares, & he hauing eares to heare doth not heare: the ſecond, is he that doth not onely receiue the doctrine that is taught with his eares, but alſo hath his heart opened to feele the power of it, and to obey the ſame in the courſe of his life. This diſtinction is notably ſet forth by Dauid, ſaying, Sacri- Pſal. 40. 6. fice and burnt offrings thou wouldeſt not haue: but my eares haſt thou pierced: whereby he inſinuates as it were two kindes of eares: one that is deafe and cannot heare: & thus are the eares of all men by nature in hearing the doctrine of ſaluation: the other is a new eare piereed and bored by the hand of God, which cauſeth a mans heart to heare the ſound & operation of the word, and the life to expreſſe the truth of it. Now the ſubiects of Chriſts kingdome are ſuch, as with the outward hearing of the word, haue an inward hearing of the ſoule, and grace alſo to obey: and therefore all thoſe that make no conſcience of obedience to the word of God preached vnto them, are no leſſe then rebells to Chriſt. We may perſwade our ſelues that we are good ſubiects, becauſe we heare the word and receiue the Sacraments, but if our liues abound with ſinne, and if our hearts be not pierced through by the ſword of Gods ſpirit, whether we be high or low, rich or poore, let vs be what we will be, we are no right ſubiects indeed, but rebels and traytours vnto the euerliuing God. It may be hereafter God will giue further grace; but as yet all impenitent perſons, though liuing in the midſt of Gods Church, are no obedient and faithfull ſubiects: and therefore while we haue time, let vs labour to performe in deede that which wee doe in word profeſſe.

Thus much of the examination and confeſſion of Chriſt. Now followeth the third point concerning the pollicie which Pilate vſed to ſaue Chriſt: and they are three. Firſt, when he heard that Chriſt was of Galile, hee tooke occaſion to ſend him Luk 23. 7. to Herod, thinking thereby to ſhift his hands of him, and not to ſhed his blood. In which pollicie, though hee ſeeme vnwilling to put Chriſt to death, yet herein he is a moſt vniuſt iudge: for hauing giuen teſtimonie of Chriſt, that he is innocent, he ought to haue acquitted him, and not haue ſent him to Herod for further iudgemẽt. In Herods dealing with Chriſt, wee may obſerue theſe points. The firſt, that he is wonderfully glad of his cõming. Why ſo? the text ſaith, becauſe he was deſi- Luk. 23. 8. rous to ſee him of a long ſeaſon, becauſe he had heard many things of him, and truſted to haue ſeene ſome ſigne done by him. Here marke how he reioyced, not in Chriſt becauſe he was Chriſt, that is, his Meſſias and redeemer, but becauſe hee wrought miracles, ſignes, & wonders. And ſo it is among vs at this day: it is a rare thing to finde a man that loueth Chriſt, becauſe he is Chriſt: ſome loue Chriſt for honour, ſome for wealth, and others for praiſe: that is, becauſe they get honour, wealth, and praiſe by confeſſing his name. Againe, many profeſſe Chriſt, onely becauſe it is the law and cuſtome of their nation. But wee muſt learne to be of this minde to loue Chriſt, becauſe he is Chriſt, euen for himſelfe, and not for any other sinister respect: and we must reioyce in Christ, euen for himselfe, though we neuer haue profit nor pleasure, neither honour or wealth by him. And if wee loue him for wealth or pleasure, or for any other ende but for himselfe alone, when these things are takē away, then we shal vtterly forsake Christ in like manner. The second point is, that Herod desires Christ to worke a miracle. He can be content to see the works of Christ, but he can not abide to heare his word, and to beare his yoake. Like to him are many in these daies, which gladly desire to heare the gospell of Christ preached, onely because they would heare speach of some strange things, laying aside all care & conscience to obey that which they heare. Yea many in England delight to read the strange histories of the Bible; and therefore can rehearse the most part of it, (and it were to be wished that all could doe the like:) yet come to the practise of it, the same persons are commonly found as bad in life & conuersation, yea rather worse then others. Let vs therfore labor, that with our knowledge wee may ioyne obedience, and practise with our learning; & as wel to be affected with the word of Christ, as with his works. The third point is, that Herod derides Christ, and sends him away, cloathed in a white garment. This is that Herod whom Christ called a foxe; who also when hee heard Iohn Baptist preach, did many things, and heard him gladly. How then comes Herod to this outrage of wickednes, thus to abuse Christ? Anſ. Wee must knowe, that although Herod at the first heard Iohn preach, yet withal he followed his own affections, and sought how to fulfill the lusts of his flesh. For when Iohn told him that it was not lawfull for him to haue his brother Philips wife, he cast him in prison, & afterward cut off his head for it: after which offence he is growne to this height of impietie, that he now despiseth Christ, and cannot abide to heare him. Where we learne, that as we are willing to heare Gods word preached, so withall we must take heede that we practise no manner of sinne; but make conscience of euery thing that may displease God. Thou maist, I graunt, be one that feareth and fauoureth Iohn Baptist for a time, wallowing in thy old sinnes; but after a while, yelding to the swinge of thy corrupt heart, thou wilt neuer heare Iohn, nor Christ himselfe, but hate and despise them both.

This is the cause why some which haue beene professours of religion heretofore, & haue had great measure of knowledge, and now become very loose persons, and cannot abide to heare the word preached vnto them; the reason is, because they could not abide to leaue their sinnes. Therefore that we may begin in the spirit and not end in the flesh, let euery one that calls on the name of the Lord depart from iniquitie.

Now follows the second pollicie of Pilate. For when he saw the first would not preuaile, then he tooke a new course: for he tooke Iesus into the common hall and scourged him, and the souldiers platted a crowne of thornes and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple garment, and saide, Haile King of the Iewes, and smote him with their roddes. And thus hee brought him forth before the Iewes, perswading himselfe that when they saw him so abased, and so ignominiously abused, they would be content therewith, and exact no greater punishment at his hands: thinking thus to haue pacified the rage of the Iewes and so to haue deliuered Christ from death, by inflicting vpon him some lesser punishment. This pollicie is as it were a looking-glasse, in which wee may behold of what nature and condition all plotts and pollicies of men are, which are deuised and practised without the direction of Gods word. In it wee may obserue two things: the first is, the ground thereof, which is a most silly, simple, or rather senselesse argument. For he reasoneth thus: I find no fault in this man, therefore I wil chastise him and let him goe. A man would hardly haue thought, that one hauing but common sense, would haue made such a reason, much lesse a great Iudge sitting in the roome of God. But in him we may behold & see the ground of all humane pollicie which is beside the worde of God, namely the foolish and blinde reason of men. The second thing to be considered is, the proceeding and issue of this pollicie. Pilate must eyther whippe Christ beeing innocent; or put him to death: which are both sinnes and great offences. Now he maketh choice of the lesser, which is to whippe him, and is perswaded that hee ought to doe so: whereas of two sinnes or euills, a man ought to doe neither. And in doing this, Pilate beginnes to make a breach in his conscience, & that is the fruit that all politicks reape of their deuises, which which proceede by the light of their own reason, without the word of God. By this example we are admonished of two things: first, that before we enterprise any businesse, we must rectifie our iudgements by Gods worde. Dauid was a most wise king, and no doubt, had withall a graue & wise counsell. but yet he preferred the word of God before all, saying, Thy testimonies are my counsellours. Psal. 119. 24. Secondly in our proceedings we must keepe an vpright, pure, and vnblameable conscience, as Paul exhorteth Timothie to haue the mystery of faith in a pure conscience, 2. Tim. 3. 9 giuing vs thereby to vnderstand, that a good conscience is as it were a chest or cupboard, in which wee are to keepe and locke vp our religion, & all other graces of God, as the most pretiour iewels that can be: & that if we suffer this chest to be broken vp, all our riches and iewels are gone.

But let vs yet view the dealing of Pilate more particularly: he whips Christ, puts on him a purple garment, puts a reede in his hand, sets a crown of thornes vpon his head, and causes the souldiers to mocke him, and spit in his face. Nowe in this that Christ standing in our roome, was thus shamefully abused, we must cõsider what was due vnto euery one of vs for our sins, namely shame and reproch in this life, and in the life to come endles confusion. And wee see the confusion of Christ to be true which he made to pilate, that his kingdome was not of this world; for if it had not bene so, they would haue put a crown of gold vpon his head, and not a crown of thornes, which nothing at all beseemed an earthly king: and instead of a reede they would haue put a scepter into his hand: & instead of buffeting and spitting on him, they would haue adored him, and fallen down before him. Againe, whereas Christ our head in this worlde, ware no other crown but one made of thornes, it serueth to teach all those that are the members of Christ, that they must not looke for a crown of glory in this life; because that is reserued for the life to come. And if we would thē weare the crown of glory with Christ; we must here in this life weare a crown of thornes, as he did: for as Paul saith, If we suffer with Christ, wee shall also raigne with him: 2. Tim. 2. 12. and that which was fully verified in Christ the head, must in some sort be verified in euery true member of Christ.

Pilats third pollicie was this; when hee sawe that neither of the two former would preuaile, he comes forth vnto the Iewes, & makes an oration to this effect; that nowe was the feast of the passeouer, & that they had a custome that the gouernour should then deliuer vnto the people a prisoner whom they would: therefore he asked thē whether he should let loose vnto thē Barrabas or Iesus which is called Christ: this Barrabas was a notable malefactour, that with insurrectiō had committed murther. And thus Pilate cunningly matcheth Christ with Barrabas, thinking that the Iewes would rather choose him then Barrabas beeing a notorious malefactour, not worthy to liue on the face of the earth: and by this meanes hee thought to haue deliuered Christ from death, though otherwise he accounted him as a malefactour. The grounde of this pollicie (as wee see) is an old custome of the Iewes, that a prisoner should be let loose at Easter. And it may be the end of this custome was, to increase the solemnitie of the feast. But whatsoeuer in trueth the ende was, the fact it selfe was but a prophanation of the time and an abomination before the Lord: for Salomon saith, He that iustifieth the wicked, and condemneth the iust, euen they both are abomination before the Lord. Prou. 17. 15 The like practise takes place with many in these daies, who thinke the Lords day neuer well spent, vnlesse they may adde solemnitie thereunto, by reuel and riot, by frequenting of tauerns and alehouses. And furthermore, where Pilate matcheth Christ being innocent with Barrabas & the people preferre him before Christ, hauing liberty to choose either; it shewes that God in his prouidence had appointed that Christ should not stand in his own roome before Pilate, but in our roome and stead, as a Mediatour between God and vs. And in this fact of the people, we see how sinne by degrees takes hold of men & that speedily. Who would haue thought that these Iewes, who a little before cried Hosanna, and spread their garments before Christ, in the way, would euer haue preferred a murtherer before him? But it was the doing of the High Priests, the Scribes, and Pharisies, who did animate and stirre them vp to this wickednesse: and hereupon when they had yeelded first to attach him, and then to accuse him, they are carried to an higher degree of impietie, namely to seeke his blood: and then least hee should escape their hands, hands, they plunge themselues deeper yet preferring a wretched murtherer, euen seditious Barrabas before him. This must teach euery one of vs to take heede of the beginnings euen of the least sinnes; for the deuill is cunning, he will not plunge a man into the greatest sins at the first: but his manner is, by little and little to creepe into the heart: and hauing once possession thereof, by steps to bring men to the height of sin, and that with speed. We must therefore in the feare of God preuent sin betimes, and at the first motion cut off all occasions hereof: that which paul saith

2. Tim. 2. 17. of heresie, cōparing it to a canker or gangrene, may be said of all sinne. The nature of the gangrene is to run from one ioynt to another, from the toe to the foote, from the foote to the legge, & from the legge to the thigh, till it haue wasted and destroyed the life of the body: so giue any sinne but an entrance, & it wil soone ouerspread the whole man: and if the deuill may be suffered but to put one talent into thy heart, he wil presently winde himselfe into thee, his head, his body, and all. The Psal. 137. 9 Psalmist saith, that he is blessed that taketh the children of the Babylonians & dasheth them against the stones; and as truely it may be said, blessed is the man that dasheth the head of his sinnes against the ground while they are young, before they get strength to ouermaster him.

Thus haue we seene the pollicies of Pilate: nowe followeth the absolution of Mat. 27. 23 24. Christ: for when Pilate had vsed many Luk. 23. 14 22. meanes to deliuer him, and none would
Mar. 15. 14 preuaile, then he absolues him, by giuing diuers testimonies of his innocencie: for he came forth three times and bare witnes thereof: and last of all he testified the same
Ioh. 18. 38. & 19. 1. by washing of his hands, which rite signifieth properly the defiling of the handes before, but as yet Pilate had not defiled his hands, & therfore he vsed it as a token to shew that Christ was innocent, and that he would not defile his owne hands with innocent blood. There were three causes that mooued Pilate to absolue Christ. First he sawe that he was a iust man,
Mat. 27. 19 20. as Saint Matthew noteth, & that the high
Mar. 15. 10 priests and people had deliuered him vp of enuie, as Saint Marke saith. By this it is plaine, that a very Pagan or infidel may in some things go beyond such as be in gods Church hauing better conscience, & dealing more iustly then they. Pontius Pilate was a heathen man and a Gentile, the Iewes were the church and people of the liuing God: yet he sees plainly that Christ was a iust man, and thereupon is mooued to absolue him; whereas the Iewes which should be men of conscience and religion seek his death. And thus a very Pagā may otherwhiles see more into a matter then they that be reputed of the church. And this must admonish all such as professe the Gospell to looke vnto their proceedings, that they doe all things with vpright conscience: for if we deale vniustly in our proceedings, we may haue neighbours, men of no religion, that will looke through vs, and see the grosse hypocrisie of our profession, which also would bee loath to doe those things which we doe. The second cause that mooued Pilate to absolue Christ, was his wiues dreame: for when he was set downe vpon the iudgement seat, she sent vnto him saying, Haue thou nothing to doe with that iust man: for I Mat. 27. 19 haue suffered many things in a dreame by reason of him. Dreames are of three sortes: naturall, rising from the constitutiō of the bodie: diabolical, such as come by the suggestion of the deuill: diuine, which are from God. Some haue thought that this dreame was of the deuil; as though he had laboured thereby to hinder the death of Christ, and consequently our saluation: but I rather think it was occasioned by the things which shee had heard before of Christ, or that it was immediatly from God, as the dreames of Pharao and Nabuchodonoser, and serued for a further manifestation of Christs innocencie. Here it may be asked, whether we may regard our dreames nowe, as Pilates wife did or no? Ans. We haue the bookes of the olde and newe testament to be our direction, as Esaie saith, to the Lawe and to the testimony, Isa. 8. 20. they must be our rule and guide. In these daies we must not looke to bee taught by visions and dreames: yet shall it not be amisse to obserue this caueat concerning dreames, that by them we may gesse the constitution of our bodies, and oftentimes at the sinnes whereunto we are inclined. The last motiue which caused Pilate to absolue Christ was a speech of the Iewes; for they said, that Christ ought to dye by their lawe, because he said he was the Sonne Ioh. 19. 7. of God. And the text saith, when Pilate heard that, he was afraid, Marke howe a poore Painym that knewe not Gods word, at the hearing of the name of the sonne of God is stricken with feare. Noe doubt doubt hee shall rise in iudgement against many among vs that without al feare rend the name of God in peeces by swearing, blaspheming, cursed speaking. But let all those that feare the Lord learne to tremble and be afraid at his blessed name.

Thus much for the causes that moued Pilate to absolue Christ: as also for the second part of Christs arraignment; namely his accusation. Nowe followes the third part, which is his condemnation: and that is twofold. The first, by the Ecclesiasticall assembly and counsell of the Iewes at Ierusalem, in the high Priestes hall before Caiphas. The tenour of his condemnation was this. He hath blasphemed, what haue we any more need of witnesses? he is worthy to die. The cause why they say not he shal die, but, he is worthy to die, is this. The Iewes had two iurisdictions, the one Ecclesiasticall, the other ciuill, both prescribed and distinctly executed by the commaundement of God, till the time of the Machabees, in which both ioyntly together came into the hands of the priests: but afterward about the daies of Herod the great, the Romane Emperour tooke away both iurisdictions from the Iewes and made their kingdome a prouince, so as they could do no more but apprehend, accuse, & imprison: as doeth appeare by the example of Saul, who gate letters from the high priest to Damascus, that if hee found any either man or woman that beleeued in Christ, he might bring them bound to Ierusalem, & imprison them: but kill or condemne they could not.

Deut.17.7, 8,9.

Act.9.1.

By the fact of this Counsell we learne sundrie points: first, that generall counsels and the Pope himselfe sitting iudicially in his consistorie may erre. If there were any visible Church of God at the time of Christs arraignment vpon the face of the whole world; it was no doubt the Church of the Iewes. For Caiphas the high priest was a figure of Christ, the Scribes, & Pharises sate in Moses chaire, and Ierusalem is called by Christ the holy cittie, Math.4.5. and 27.53. Yet for all this that which was foretolde is nowe verified, namely that the cheife corner stone should bee reiected of master-builders. For by the generall consēt of the cōsell at Ierusalem, Christ the head of the Catholike Church and the redeemer of mankind is accused of blasphemie, & condemned as worthy of death. Wherfore it is a meere dotage of mans braine to auouch that the Pope cannot possibly erre in giuing a definitiue sētence in matters either of faith or maners. Neither can the Church of Rome plead priuiledge, for Ierusalem had as many prerogatiues as any people in the world could haue.

Rom.9.3.

Againe, by this we see there is no reason why wee should ascribe to any man or to œcumenicall counsels themselues, absolute and soueraigne power to determine and giue iudgement in matters of religion, considering they are in daunger to be ouertaken with notable slips and errours. And therefore the soueraigntie of iudgement is peculiar to the sonne of God, who is the onely doctour and lawe-giuer of the Church: and he puts the same in execution in and by the written word. As for the speech of the Papists calling the Scriptures a dumbe Iudge, it is little to be regarded: for the Scriptures are, as it were, the letter of the liuing God sent from heauen to his Church vpon earth: and therefore they speake as plainely and as sufficiently vnto vs of all matters of faith as a man can speake vnto his friend by letter, so be it, we haue the gift of discerning. Yet doe wee barre the Church of God from all iudgement. For the ministeriall power of giuing iudgement both publikely and priuately is granted vnto it of God: & that is to determine and giue sentence of matters in question according to the word as the lawyer giues iudgement, not according as hee will, but according to the tenour of the lawe.

Math.23. 10.

Thirdly, we learne, that personall succession is no vnfallible marke of the true faith, and of true pastours; vnlesse withall be ioyned succession in the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles. For Caiphas held his office by succession from Aaron: and yet in publike assembly condemned the Messias spoken of by Moses and the prophets. Therfore the succession of b shops of Rome from Peter is of no moment, vnlesse they can prooue that their religion is the religion of Peter, which they can neuer doe.

And thus much of Christs first condemnation. The second was by Pontius Pilate, who sate in another court as a ciuill iudge, and the tenour of his sentence was, that the Iewes should take him and crucifie him. Here wee must cōsider the reasōs that moued Pilate to determine thus: the first was the impatience of the Iewes: he for his part was loath to defile his hands with with innocent blood, but the Iewes cried,

Mat.27.25 his blood be vpon vs, & on our childrē: which according to their wish came vpon them within fewe yeares after, and so remaineth still vnto this day. By which we are taught to take heede of imprecations against our selues, our children, our seruants, or any other creatures: for God heareth mens praiers two waies; either in mercy, or in his wrath and danger. If thou curse thy selfe or any other, except thou turne vnto the Lord by speedy repentance, he may heare thy prayer in his wrath, & verify thy curse vpon thee to thy vtter confusion. The second reason that mooued Pilate to condemne Christ was, becausse he feared men more then God: for Beeing deputy vnder
Ioh.19.12. 13. Tyberius Cæsar ouer the Prouince of Iudea, for feare of loosing his office, and of displeasing the Iewes, he condēned Christ after he had absolued him: whereby wee see, that it is a grieuous sinne to feare dust and ashes more then the liuing God. And therefore Saint Iohn saith, that the feareful
Reu.21.8. shal haue their portiō in the burning lake: that is, such as are more afraid of man then of God. And this sinne in Pilate wanted not his iust reward: for not long after he lost his depunishippe, and Cæsars fauour, and Euseb. hist. l.2.c.7. fledde to Vienna: where liuing in banishment, he killed himselfe. And thus GOD meetes with them that feare the creature more then the creator. That we may therfore auoid the heauy hand of God, let vs learne to feare God aboue all: elsse we shall dishonour God, and shame the religon which we professe.

The proper end of Christs condemnation set downe though not in Pilates will, yet in Gods eternall counsell was, that hee might be the cause of absolution at the bar of Gods iustice vnto all those whatsoeuer they are which shall come to life eternall. For we must still remember, that when Christ was condemned by mortall iudges he stood in our place, and in him were all our sinnes condemned before God. Therfore to conclude this point: if this were the ende of the counsell of God, to haue his owne sonne condemned by Pontius Pilate a mortall iudge, that we might not be condemned but absolued before Gods iudgement seat: let vs al labour to haue this absolutiō sealed vp in our hearts by the testimony of Gods spirit. For one day wee must come to the bar of Gods iudgment: & if we haue not an absolution by Christs condemnation at Pilates earthly barre, let vs looke for nothing elsse but the feareful sentence of condemnation at the celestiall barre of Gods iustice, to be vttered at the day of the last iudgement. If a man should cōmit such an heynous offence, as that he could no other way escape death but by the princes pardon, he neither would nor could be at rest, til by one means or other he had obtained the same, and had gotten it written & sealed: which done, he would carry it home, locke it vp safe and sound, and many times looke vpon it with great ioy and gladnesse. Well, this is the case of euery one of vs: by nature we are rebels and traytours against god, and haue by our sinnes deserued ten thousand deaths. Nowe our onely staye and refuge is, that Christ the sonne of God was condemned for vs: and therefore in Christ we must sue for pardon at Gods hands, and neuer rest till we haue the assurance therof sealed vp in our hearts and consciences: alwaies remembring, that euer after we lead a newe life, and neuer commit the like sins against God any more. It were a blessed thing if this would enter into our hearts: but alas, we are as dead in our sinnes as a dead carkasse is in the graue. The Ministers of God may teach this often vnto vs, and we may also heare the same: but satan doeth so possesse mens hearts, that they seldome or neuer beginne to beleeue or receiue it till it be two late. Euery one can say, God is merciful, but that is not enough: for Christ beeing most righteous was condemned, that thou beeing a wretched sinner mightest be saued: and therefore thou must labour for thy selfe, to haue some testimony of thine absolution by Christs condemnation, sealed vp in thine owne conscience, that thou maiest more assuredly say, God is and will be merciful vnto thee.

Hauing spoken of the whole araignment of Christ, and of his passion in generall, nowe let vs proceede to the parts of the passion, which are three: Christs execution, his Buriall, and his Descending into hell. This beeing withall remembred, that these three parts, are likewise three degrees of Christs humiliations.

Christs execution is that part of his passion, which he bare vpon the crosse, expressed in the wordes of the creede, he was crucified, and dyed. In handling of it, we must obserue fiue things; I. the person that suffered: II. the place where he suffered. III. the time when he suffered. IV. the manner howe he suffered. V. the excellen-

cie of his passion. For the first, the person
1.Pet.3.18 that suffered was Christ the iust, as Peter saith, Christ also hath once suffered for sinnes, the iust for the vniust: and againe, Christ Iesus the iust (saith Saint Iohn)
1.Ioh.2.1. is the reconciliation for our sinnes. And in his execution, we shall haue manifest declarations of his righteousnesse and iustice, consisting in two most worthy points. First, when hee was vpon the crosse, and the souldiours were nailing his handes and feete thereunto, and racking his body most cruelly; he Luk.23.34 prayed, Father, forgiue them, they know not what they doe. These souldiers were by all likelihood the very same that apprehended him, and brought him before Caiphas, and from thence to Pontius Pilate, and there platted a crowne of thornes and set it on his head, and buffeted him, and spitefully intreated him as we haue heard: and yet Christ speaks no word of reuenge vnto them, but with all patience in the very extremity of their malice and iniury, he praieth vnto his father to forgiue them. Hence we are taught that when iniuries are done vnto vs, we ought to abstaine from all affection of reuenge, and not so much as manifest the same either in word or deede. It is indeede a hard lesson to learne and practise: but it is our parts to indeuour to doe it: and not onely so, but to be ready for euill to doe good: yea, euen at that instant, when other men are doing vs wrong: euen then (I say) we must bee ready, if it be possible to doe them good. When as Christs enemies were practising against him all the treachery they could, euen then he performeth the worke of a Mediatour, and prayeth for them vnto his father, and seeketh their saluation. Againe, wheras Christ prayeth thus, Father, forgiue them, we gather, that the most principall thing of all that man ought to seeke after in this life, is the forgiuenes of his sinnes. Some thinke that happinesse consisteth in honour, some in wealth, some in pleasure, some in this, some in that: but indeede the thing which wee should most labour for, is reconciliation with God in Christ, that we may haue the free remission of all our sinnes. Yea this is blessednes it selfe, as Dauid saith, Blessed is he whose Psal.32.1. iniquitie is forgiuen, and whose sinne is couered. here then behold the madnesse of the men of this world, that either seeke for this blessing in the last place or not at all.

The second testimony of Christs righteousnesse giuen in the middest of his passion was, that he beheld his mother standing by, and commended her to the Ioh.19. custody of Iohn his disciple: whereby he gaue an example of most holy obedience vnto the fifth commandement, which prescribeth honour vnto father and mother. And this his fact sheweth, that the obseruing of this commandement standeth not in outward shewe and reuerence onely; but in a goddy recompence, in procuring vnto parents al the good we can, both cõcerning this and a better life. It often fals out that children be as it were Cains to father and mother; some raile on them, some fight with them; others see thẽ pine away and sterue, and not releeue them. But all dutifull children must here learne, that as their parents haue done many duties vnto them, & brought them vp: so they againe must in all reuerence performe obedience vnto them both in word and deede: and when occasion is offered releeue them, yea in all they can, doe good vnto them. Againe in this we may see what a wretched state is that which the Church of Rome calleth the state of perfection; namely to liue apart from the company of men, in fasting and praying all the daies of a mans life: for hereby the bond of nature is broken, and a man can not doe the duty vnto his parents which Gods law requireth, and Christ here himselfe practiseth, nor the duties of a member of Christ which are to be done to the whole Church, and to the rest of the members thereof.

The place where Christ suffered is called Caluary or Golgotha, that is, the place of dead mens skuls, without the wals of Hierusalem. Concerning the reason of this name, men be of diuers opinions. Some say it was so called, because Adam was buried there, and that his skull beeing there founde gaue the name to the place. And this is the very opinion of some auncient diuines, that Christ was there crucified where Adam was buried; but because it hath no certaine grounde, I leaue it as vncertaine. Others thinke it was called Caluarie, because the Iewes were woont to carry out the bones of the dead men, and there to heape them together, as in times past the manner was in the vaultes of sundrie Churches in this land. And some others thinke it was called Golgotha or Caluarie, because theeues and murtherers, & malefactours were there executed, stoned, burned: whereby it came to passe that many

skuls and bones of dead men were found there.

The time when Christ was executed, was at the Iewes passeouer, when not onely the Iewes, but also many Proselites of many countries and nations were assembled: and therefore this execution was not in a priuate corner, but openly in the viewe of the world. For as hee was a Sauiour not to the Iewes onely, but also to the Gentiles: so it was very requisite that his death should be publike before al men both Iewes and Gentiles. As for the houre of the day, in which hee suffered there is some difficulty in the Euangelists: for Saint Iohn saith, that he was condemned about the sixt houre of the day: and S. Marke saith, he was crucified the third houre. Hence it may be demanded, howe both these can stand togither. Ans. Howesoeuer the Iewes naturall day beganne at euening, yet the artificiall day beganne at sunne rising, and ended at sunn-setting: & it was deuided two waies. First, into twelue parts called twelue houres, whether the daies were longer or shorter. Secõdly into foure parts or quarters, & euery part cõtained three houres: as frõ the first houre to the third was one part called morning: from the third houre to the sixt, another part called the sixt houre: frõ the sixt houre to the ninth, the third part called the ninth houre: and from the ninth houre to the twelfth, the fourth part called euening. Nowe when Saint Iohn saith, Christ was condemned about the sixt houre: it must be vnderstood of the second quarter of the day, called the sixt houre: & whereas saint Marke saith he was crucified the third houre of the day, hee speakes of the lesser houres, twelue whereof made the whole daie: and thus they both agree, for the third houre of the day and the beginning of the second quarter follow each other immediatly. Againe it may bee answered, that Christ was condemned at sixe of the clocke after the Romane account, which begins the day at midnight; & crucified at three (which is nine of the clocke in the morning with vs) after the Iewes account who begin their artificiall day, as I said, at the sunne rising.

A.Gell. noct. Att. l. 3. c. 3.

The fourth and last point, is the order and whole proceeding of Christs execution; which may be reduced to foure heads: the I. his going to execution, the II. his crucifying, the III. his death, the IV. the consequents of his death. Againe in his going to executiõ we may consider many pointes.

The first, that he is brought out of Ierusalem as a malefactour. For the old and auntient custome of the Iewes was to put those whome they iudged to bee notorious offenders to death without their tents when they wandered in the wilderneſse, and without the walles of Ierusalem, least they should any way be defiled with their blood. And this fell out by the special prouidence of God, that that might be fulfilled in Christ which was prefigured in the sacrifices of the old testament, when the bodies of beastes were not eaten of the priests, but burnt without the campe: therfore (saith the holy Ghost) euen Iesus that he might sanctifie the people with his owne blood, suffered without the gates.

Iosu.7.24 Leu.21.14 Act.7.58. Leu.6.30. Heb.13.12

Hence may all Christians learne to knowe their owne estate and condition: first, in this worlde they must looke to be accounted the offscouring of the earth, and the filth of the world, as the Apostle saith, & we must all prepare our selues to beare this estate. They that will bee Gods children must not looke to be better accepted of in the world then Christ was. Secondly by this euery one of vs must learne to bee content to vse this world, as strangers and pilgrimes; being euery day and houre readie to leaue the same. For if Christ the Son of God himselfe was brought out of Hierusalem, as not beeing worthy to haue his aboade there, then must euery Christian man looke much more for the like extremity. And therefore it is not good for vs to haue our hearts tied to the world, and to seeke alwaies to bee approued of the same: for that argueth that we are not like to Christ: but we must rather doe as poore pilgrimes in strange countries; and that is onely to looke for safe conduct through the miseries in this world, hauing in the meane season our hearts, wills, and affections set on the kingdome which is in heauen. The second thing is, that Christ was made to beare his owne crosse for so it seemes the manner of the Romans was to deale with malefactours. And this must put vs in minde of that notable lesson which Christ himselfe taught his disciples; namely, that if any man will be his disciple, he must denie himselfe, take vp his own crosse daily, and follow him: where by the crosse we must vnderstand, that portion of affliction, which God hath alotted to euery one of his children: for there is no child of God

1. Cor.4. 13.

God to whome he hath not meaſured out as is were ſome bitter cup of miſerie in this life. And therefore Paul ſaith, Now reioyce I in my ſuffering for you, and fulfill the reſt of Col.1. 24. the ſufferings of Chriſt in my fleſh. By Chriſts ſufferings he meaneth not the paſſion of Chriſt, but the ſufferings of the bodie of Chriſt that is the Church where of Chriſt is the head. Moreouer we muſt ſuffer as he did, and that daily; becauſe as one day followeth another, ſo one croſſe comes in the necke of another. And whereas Chriſt beares the croſſe that was laid on him by the hands of the ſouldiers, it muſt teach vs not to pull croſſes vpon our ſelues; but waite till God lay them on vs; and when that time comes we muſt willingly bend our ſhoulders, ſtoope downe, and take thē vp; where they be in body or in ſoule: and that euery day if it be Gods will ſo long as wee liue: and by this ſhall wee moſt notably reſemble our Sauiour Chriſt.

Thirdly, when Chriſt had carried his croſſe ſo long till he could carrie it no lōger, by reaſon of the faintnes of his body, which came by buffets, whippings, and manifold other iniuries, then the Souldi- Luk.23.26 ers meeting with one Simon of Cyrene a ſtraunger, made him to beare the croſſe: where we are put in minde, that if we faint in the way and be wearied with the burdē of our afflictions, God will giue good iſſue, and ſend as it were ſome Simon of Mat.11.28 Cyrene to help vs, and to be our comforter.

The fourth point is, that when Chriſt was carrying his own croſſe, & was now paſſing on towards Golgotha, certain women met him, & pitying his caſe wept for him: but Chriſt anſwered them and ſaid, Daughters of Ieruſalem, weepe not for me but Luk.23.27 weepe for your ſelues, and your children, &c. By this wee are firſt of all taught to pittie the ſtate of thoſe that be in affliction and miſerie. eſpecially thoſe that be the childrē of God: as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, ſaying, Remember them that are in bands, as Hebr.13. 3. though you were bound with them: and them that are in affliction, as though you were afflicted with them. In this land by Gods eſpeciall bleſſing we haue enioyed the Goſpel of Chriſt with peace a long time, whereas other countries and churches are in great diſtreſſe: ſome wallowe in palpable ignorance and ſuperſtition: others haue libertie to inioy the Goſpell & want teachers: and ſome haue both the word and teachers and yet want peace, and are in continuall perſecution. Now when we that haue the Goſpell with peace doe heare of theſe miſeries in our neighbour churches, wee ought to be mooued with compaſſion towards them, as though we our ſelues were in the ſame afflictions. Secondly, whereas Chriſt ſaith, Weepe not for me, but for your ſelues, he doth teach vs to take occaſion by other mens miſeries to bewaile our owne eſtate: to turne our worldly griefes into godly ſorrowe for our ſinnes, which cauſeth vs rather to weepe for our offēces, then for our friendes, although euen this may alſo be done in godly manner. When a man bleeding at the noſe is brought into danger of his life, the Phyſitian lets him blood in another place, as in the arme, & turnes the courſe of the blood another way to ſaue his life: and ſo muſt we turne our worldly ſorrowes for loſſe of goods or friendes, to a godly ſorrowe for our offenſes againſt God: for ſo Saint Paul ſaith, Godly ſorrow cauſeth repentance vnto ſaluation, 2.Cor.7 10 not to be repented of: but worldly ſorrowe cauſeth death.

The fifth point is, that when Chriſt was brought to the place of execution, they gaue him vineger to drinke mingled with mirrhe and gall: ſome ſay it was to intoxi- Mar.15.23 cate his braine, and to take away his ſenſes and memorie. If this be true, we may here behold in the Iewes a moſt wicked part, that at the point of death, when they were to take away the life of Chriſt, they for their parts had no care of his ſoule. For this is a dutie to be obſerued of all magiſtrates, that when they are to execute malefactours, they muſt haue a ſpeciall regard to the good and ſaluation of their ſoules. But ſome thinke rather that this potion was to ſhorten and end his torments quickly. Some of vs may peraduenture thinke hardly of the Iewes, for giuing ſo bitter a potion to Chriſt at the time of his death: but the ſame doth euery ſinner that repenteth not. For whenſoeuer we ſinne, we doe as much as temper a cup of gall, or the poiſon of aſpes, and as it were giue it to God to drinke: for ſo God himſelfe cōpareth the ſinne of the wicked Iewes to poyſon, ſaying, There vine is of the vine of Deut.32. 32.33. Sodome, and of the vines of Gomorrha, their grapes are grapes of gall, their cluſters be bitter, their wine is the poyſon of dragons, and the cruell gall of Aſpes. And for this cauſe we ought to thinke as hardly of our ſelues as of the Iewes, becauſe ſo oft as we commit skuls and bones of dead men were found there.

The time when Christ was executed, was at the Iewes passeouer, when not onely the Iewes, but also many Proselites of many countries and nations were assembled: and therefore this execution was not in a priuate corner, but openly in the viewe of the world. For as hee was a Sauiour not to the Iewes onely, but also to the Gentiles: so it was very requisite that his death should be publike before al men both Iewes and Gentiles. As for the houre of the day, in which hee suffered there is some difficulty in the Euangelists: for Saint Iohn saith, that he was condemned about the sixt houre of the day: and S. Marke saith, he was crucified the third houre. Hence it may be demanded, howe both these can stand togither. Ans. Howesoeuer the Iewes naturall day beganne at euening, yet the artificiall day beganne at sunne rising, and ended at sunn-setting: & it was deuided two waies. First, into twelue parts called twelue houres, whether the daies were longer or shorter. Secōdly into foure parts or quarters, & euery part cōtained three houres: as frō the first houre to the third was one part called morning: from the third houre to the sixt, another part called the sixt houre: frō the sixt houre to the ninth, the third part called the ninth houre: and from the ninth houre to the twelfth, the fourth part called euening. Nowe when Saint Iohn saith, Christ was condemned about the sixt houre: it must be vnderstood of the second quarter of the day, called the sixt houre: & whereas saint Marke saith he was crucified the third houre of the day, hee speakes of the lesser houres, twelue whereof made the whole daie: and thus they both agree, for the third houre of the day and the beginning of the second quarter follow each other immediatly. Againe it may bee answered, that Christ was condemned at sixe of the clocke after the Romane account, which begins the day at midnight; & crucified at three (which is nine of the clocke in the morning with vs) after the Iewes account who begin their artificiall day, as I said, at the sunne rising.

The fourth and last point, is the order and whole proceeding of Christs execution; which may be reduced to foure heads: the I. his going to execution, the II. his crucifying, the III. his death, the IV. the consequents of his death. Againe in his going to executiō we may consider many pointes.

The first, that he is brought out of Ierusalem as a malefactour. For the old and auntient custome of the Iewes was to put those whome they iudged to bee notorious offenders to death without their tents when they wandered in the wilderneſse, and without the walles of Ierusalem, least they should any way be defiled with their blood. And this fell out by the special prouidence of God, that that might be fulfilled in Christ which was prefigured in the sacrifices of the old testament, when the bodies of beastes were not eaten of the priests, but burnt without the campe: therfore (saith the holy Ghost) euen Iesus that he might sanctifie the people with his owne blood, suffered without the gates.

Hence may all Christians learne to knowe their owne estate and condition: first, in this worlde they must looke to be accounted the offscouring of the earth, and the filth of the world, as the Apostle saith, & we must all prepare our selues to beare this estate. They that will bee Gods children must not looke to be better accepted of in the world then Christ was. Secondly by this euery one of vs must learne to bee content to vse this world, as strangers and pilgrimes: being euery day and houre readie to leaue the same. For if Christ the Son of God himselfe was brought out of Hierusalem, as not beeing worthy to haue his aboade there, then must euery Christian man looke much more for the like extremity. And therefore it is not good for vs to haue our hearts tied to the world, and to seeke alwaies to bee approued of the same: for that argueth that we are not like to Christ: but we must rather doe as poore pilgrimes in strange countries; and that is onely to looke for safe conduct through the miseries in this world, hauing in the meane season our hearts, wills, and affections set on the kingdome which is in heauen. The second thing is, that Christ was made to beare his owne crosse for so it seemes the manner of the Romans was to deale with malefactours. And this must put vs in minde of that notable lesson which Christ himselfe taught his disciples; namely, that if any man will be his disciple, he must denie himselfe, take vp his own crosse daily, and follow him: where by the crosse we must vnderstand, that portion of affliction, which God hath alotted to euery one of his children: for there is no child of God

1. Cor. 4. 13.
Luk. 9. 23.

God to whome he hath not measured out as is were some bitter cup of miserie in this life. And therefore Paul saith, Now reioyce I in my suffering for you, and fulfill the rest of Col.1.24. the sufferings of Christ in my flesh. By Christs sufferings he meaneth not the passion of Christ, but the sufferings of the bodie of Christ that is the Church where of Christ is the head. Moreouer we must suffer as he did, and that daily; because as one day followeth another, so one crosse comes in the necke of another. And whereas Christ beares the crosse that was laid on him by the hands of the souldiers, it must teach vs not to pull crosses vpon our selues; but waite till God lay them on vs; and when that time comes we must willingly bend our shoulders, stoope downe, and take thē vp; where they be in body or in soule; and that euery day if it be Gods will so long as wee liue: and by this shall wee most notably resemble our Sauiour Christ.

Thirdly, when Christ had carried his crosse so long till he could carrie it no lōger, by reason of the faintnes of his body, which came by buffets, whippings, and manifold other iniuries, then the Souldi- Luk.23.26 ers meeting with one Simon of Cyrene a straunger, made him to beare the crosse: where we are put in minde, that if we faint in the way and be wearied with the burdē of our afflictions, God will giue good issue, and send as it were some Simon of Mat.11.28 Cyrene to help vs, and to be our comforter.

The fourth point is, that when Christ was carrying his own crosse, & was now passing on towards Golgotha, certain women met him, & pitying his case wept for him: but Christ answered them and said, Luk.23.27 Daughters of Ierusalem, weepe not for me but weepe for your selues, and your children, &c. By this wee are first of all taught to pittie the state of those that be in affliction and miserie. especially those that be the childrē of God: as the Apostle exhorteth vs, saying, Remember them that are in bands, as Hebr.13.3. though you were bound with them: and them that are in affliction, as though you were afflicted with them. In this land by Gods especiall blessing we haue enioyed the Gospel of Christ with peace a long time, whereas other countries and churches are in great distresse: some wallowe in palpable ignorance and superstition: others haue libertie to inioy the Gospel & want teachers: and some haue both the word and teachers and yet want peace, and are in continuall persecution. Now when we that haue the Gospell with peace doe heare of these miseries in our neighbour churches, wee ought to be moued with compassion towards them, as though we our selues were in the same afflictions. Secondly, whereas Christ saith, Weepe not for me, but for your selues, he doth teach vs to take occasion by other mens miseries to bewaile our owne estate: to turne our worldly griefes into godly sorrowe for our sinnes, which causeth vs rather to weepe for our offēces, then for our friendes, although euen this may also be done in godly manner. When a man bleeding at the nose is brought into danger of his life, the Physitian lets him blood in another place, as in the arme, & turnes the course of the blood another way to saue his life: and so must we turne our worldly sorrowes for losse of goods or friendes, to a godly sorrowe for our offenses against God: for so Saint Paul saith, Godly sorrow causeth repentance vnto salua- 2.Cor.7 tion, not to be repented of: but worldly sorrowe 10 causeth death.

The fifth point is, that when Christ was brought to the place of execution, they gaue him vineger to drinke mingled with Mar.15.23 mirrhe and gall: some say it was to intoxicate his braine, and to take away his senses and memorie. If this be true, we may here behold in the Iewes a most wicked part, that at the point of death, when they were to take away the life of Christ, they for their parts had no care of his soule. For this is a dutie to be obserued of all magistrates, that when they are to execute malefactours, they must haue a speciall regard to the good and saluation of their soules. But some thinke rather that this potion was to shorten and end his torments quickly. Some of vs may peraduenture thinke hardly of the Iewes, for giuing so bitter a potion to Christ at the time of his death: but the same doth euery sinner that repenteth not. For whensoeuer we sinne, we doe as much as temper a cup of gall, or the poison of aspes, and as it were giue it to God to drinke: for so God himselfe cōparēth the sinne of the wicked Iewes to poyson, saying, There vine is of the vine of Deut.32. Sodome, and of the vines of Gomorrha, their 32.33. grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters be bitter, their wine is the poyson of dragons, and the cruell gall of Aspes. And for this cause we ought to thinke as hardly of our selues as of the Iewes, because so oft as we commit any offence against God, we do as much as mingle ranke poison, and bring it to Christ to drinke. Nowe afterward, when this cup was giuen him, he tasted of it; but dranke not, because he was willing to suffer all things that his father had appointed him to suffer on the crosse, without any shortening or lessening of his paine.

Thus we see in what manner Christ was brought forth to the place of execution: now followeth his crucifying. Christ in the prouidence of God was to be crucified for two causes: one, that the figures of the old testament might be accomplished and verified. For the heaue-offering lifted vp and shaked from the right hand to the left, and the brasen serpent erected vpon a pole in the wildernesse, prefigured the exalting of Christ vpon the crosse. The second, that we might in conscience be resolued, that Christ became vnder the Gal. 3. 13. law and suffered the curse thereof for vs, and bare in his owne bodie and soule the extremitie of the wrath of God for our offences. And though other kindes of punishments were notes of the curse of God, as stoning and such like; yet was the death of the crosse in speciall manner aboue the rest accursed, not by the nature of the punishment, not by the opinions of men, not by the ciuill lawes of countries and kingdomes, but by the vertue of a particular Deu. 21. 23 commandement of God, foreseeing what manner of death Christ our Redeemer should die. And hereupon among the Iewes in all ages this kinde of punishment hath bene branded with speciall ignominie, as paul signifieth when hee saith, He Phil. 2. 8. abased himselfe to the death euen to the death
Num. 25. 4 2. Sa. 21. 6. of the crosse: and it hath bin alotted as a most grieuous punishment to most notorious malefactours. If it be said that the repentant theefe vpon the crosse died the same death with Christ and yet was not accursed, the answer is, that in regard of his offences he deserued the curse and was actually accursed, & the signe of this was the death which he suffered, and that in his owne confession: but because he repented, his sinnes were pardoned, & the curse remoued. It may further be said, that crucifying was not known in Moses daies, and therefore not accursed by any speciall commandement of God in Deutronomy. Answ. Moses indeede speakes nothing in particular of crucifying, yet neuertheless he doeth include the same vnder the generall. For if euery one which hangs vpon a tree be accursed, then he also which is crucified; for crucifying is a particular kinde of hanging on a tree. Lastly, it may be alleadged, that Christ in his death could not be accursed by the lawe of Moses because he was no malefactour. Anſ. Though in regard of himselfe he was no sinner, yet as he was our surety he became sinne for vs, and consequently the curse of the law for vs, in that the curse euery way due vnto vs by imputation and application was made his.

Furthermore Christ was crucified not after the manner of the Iewes, who vsed to hang malefactours vpon a tree binding them thereto with cords, and that when they were dead, but after the vsuall maner of the Romanes; his body beeing partly Psal. 22. 17 nailed to the crosse, and partly in the nailing extreamly racked, otherwise I see not but that a man might remaine many daies togither aliue vpon the crosse. And here we haue occasion to remember that the Papists who are so deuout and zealous towards crucifixes are farre deceiued in the making of them. For first of all, the crosse was made of three peeces of wood, one fastened vpright in the ground to which the Iren. l. 2. c. 42 Aug. l. 50. hom. 2. bodie and backe leaned, the second fastened towards the toppe of the first ouerthwart, to which the handes were nailed: the third fastened towards the bottome of the first, on which the feete were set & nailed: whereas contrariwise popish caruers and painters fasten both the feete of the crosse to the first: secondly; the feete of Author lib. de passione inter opera Cypriani. Christ were nailed asunder with two distinct nailes, and not nailed one vpon another with one naile alone as Papists imagine, & that to the very body of the crosse: for then the souldiers could not haue broken both the legges of the theeues, but only the outmost: because one of them lay vpon the other.

Let vs now come to the vse which may bee made of the crucifying of Christ. First of all here we learne with bitternesse to bewaile our sinnes: for Christ was thus cruelly nailed on the crosse, and there suffered the whole wrath of GOD, not for any offence that euer he committed, but beeing our pledge and suretie vnto God, he suffered all for vs: and therefore iust cause haue wee to mourne for our offences, which brought our Sauiour Christ to this lowe estate. If a man should bee so farre in debt that he could not be freed, vnlesse the suretie ſuretie ſhould bee caſt into priſon for his ſake; nay, which is more, be cruelly put to death for his debt, it would make him at his wits end, and his very heart to bleede. And ſo is the caſe with vs by reaſon of our

Mat. 6. 12. ſinnes; wee are Gods debters, yea bankrupts before him, yet haue we gotte a good ſuretie, euen the ſonne of God himſelfe, who to recouer vs to our former libertie was crucified for the diſcharge of our debt. And therefore good cauſe haue wee to bewaile our eſtate euery day, as by the Zach. 12. 10. Prophet it is ſaid, They ſhall looke on him whome they haue pierced, they ſhall lament for him as one mourneth for his owne ſonne: they ſhall be ſorrie for him as one is ſorrie for his firſt borne. Looke as the blood followed the nailes that were ſtricken through the bleſſed hands and feet of Chriſt, ſo ſhould the meditation of the croſſe and paſſion of our Redeemer be as it were nailes and ſpeares to pierce vs, that our hearts might bleed for our ſinnes: and wee are not to thinke more hardly of the Iewes for crucifying him then of our ſelues, becauſe euē by our ſinnes we alſo crucified him. Theſe are the very nailes which pierce his hands and feete, and theſe are the ſpeares which pierce through his ſide. For the loſſe of a little worldly pelfe, oh how are we grieued! but ſeeing our tranſgreſſions are the weapons whereby the ſonne of God was crucified, let vs (I ſay it againe and againe) learne to bee grieued for them aboue all things, and with bleeding and melting hearts bow and buckle vnder them, as vnder the croſſe.

Secondly, Chriſt ſaith of himſelfe, as
Ioh. 3. 14. Moſes lift vp the ſerpent in the wilderneſſe, ſo muſt the ſonne of man be lifted vp: the cōpariſon is excellent and worthy the marking. In the wildernes of Arabia the people of Iſrael rebelled againſt God, & thervpon he ſent fierie ſerpents among them, which ſtung many of them to death: now when they repented, Moſes was commanded to make a braſen ſerpent, and to ſet it vpon a pole, that as many as were ſtung might looke vnto it and recouer: & if they could but caſt a glaunce of the eye on the braſen ſerpent, when they were ſtung euen to death, they were reſtored to health and life. Nowe euery man that liueth is in the ſame caſe with the Iſraelites; Satā hath ſtung vs at the heart, and giuen vs many a deadly wounde, if wee could feele it, and Chriſt who was figured by the braſen ſerpent was likewiſe exalted on the croſſe, to conferre righteouſnes and life eternall to euery one of vs: therefore if we will eſcape eternal death, we muſt renoūce our ſelues and lift vp the eies of our faith to Chriſt crucified, and pray for the pardon of our ſinnes: and then ſhall our hearts and conſciences be healed of the wounds & gripes of the deuill: & vntill ſuch time as we haue grace to doe this, we ſhall neuer be cured, but ſtill lie wōūded with the ſtings of ſatā, & bleeding to death euē at the very heart, although we feele no paine or griefe at al. But ſome may aske how any man can ſee him crucified now after his death? Anſw. Wherſoeuer the word of God is preached, there Chriſt is crucified, as Paul ſaith, O
Gal. 3. 1 fooliſh Galathiās, who hath bewitched you that ye ſhould not obey the trueth, to whome before Ieſus Chriſt was deſcribed in your ſight, & among you crucified? meaning that hee was liuely preached among them. We neede not to goe to wodden croſſes, or to goldē crucifixes to ſeeke for him; but where the goſpell is preached, thither muſt we goe, and there lift vp our eies of faith to Chriſt, as he is reuealed vnto vs in the worde; reſting on him and his merits with all our hearts, and with a godly ſorrowe confeſſe and bewaile our ſinnes, craving at his hāds mercie and pardon for the ſame. For till ſuch time as we doe this, we are grieuouſly ſtung by Satan, and are euery moment euē at deaths doore. And if we can thus beholde Chriſt by faith, the benefits which come hereby ſhall be great: for as Paul ſaith, the old man, that is, the corruption of our nature, and the bodie of ſin that raigneth in vs, ſhal be crucified with him: for whē Chriſt was nailed on the croſſe, al our ſins were laid vpō him; therefore if thou doeſt vnfainedly beleeue, all thy ſinnes are crucified with him, and the corruption of thy nature languiſheth and dieth as he languiſhed and died vpon the croſſe.

Thirdly, we muſt learne to imitate Chriſt: as he ſuffered himſelfe to be nailed to the croſſe for our ſinnes, ſo anſwerably muſt euery one of vs learne to crucifie our fleſh, and the corruption of our nature, & the wickedneſſe of our owne hearts, as Gal. 5. 24. Paul ſaith, They that are Chriſts haue crucified the fleſh with the luſts & affections thereof. And this we ſhal doe, if for our ſinnes paſt we waile and mourne with bitternes, and preuent the ſinns to come, into which we may fal by reaſon of the corruption of our natures, by vſing all good meanes, as praier, faſting, & the word of God preached ched, and by flying all occasions of offence. We are not to destroy our bodies or to kill our selues, but to kill and crucifie sinne that liueth in vs, and to mortifie the corruption of our nature that rebells against the spirit. Christianitie stands not in this, to heare the word of God, and outwardly to professe the same, and in the meane season still to liue in our sinnes, and to pamper our owne rebellious flesh; but it teacheth vs alwaies to haue in readines some speare or other to wound sinne, and the sword of the spirit to cut downe corruption in vs, that thereby we may shewe our selues to be liuely followers of Christ indeed.

Fourthly, by this we may learne that the wrath of God against sinne is wonderfull great, because his own Sonne bearing our person, and beeing in our place, was not onely crucified, and racked most cruelly, but also bare the whole wrath of God in his soule: and therefore we must leaue off to make so little account of sinne as commonly we doe.

Fifthly, whereas the person crucified was the sonne of God, it sheweth that the loue of God which he bare vnto vs in our redemption is endlesse; like a sea without banke or bottome, it cannot be searched into; and if we shall not acknowledge it to be so, our condemnation will be the greater.

Sixtly, in this that Christ bare the curse of the law vpon the crosse; we learne that those that be the children of God, when they suffer any iudgement, crosse, or calamitie, either in bodie or in minde or both, doe not beare them as the curses of God, but as the chastisements of a louing father. For it doth not stand with the iustice of God to punish one fault twise: and therefore when any man that putteth his whole confidence in God, shall either in his own person, in his good name, or in his goods feele the heauie hand of God. God doeth not as a iudge curse him, but as a father correct him. Here then is condemned the opinion of the Church of Rome, which hold, that we by our sufferings do in some part satisfie the iustice of God: but this cannot stand, because Christ did make a perfect satisfaction to the iustice of his father for all punishment. And therefore satisfaction to God made by man for temporall punishment is needlesse, and much derogates from Christs passion,

In the crucifying of Christ, two things specially must be considered: The manner of the doing of it, and his continuance aliue vpon the crosse. Touching the maner, the spirit of God hath noted two things. The first, that Christ was crucified betweene two theeues, the one vpon his left hand, the other vpon his right; in which action is verified the saying of the prophet Esay, He was aumbred nmong the wicked: & the Iewes for their parts doe hereby testifie, that they esteemed him to be, not some common wicked man, but euen the captaine and ringleader of all theeues & malefactours whatsoeuer. Nowe whereas Christ standing vpon the crosse in our roome and stead, is reputed the head and prince of all sinners, it serueth to teach euery one of vs that beleeue in him to iudge our selues most vile and miserable sinners, and to say of our selues with Paul, that wee are the cheife of all sinners. The second thing is, that Christ was crucified naked; becuse he was stripped of his garments by the Souldiers when he was to be crucified. The causes why he suffered naked are these. First, Adam by his fall brought vpon all mankind death both of body and soule, and also the curses of God which befall man in this life: among which this was one, that the nakednesse of the body should be ignominious; & hereupon whē Adam had sinned, and sawe himselfe naked he fledde from the presence of God, and hidde himselfe euen for very shame. Christ therefore was stripped of his garments, and suffered naked, that he might beare all the punishment and ignominie that was due vnto man for sinne. Secondly this came to passe by the goodnesse of God, that we might haue a remedie for our spirituall nakednesse; which is, when a man hath his sinnes lying open before Gods eies; and by reason thereof he himselfe lyeth open to all Gods iudgements. Hereof Christ speaketh to the angell of the church of Laodicea, saying, Thou saiest I am rich, and increased with goods, and haue needs of nothing, and knowest not how thou art wretched, miserable, blinde, and naked. So when the Israelites had committed idolatrie by the golden calfe, Moses telleth them that they were naked, not onely because they had spoyled themselues of their earings, but especially because they were destitute of Gods fauour, and lay open & naked to all his iudgements for that sinne. And Salomō saith, Where there is no vision, there the people are made naked, that is, their

sinnes lie open before God; and by reason thereof they themselues are subiect to his wrath and indignation. Now Christ was crucified naked, that he might take away from vs this spirituall nakednesse; and also giue vnto vs meete garments to cloath vs withal in the presence of God, called white rayment, as Christ saith I counsell thee to buy Reu.3.18. of me white raiment, that thou mayest be cloathed, and that thy filthy nakednesse do not Reu.7.14. appeare: and, Long white robes dipped in the blood of the Lambe, which serue to hide the nakednesse of our soules. What these garments are, the Apostle sheweth when Gal.3.27. he saith, All that are baptized into Christ, haue put on Christ. And, Put on the new man
Eph.4.24. which after God is created in righteousnesse, and true holynesse. Our nakednesse maketh vs more vile in the sight of God, then the most loathsome creature that is, can be vnto vs; vntill we haue put on the righteousnesse of Christ to couer the deformitie of our soules, that wee may appeare holy & without spotte before God. Thirdly, Paul saith, We knowe if our earthly
2.Cor.5.1. 2.3. house of this tabernacle be destroyed, we haue a building giuen of God, &c. For therefore we sigh, desiring to bee cloathed with our house which is from heauen, because if we be cloathed we shall not be found naked. Where it is like that the Apostle alludeth to the nakednesse of Adam after his fall; and therefore giueth vs another reason why Christ was crucified naked, namly, that after this life he might cloath all his members with eternall glorie.

If this be so, that a part of our reioycing stand in the glorious nakednes of Christ crucified, there is no reaso why we should be puffed vp with the vanity of our apparell. It should rather bee an occasion to make vs ashamed, then to make vs proud. The theefe may as well brag of the brand in his hand, or of the fetters on his heeles, as we may of our attire; because it is but the couering of our shame: & therfore should put vs in mind of our sinne and shamefull nakednesse.

The aboad of Christ vpon the crosse, was about the space of sixe houres. For the death of the crosse was no suddain but a lingring death. And in this space of time there fel out fiue notable euents. The first, that the souldiours hauing stripped Christ of his garments, deuided them into foure parts, and cast lottes for his coate, because it was wouen without seame. And by this appeares the great loue of Christ to man, who was not only content to suffer, but also to loose all that euer hee had, euen to the garments on his backe to redeeme vs; teaching vs answerably that if it please God to call vs to any trial hereafter we must be content to part withall for his sake, that we may winne him. Againe, in these souldiours we may behold a picture of this world: when they had nailed Christ to the crosse, they will not loose so much as his garments, but they come and deuide them and cast lottes for them: as for Christ himselfe, the Sauiour and redeemer of mankind, they regard him not. And thus fareth the world; it is a hard thing to finde a man to accept of Christ, because hee is Christ his redeemer: but when gaine comes by Christ, then he is wellcome. Esau that esteemed nothing of his fathers blessing, made great account of his brothers pottage. The Gaderens made more account of their swine, then of Christ: for when they heard that they were drowned, they beseech him to depart out of their coastes. Nay so bad is this age, that such as wil be taken to be the special members of Christ, doe not onely with the souldiers strippe Christ of his garments, but more then this, they bereaue him of his natures and offices. The Church of Rome by their transubstantiation strippe him of his manhoode: and by making other priestes after the same order with him, which doe properly forgiue sinnes, strip him of his priesthood: and of his kingly office, by ioyning with him a Vicar on earth, and head of the Catholike Church, and that in his presence: whereas al deputishippes and commissions cease in the presence of the principal. And when they haue done all this, then they further loade him with a number of beggarly ceremonies; and so do nothing else but make a b faigned Christ, in stead of the true and alone Messias.

b Fictitium Christum.

The second euent was, that Christ was mocked of all sorts of men. First they set vp the cause written why he was crucified namely, This is the king of the Iewes: then Mat.27.37 the people that passed by reuiled him, 38.39. wagging their heads at him and said, Thou that destroyest the temple and buildest it in three dayes, saue thy selfe, &c. Likewise the high Priestes mocking him, with the Scribes and Pharisies and the Elders, said, He saued others, let him saue himselfe. The same also did one of the theeues that was crucified with him cast in his teeth. Behold here the wonderfull ſtrange dealing of the Iewes: they ſee an innocent man thus pitifully and grieuouſly racked, and nailed on the croſſe, and his blood diſtilling downe from hands and feete: and yet are they without all pittie, and compaſſion, and doe make but a mocke and a skoffe at him. And in this we may plainly ſee how dangerous and fearefull their caſe is, who are wholly giuen vp to the hardneſſe of their owne hearts: and we are further admoniſhed to take heede howe we giue our ſelues to ieſting or mocking of others. And if any thinke it to be a light ſinne, let them conſider what befell the Iewes for mocking Chriſt. The hand of God was vpon them within a while after, and ſo remaineth to this day. Little children wickedly brought vp, when they ſawe Eliſha the man of God comming, they mocked him and ſaid, Come vp thou balde pate, come vp thou bald pate: but Eliſha looked backe on them, and curſed them in the name of the Lord, and two wild beares came out of the forreſt and tare in peeces two and fourtie of them. Iulian once a Chriſtian Emperour, but after an Apoſtata, did nothing elſe but mocke Chriſt and his doctrine, and made ieſts of ſundry places of Scripture: but beeing in fight againſt the Perſians, was wounded with a dart (no mã knowing how) and died ſcoffing and blaſpheming. And ſuch like are the iudgemẽts of God, which befall mockers and ſcorners. Let vs therefore in the feare of God learne to eſchew and auoid this ſinne.

2. King. 2. 23. 24.

Furthermore if wee ſhall indifferently conſider all the mockes and ſcornings of the Iewes, we ſhall finde that they can not truely conuince him of the leaſt ſin; which ſerueth to cleare Chriſt, and to proue that he was a moſt innocent man, in whoſe wordes was no wickednesſe, and in whoſe mouth was found no guile: and therefore he was moſt fit to ſtand in our roome, and ſuffer for vs which were moſt vile and ſinfull. And here by the way a queſtion offereth it ſelfe to be skanned. Saint Matthew ſaith, The theeues which were crucified with him caſt the ſame in his teeth which the Scribes and Phariſes did, S. Luke ſaith, that one of the theeues mocked him. Nowe it may be demanded, how both theſe can be true? Anſ. Some reconcile the places thus that the Scripture ſpeaking generally of any thing, by a figure doeth attribute that to the whole, which is proper to ſome part onely; and ſo here doeth aſcribe that to both the theeues which agreeth but to one. Others anſwer it thus: that at the firſt both of the euill doers did mocke Chriſt, and of that time ſpeaketh Matthewe: but afterward one of them was miraculouſly conuerted, then the other alone mocked him, and of that time ſpake S. Luke. And this I rather take to be the trueth. But what was the behauiour of Chriſt, when hee is thus laden with reproch? In wonderfull patience he replies not, but puts vp all in ſilence. Where we are taught, that when a man ſhall raile on vs wrongfully, we muſt not returne rebuke for rebuke, nor taunt for taunt: but we muſt either be ſilent, or elſe ſpeake no more then ſhall ſerue for our iuſt defence. This was the practiſe of the Iſralites, by the appointment of Hezekias, when Rabſhakah reuiled the Iewes & blaſphemed the name of God; the people held their peace, & anſwered him not a word: for the kings commãdement was, anſwer him not. So Hannah being troubled in mind, prayed vnto the Lord, and Hely marked her mouth, for ſhee ſpake in her heart, and her lippes did moue onely, but her voice was not heard, therefore Hely thought ſhe had beene drunken, and ſaid, Howe long wilt thou be drunken, put away thy drunkennesſe from thee. Such a ſpeech would haue mooued many a one to verie hard words: but ſhe ſaid, Nay, my Lord, but I am a woman troubled in ſpirit, I haue drunk neither wine nor ſtrong drinke: but haue powred out my ſoule before the Lord. This is a hard leſſon for men to learne; but we muſt indeauour our ſelues to practiſe it, if wee will be followers of Chriſt, and ouercome euill with good.

Synechdoche.

The third thing that fell out in the time of Chriſts crucifying, was the pittiful complaint, in which he cried with a loud voice Eli, Eli lamaſabacthani, that is, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? In the opening of this complaint many pointes muſt be skãned. The firſt is, what was the cauſe that mooued Chriſt to complaine? Anſ. It was not any impatience or diſcontentation of mind, or any deſpaire, or any diſſembling, as ſome would haue it: but it was an apprehenſion and a feeling of the whole wrath of God, which ſeazed vpon him both in body and ſoule. The ſecond, what was the thing whereof hee doth complaine? Anſw. That he is forſaken of God the father. And from this point ariſeth another queſtiõ. How Chriſt beeing God, can be forſaken of God? for the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt are all three but one and the ſame God. Anſ. By God wee muſt vnderſtand God the father the firſt perſon. According to the common rule, when God is compared with the Sonne or the holy Ghoſt, then the Father is meant by this title, God; as in this place: not that the father is more God then the Sonne, for in dignitie all the three perſons are equall: but they are diſtinguiſhed in order onely, and the Father is firſt. And againe, whereas Chriſt complaineth that he was forſakē, it muſt be vnderſtood in regard of this humane nature, not of his Godhead. And Chriſts manhood was forſaken, not that his Godhead & manhood were ſeuered, for they were euer ioyned together from the firſt moment of the incarnation: but the Godhead of Chriſt, and ſo the Godhead of the Father did not ſhew foorth his power in the manhood, but did as it were lie aſleepe for a time, that the manhood might ſuffer: when a man ſleepeth, the ſoule is not ſeuered from the bodie, but lieth as it were dead, and exerciſeth not it ſelfe: euen ſo the Godhead lay ſtill, and did not manifeſt his power in the manhood, and thus the manhood ſeemed to be forſaken. The third point is, the manner of this complaint; My God, my God, ſaith he: theſe wordes are wordes of faith I ſay not of iuſtifying faith, whereof Chriſt ſtood not in need: but hee had ſuch a faith or hope, whereby he did put his confidence in God. The laſt wordes, why haſt thou forſaken me? ſeeme at the firſt to be wordes of diſtruſt. How then (will ſome ſay) can theſe words ſtand with the former: for faith and diſtruſt are flat contraries? Anſ. Chriſt did not vtter any ſpeech of diſtruſt, but onely make his mone and complaint, by reaſon of the greatneſſe of his puniſhment: and yet ſtill relied himſelfe on the aſſiſtance of his father. Hence wee learne firſt that religion doth not ſtand in feeling but in faith: which faith wee muſt haue in Chriſt, though we haue no feeling at all: for God oftentimes doth withdraw his grace and fauour from his childrē, that he may teach them to beleeue in his mercie in Chriſt then, when they feele nothing leſſe then his mercie. And faith and feeling can not alwayes ſtand together: becauſe faith is a ſubſiſting of things which are not ſeene, and the ground of things hoped for, and we muſt liue by faith, and not by feeling. Though feeling of Gods mercy be a good thing, yet God doth not alwaies vouchſafe to giue it vnto his children: & therefore in the extremity of afflictions & temptatiōs, we muſt alwayes truſt & relie on God by faith in Chriſt; as Chriſt himſelfe doth whē he is as it were plunged into the ſea of the wrath of God. Secondly, here we may ſee how God dealeth with his children: for Chriſt in the ſenſe & feeling of his humane nature was forſaken, yet had he ſure truſt & confidence in God, that cauſed him to ſay, My God, my God, God will oftentimes caſt his deere children into huge gulfes of woe and miſerie, where they ſhall ſee neither banke nor bottome, nor any way to get out: yet men in this caſe muſt not deſpaire, but remember ſtill that that which befell Chriſt the head, doth alſo befall his members. Though Chriſt himſelfe at his death did beare the wrath of God in ſuch meaſure, as that in the ſenſe and feeling of his humane nature he was forſaken: yet for all this he was the ſonne of God, and had the ſpirit of his father, crying, My God, my God. And therefore though we bee wonderfully afflicted either in body or in mind ſo as we haue no ſenſe or feeling of Gods mercie at all, yet muſt we not diſpaire and thinke that we are caſt-awaies, but ſtill labour to truſt and relie on God in Chriſt, and build vpon him that wee are his childrē, thogh we feele nothing but his wrath vppon vs; againſt mercie cleauing to his mercie. This was Dauids practiſe: In the day of trouble (ſaith he) I ſought the Lord: my ſore ranne & ceaſed not in the night: my ſoule refuſed comfort. I did thinke vpon God & was troubled: my ſoule was full of anguiſh: & ſo he continueth on, ſaying, Will the Lord abſent himſelfe for euer and will hee ſhew no more fauour? hath God forgottē to be mercifull? but in the end he recouereth himſelfe out of this gulfe of tēptation, ſaying, Yet I remēber the yeres of the right hād of the moſt high: I remēber the works of the Lord, certainly I remēber the wonders of old. Wherefore this practiſe of Chriſt in his paſſion, muſt then be remembred of vs all, when God ſhall humble vs either in bodie or ſoule, or both. Pſal. 77. 2, 3. ver. 10, 11, 12, &c.

The fourth thing which fell out when Chriſt was on the croſſe was this: after Chriſt knew that all things were performed, and that the Scriptures were fulfilled, he ſaide, I thirſt, and then there ſtanding a veſſell full of vineger, one ran and filled a ſponge therewith, and put it about an hyſſope ſtalke, and put it to his mouth: which when he had receiued, he ſaid, It is finiſhed. Ioh. 19. 28

The points here to bee considered, are foure. The first, that Christ thirsteth. And we must know that this thirst was a part of his passion; and indeede it was no small paine, as we may see by this: when Sisera Iudg.4.19. was ouercome by Israel, & had fled from his enemies to Iaels tent, he called for a little water to drinke, beeing more troubled with thirst, then with the feare of death at the hand of his enemies. And indeed thirst was as grieuous to men in the East countrey, as any torment else. And hereupon Iudg.15. 18. Sampson was more grieued with thirst, then with feare of many thousand Philistimes.

Againe, whereas Christ complaines that he thirsteth, it was not for his owne sake, but for our offences: and therefore answerably we must thirst after Christ and his benefits, as the dry & thirsty land where no water is, doth after raine: and as the Hart braieth after the riuers of water, so Psal.143.6. & 42.1. must we say with Dauid, My soule panteth after thee, O Lord, and the benefits of thy death.

The second, that a sponge full of vineger tied vpon an hyssope stalke, was reached to Christ vpon the crosse. Nowe it may be demanded, how this could be, considering the stalke of the hyssope is not past a foote long. Ans. As the tree of mustard seede with the Iewes is farre greater and taller then with vs, in so much that the Matt.13.32. birds of heauen build their neasts in it; so it may be that hyssope groweth much longer in those countries then with vs. Or as I take it rather, the hyssope stalke was put vpon a reede, and by that meanes the sponge was put vp to the mouth of Christ.

The third point is, that Christ drinketh the vineger offered. but when? Not before all things were finished that were to bee done on the crosse. And by this he shewes his exceeding care for our saluation. Hee laide aside all things that would turne to his owne ease, that hee might fully worke our redemption, and fulfill the will of his Father who sent him into the world for that ende. The like care must euery one of vs haue to walke dutifully; and, as it were to goe with thorough-stitch in our particular callings, that God may be glorified by vs. When Abrahams seruant came to Bethuel to get a wife for Isaac, meate was Gen.24.33. set before him, but he saide, I will not eate before I haue said my message: so likewise we must first see Gods glory procured in our affaires, & then in the second place, if commodity or praise redound to vs, wee must afterward take it.

The last point is, that when Christ had drunke the vineger, he saide, It is finished. Which wordes may haue a double sense: one, that such things as were figured by the sacrifices of the old Testament are accomplished; the other, that now vpon the crosse he had finished his satisfaction to the iustice of his Father for mans sinne. And this of the twaine I rather thinke to be his meaning. If it be said, that the burial and resurrection and asslension of Christ, &c. which are necessarie to mans redemption, were not yet begun, the answer is, that the workes of Christs priesthood which follow his death serue not to make any satisfaction to Gods iustice for sinne, but onely to confirme or apply it, after it is made & accomplished on the crosse. And if this be so, that Christ in his owne person accomplished the worke of redemption, and made a full and perfect satisfaction for vs, as these wordes import, It is finished, then humane satisfactions to Gods iustice for sinne are altogether superfluous.

The fifth euent that fel out when Christ was vpon the crosse was, that he cried with a loud voice, and said, Father, into thy hands I lay downe my spirit, that is, I commend my soule as beeing the most pretious thing which I haue in this world into thy custody, who art a most faithfull keeper thereof. These wordes are taken by Christ out of the Psalmes: for when Dauid was in danger of his life By reason of Saul, & had no friend to trust, he makes choise of God to be his keeper, and said, Into thy handes, O Lord, do I commend my spirit. Now Psal.31.6 our Sauiour Christ beeing in the like distresse, both by reason of the Iewes, who euery way sought his finall destruction and confusion, and especially because hee felt the full wrath of God seazing vpon him, doth make choise of Dauids wordes, and apply them to himself in his distresse. And by his example wee are taught not onely to reade the generall historie of the Bible, but also to obserue the things commanded and forbidden, and to apply the same vnto our selues, and to our particular estates and dealings whatsoeuer: thus the prophet Dauid saith, In the roll of the booke it is written of me, that I should doe thy will, O my God. How can this bee? for no part of Scripture penned before the daies of Dauid saith thus of him. True indeede; Psal.40.8

but as I take it, Dauids meaning is, that he read the booke of the lawe, and found generall precepts and commandements giuen to kings and princes, that they ſhould keepe all the ordinances and commandements of God: which he being a king applies particularly to his owne perſon, and thereupon ſaith: In the volume of the booke it is written of me, &c. And this duty is well practiſed by the people of God at this day: For the Pſalmes of Dauid were penned according to the eſtate of the Church in his time: and in theſe dayes the Church of God doth ſing the ſame with the ſame ſpirit that Dauid did, and doth apply their ſeuerall eſtates and conditions.

Now in that Chriſt commends his ſoule into the hands of his Father, he doth it to teſtifie that he died not by conſtraint, but willingly: and by his owne practiſe he doth teach vs to doe the like, namely, to giue vp our owne ſoules into the hands of God: and becauſe this dutie is of ſome difficultie, we muſt obſerue three motiues or preparatiues which may induce vs to the better doing of it. The firſt is, to conſider that God the father of Chriſt, is the creator of our ſoules, and therefore hee is called the father of Spirits. And if he be a creator of them, then is hee alſo a faithfull preſeruer of them. For ſure it is, that God will preſerue his owne workemanſhip. Who is or can bee ſo carefull for the ornament & preſeruation of any worke as the craftſ-maſter? & ſhall not God be more carefull then man? Wherefore Saint Peter exhorteth vs to commit our ſoules vnto God, as vnto a faithfull creator. The ſecond motiue is this: we muſt looke to be reſolued in our conſciences, that God the father of Chriſt is our father: euery man for himſelfe muſt labour to haue the aſſurance of the pardon of his owne ſinnes, and that the corruption of his ſoule bee waſhed away in the blood of Chriſt, that he may ſay, I am iuſtified, ſanctified, and adopted by Chriſt. And when any man can ſay thus, he ſhall be moſt deſirous and willing to commit his ſoule into the hands of God. This was the reaſon which mooued Chriſt to lay downe his ſoule into the hands of God, becauſe he is his father. The third motiue or preparatiue is, a continuall experience and obſeruation of Gods loue and fauour towards vs, in keeping and preſeruing him, as appeares by Dauids example, Into thy hands (ſaith he) I commit my ſoule: for thou haſt redeemed me, O thou God of truth. Pſal. 31. 5.

The time when we are ſpecially to commend our ſoules into the hand of God, is firſt of all the time of any affliction or daunger. This was the time when Dauid commended his ſoule into the hands of God in the Pſalme before named. Wee know that in any common danger or perill, as the ſacking of a citie, or burning of an houſe, if a man haue any precious iewell therein, he will firſt fetch that out, and make choiſe of a faithfull friend, to whoſe cuſtodie hee will commit the ſame: euen ſo, in common perils and dangers wee muſt alwayes remember to commit our ſoules as a moſt pretious iewell into the hãds of God, who is a faithfull creator. An other more ſpeciall and neceſſarie time of practiſing this dutie, is the houre of death, as here Chriſt doth, and Steuen, who when the Iewes ſtoned him to death, called on God, and ſaid, Lord Ieſu receiue my ſpirit. And as this dutie is very requiſite and neceſſarie at all times, ſo moſt eſpecially in the houre of death; becauſe the danger is great by reaſon that Satan will then chiefly aſſault vs, and the guilt of ſinne wil eſpecially then wound the conſcience. Laſtly, at all times wee muſt commit our ſoules into Gods hands: for though we be not alwaies in afflictiõ, yet we are alwaies in great daunger: and when a man lieth down to reſt, he knoweth not whether he ſhal riſe againe or no: and when he ariſeth, he knoweth not whether he ſhal lie down againe: yea, at this very houre wee know not what will befall the next.

And great are the comforts which ariſe by the practiſe of thïs dutie. When Dauid was in great daunger of his life and his owne people ſhould haue ſtoned him, becauſe their hearts were vexed for their ſonnes and daughters which the Amalekites had taken; it is ſaid, he comforted himſelfe in the Lord his God. And the practiſe of Paul in this caſe is moſt excellent: For the which cauſe (ſaith he) I ſuffer thoſe things, but I am not aſhamed: for I know whome I haue beleeued, and am perſwaded that hee is able to keepe that which I haue committed vnto him againſt that day. This worthy ſeruant of God had committed his life and ſoule into Gods hand: and therefore hee ſaith, In all my ſufferings I am not aſhamed: where we ſee, that if a man haue grace in his life-time to commit his ſoule into Gods hand, it will make him bold euen at the point of death. And this muſt be a mo- 1. Sam. 30. 6. 2. Tim. 1. 12.

tiue to cauſe euery man daily and howerly to lay downe his ſoule into the hands of God, although by the courſe of nature he may liue twentie or fourtie yeares longer. But howſoeuer this dutie be both neceſſarie and comfortable, yet few there be that practiſe the ſame. Men that haue children are very carefull and diligent to bring thē vp vnder ſome mans tuition; and if they haue cattell, ſheepe, or oxen, they prouide keepers to tende them: but in the meane ſeaſon for their owne ſoules they haue no care; they may ſinke or ſwimme or doe what they will. This ſhewes the wonderfull blindnes or rather madneſſe of men in the world, that haue more care for their cattell, then for their owne ſoules: but as Chriſt hath taught vs by his example, ſo let euery one of vs in the feare of God, learne to commit our ſoules into the hand of God.

Againe, in that Chriſt layes downe his owne ſoule, and withall the ſoules of all the faithfull into the hands of the Father, we further learne three things. The firſt, that the ſoule of man doth not vaniſh away as the ſoules of beaſts and other creatures: there is great difference betweene them: for when the beaſt dyeth, his ſoule dieth alſo: but the ſoule of man is immortall. The conſideration whereof muſt mooue euery man aboue all things in this world to be carefull for his ſoule: if it were to vaniſh away at the day of death as the ſoule of beaſts doe, the neglect thereof were no great matter: but ſeeing it muſt liue for euer, either in eternall ioy, or els in endleſſe paines and torments, it ſtands vs vpon euery man for himſelfe, ſo to prouide for his ſoule in this life, that at the day of death when it ſhall depart from his bodie, it may liue in eternall ioy and happineſſe. The ſecond, that there is an eſpecial & particular prouidence of God, becauſe the particular ſoule of Chriſt is committed into the hands of his Father, and ſo anſwerably the ſoules of euery one of the faithfull are. The third, that euery one which beleeues himſelfe to be a member of Chriſt, muſt bee willing to dye when God ſhall call him thereunto. For when we dye in Chriſt, the body is but laide aſleepe, and the ſoule is receiued into the hands of a moſt louing God and mercifull father, as the ſoule of Chriſt was. Laſtly, wheras Chriſt ſurrendring his ſoule into his Fathers hands, calls it a ſpirit, wee note, that the ſoule of man is a ſpirit, that is, a ſpirituall, inuiſible, ſimple eſſence without compoſitiō, created as the angels of God are. The queſtion whether the ſoule of a child come from the ſoule of the parents as the body doth come from their bodies, may eaſily bee reſolued. For the ſoule of man beeing a ſpirit, cannot beget another ſpirit, as the angels being ſpirituall doe not beget angels: for one ſpirit begetteth not an other. Nay which is more, one ſimple element begetteth not another, as the water begetteth not water, nor aire begetteth aire: and therefore much leſſe can one ſoule beget an other. Againe, if the ſoule of the child come from the ſoule of the parents, then there is a propagation of the whole ſoule of the parēt or of ſome part thereof. If it be ſaid, that the whole ſoule of the parents is propagated, then the parents ſhould want their owne ſoules and could not liue. If it be ſayd that a part of the parents ſoule is propagated: I anſwer, that the ſoule beeing a ſpirit or a ſimple ſubſtance cannot be parted: and therefore it is the ſafeſt to conclude, that the bodie indeed is of the body of the parents, and that the ſoule of man while the body is in making, is created of nothing: and for this very cauſe God is called the father of ſpirits. Heb. 12.9.

Thus much of the crucifying of Chriſt: now followeth his death. For hauing laide downe his ſoule into the hands of his Father, the holy Ghoſt ſaith, He gaue vp the Ghoſt: to giue vs to vnderſtand, that his death was no fantaſticall but a reall death, in that his body and ſoule were ſeuered as truly as when any of vs die. In treating of Chriſts death wee muſt conſider many points. The firſt, that it was needefull that hee ſhould die, and that for two cauſes. Firſt, to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice: for ſinne is ſo odious a thing in Gods ſight, that he will puniſh it with an extreme puniſhment: therefore Chriſt ſtanding in our roome muſt not onely ſuffer the miſeries of this life, but alſo die on the croſſe, that the very extremitie of puniſhmēt which we ſhould haue borne, might be laide on him: and ſo we in Chriſt, might fully ſatisfie Gods iuſtice: for the wages of ſinne is death. Secondly, Chriſt died that he might fulfil the truth of Gods word which had ſaide, that man for eating the forbidden fruite ſhould die the death. The properties of Chriſts death are two: the firſt, that it was a voluntarie and willing death: the ſecond, that it was a curſed death. For the firſt, whereas I Luk. 23.46. Gen. 2.17.

say Christs death was voluntarie, I meane that Christ died willingly, and of his owne free accord gaue vp himselfe to suffer vpon the crosse. Howsoeuer the Iewes did arraigne, and condemne, and crucifie him, yet if he had not willed his owne death, and of his free accord giuen himselfe to die: not the Iewes nor all the whole world could euer haue taken away his life from him. He dyed not by constraint or compulsion, but most willingly: and therefore hee saith, No man taketh my life from me, but I (saith he) lay it downe of my selfe: I haue power to lay it downe, and haue power to take it againe. And our Sauiour Christ gaue euident tokens hereof in his death, for then Iesus cryed with a loud voyce, and gaue vp the ghost. Ordinarily men that dye on the crosse, languish away by little and little, and before they come to yeelde vp their liues they loose their speech, and onely rattle or make a noise in the throat: but Christ at that very instant when he was to giue vp the ghost, cried with a loud voice which sheweth plainely, that he in his death was more then a conquerour ouer death. And therefore to giue all men a token of his power, and to shew that he dyed voluntarily, it pleased him to crie with a loud voyce. And this made the Centurion to say that he was the sonne of God. Againe, Christ dyed not as other men doe; because they first giue vp the ghost, and then lay their heads aside: but he in token that his death was voluntarie, first layes his head aside after the manner of a dead man, and then afterward giues vp the ghost. Lastly, Christ dyed sooner then men are wont to doe vpon the crosse, & this was the cause that made Pilate wonder that hee was so soone dead. Now this came to passe not because hee was loath to suffer the extremity of death: but because he would make it manifest to all men that he had power to die or not to dye. And indeede this is our comfort that Christ dyed not for vs by constraint, but willingly of his owne accord.

Ioh. 19. 30

Mark. 15. 44.

And as Christs death was voluntarie, so was it also an accursed death, and therefore it is called the death of the crosse. And it containeth the first & the second death: the first is the separation of the body from the soule: the second is the separation of bodie and soule from God: and both were in Christ: for beside the bodily death, he did in soule apprehend the wrath of God due to mans sinne: and that made him crie, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

To signifie this point the Creed saith, that he was crucified and also died.

And here we must not omit a necessarie point, namely how farre forth Christ suffered death. Answ. Some thinke that he suffered onely a bodily death, and such paines as follow the dissolution of nature: but they, no doubt, come too short: for why should Christ haue feared death so greatly, if it had beene nothing but the dissolution of nature? Some againe thinke that he died, not onely the first, but also the second death; but it may be they goe too farre: for if to dye the first death be to suffer a totall separation of body and soule, then also to dye the second death is wholly and euery way to be seuered from all fauour of God, and at the least for a time to be oppressed of the same death as the damned are. Now this neuer befell Christ, no not in the middest of his sufferings, considering that euen then he was able to call God his God. Therefore the safest is to follow the meane; namely, that Christ dyed the first death, in that his bodie and soule were really and wholly seuered, yet without suffering any corruption in his body, which is the effect and fruite of the same: and that withall he further suffered the extreame horrours and pangs of the second death, not dying the same death, nor beeing forsaken of God, more then in his owne apprehension or feeling. For in the very middest of his sufferings the Father was well pleased with him. And this which I say doth not any whit lessen the sufficiencie of the merit of Christ: for whereas he suffered truly the very wrath of God, and the very torments of the damned in his soule, it is as much as if all the men in the world had died the second death, and had beene wholly cut off from God for euer and euer. And no doubt Christ dyed the first death onely suffering the pangs of the second; that the first death might be an entrance not to the second death which is eternall damnation, but a passage to life eternall.

The benefits and comforts which arise by the death of Christ, are specially foure. The first is the change of our naturall death, I say not the taking of it away, for we must al die; but wheras by nature death is a curse of God vpon man for eating the forbidden fruit, by the death of Christ it is changed from a curse into a blessing: and is made as it were a middle way & entrance

Secondly, the death of Christ hath quite taken away the second death from those that are in Christ: as Paul saith, There
Rom. 8. 1. is no condemnation to thē which are in Christ Iesus, which walke not after the flesh, but after the spirit. Thirdly, the death of Christ is a meanes to ratifie his last will and testa-
Heb. 9. 15. 16. ment. For this cause was Christ the Mediatour of the newe testament, that through death (which was for the redemption of the transgressions which were in the former testament) they which were called might receiue the promise of the eternall inheritance. For where a testament is, there must be the death of him that made the testament: for the testament is confirmed when men are dead: for it is yet of no force as longe as hee is aliue that made it. And therefore the death of Christ doth make his last will and testament which is the couenant of grace, authentical vnto vs. Fourthly the death of Christ doth serue to abolish the originall corruption of our sinnefull hearts. As a strong corrasiue laid to a sore, eats out all the rotten and dead flesh: euen so Christs death beeing applied to the heart of a penitēt sinner by faith, weakens and consumes the sinne that cleaues so fast vnto our natures and dwels within vs. Some will say, how can Christs death which now is not, becausе it is long agoe past and ended, kill sinne in vs now? Answ. Indeede if we regarde the acte of Christs death, it is past, but the vertue and power thereof endureth for euer. And the power of Christs death is nothing els but the power of his Godhead, which inabled him in his death to ouercome hell, the graue, death, and condemnation, and to disburden himselfe of our sinnes. Nowe when we haue grace to deny our selues, and to put our trust in Christ, and by faith are ioyned to him, then as Christ himselfe by the power of his Godhead ouercame death, hell, and damnation in himselfe; so shall we by the same power of his Godhead kill and crucifie sinne and corruption in our selues. Therfore seeing we reape such benefit by the death of Christ, if wee wil shew our selues to be Christians, let vs reioyce in the death of Christ: and if the question be, what is the chiefest thing wherein we reioyce in this world? we may answer, the very crosse of Christ, yea the very least drop of his blood.

The duties to be learned by the death of Christ are two: the first concernes all ignorant and impenitent sinners. Such men whatsoeuer they bee, by the death of Christ vpon the crosse, must be mooued to turne from their sinnes: and if the consideration hereof will not mooue them, nothing in the world will. By nature euery man is a vassal of sinne, & a bondslaue of Satan: the deuill raignes and rules in all men by nature, and we our selues can doe nothing but serue and obey him. Nay (which is more) we liue vnder the fearefull curse of God for the least sinne. Well now, see the loue of the sonne of God, that gaue himselfe willingly to death vpon the crosse for thee, that he might free thee frō this most fearefull bondage. Wherefore let all those that liue in sinne & ignorance reason thus with themselues: Hath Christ the sonne of God done this for vs, & shall we yet liue in our sinnes? hath he set open as it were the very gates of hell, and shall we yet lie weltring in our damnable waies and in the shadow of death? In the feare of God let the death of Christ be a meanes to turne vs to Christ: if it can not moue vs, let vs be resolued that our case is dangerous. To goe yet further in this point, euery one of vs is by nature a sicke man, wounded at the very heart by Satan: though we feele it not, yet we are deadly sicke: and behold, Christ is the good Phisitian of the soule, and none in heauen or earth, neither Saint angel, nor man can heale this our spiritual wound but he alone: who though he were equall with the Father, yet he came downe from his bosome and became man, and liued here many yeares in miserie and contempt: and when no hearb nor plaister could cure this our deadly wound or desperate sicknes, he was content to make a plaister with his owne blood: the paine he tooke in making it caused him to sweat water and blood: may the making of it for vs cost him his life, in that he was content by his owne death to free vs from death: which if it be true, as it is most true, then wofull and wretched is our case if we will still liue in sinne, and will not vse meanes to lay this playster to our heartes. And after this plaister is applied to the soule, wee should doe as a man that hath beene grieuously sicke, who when he is on the mending hand, gets strength by little and litle. And so should we become new creatures going on from grace to grace, and shewe the same by liuing godlily, righteously, & soberly, that the world may see that we are cured of our spirituall disease. O happie, yea thrise happy are they that haue grace from God to doe this. The second dutie concernes them which are repentāt sinners. Hath Christ giuen himselfe for thee, and is thy conscience setled in this? then thou must answerably beare this minde, and if thy life would serue for the glory of God and the good of his church, thou wouldest then giue it most willingly if thou be called thereto. Secondly, if Christ for thy good hath giuen his life, then thou must in like manner be content to die for thy brethren in Christ, if neede be. He (saith Saint Iohn) laid downe his life for vs, therefore wee ought to laie downe our liues for our brethren. Thirdly, if Christ was content to shed his owne heart blood not for himselfe, but for the sinnes of euery one of vs, then we must bee thus affected, that rather then by sinning we would willingly offend God, we should be content to haue our owne blood shed: yea if these two things were put to our choise, either to doe that which might displease God, or els to suffer death, we must rather die then do the same. Of this minde haue bin all the Martyrs of God, who rather then they would yeelde to Idolatry, were content to suffer most bitter torments & cruell death. Yea, euery good Christian is so affected, that he had rather chose, to die then to liue, not mooued by impatience in respect of the miseries of this life: but because he would cease to offend so louing a father. To sinne is meate and drinke to the world, but to a touched and repentant heart there is noe torment so grieuous as this is, to sinne against God, if once he bee perswaded that Christ died for him.

1. Ioh. 3. 16

Thus much for Christs death: now follow those things which befel Christ when he was newly dead; & they are two especially. The first, that his legges were not broken as the legges of the two theeues were. Of the first, S. Iohn rendreth a reason, namely, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, Not a bone of him shall be broken: which words were spoken by Moses of the paschal lambe, & are here applied to Christ, as beeing typically figured thereby. And hence wee obserue these two things. First, that Christ crucified is the true paschal Lambe, as Saint Paul saith, Christ our passeouer is Sacrificed: and Saint Iohn saith, Beholde the Lambe of God, distinguishing him thereby from the typicall lambe. In this that Christ crucified is the true paschall lambe, the child of God hath wonderfull matter of comfort. The Isralites did eate the Passeouer in Egypt, and sprinkled the blood of the lambe on the posts of their dores, that when the Angel of God came to destroy the first borne of man and beast, & sawe the blood vpon their houses might passe ouer them, that the plague should not be vpon them to destruction. So likewise if thou dost feede on the lambe of God, & by a liuely faith sprinkle the doore of thine heart with his blood, the iudgements of God in this life, and the terrible curse of death, with the feareful sentence of condemnation at the day of iudgement, and all punishments due vnto thy sinnes shall passe ouer thee, and not so much as touch thee. And whereas the legges of our Sauiour Christ were not broken by the souldiours, who sought by all meanes possible to worke against him all the mischiefe they could: we may note, that the enemies of Christ and his Church, let them intend to shewe neuer so much malice against him, they can not goe beyond that liberty which God giueth them, they can doe no more for their liues then that which GOD willeth. The Medes and Persians are called the Lordes sanctified ones: Cyrus is called the Man of Gods counsell, because whatsoeuer they intēded against the people of GOD, yet in all their proceedings they did nothing but that which God had determined before to be done. And when Senacherib came against the Iewes as a wild beast out of his den, the Lord telleth Hezekiah concerning Ashur that he will put his hooke in his nostrilles, and his bridle in his lippes, and bring him backe againe the same way that he came, that is, he wil so rule

him that he shal not doe the least hurt vnto the Iewes, more then God will. This is a matter of great comfort to Gods Church oppressed with manifold enemies, Papists, Iewes, Turks, and all infidells, malitiously bēt against it for Christs sake. For though they intend and practise mischiefe, yet more then Gods will and counsell is, they can not doe: because he hath his ring in their nostrils, and his bridle in their lippes to rule them as he listeth.

The second thing which fel out immediatly vpon the death of Christ is, that the souldiours pearced his side with a speare, and thence issued water and blood. The vse which ariseth of this point is twofold: first, it serues to prooue that Christ died truely, and not in shew, or a faigned death: for there is about the heart a filme or skin like vnto a purse, wherein is contained cleare water to coole the heat of the heart, and therefore when water and blood issued out after pearcing of the side, it is very likely that [a]that very skinne was pierced: for else in reason we can not coniecture whence this water should come. S. Iohn an eye-witnesse of this thing, beeing about to prooue that Iesus the sonne of Marie was the true Messias, bringeth in fixe witnesses: three in heauen, The Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost: and three in earth, the water, the Spirit, and the blood: where no doubt he alludeth to the water and blood that issued out of the side of Christ: by spirit, we may vnderstand the efficacie and operation of Gods spirit making men to bring forth the fruites of the same, as loue, peace, ioy, &c. And the second witnesse, namely water, hath relation to the water that came forth of Christs side, which signifieth the inward washing away of sinne, and the purging of thy heart by Christs blood: which also is and was signified by the outward washing of the bodie with water in baptisme. The third witnesse hee calls blood, alluding to the blood that issued out of Christs side: wherby is signified the expiation or satisfactiō made to Gods iustice for mans sinne. The same vse had the ceremoniall sprinkling in the old Testament, typically signifying the sprinkling of Christs blood. Nowe these three witnesses are not to be sought for in heauen, but euery Christian man must search for them in his own heart and conscience, & there shall he find thē in some measure. And this water and blood flowing out of the side of Christ beeing now dead, signifieth that he is our iustification and sanctification, euen after his death: and that out of his death springs our life: and therefore as Eue was made of a ribbe taken out of the side of Adam: so springes the Church out of the blood that flowes out of the side of the second Adam.

1. Ioh. 5. 8.

Hauing thus intreated of Christs execution, let vs now come to the last point, namely the excellencie of Christs passion, consisting in these two points: I. a Sacrifice: II. a triumph, For the first, when Christ died he offered a propitiatorie and reall sacrifice to his Father: and herein his death and passion differeth from the sufferings and deaths of all men whatsoeuer. In this sacrifice, we must consider foure things: I. who was the priest. II. what was the sacrifie: III. what was the altar. IV. the time wherin this sacrifice was offered. The priest was Christ himselfe, as the author of the Epistle to the Hebrewes prooues at large from the third chap. to the 9. and of him we are to consider these foure points. The first, what is the office of Christs priesthood. Answ. the office of Christs priesthood stands in three things: I. To teach doctrine, and therefore he is called the high priest of our profession, that is, of the Gospel which we professe, because he is the author and Doctour of the same. II. To offer vp himselfe vnto his Father in the behalfe of man, for the appeasing of his wrath for sinne. III. To make request or intercession to God the father, that hee would accept the sacrifice which he offered on the crosse for vs. The second point is, According to which nature hee was a priest: whether in his manhood, or in his godhead, or both together? Anſ. The office of his priesthood is performed by him according to both his natures: & therfore he is a priest not as the papists would haue him, according to his manhood onely, but as he is both God and man: for as hee is a Mediatour, so is he a priest: but Christ is a Mediatour according to both natures: ech nature doing that which is peculiar to it, and conferring something to the worke of redemption: and therefore he is a priest as he is both God and man. The third point, After what order he is a priest? Anſ. The Scripture mentioneth two orders of priests: the order of Leui, and the order of Melchisedeck. Christ was not a priest after the order of Aaron: & yet notwithstanding in that priesthood, were many notable rites whereby the priesthood of our

Sauiour Christ was resembled, & we may note fiue especially. First in the annointing of the high Priests; as of Aaron and his sonnes after him, oyle was poured on his head, and it ranne downe to the very edge of his garments, whereby was signified that Christ the true high Priest was annointed with the oyle of gladnesse aboue his fellowes, that is, that his manhood was filled with the gifts and graces of God, both in measure, number, and degree aboue all men and angels. Secondly, the sumptuous and glorious apparell which the high Priest put on, when he came into the Sanctuarie, was a signe of the rich and glorious Robe of Christs righteousnesse, which is the puritie and integritie of his humane nature and of his life. Thirdly, the speciall parts of the high Priests attire were, first the Ephod, the two shoulders whereof had two onyx stones, whereon were engraven the names of the twelue tribes of Israel: sixe names on the one stone, and sixe on the other, as stones of remembrance of the children of Israel to God-ward: Secondly, the brest-plate of iudgement like the worke of the Ephod, wherein were set twelue stones according to the names of the children of Israel, grauen as signets euery one after his name. Now by these two ornaments were figured two things in Christ: by the first, that hee carries all the Elect on his shoulders, and supports them by his spirit so long as they are in this world, against the world, the flesh and the deuill. By the second, that Christ our high Priest beeing now in his sanctuarie in heauen, hath in memorie all the Elect, and their very names are written as it were in tables of gold before his face, and hee hath an especiall loue vnto them and care ouer them. Vpon this ground the Church in the Canticles prayes on this maner, Set me as a seale on thy heart, and as a signet vpon thy arme. And indeede this is a matter of comfort vnto vs all, that Christ hath our seuerall names written in precious stones before his face, though hee be now in heauen and we on earth: and that the particular estate of euery one of vs is both knowne and regarded of him. Againe, God gaue to Moses the Vrim and Thummim, which was put on the breast-plate of the high Priest, when hee was to aske counsell from GOD of things vnknowne, before the mercie seate, whence God gaue answere. What the Vrim and Thummim was, it is not knowne: and it is like it was not made by any art of man, but giuen by God; & how it was vsed we can not tell: but yet the signification of the wordes affordeth matter of meditation. Vrim signifies lights, and Thummim signifies perfections. And by this a further matter was prefigured in Christ, who hath the perfit Vrim and Thummim in his breast: first, because in him are hidde all the treasures of wisdome & knowledge: secondly, because he reueales to his Church out of his word such things as none can know but the children of God: as Dauid saith, The secret of the Lord is reuealed to them that feare him. And for this cause the spirit of Christ is called the spirit of wisdom and reuelation; and the spirit of God, whereby we know the things that are giuen vnto vs of God: as namely, our election, vocation, iustification, and sanctification in this life, and our eternall glorification after this life: yea to euery member of Christ within his Church hee giues a speciall spirit of reuelation out of the word, whereby hee may know that God the Father is his Father, the Sonne the redeemer, his redeemer, and the holy Ghost his sanctifier and comforter. Lastly, the high Priest had a plate on his forehead, and therein was engraven the holines of Iehouah: this signified the holines of Christ: for as he is God, hee is holines it selfe: and as hee is man, he is most holy, beeing sanctified by the holy Ghost for this ende, that hee might couer our sinnes and vnrighteousnes, with his righteousnesse and holy obedience.

The second order of Priest-hood is the order of Melchisedeck, of which order Christ was, as Dauid saith, Thou art a priest for euer after the order of Melchisedeck: and that in two speciall respects. I. Melchisedeck was both a priest and a king: so was Christ. II. Melchisedeck had neither father nor mother, because his historie is set downe with mention of neither: so likewise Christ as hee is God, had no mother, and as hee is man hee had no father. The Papists auouch Christ to be a priest of this order in a new respect, in that as Melchisedeck offered bread and wine, when Abraham came from the slaughter of the Kings: so (say they) Christ in his last supped did offer his owne bodie and blood vnder the formes of bread and wine. But this is a friuolous deuice of theirs: for if we read Heb. 7. where this point is handled, there is no comparison at all made of their two sacrifices; but the resemblances before named are set downe, in which, person is compared with person. Againe, it is not said in Genesis that Melchisedeck offered sacrifice; but that hee brought forth bread and wine, and made a feast to Abraham and his companie. And if Christ should be of the order of Melchisedeck, in regard of the offering of bread & wine, yet would this make much against the Papists. For Melchisedeck brought foorth true bread and true wine; but in the sacrifice of the masse there is no true bread nor true wine: but (as they say) the reall bode and blood of Christ vnder the forme of bread and wine.

Proculit & obtulit.

The fourth point is, Whether there be any more reall Priestes of the new Testamen: beside Christ or no? Ans. In the old testament there were many priests one following another in continuall succession, but of the new Testament there is one onely reall Priest, Christ Iesus, God and man, and no more: as the author of the Hebrewes saith, Because he indureth for euer, hee hath an euerlasting Priesthood: and the word translated [euerlasting] signifieth such a Priesthood, which can not passe from him to any other, as the Priesthood of Aaron did. And therefore the Priesthood of Christ is so tied to his owne person, that none can haue the same but hee; neither mā nor angel, nor any other creature, no not the father nor the holy Ghost. But the factours of the Church of Rome will say, that Christ may haue men to bee his deputies in his stead to offer sacrifice. Ans. We must cōsider Christ two wayes: I. as he is God: II. as he is Mediatour. As he is God with the father and with the holy Ghost, he hath Kings and Magistrates to be his deputies on earth: and therefore they are called Elohim, that is, gods. But as he is Mediatour, and so consequently a Priest & a King, hee hath neither deputie nor vicegerent; neither king to rule in his stead ouer his Church, nor Priest to offer sacrifice for him: nay he hath no Prophet to be his deputie, as hee is the Doctour of the Church. And therefore he saith to his disciples; be not called doctors, for one is your doctour. Indeede he hath his ministers to teach men his will: but a deputie to offer sacrifice in his stead hee hath not. And therefore wee may with good conscience abhorre the massing priest-hood of the Church of Rome, as a thing fetched from the bottome of hell: and their massing priests as instruments of Satā; holding this for a very truth, that we haue but one onely Priest euen Christ himselfe God and man. Indeede all Christians are priests to offer vp spirituall Sacrifice: but it is the propertie of Christ alone to offer an outward and reall sacrifice vnto God now in the new Testament.

Heb 7.24.

Mat. 23.10

Thus much of the first point who is the Priest. The second followeth: What is the sacrifice? Ans. The sacrifice is Christ, as he is man, or the manhood of Christ crucified. As the priest is both God and man; so the sacrifice is man, [a] not God. So it is said, We are sanctified by the offering of the bodie of Iesus Christ. Touching this sacrifice, sundry questions are to bee skanned. The first, What kinde of Sacrifice it was? Ans. In the old Testament there were two kind of sacrifices: one propitiatorie which serued for to satisfie for sinne: the other eucharisticall for praise and thanksgiuing. Now the sacrifice of Christ was a sacrifice propitiatorie specially prefigured by the typicall sacrifice, called the whole burnt offering; for as it was all consumed to ashes vpon the altar, & turned into smoke, so the fire of Gods wrath did seaze vpon Christ on the crosse, & did consume him as it were to nothing to make vs something. Secondly, when Noe offered an whole burnt offering after the flood, it is said, God smelled a sauour of rest: not because he was delighted with the smell of the sacrifice, but because he approoued his faith in Christ. And hereby was figured, that Christ vpon the crosse was an offering, and a sacrifice of a sweete smelling sauour vnto God: because God was wel pleased therewith. Now whereas Christ was content wholy to offer vp himselfe to appease the wrath of his Father for vs: it must teach vs to giue our bodies and soules, as holy, liuing, & acceptable sacrifices, wholly dedicating them to the seruice of God.

[a] Or, the godhead.

Heb. 10.10

Gen. 8. 20. Iob. 1. 5.

Gen. 8. 21.

Eph. 5. 2.

The second question is, How oft Christ offered himselfe? Ans. Once onely and no more. This must be held as a principle of diuinitie: With once offering hath he consecrated for euer, them that are sanctified: and againe, Christ was once offered to take away the sinnes of many. And it serueth to ouerthrow the abhominable sacrifice of the masse, in which the true bodie & blood of Christ is offered vnder the formes of bread and wine, really & substantially (as they say) for the remission of the sinnes of the quicke & the dead, & that continually: but if this vnbloody sacrifice of Christ be good, then it is either the continuing of that which was begunne on the crosse by Christ himself, or the iteration of it by the masse priest. Nowe let Papists chuse whether of these two they will: if they say it is the continuing of the sacrifice of Christ, then they speake outragious blasphemie: for it is in effect to say, that Christs sacrifice was not perfect, but onely begun on the crosse, and must bee accomplished by the masse Priest to the ende of the world. If they affirme the second, that it is an iteration of Christs sacrifice, then also they speake blasphemie: for hereby they make it also an imperfit sacrifice, becausse it is repeated and iterated: for vpon this ground doth the author to the Hebrewes prooue, that the sacrifices of the old testamēt were imperfit, becausse they were daily offered. And whereas they say there be two kinds of sacrifices one bloodie once onely offered vpon the crosse: the other vnbloody, which is daily offered, I answer, that this distinction hath no ground out of Gods word: neither was it knowne to the holy Ghost who saith, that without blood there is no remission of sinnes.

Heb.9.22.

The third question is, What is the fruit of this sacrifice? Answ. The whole effect thereof is contained in these foure things: I. The oblation of Christ purgeth the beleeuer from all his sinnes whether they be originall or actuall: so it is said, If we walke

1.Ioh.1.7. in the light, we haue felowshipp one with another: and the blood of Iesus Christ his Sonne purgeth vs from all sinne: whether they bee sinnes of omission in regard of our duties; or of commission in doing euill. II. The oblation serueth for the iustifying of a sinner before God, as Paul saith, We are iusti-

Rom.5.10. fied by his blood, and are reconciled to God by his death. This being here remembred that in the passion of Christ we include his regall obedience, whereby he fulfilled the Lawe for vs. III. The oblation of Christ serues to purge mens consciences from dead workes. How much more then

Heb.9.14 shall the blood of Christ, which through the eternall spirit offered himselfe without spot to God, purge your consciences from dead workes to serue the liuing God? IV. The oblation of Christ procures vs libertie to enter into

Heb.10.20 heauen. By the blood of Christ Iesus we may be bold to enter into the holy place, by the new and liuing way which he hath prepared for vs through the vaile, that is, his flesh. By our sinnes there is a partition wall made betweene God & vs: but Christ by offering himselfe vpon the crosse, hath beaten downe this wall, opened heauen, and as it were trained the way with his own blood, whereby we may enter into the kingdome of God, and without the which we can not enter in at all.

The last question is, how this sacrifice may be applyed to vs. Ans. The meanes of applying this sacrifice be two: I. The hand of God which offereth. II. The hand of the beleeuer that receiueth the sacrifice offered. The hand of God whereby he offereth vnto vs his benefits, is the preaching of the word, and the administration of the Sacraments, baptisme, and the Lords supper: and whereseoeuer these his holy ordinances are rightly administred and put in practise, there the Lord puts forth his hād vnto vs, and offereth most freely the vertue and benefit of the death of Christ. And then in the next place commeth the hand of the beleeuer which is faith in the heart: which, when God offereth, doth apprehend and receiue the thing offered and make it ours.

The third thing to be spoken of is, the Altar whereon Christ offered himselfe. The altar was not the crosse, but rather the Godhead of Christ. Hee was both the priest, the sacrifice, and the altar: the sacrifice, as he is man; the priest, as hee is both God and man; the altar, as he is God. The property of an altar, is to sanctifye the sacrifyce: as Christ saith, Te fooles and blinde, Mat.23.9. whether is greater the offering or the altar that sanctifieth the offering? Now Christ as he is God, sanctifieth himselfe as he was man: and therefore (saith he) for their sakes Ioh.17.19. sanctifie I my selfe, by doing two things: I. by setting apart the māhood to be a sacrifice vnto his Father for our sinnes: II. by giuing to this sacrafice merit or efficacie to deserue at Gods hands remission of our sinnes: the manhood of Christ without the Godhead hath no vertue or efficacy in it selfe to be a meritorious sacrifyce: and therefore the dignity & excellency which it hath is deriued thence. As for the chalky and stony altars of the Church of Rome, they are nothing els but the toyes of mans braine, Christ himselfe is the onely reall altar of the new testament. And in stead of altars which were vnder the Law, we haue now the Lords table wheron we celebrate the Sacrament of his body and blood, to shew forth his death till he come.

The fourth point is, concerning the time of Christs oblation, which he himselfe calleth the acceptable yeare of the Lord: alluding vnto an other yeare vnder the law called the yeare of Iubile, which was euery fiftie yeare among the Iewes, in which at the sound of a trumpet al that had set or sold their possessions receiued them againe: al that were bondmen were then set at libertie. This Iubile was but a figure of that perfect deliuerace which was to be obtained by Christs passion, which was not temporarie deliuerace for euery fiftie yeare, but an eternall freedome from the bondage of sinne, hell, death, and condemnation. And the preaching of the word is the trumpet sounded which proclaimeth vnto vs freedom from the kingdome of darknes, and inuites vs to come and dwell in perfect peace with Christ himselfe. Well, if the yeare of perpetuall Iubile be now come, in what a wretched estate are al our loose and blind people that esteeme nothing of that libertie which is offered them, but choose rather to line in their sinnes, and in bondage vnder Satan and condemnation, then to be at freedome in Christ?

Luk.4.19.

Lev.25.10.

Now follow the vses which are to bee made of the sacrifice of Christ. The prophet Aggai saith, that the second temple built by Zorubbabel was nothing in beautie vnto the first which was built by Salomon: and the reason is plaine, for (as the Iewes write) it wanted fiue things which the first temple had. I. The appearing of the presence of God at the mercie seat betweene the two Cherubims. II. The Vrim and Thummim on the breastplate of the high priest. III. The inspiration of the holy Ghost vpon extraordinarie Prophets. IV. The Arke of the Couenant: for that was lost in the captiuitie. V. Fire from heauen to burne the sacrifices. Yet for al this, the Prophet afterward saith, The glorie of the last House, shall be greater then the first. Now it may be demanded, how both these sayings can stand togither. Ans. We are to know, that the second Temple was standing in the time when Christ was crucified for our sinnes, and it was the sacrifice of Christ which gaue glorie and dignitie to the second temple, though otherwise for building and outward ornaments it was farre inferiour to the first. And by this we are taught, that if we would bring glorie vnto our owne selues, vnto our houses and kindred, either before God or before men, we must labour to be partakers of the sacrifice of Christ, and the sprinkling of his blood to purge our hearts. This is the thing that brings renowne both to place and person, how base soeuer we be in the eyes of the world. Secondly, all oblations and meate offerings were sprinkled with salt, and euery sacrifice of propitiation which was to be burned to ashes, was first salted: and hereby two things are signified. The first, that euery one of vs in our selues are loathsome or vile in the sight of God: like vnto stinking carrion or raw flesh kept long vnpoudered. A dead and rotten carkeis is loathsome vnto vs but we in our selues are a thousand times more loathsome vnto God. The second, that we are as it were salted & made sauorie and acceptable to God by the vertue of the sacrifice of Christ vpon the crosse. Our dutie then is to labour that wee may feele in our selues the biting and sharpnesse of the oblation of Christ, to wast and consume the superfluities of sinne and the corruptions of our nature. And we must withall indeauour, that the whole course of our liues, and our speech it selfe be gratious and poudered with salt, least God at length spue vs out of his mouth. To this end hath God appointed his ministers to be the salt of the earth, that by their ministery they might applie the death of Christ, and season the people. And it hath pleased God to besprinkle this land with more plentie of this salt thē hath bin heretofore. But, alas, small is the number of them that giue any relish of their good seasoning. The more lamentable is there case. For as flesh that can not be seasoned with salt, putrifies: so men, that can not be sweetned and changed by the sacrifice of Christ, doe rotte and perish in their sinnes. The waters that issued from vnder the threshold of the Sanctuary, whē they came into the a dead sea, the waters thereof were holesome: but myrie places & marishes which could not be seasoned, were made saltpits. Now these waters are the preaching of the Gospel of Christ, which flowing through al the parts of this Isle, if it doe not season & change our nation, it shal make it as Places of nettles and saltpits, and at length be an occasion of the eternall curse of God. Thirdly, Christs priesthood serues to make euery one of vs also to be priests. And beeing priests, we must likewise haue our sacrifice & our altar: our sacrifice is the cleane offering which is the lifting vp of pure hands to God without wrath or doubting in our praiers: also ſo our bodies and ſoules, our hearts and affections, the workes of our liue, and the workes of our callings: all which muſt bee dedicated to the ſeruice of God for his glory, and the good of his Church. The altar whereon we muſt offer our ſacrifice, is Chriſt our Redeemer, both God and man, becauſe by the vertue of his death as with ſweete odours hee perfumes

Reu 8.3. Heb.13.10 all our obedience, and makes it acceptable to God. The miniſters of the Goſpell are alſo in this manner prieſts, as Paul inſi-
Ro.15.16. nuateth when he calleth the Gentiles his offering vnto God. And the preaching of the word is as it were a ſacrifycing knife, whereby the old Adam muſt be killed in vs; and we made an holy and acceptable ſweete ſmelling oblation vnto GOD, ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt. Therefore euery one that heareth Gods word preached and taught, muſt indeauour that by the profitable hearing thereof, his ſinnes and whole nature may be ſubdued and killed; as the beaſt was ſlaine and ſacrificed vpon the altar by the hand of the Leuite. Laſtly the exhortation of the holy Ghoſt muſt here be conſidered. Seeing (ſaith he) wee
Heb.10.21 haue an high prieſt, which is ouer the houſe of God, let vs drawe neere with a true heart in aſſurance of faith, ſprinkled in our hearts from an euill conſcience, and waſhed in our bodies with pure water: the meaning of the wordes is this, that if Chriſt haue offered ſuch a ſacrifyce of ſuch value & price, which procureth pardon of ſinne, iuſtification, ſanctification, and redemption, then we muſt labour to bee partakers of it; to haue our bodies and ſoules purified and clenſed by his blood, and ſanctified throughout by the holy Ghoſt, that thereby we may be made fitte to doe ſacrifyce acceptable to God in Chriſt. This is the vſe which the Apoſtle maketh of the doctrine of Chriſts prieſthood in that place, which alſo euery man ſhould apply vnto himſelfe: for why ſhould we liue in our ſinnes and wicked waies, euery houre incurring the danger of Gods iudgements, ſeeing Chriſt hath offered ſuch a ſacrifyce whereby we may bee purged and clenſed, and at length freed from all woe and miſery?

Thus much of Chriſts ſacrifice: nowe follows his triumph vpon the croſſe. That Chriſt did triumph when he was vpon the croſſe, it is plainly ſet downe by the A-
Col.2.14. 15. poſtle Paul, where he ſaith, that putting out the hand writing of ordinances that was againſt vs, which was contrary to vs, hee euen tooke it out of the way, and faſtened it vpon the croſſe, and hath ſpoyled the principalities and powers; and hath made ſhewe of them openly, and hath triumphed ouer them in the ſame croſſe. This triumph is ſet ſoorth by ſignes and teſtimonies of two ſorts. I. By ſignes of his glory and maieſty. II. By ſignes of his victory on the croſſe. The ſignes of his glory and maieſty are principally ſeauen. The firſt is the title ſet ouer his head vpon the croſſe, Ieſus of Nazareth king of the Iewes. The ende why titles were ſet ouer the heades of malefactours was, that the beholders might knowe the cauſe of the puniſhment, and be admoniſhed to take heede of like offences, and be ſtirred vp to a diſlike of the parties executed for their offences. And therefore no doubt, Pilate wrote the title of Chriſt for the aggrauating of his cauſe, and that with his owne hand. Yet marke the ſtrange euent that followed: for when pilate was about to write the ſuperſcription, God did ſo gouern and ouer-rule both his heart & hand that in ſtead of noting ſome crime, hee ſets downe a moſt glorious and worthy title, calling him, Ieſus of Nazareth king of the Iewes: which wordes containe the very ſumme and pith of the whole Goſpell of Chriſt, deliuered by the Patriarcks and prophets from age to age. Wee muſt not thinke that Pilate did this of any good minde, or vpon any loue or fauour that he bare to Chriſt; but only as he was guided and ouer-ruled by the power of God for the aduancement of the honour and glory of Chriſt. The like did Caiphas, who though a ſworne enemie to Chriſt, yet he vttered a propheſie of him, ſaying, that it was neceſſary that one ſhould die for the people: not that hee had any intent to propheſie: but becauſe the Lord vſed him as an inſtrument to publiſh his trueth. And when Balaam for the wages of vnrighteouſneſſe would haue curſed the Lords people, for his life he could not; nay all his curſings were turned into bleſſings. By this then it appeares, that it is not poſſible for any man, doe what he can, to ſtoppe the courſe of the Goſpel of Chriſt: nay, (as we ſee) God can raiſe vp the wicked ſometime to ſpread abroad and to publiſh the trueth, though they themſelues intende the contrary. Furthermore let vs marke that when the Iewes did moſt of all intend to bring diſgrace & ignominie vpon our Sauiour Chriſt; then did they moſt of all extol and magnifie his name; they could not for their liues haue giuen him a more renowmed title then this, that he was king of the Iewes. And the same is the case of all the members of Christ: for let a man walke in good conscience before God and man, he shal find this to be true, that when hee is most disgraced in the world, then commonly he is most honoured with God and men.

Further, Pilate wrote this superscription in three languages. Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine. And no doubt the ende thereof in the prouidence of God was, that the passion of Christ, as also the publishing of his kingdome & Gospell might be spread ouer the whole world. This shewes the malice of the Church of Rome, which will not suffer the word of God to bee published but in the latine tongue, least the people should be intangled in errours.

Againe, when Pilate had thus written the superscription, the high Priests and Pharises offended thereat, came to Pilate willing him to chaunge the title, saying, Ioh.19.12 Write not the king of the Iewes, but that hee said, I am the king of the Iewes: but Pilat answered them againe, That which I haue written, I haue written. Though Pilate had beene ouer-ruled before to condemne Christ to death, against his owne conscience, yet wil he not in any wise condiscend to change the superscription. How comes this to passe? Surely, as he was ruled by the hand of God in penning it, so by the same hand of God was hee confirmed in not changing it. Hence we learne sundrie instructions. First, that no man in the world, let him indeauour himself to the vttermost of his power, is able to stoppe the course of the kingdome of GOD: it stands firme and sure, and all the world is not able to preuaile against it. Secondly, whereas Pilate beeing but a heathen man was thus constant, that he will not haue his writing changed; we may note, how permanent and vnchangeable the writings of the holy word of God are. They are not the words of heathen men, but were spoken by the mouth of the Prophets & Apostles, as God gaue them vtterance. The booke of Scripture therefore is much more immutable, so as no creature shall be able to change the least part of it till it be fulfilled. Thirdly, by Pilates constancie, we learne to be constant in the practise and profession of the religion of Christ: this is a necessary lesson for these daies, wherein mēs professions doe fleete like water and goe and come with the tyde. Many zealous professours to day, but to morrow as could as water. And the complaint of the Lorde touching times past, agrees to our daies: O Ephraim, What shall I say to thee? thy righteousnesse is like the morning dewe. Ose.6.

The second is, the conuersion of the theefe: a most worthy argument of the god-head of Christ. For by it when he was vpon the crosse, and in the very middest of his passion, he giues vnto all the world a liuely and notable experience of the vertue and power of his death, so as his very enemies might not only behold the passion it selfe, but also at the same time acknowledge the admirable efficacie thereof. And therefore with the passion of Christ, wee must ioyne the conuersion of the theefe: which is as it were a christall glasse wherin we may sensibly behold the endlesse merit and vertue of the obedience of Christ to his Father, euen to the death of the crosse. And therefore I will briefly touch the speciall instructions which are to be learned by it. First, let vs marke that both the theeues in euery respect were equall, both wicked and lewd liuers: and for their notorious faults both attached, condemned, and executed both on the crosse at the same time with Christ: yet for al this, the one repēting was saued, the other was not. And in their two examples wee see the state of the whole world, wherof one part is chosen to life eternall: and therupon attaines to faith and repentance in this life: the rest are reiected in the eternall counsel of God, for iust causes knowne to himselfe, and such beeing left to themselues neuer repent at all. Secondly wee are taught hereby, that the whole worke of our conuersion and saluation must be ascribed wholy to the meere mercie of GOD: of these two theeues the one was as deeply plunged in wickednesse as the other, and yet the one is saued, the other condemned. The like was in Iacob and Esau; both borne at one time, and of the same parents, and neither of them had done good nor euill when they were borne: yet one was then loued, the other was hated: yea if we regard outward prerogatiues, Esau was the first borne, and yet was refused. Rom.9.13 Gen.25.23

Furthermore, the theefe on the crosse declareth his conuersion, by manifest signes and fruites of repentance, as appeares by the words which he spake to his fellow. Feareſt thou not God seeing thou art Luk.23.40

in

in the same condemnation. Though handes and feete were fast nailed to the crosse,) et heart & tongue are at libertie to giue some tokens of his true repentance. The people of this our land heare the word, but for the most part are without either profit in knowledge or amendment of life; yet for al this, they perswade themselues that they haue good hearts and good meanings, though they cannot beare it away, & vtter it so well as others. But alas poore soules, they are deluded by Satan: for a man that is conuerted cannot but expresse his conuersion, and bring forth the fruits thereof. And therefore our Sauiour Christ saith, Ioh. 7. 38. If a man beleeue in me, out of his bellie shall flowe riuers of water of life. The grace (as Iob. 32. 19 Elihu saith) of God is like newe wine in a vessell which must haue a vent; and therefore he that sheweth no tokens of Gods grace in this life, is not as yet conuerted; let him thinke and say of himselfe what he will. Can a man haue life, and neuer moue nor take breath? and can he that bringeth forth no fruite of his conuersion liue vnto God? Well, let vs nowe see what were the fruites of the theefes repentance. They may be reduced to foure heads. First, he rebukes his fellowe for mocking Christ, indeauouring thereby to bring him to the same condition with himselfe, if it were possible: whereby he discouers vnto vs the propertie of a true repentant sinner, which is, to labour and striue, so much as in him lieth, to bring all men to the same state that he is in. Thus Dauid hauing tried the great loue & fauour of God toward himselfe, breaketh forth and saith, Come children, harken vnto me, and I will teach you the Psal. 34. 12 feare of the Lord: shewing his desire that the same benefits which it had pleased god to bestow on him, might also in like manner be conueied to others. Therefore it is a great shame to see men professing religion, carried away with euery company, & with the vanities and fashions of the world, whereas they should rather drawe euen the worst men that be to the fellowship of those graces of God which they Ierem. 15. 19. haue receiued. That which the Lord spake to the prophet Ieremie, must be applied to all men: Let them returne vnto thee, but returne not thou vnto them. In instrumēts of musicke the string out of tune must bee set vp to the rest that be in tune, and not the rest to it.

Againe, in that he checkes his fellowe, it shewes that those which be touched for their owne sinnes, are also grieued when they see other men sinne and offend God. But to goe further in this point, let vs diligently and carefully marke the manner of his reproofe; Fearest thou not God, seeing thou are in the same condemnation? In which words he rips vp his lewdnes euen to the quicke, and giues him a worthie item, telling him that the cause of all their former wickednesse, had beene the want of the feare of God. And this point must euery one of vs marke with great diligence. For if we enter into our hearts and make a thorough search, we shall finde that this is the roote and foundation of all our offences. We miserable men for the most part haue not grace to consider that we are alwaies before God; and to quake and tremble at the consideration of his presence: and this makes vs so often to offend God in our liues as we doe. Abraham comming before Abimelech, shifting for himselfe, said, that Sara was his sister, and being demanded why hee did so, answered, because hee
Gen. 19. 11. thought the feare of God was not in that place: insinuating that he which wants the feare of God, will not make conscience of any sinne whatsoeuer. Would we then euen from the bottome of our hearts turne to God, and become new creatures? then let vs learne to feare God: which is nothing els but this, when a man is perswaded in his owne heart and conscience that whersoeuer he bee, he is in the presence and sight of GOD, and by reason thereof is afraid to sinne. This we must haue fully setled in our hearts, if we desire to learne but the first lesson of true wisedome. But what reason vseth the theefe to drawe his fellowe to the feare of God? Thou art (saith he) in the same condemnation, that is, by thy sinnes & manifold transgressions thou hast deserued death, and it is nowe most iustly inflicted vpon thee: wilt thou not yet feare GOD? where we are taught, that temporall punishments & crosses, ought to be meanes to worke in vs the feare of GOD; for that is one ende why they are sent of God. It is good for me (saith Dauid) that I haue bin chastised, that Mich. 7. 9. of the Lord, because I haue sinned against him.

The second fruite of his conuersion is, that he condēneth himselfe and his fellow for their sins, saying, Indeede we are righteously teously here, for we receiue things worthy for that we haue done, that is, we haue wonderfully sinned against Gods maiestie, and against our brethren: and therfore this grieuous punishment which we beare, is most iust and due vnto vs. This fruite of repentance springs and growes very thinne amõg vs, for few there be which doe seriously condemne themselues for their owne sinnes: the manner of men is to condemne others, and to crie out that the world was neuer so badde, but bring them home to themselues, and you shall finde that they haue many excuses and defences as plaister-worke to cast ouer their foule and filthy sinnes: & if they be vrged to speak against themselues, the worst will be thus; God helpe vs, we are all sinners, euen the best of vs. But certaine it is, that he which is throughly touched in conscience for his sinnes, both can and will speake more against himselfe for his manifold offences, then all the world besides. Thus Paul whẽ he was conuerted, calls himselfe the cheife of all sinners. And the prodigall child confessed that he had sinned against heauen and against his father, and was not worthy to be called his child. 1. Tim. 1. 15.

The third fruit of his conuersion is, that he excuseth our Sauiour Christ, and giueth testimonie of his innocencie, saying, But this man hath done nothing amisse. Marke here: Pilate condẽned Christ, Herod mocked him, al the learned Scribes & Pharises condẽned him, and the people crie, away with him, let him be crucified: and among his owne disciples Peter denied him, and the rest ranne away; there remaines onely this poore silly wretch vpon the crosse to giue testimonie of Christs innocencie: wherby we learne, that God chooseth the simple ones of this world, to ouerthrowe the wisedome of the wise: and therefore we must take heede that we be not offended at the Gospell of Christ, by reason that for the most part simple and meane men in the world embrace it. Nay marke further, this one theefe beeing conuerted had a better iudgement in matters concerning Gods kingdome, then the whole bodie of the Iewes. And by this all students may learn, that if they desire to haue in themselues vpright iudgement in matters of religion, first of all they must become repentant sinners: & though a man haue neuer so much learning, yet if hee be carried away with his owne blinde affections and lusts, they will corrupt & darken his iudgement. Men which worke in mines and cole-pits vnder the earth, are troubled with nothing so much as with dampes, which make their candle burne darke, & sometimes put it quite out. Now euery mans sinnes are the dampes of his heart, which when they take place, doe dimme the light of his iudgment, and cast a mist ouer the mind, and darken the vnderstanding and reason: and therefore a needful thing it is, that mẽ in the first place should prouide for their own conuersion.

The fourth fruite of his repentance is, that he prayeth for mercy at Christs hãds, Lord (saith he) remember me when thou cõmest into thy kingdome: in which prayer we may see what is the property of faith. This theefe at this instant heard nothing of Christ but the scornings and mockings of the people, and he saw nothing but a base estate full of ignominie and shame, & the cursed death of the crosse, yet neuertheles he nowe beleeues in Christ, and therefore intreats for saluation at his hand. Hence we learne, that it is one thing to beleeue in Christ, & another to haue feeling and experience: & that euen then when we haue no sense or experience we must beleeue: for faith is the subsisting of things which are not seene: and Abraham aboue hope did beleeue vnder hope: and Iob saith, though thou kill me, yet will I beleeue in thee. In Philosophie a man beginnes by experience, after which comes knowledge and beleefe; as when a man hath put his hand to the fire, and feeles it to be hotte, he comes to know therby that fire burnes: but in diuinity we must beleeue though we haue no feeling: first comes faith, & after comes sense and feeling. And the ground of our religion stands in this, to beleeue things neither seene nor felt, to hope aboue all hope, & without hope: in extremitie of affliction to beleeue that God loueth vs, when he seemeth to be our enemie, and to perseuere in the same to the end. Heb. 11. 1. Rom. 4. 18.

The answer which Christ made to his prayer was, This night shalt thou be with me in Paradise. Whereby he testifies in the middest of his sufferings the power which he had ouer the soules of men: and verifies that gratious promise, Aske and ye shall receiue, seeke and ye shal finde, knocke & it shall be opened to you: and withall confutes the popish purgatorie. For if any mã should haue gone to that forged place of torment, then the theefe vpon the crosse, who repenting at the last gaspe wanted time to make ſatisfaction for the temporal puniſhment of his ſinnes. And by this conuerſion of the theefe wee may learne, that if any of vs would turne to God and repent, we muſt haue three things. I. The knowledge of our owne ſinnes. II. From the bottome of our hearts wee muſt confeſſe and condemne our ſelues for them, and ſpeake the worſt that can bee of our ſelues, in regard of our ſinnes III. Wee muſt earneſtly craue pardon for them, and call for mercie at Gods handes in Chriſt, withall reforming our liues for the time to come: if we doe, we giue tokens of repentance: if not, we may thinke what we will, but we deceiue our ſelues and are not truely conuerted. And here we muſt bee warned to take heede leaſt wee abuſe, as many do, the example of the theefe, to cõclude thereby that wee may repent when we will, becauſe the theefe on the croſſe was conuerted at the laſt gaſpe. For there is not a ſecond example like to this in all the whole Bible, it was alſo extraordinarie. Indeede ſundry men are called at the eleuenth houre, but it is a moſt rare thing to find the conuerſion of a ſinner after the eleuenth houre, and at the point of the twelfth. This mercie God vouchſafed this one theefe, that hee might bee a glaſſe in which we might behold the efficacy of the death of Chriſt, but the like is not done to many men, no not to one of a thouſand. Let vs rather conſider the eſtate of the other theefe, who neither by the dealing of his fellowe, nor by any ſpeech of Chriſt could be brought to repentance. Let vs not therefore deferre our repentance to the houre of death: for then we ſhall haue ſore enemies againſt vs: the worlde, the fleſh, the diuel, and a guiltie conſcience; & the beſt way is before had to preuent thē. And experience ſhews that if a man defer repentance to the laſt gaſpe, often when he would repent hee cannot. Let vs take Salomons counſell, Remember thy creator in the dayes of thy youth, before the euill dayes come. If we will not heare the Lord when he cals vs, he will not heare vs whē we call him.

The third ſigne was, the ecclipſing or darkning of the ſunne from the ſixt houre to the ninth. And this ecclipſe was miraculous. For by the courſe of nature the ſun is neuer ecclipſed, but in the new moone: whereas contrariwiſe this ecclipſe was about the time of the paſſeouer which was alwayes kept at the full moone. Queſtion is made touching the largeneſſe of it: ſome mooued by the words of Luke, who ſaith that darkneſſe was vpon the whole earth, haue thought that the ecclipſe was vniuerſall ouer the whole world: but I rather thinke that Saint Lukes meaning is, that it was ouer the whole Region or countrie of Iurie. For if ſuch a wonder had happened ouer the whole world, all Hiſtoriographers Greeke and Latine and Aſtronomers, diligent obſeruers of all ecclipſes, would haue made ſpeciall mention thereof. And though ſome [a] writers ſay that it was ouer the whole earth, and that it was ſet downe in Record both by the Romanes, and Grecians, yet all their writings prooue no more but this, that it was ouer Iurie and Galelie and the countries bordering neere vnto. The vſes of this miracle are manifold. I. This darkening of the Sunne giues a checke to the Iewes for their crucifying of Chriſt: they were not aſhamed to apprehende, accuſe, and condemne him, yet this glorious creature the Sunne pulleth in his beames, beeing as it were aſhamed to beholde that, which they were not aſhamed to doe. II. It ſerues to ſignifie the great iudgement of GOD to come vpon the Iewes. For as when Chriſt ſuffered, darkneſſe was ouer all the land of Iurie, and all the world beſides had the light of the Sonne, ſo ſhortly after blindneſſe of minde was ouer the whole nation of the Iewes, and all the world beſides ſaw the ſonne of righteouſneſſe ſhining vnto them in preaching of the Goſpell. III. It ſerues to aduertiſe vs that ſuch as carry themſelues towardes Chriſt as the Iewes did, haue nothing elſe in them but darkneſſe, and that they ſit in darknes and ſhadow of death; & therfore not able any whit better to ſee the way that leadeth vnto life, then he which is caſt into a darke dungeon can; who if they thus remaine, ſhal at lēgth be caſt into vtter darkneſſe. This being the eſtate of al them that be forth of Chriſt, we muſt labour to bee freed from this darkeneſſe, that the day-ſtarre may riſe in our hearts, and ſhine vpon vs, and put life into vs. IV. This miraculous and wonderfull darkening of the ſun doeth conuince the Iewes, that Chriſt whome they crucified was the Lorde of glorie, and the Sauiour of the world: and it is very like that this was the principall end of this miracle. For whereas neither his doctrine, nor his former miracles could mooue them to acknowledge him for that Messias, yet this one worke of God doth as it were strike the naile to the head, and stoppe all their mouthes. V. Besides this, whereas at the very instant when Christ was about to make satisfaction to the iustice of his father for our sinnes, the sunne was thus darkened: it teacheth vs first to thinke of the passion of Christ, not as of a light matter, but as one of the greatest wōders of the world, at the sight whereof the very frame of nature was changed: secōdly to thinke of our owne sinnes, as the vilest things in the world, and that they deserue the intollerable wrath of God: considering that at the time when they were to be abolished, the course of nature euen in the very heauens is turned vpside downe.

Mat.27.11 The fourth signe is, the rending of the vaile of the temple frō the top to the bottome. The temple was deuided into two parts: the one more inward into which no man might come but the high priest, and that once a yeare; & it was called the holy of holyes: the other was that where the people came and offered sacrifices vnto the Lord. Now that which parted the temple into these two parts was called the vaile, and at the time of Christs passion it was rent from the top to the very bottom. This hath diuers vses: I. The holy of holies signified the third heauen, where God Heb.9.8. sheweth himselfe in glorie and maiestie vnto his Saints. & the rending of the vaile figureth vnto vs, that by the death of Christ, heauen which was otherwise shut by our sinnes is now set open, and a way made to enter thereto. II. It signifieth, that by the death of Christ wee haue without impediment, free accesse to come vnto Ioh.1.51. God the father by earnest prayer in the name of Christ; which is a most vnspeakable benefit. III. It signifieth that by Christs death an end is put to all ceremonies, to ceremoniall worship, and the sacrifices of the old testament: and that therefore in the newe testament there remaineth one onely reall & outward sacrifice, that is, Christ crucified on the crosse: and the whole seruice and worship of God for outward ceremonies most simple and plaine. IV. The temple was the chiefe and one of the most principall prerogatiues that the Iewes had; it was their glory that they had such a place wherein they might worship and doe seruice to the true God: and for the temples sake God often spared them, and therfore Daniel prayeth; O Lord, heare the prayer of thy seruant, and his supplication, and cause thy face to shine vpon the sanctuarie that lyeth wast for the Lords sake. Dan.9.17. Yet for all this, when they began to crucifie the Lord of life, their prerogatiues helpe them not, nay they are depriued thereof, and God euen with his owne hand rendes the vayle of the temple in sunder, signifying vnto them, that if they forsake him, he wil also forsake them. And so may we say of the Church of England. No doubt for the Gospels sake wee haue outward peace and safety, and many other blessings, and are in account with other nations: yet if we make no conscience to obey the word of God, and if we haue no loue of Christ and his members, God will at length remooue his candlesticke from vs, and vtterly depriue vs of this ornament of the Gospell, and make our land as odious vnto all the world, as the land of the Iewes is at this day. Let vs therefore with all care and diligence shew forth our loue both to Christ himselfe, and to his members, and adorne the Gospell which wee professe by bringing forth fruites worthy of it.

The fifth signe is the earthquake, wherby hard rockes were clouen asunder. And it serues very fitly to signifie further vnto vs, that the sinne of the Iewes in putting Christ to death was so heauie a burden, Math.27.51. that the earth could not beare it, but trembled thereat, though the Iewes themselues made no bones of it. And it is a thing to be wondred at; that the earth doth not often in these dayes, tremble and quake at the monstrous blasphemies and fearfull othes by the woundes and blood and heart of Christ, whereby his members are rent asunder, & he traiterously crucified againe. Secondly, the earthquake shewes, vnto vs the exceeding and wonderfull hardnesse of the hearts of the Iewes, and ours also: they crucified Christ and were not touched with any remorse; and wee can talke & heare of his death, yea we cā say he was crucified for our sinnes: & yet we are nothing affected therewith, our hearts will not rend when as hard rockes cleaue asunder. Thirdly, the moouing of the earth, and the rending of the rockes asunder, may be a signe vnto vs of the vertue of the doctrine of the Gospel of Christ; which is nothing els but the publishing of the passion of his death: which beeing preached,

ſhal ſhake heauen and earth, ſea and land;
Agg.2.7. It ſhall mooue the earthen, hard, & rockie heartes of men: & raiſe vp of meere ſtones and rockes children vnto Abraham. But the maine vſe and ende of this point is, to prooue that he that was crucified, was the true Meſſias the ſonne of God: and therefore had the power of heauen and earth, and could mooue all things at his pleaſure.

The ſixt ſigne of the power of Chriſt
Matth.27. 52.53. is, that graues did open, and many bodies of the Saints which ſlept aroſe, and came out of their graues after his reſurrection, & went vnto the holy cittie, & appeared vnto many. The vſe of this ſigne is this: it ſignifies vnto vs, that Chriſt by his death vpon the croſſe did vanquiſh death in the graue, & opened it, and therby teſtified that he was the reſurrection and the life: ſo that it ſhal not haue euerlaſting dominion ouer vs: but that he will raiſe vs vp from death to life, and to euerlaſting glory.

The ſeauenth ſigne is the teſtimony of the Centurion with his ſouldiours which ſtood by to ſee Chriſt executed: S. Marke ſaith, when he ſaw that Chriſt thus crying gaue vp the ghoſt, he ſaid, truly this was Mar.15.39 the ſonne of God. Thus we ſee it is an eaſie matter for Chriſt to defend his own cauſe, let Iudas betray him, Peter deny him, and all the reſt forſake him, yet he can if it ſo pleaſe him make the Centurion that ſtandeth by to ſee him executed, to teſtifie of his innocencie. But what was the occaſion that mooued him to giue ſo worthy a te-Mat.27.54 ſtimony? Saint Matthew ſaith, it was feare and that feare was cauſed by hearing the loud crie of Chriſt, & by ſeeing the earthquake and things which were done. And this muſt put vs in minde not to paſſe by Gods iudgements which daily fall out in the world, but take knowledge of them, and as it were, to fixe both our eyes on them. For they are notable means to ſtrike and aſtoniſh the rebellious heart of man, and to bringe it in awe and ſubiection to God. After that the two firſt captaines with their fifties commanding the Prophet Elias to come downe to king Achaziah, were conſumed with fire from heauen, the king ſent his third captaine ouer fiftie with his fifty to fetch him downe: but what doth he? it is ſaid, he fell on his knee before Eliah, and beſought him ſay-
2.King.1. 13. ing, O man of God, I pray thee, let my life and the liues of theſe fifty ſeruants bee precious in thine eies. But what was the cauſe why he praied thus? ſurely he obſerued what iudgments of God fell vpon his two former fellow captains, Behold, ſaith he, there came downe fire from heauen, and deuoured the two former captaines with their fifties: therefore let my life be pretious now in thy ſight. Thus laying to his owne heart and making vſe of Gods iudgements, he humbled himſelfe and was ſpared with his fiftie. And Habaccuk ſaith, Whē I heard the voyce, namely of Gods iudgements, rottennes entred into my bones, and I trembled in my ſelfe that I might be ſafe in the day of the Lord. Now what this feare of the Centurion was, there is a further queſtion, and it is very like that it was but a ſudden motion or a certaine preparatiue to better things. For hee was but an heathen man, and had as yet no knowledge of Chriſt, and whether hee repented or not it is vncertaine: and we muſt not maruell at this, for there are many ſuddaine motions in ſhew very good, that vpon like occaſions riſe in the hearts of naturall men. Whē God plagued the land of Egypt, then Pharoah ſent for Moſes and Exod.9. confeſſed that the Lorde was righteous, 27.& 34. but he and his people were wicked, & deſired Moſes to pray to God to take away the plague, who did ſo: but ſo ſoone as the hand of God was ſtaied, he returned to his old rebellion againe. And as a dogge that commeth out of the water ſhaketh his eares, and yet returneth into it againe: ſo is the manner of the world: whē croſſes and calamities befall men, as ſickneſſe, loſſe of friendes or goods, then with Ahab they outwardly humble themſelues and goe ſoftly: they vſe to frequēt the place where the word is preached and Gods name called vpon: but alas common experience ſhewes that theſe things are but fits ariſing of vncertaine and flittering motions in the heart. For ſo ſoone as the croſſe is remooued, they returne to their old byas againe, and become as bad and as backeward as euer they were: beeing like to the tree that lies in the water, which for a while is green but afterward withereth. And therefore we for our parts, when any good motions come into our hearts as the beginnings of further grace, we (I ſay) muſt not quench them but cheriſh and preſerue them remembring that the kingdome of heauen, is like a graine of muſtard ſeede, which when it is ſowne is the leaſt of all ſeedes: but afterward it groweth vp into a tree, that the fowles of heauen may builde their neaſts in it: and like to this are the first motions of Gods spirit, and therefore they must be cherished and maintained.

And thus much for the seauen signes of the power of Christs Godhead. Nowe followes the second part of the triumph of Christ, which containeth signes of his victorie vpon the crosse, notably expressed by Paul when hee saith, And putting out the handwriting of ordinances which was against vs, which was contrarie to vs, he euen tooke it out of the way and fastened it vpon the crosse, and hath spoiled the principalities and powers, and hath made a shewe of them openly, and hath triumphed openly in the same. Col.2.14. 15. In which wordes he alludeth to the manner of heathen triumphs: for it was the custome of the heathen princes when they had gotten the victory ouer their enemies, first to cause a pillar of stone, or some great oake to be cutte downe, & set vp in the place of victory, vpon which either the names of the chiefe enemies were set, or their heades were hanged, or wordes were written in the pillar to testifie the victorie. This beeing done, there followed an open shewe, in which first the conquerour prepares for himselfe a chariot of victorie wherein he was himselfe to ride, and then the chiefe of his enemies bound and pinnioned, were ledde openly after him. Now on the same manner vpon the crosse there was a pitched fielde; the Emperour on the one side was Christ; his enemies on the other side were the world, the flesh, hell, death, damnation, the deuil, and al his angels: all which, banding themselues against him were all subdued by him vpon the same crosse: and he himselfe gaue two signes of his triumph, one was a monument of the victory, the other an open shewe of his conquest. Nowe the monument of Christs victorie was the crosse it selfe, whereon he nailed the obligation or bill which was against vs; whereby Satan might haue accused and condemned vs before God. For wee must consider that God the father is a creditour, and wee all debters vnto him: he hath a bil of our hāds which is the law, in that it giueth testimonie against vs; first by the legall washings, which did shew and signifye that we were altogither defyled and vncleane; secondly by the sacrifyces that were daily offered for the propitiation for our sinnes. Nowe Christ was our surety, and payd euery iot of the debt which wee should haue paid, and requiring the acquittance, taketh the ceremoniall lawe, and the curse of the morall law, and nailes them to the crosse.

Furthermore in the shewe of conquest, the chariot is the crosse likewise: for it was not onely a monument of victory, but also a chariot of triumph. And the captiues bound & pinnioned which follow Christ, are the principalities and powers, that is, the deuill, and his angels, hell, death, and condemnation: al which are as it were taken prisoners, their armour and weapons are taken from them, and they chained & bound each to other.

The meditation of this point serueth to admonish vs to abandon all manner of sinne, and to make conscience of euery good duty if we will aright professe the Gospell of Christ; for when we sinne, we doe as it were pull Christ out of his chariot of triumph, and vnite Sathans bondes, and giue him weapons, and (as much as we can) make him valiant and strong againe. Now for any man to make Sathan and sinne valiant and strong against himselfe, whereas Christ hath weakened him, and euen bruised his head, is no better thē to become an enemie to the crosse of Christ. Phil.3.18. Againe, hereby we are taught to pray vnto God that our blind eies may be opened, that we may discerne aright of the passion of Christ. It is a wonder to see how mē are carried away with a liking of vaine shewes, games, and enterludes: howe they spend euen whole daies in beholding thē, and their money also that they may come to the places where they are: oh then how exceedingly ought our heartes to be rauished with this most admirable shewe, in which the sonne of God himselfe rides most gloriously in his chariot of triumph, and leads his and our most cursed enemies captiue, yea treades them vnder his foote! This triumph is set forth vnto vs in the preaching of the Gospel, & may be seene of vs all freely without money or money-worth. What wretches then shall we be, if we suffer our hearts to be filled with earthly delights, and in the meane season haue little or no desire to behold with the eies of our minde this goodly spectacle that is to be seene in the passion of Christ, that serues to reuiue and refresh our soules to life eternall?

Thirdly, if Christ when he was most weake and base in the eies of men, did most of all triumph vpon the crosse; then euery one of vs must learne to say with the Apostle Paul, God forbid that I should reioyce Gal.6.14.

ioice in any thing but in the crosse of Christ Iesus our Lord. That we may say this truely, first of all we must labour to haue the benefit of the crosse of Christ, not onely in the remission but also in the mortification of our sinnes: secondly, we must not bee discomforted, but rather reioyce and triumph therein. A christian man can neuer haue greater honour then to suffer for the Gospel of Christ when God calleth him thereunto: and therefore Saint Paul setteth forth another most glorious shewe, which all those must make that suffer any thing for Gods cause. They must encounter with the world, the flesh, and the deuil, and are placed as it were on a theatre: and in this conflict the beholders are men and angels, yea, the whole hoast of heauen and earth: the vmpere or iudge is God himself, who will giue sentence of victory on their side, and so they shall ouercome. We must not hereupon thrust our selues into danger: but when it shal please God to call vs thereunto, we must thinke our selues highly honoured of him. As when God sendeth losse of friends, of substance, or good name, or any other calamitie, we must not despaire, or bee ouergrieued: but rather reioyce and addresse our selues then with our Sauiour Christ to make a triumph.

2. Cor. 4. 9.

Thus much of Christs triumph, & the passion of his crosse. Now followeth the second degree of his humiliation, in these words, and buried. Where we must consider these points: I. Why it was needfull that Christ should be buried. II. Who was the author of his buriall. III. The manner or preparation to his buriall. IV. The place and time where and when hee was buried. Of these in order. For the first, the causes are many, but especially foure, why Christ was to be buried. I. That the truth and certaintie of his death might be confirmed vnto vs, and that no man might so much as imagine that his death was a phantasticall death, or his body a phantasticall bodie: for men vse not to burie a liuing but a dead man, or a man in shewe but a true man. II. That his buriall might bee vnto him a passage from the estate of humiliation to the estate of exaltation, which began in his resurrection: and he could not haue risen againe if he had not beene first buried. III. That the outward humiliation in the forme of a seruant, which he tooke vpon him, might bee continued vpon him to the lowest degree of all: and therfore it was not sufficient that he should be crucified euen to death, but being dead he must bee also buried. IV. Christ was buried, that he might not onely vanquish death on the crosse, but euen after the manner of conquerours subdue him vnto his owne home, and as it were pluck him out of his graue cabine or denne. A

The authors of Christs buriall was Ioseph of Arimathea, and Nichodemus, who came to Iesus by night. Nowe of these two

Ioh. 19. 38

I note three things worthy to bee considered in this place. First of all they were disciples of Christ, and the difference betweene them and the rest is to be considered. The other disciples though in number they were but twelue, & yet in the feast before his passion they openly followed him: but when Christ was to bee arraigned, and the persecution of the Church of the newe Testament began in him, the Iudas betrayed him, Peter denied him, & the rest fledde away: yet euen at the same instant these two secret disciples of our Sauiour Christ, Ioseph of Arimathea and Nichodemus take courage to themselues, & in time of danger openly professe themselues to be Christs disciples by an honourable and solemne buriall; God no doubt opening their hearts & inabling them to doe so. The like is to be seene in all ages since the passion of Christ in the Church of God, in which men zealous for the Gospell in peace haue beene timerous in persecution, whereas weake ones haue stood out against their enemies euen vnto death it selfe. The reason is, because God will humble those his seruants which are oftentimes indued with great measure of graces, and contrariwise exalt and strengthen the weake and feeble: and the same no doubt will bee found true among vs, if it should please God to send any new triall into the Church of England. This serues to teach vs to thinke charitably of those which are as yet but weake among vs: and withall in our profession to carrie a lowe saile and to thinke basely of our selues, and in the whole course of our liues creepe alowe by the ground, running on in feare and trembling, because the Lord oftentimes humbles those that bee strong, and giues courage and strength to weake ones boldly to confesse his name. Secondly, whereas these two disciples haue such care of the buriall of Christ, we learne that it is our dutie to be careful also for the honest and solemne buriall of our bre-brethren. The Lord himselfe hath com-

Gen.3.19. manded it, Thou art dust and to dust thou shalt returne. Also the bodyes of men are the good creatures of God, yea the bodies of Gods children are the temples of the holy Ghost, and therefore there is good cause why they should be honestly laid in the earth. And it was a curse & iudgement of God vpon Iehoiakim that he must not Ier.22.19. bee buried, but like a dead asse be drawne and cast out of the gates of Ierusalem.
Amos.2.1. And so the Lorde threatens a curse vpon the Moabites, because they did not burie the king of Edom, but burnt his bones into lime. And therefore it is a necessary dutie, one neighbour & friend to looke to the honest buriall of another. Hence it follows that the practise of Spaine & Italy & al popish countries, which is to keepe the parts of mēs bodies & such like reliques of saints vnburied, that they may be seene of mē & worshipped, hath no warrāt: dust they are and to dust they ought to be returned.

Furthermore the properties & vertues of both these men are seuerally to be considered. And first to begin with Ioseph he was a Senatour, a man of great account, authoritie, and reputation among the Iewes.
Luk.23.50 It may seeme a strange thing that a man of such account would abase himselfe so much as to take down the bodie of Christ from the crosse. It might haue beene an hinderance to him and a disgrace to his estate and calling as we see in these dayes, it wold be thought a base thing for a knight or lord to come to the place of executiō, & take down a theif frō the hād of the hangman to bury him: but this noble Senatour Ioseph for the loue he bare to Christ, made no account of his estate & calling, neither did he scorne to take vpon him so base an office, considering it was for the honour of Christ: where we learne, that if we truly loue Christ, & our hearts be set to beleeue in him, we will neuer refuse to performe the baseſt seruice that may bee for his honour; nothing shall hinder vs. It is Luk.23. 50.51. further said that hee was a good man and a iust, and also a rich man. And the first appeareth in this, that he would neither consent to the counsell nor fact of the Iewes in crucifying Christ. It is rare to find the like man in these daies. From this example we learne these Lessons. I. That a rich mā remaining a rich man may bee a seruant of God, and also be saued: for riches are the good blessings of God, and in themselues doe no whit hinder a man in coming to Christ. But some will say, Christ himselfe saith, It is easier for a cable to goe a Mat.19. through the eie of a needle, then a rich man 24. to enter into the kingdome of heauen. Answ. It is to bee vnderstood of a rich man so long as hee swelleth with a confidence in his wealth: but we knowe, that if a cable be vntwisted & drawn into small threeds, it may be drawne through the eie of a needle: so hee that is rich let him denie himselfe, abase himselfe, and lay aside all confidence in himselfe, in his riches and honour, and be as it were, made small as twine threed, and with this good Senatour Ioseph become the Disciple of Christ, he may enter into the kingdome of heauen. But Christ saith in the parable that riches are thorns, which choake the grace of GOD. Answ. It is true, they are thornes in that subiect or in that man that putteth his trust in them; not in their owne nature, but by reason of the corruption of mans heart, who makes of them his God. Saint Iohn saith further, that Ioseph Ioh.19.38 was a Disciple of Christ, but yet a close disciple for feare of the Iewes. And this shewes, that Christ is most ready to receiue them that come vnto him, though they come laden with manifold wants. I say not this, that any hereby should take boldnesse to liue in their sinnes, but my meaning is, that though men be weake in the faith, yet are they not to bee dismaied, but to come to Christ, who refuseth none
Iam.4.8. that come to him, Draw neare to God (saith Saint Iames) and he will draw neere to you. Christ doth not forsake any, till they forsake him first. Lastly the holy Ghost saith of him, that he waited for the kingdome of God, that is, he did beleeue in the Messias to come, and therefore did waite daily till the time was come, when the Messias by his death and passion should abolish the kingdome of sinne and Satan, and establish his owne kingdome throughout the whole world. The same is said of Simeon that he was a good man and feared God and waited for the consolation of Israel. This was the most principall vertue of all that Ioseph had, and the very roote of all his goodnesse and righteousnesse that he waited for the kingdome of God. For it is the property of faith, whereby we haue confidence in the Messias, to change our nature, and to purifie the heart, and to make it bring forth works of righteousnes. There be many amōg vs, that can talke of Christs kingdome, and of redemption by him, him and yet make no conscience of sinne, and haue litle care to liue according to the Gospel which they professe: and all is, because they do not soundly beleeue in the Messias, and they waite not for the kingdome of heauen, and therefore there is no change in them: but we for our parts must labour to haue this affiance in the Messias with Ioseph, & to waite for the second appearance, that thereby we may be made newe creatures, hauing the kingdome of Sathan battered and beaten downe in vs, and the kingdome of God erected in our hearts.

Touching Nichodemus Saint Iohn saith, that he came to Iesus by night. Many men build vpon this example, that it is lawefull to be present at the masse, so be it, in the meane season wee keepe our hearts to God: and indeede such men are like Nichodemus in that they labour to burie Christ as much as they can, though nowe after his resurrection hee should not bee buried againe. But though Nichodemus durst not openly at the first professe the name of Christ, yet after his death when there is most danger he doth: and by this meanes he reformeth his former action.

Thus much of the persons that buried Christ. The third thing to be obserued is the manner of Christs buriall, which standeth in these foure points. First, they take downe his bodie from the crosse: secondly, they winde it: thirdly, they lay it in a tombe: fourthly, the tombe is made sure. Of these in order. First, Ioseph taketh downe the bodie of Christ from the crosse whereon hee was executed, but marke in what manner: he doth it not on his owne head without leaue, but hee goeth to Pilate and beggeth the body of Christ, and craueth libertie to take it downe, because the disposing of dead bodies was in Pilats hand, he being deputie at that time: whereby we learn, that in al our dealings & actions (though they haue neuer so good an end) our dutie is to proceede as peaceably with all men as may bee, as Saint Iames saith: the wisedome that is from aboue is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, &c. Againe, this teacheth vs, that in all things which concerne the authoritie of the Magistrate, and belong vnto him by the rule of Gods word, wee must attempt or doe whatsoeuer we doe by leaue. And by this we see what vnaduised courses they take, that being priuate mē in this our Church, will notwithstanding take vpon them to plant Churches without the leaue of the Magistrate beeing a Christian Prince. Hauing thus taken the bodie of Christ downe, they goe on to winde it. And Ioseph for his part brought linnen cloathes, and Nichodemus a mixture of mirrhe and Alloes to the quantitie of an hundreth poundes for the honourable buriall of Christ. His winding was on this manner, they wrapped his body hastily in linnen cloaths, sweete odours put thereto. Besides all this, in the Iewes burialls there was embalming and washing of the body, but Christs body was not [a] embalmed or washed, because they had no time to do it, for the preparation to the Passeouer drew neare. And whereas these two men burie Christ at their owne cost and charges, we are taught to be like affected to the liuing members of Christ: when they want wee must releeue and comfort them liberally & freely. It may here be demanded, whether men may not be at cost in making funeralls, considering euen Christ himselfe is with much cost buried. Anſ. The bodies of all dead men are to be buried in seemely and honest manner, and if they be honourable, they may bee buryed honourably: yet now there is no cause why mens bodies should be washed, annointed, and embalmed, as the vse was among the Iewes: for they vsed embalming as a pledge and signe of the resurrection; but nowe since Christs comming we haue a more certaine pledge thereof, euen the resurrection of Christ himselfe, and therefore it is not requisite that we should vse embalming and washing as the Iewes did. And the clause which is specified in Saint Matthew is not to bee omitted, that Ioseph wrapped Christs body in A cleane linnen cloath: whereby we learne, that howsoeuer the straunge fashions fetcht from Spaine and Italie are monstrous and to be abhorred, yet, seeing the body of a man is the creature of God, therefore it must bee arraied in cleanly manner, and in holy comelinesse. Paul requires that the minister of the gospell in all things be seemely or comely: & herein he ought to be a patterne of sobrietie vnto all men. Thirdly, after they haue wound the body of Christ, they lay it in a tombe, and lastly they make it sure, closing it vp with a stone rolled ouer the mouth of it. Also the Iewes request Pilate to seale it that none might presume to open it: besides they set a band of souldiers to watch the tombe, and to keepe it that his bodie be not stollen away. Many reasons might be aleadged of this their dealing, but principally it came to passe by the prouidence of God, that hereby he might confirme the resurrection of Christ. For wheras the Iewes would neither be moued by his doctrine nor by his workes and miracles to beleeue, he causeth this to be done, that by the certainty of his resurrection he might conuince them of hardnesse of heart, and proue that he was the sonne of God.

Thus much of the manner of his buriall. Nowe followes the place where Christ was buried. In the place we are to marke three things; first, that Christ was laid in Iosephs tombe, whereby we may gather the greatnesse of Christs pouerty, in that he had not so much ground as to make himselfe a graue in: and this must be a cõfort to the members of Christ that are in pouerty. And it teacheth them, if they haue no more but food and raiment, to be therewith cõtent, knowing that Christ their head and king hath consecrated this very estate vnto them. Secondly, the tombe wherein Christ was laid was a new tombe wherein neuer any man lay before. And it was the speciall appointment of Gods prouidence that it should bee so, because if any man had bin buried there aforetime, the malicious Iewes would haue pleaded, that it was not Christ that rose againe but some other. Thirdly we must obserue, that this tombe was in a garden, as the fall of man was in a garden, and as the apprehension of Christ in a garden beyond the brooke Cedron. And here we must note the practise of a good man. This garden was the place of Iosephs delight and holy recreation, wherein he vsed to solace himselfe in beholding the good creatures of God; yet in the same place doth he make his owne graue long before he died: whereby it appeares, that his recreation was ioyned with a meditation of his end: and his example must be followed of vs. True it is, God hath giuen vs his creatures not only for necessity, but also for our lawfull delight: but yet our dutie is, to mingle therewith serious meditation & consideration of our last ende. It is a brutish part to vse the blessings & creatures of God, and not at al to be bettered in regard of our last ende by a further vse thereof.

Ioh. 19. 41. Gen 3. 8. Ioh. 18. 1.

The time when Christ was buried was the euening, wherein the Sabbath was to beginne according to the manner of the Iewes, which began their dayes at sunne setting frõ euening to euening according to that in Genesis: the euening and the morning was the first day. Nowe Ioseph commeth a little before euening and beggeth the body of Christ and burieth it: where note, that howesoeuer we are not bound to keep the sabbath so strictly as the Iews were, yet when wee haue any businesse or worke to be done of our ordinary calling, we must not take a part of the Lords sabbath to doe it in, but preuent the time, and doe it either before as Ioseph did, or rather after the sabboth. This is little practised in the world. Men thinke if they goe to Church before and after noone to heare Gods worde, then all the day after they may doe what they list, and spend the rest of the time at their owne pleasure: but the whole day is the Lords, and therefore must be spent wholly in his seruice both by publike hearing of the word, and also by priuate reading and meditation on the same.

Luk. 23. 54. Mat. 27. 57.

To conclude the doctrine of Christs buriall. Here it may be demanded, how he was alwaies after his incarnatiõ both God and man, considering he was dead & buried, and therefore body and soule were sundered, and a dead man seemes to be no man. Answ. A dead man in his kind is as true a man as a liuing man: for though bodie and soule bee not vnited by the bond of life, yet are they vnited by a relation which the one hath to the other in the counsell and good pleasure of God; and that as truely as man and woman remaine coupled into one flesh by a couenant of marriage, though afterward they be distant a thousand miles asunder. And by vertue of this relation euery soule in the day of iudgement shall bee reunited to his owne body, and euery bodie to his owne soule. But there is yet a more straighter bond between the bodie & soule of Christ in his death & buriall. For as when he was liuing his soule was a meane or bond to vnite his godhead & his bodie togither: so when he was dead his very godhead was a meane or middle bond to vnite the body and soule: & to say otherwise is to dissolue the hypostaticall vnion, by vertue whereof Christs body and soule though seuered each from other, yet both were still ioyned to the godhead of the sonne.

Damasc.

The vse and profit which may be made of Christs buriall is twofold: I. It serueth to worke in vs the buriall of al our sinnes.

Knowe

Rom. 3, 6. Know yee not (ſaith Paul) that all who haue beene baptized into Chriſt, haue beene baptized into his death, & are buried with him by baptiſme into his death? If any ſhal demand how any man is buried into the death of Chriſt, the anſwer is this: Euery Chriſtian man and woman are by faith myſtically vnited vnto Chriſt, and made all members of one bodie, whereof Chriſt is the head. Nowe therefore as Chriſt by the power of his Godhead when he was dead and buried, did ouercome the graue and the power of death in his owne perſon; ſo by the very ſame power by meanes of his ſpirituall coniunction doth he worke in all his members a ſpirituall death and buriall of ſinne and naturall corruption. When the Iſraelites were in burying of a man, for feare of the ſouldiors of the Moabites, they caſt him for haſte into the ſepulchre of Eliſha. Now the dead man, ſo

2. King. 3. 21. ſoone as he was downe, and had touched the bodie of Eliſha, hee reuiued and ſtood vpon his feete: ſo let a man that is dead in ſinne be caſt into the graue of Chriſt, that is, let him by faith but touch Chriſt dead and buried, it will come to paſſe by the vertue of Chriſts death and buriall that he ſhall be raiſed from death and bondage of ſinne to become a new man.

Secondly, the buriall of Chriſt ſerues to be a ſweete perfumne of all our graues and burials: for the graue in it ſelfe is the houſe of perdition, but Chriſt by his burial hath as it were conſecrated and perfumed all

Iſa. 57. 2. our graues: and in ſtead of houſes of perdition, hath made them chambers of reſt and ſleepe, yea beds of doune, and therefore howſoeuer to the eye of man the beholding of a funerall is terrible, yet if wee could then remember the burial of Chriſt, and conſider how he thereby hath changed the nature of the graue, euen then it would make vs to reioyce. Laſtly, we muſt imitate Chriſts buriall in beeing continually occupied in the ſpirituall buriall of our ſinnes.

Thus much of the buriall. Now followeth the third and laſt degree of Chriſts humiliation, He deſcẽded into hell. It ſeemes very likely that theſe words were not placed in the Creede at the firſt, (or as ſome thinke) that they crept in by negligence, becauſe aboue threeſcore Creedes of the moſt auncient counſels and fathers want this clauſe: and among the reſt the Nicene Creede. But if the auncient & learned Fathers aſſembled in that Counſell had bin perſwaded, or at the leaſt had imagined that theſe words had bin ſet downe at the firſt by the Apoſtles, no doubt they would not in any wiſe haue left them out. And an ancient writer ſaith directly, that theſe words, He deſcended into hell, are not found in the Creed of the Roman church, nor vſed in the Churches of the Eaſt: and if they be, that then they ſignifie the buriall of Chriſt. And it muſt not ſeeme ſtrãge to any that a word or twaine in proceſſe of time ſhould creepe into the Creede, cõſidering that the originall copies of the bookes of the old and new teſtament haue in them ſundry a varieties of readings and b words otherwhiles which from the margine haue crept into the Text. Neuertheleſſe conſidering that this clauſe hath long continued in the Creede, and that by common conſent of the Catholike church of God, and it may carry a fit ſenſe and expoſition; it is not as ſome would haue it, to be put forth.

Therefore that we may come to ſpeake of the meaning of it, we muſt know that it hath foure vſuall expoſitions, which wee will rehearſe in order, and then make choiſe of that which ſhall be thought the fitteſt. The firſt is, that Chriſts ſoule after the paſſion vpon the croſſe, did really & locally deſcend into the place of the damned. But this ſeemes not to be true. The reaſons are theſe. I. All the Euangeliſts, and amongſt the reſt S. Luke, intending to make an c exact narration of the life and death of Chriſt, hath ſet down at large his paſſion, death, burial, reſurrection, and aſcenſion, and withall they make rehearſall of ſmall circumſtances, therfore no doubt they would not haue omitted Chriſts locall deſcent into the place of the damned, if there had been any ſuch thing. And the ende why they penned this hiſtorie was, that we might beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is the Sonne of God; and beleeuing, wee might haue life euerlaſting. Nowe there could not haue beene a greater matter for the confirmation of our faith then this, that Ieſus the ſonne of Marie who went downe to the place of the damned, returned thence to liue in happineſſe for euer.

P. Viret. in ſymb. Beſan. in Colloq.

II. If Chriſt did goe into the place of the damned; then either in ſoule or in bodie, or in his Godhead. But his Godhead could not deſcend, becauſe it is euery where, and his bodie was in the graue. And as for his ſoule it went not to hel, but preſently after his death it went to paradiſe, dise, that is, the third heauen, a place of ioy and happinesse, Luk. 23. 43. This day shalt thou be with me in paradise: which wordes of Christ must be vnderstood of his manhood or soule, and not of his Godhead. For they are an answere to a demand; and therefore vnto it they must bee sutable. Now the theife seeing that Christ was first of all crucified, and therefore in all likelihood should first of all die, makes his request to this effect: Lord thou shalt shortly enter into thy kingdome, remember me then; to which Christs answer (as the very words import) is thus much: I shall enter into Paradise this day, & there shalt thou be with me. Now there is no entrance, but in regard of his soule or manhood. For the Godhead which is at al times in all places, can not bee saide properly to enter into a place. Againe when Christ saith, thou shalt be with me in Paradise, hee doth intimate a resemblance, which is betweene the first and second Adam. The first Adam sinned against God, and was presently cast forth out of paradise: Christ the second Adam hauing made a satisfaction for sinne, must immediately enter into paradise. Now to say that Christ in soule descended locally into hell, is to abolish this analogie betweene the first and second Adam. III. Ancient Councels in their confessions & Creedes omitting this clause shew, that they did not acknowledge any reall descent, and that the true meaning of these words, he descended, was sufficiently included in some of the former articles, & that may appeare, because whē they set down it, they omit some of the former: as Athanasius in his Creede setting downe those wordes, he descended, &c. omits the buriall, putting them both for one as he expoūds himselfe b elswhere. Nowe let vs see the reasons which may bee alleaged to the contrary.

b. Lib. de incar. Christ. hom. 1. & 2. in symb.

Obiect. I. Matth. 12. 40. The sonne of man shall be three dayes and three nights in the earth, that is, in hell. Ans. I. This exposition is directly against the scope of the place: for the Pharisies desired to see a signe, that is, some sensible and manifest miracle: and hereunto Christ answers that he will giue them the signe of Ionas, which cannot be the descent of his soule into the place of the damned, because it was insensible; but rather his buriall, and after it his manifest and glorious resurrection. II. The heart of the earth may as well signifie the graue as the center of the earth. For thus Tyrus bordering vpon the sea, is said to be in the heart of the sea. III. This exposition takes it for graunted that hell is seated in the middest of the earth: whereas the Scriptures reueale vnto vs no more but this, that hell is in the lower parts: but where these lower parts should be, no man is able to define.

Ezech. 27. 4. In corde marium.

Obiect. II. Act. 2. 37. Thou wilt not leaue my soule in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption. Ans. These wordes cannot prooue any locall descent of Christs soule. For Peters drift in alleadging of them is, to prooue the resurrection, and he saith expressely, that the words must be vnderstood of the resurrection of Christ, v. 31, Hee seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ. What? namely these words, his soule was not left in hell, &c. Now there is no resurrection of the soule, but of the bodie only, as the soule can not be said to fall, but the bodie. It will bee replied that the word ψυχὴ cānot signifie the body, & the word ἅδης the graue. Ans. The first words signifies not onely the spirituall part of mā, the soule; but also the whole person or the man himselfe. Rom. 13. 1. 1. Cor. 15. 41. And the second is aswell taken for the graue, as for hell; Apoc. 20. 14. Death and ἅδης are cast into a lake of fire. Now we can not say, that hell is cast into hell, but the graue into hell. And the very same word in this text, must needes haue this sense. For Peter makes an opposition betweene the graue into which Dauid is shut vp, and the hell out of which Christ was deliuered. v. 29. 31. Againe it will bee said, that in this text there bee two distinct parts: the first of the soules comming forth of hell, in these wordes, Thou wilt not leaue my soule in hell. The second, of the bodies rising out of the graue, in the next words: Neither wilt thou suffer my flesh to see corruption. Ans. It is not so. For flesh in this place signifies not the bodie alone, but the humane nature of Christ, as appeares v. 30. vnlesse wee shall say that one and the same word in the same sentence is taken two wayes. And the words rather carrie this sense: Thou wilt not suffer me to continue long in the graue; nay which is more, in the time of my continuance there, thou wilt not suffer me so much as to feele any corruption; because I am thy holy one.

Bellar. quæst. de descen.

Obiect. III. 1. Peter. 3. 19. Christ was quickned in spirit, by the which spirit he went and preached to the spirits which are in prison. Ans. The place is not for this purpose.

For

For by spirit is not meant the soule of Christ, but his Godhead, which in the ministerie of Noe preached repentance to the olde world. And I thinke that Peter in this place alludes to another place in Gen. 6.3. where the Lord saith: My spirit shall not alwayes striue with man, because he is but flesh. And if the spirit doe signifie the soule, then Christ was quickned either by his soule or in his soule. But neither is true. For the first, it can not be said, that Christ was quickned by his soule, because it did not ioyne it self to the bodie: but the Godhead ioyned them both. Neither was he quickned in soule, for his soule died not. It could not die the first death, which belongs to the bodie: and it did not die the second death, which is a totall seperation from God: onely it suffered the sorrowes of the second death, which is the apprehension of the wrath of God, as a man may feele the pangs of the first death, and yet not die the first death, but liue. Againe, it is to no end that Christs soule should goe to hell to preach, considering that it was neuer heard of that one soule should preach to another, especially in hell, where all are condemned, and in conscience conuicted of their iust damnation, and where there is no hope of repentance or redemption. It will be answered, that this preaching is onely reall or experimentall, because Christ shewes himselfe there to conuince the vnbeleefe of his enemies: but this is flatte against reason. For when a man is iustly condemned by God, and therefore sufficiently conuicted: what neede the Iudge himselfe come to the place of execution to conuict him? And it is flat against the text. For the preaching that is spoken of here, is that which is performed by men in the ministerie of the word, as Peter expoundes himselfe, 1. Pet. 4. 6. To this purpose was the Gospell also preached vnto the dead, that they might be condemned according to men in the flesh, that they might liue according to God in the Spirit. Lastly, there is no reason why Christ should rather preach & shew himselfe in hell, to them that were disobedient in the dayes of Noe, then to the rest of the damned.

After iust execution conuiction is needelesse.

And this is the first exposition, the second followes, Hee descended into hell, that is, Christ descended into the graue, or was buried. This exposition is agreeable to the truth, yet is it not meete or conuenient. For the clause next before, he was buried, contained this point: and therefore if the next wordes following yeelde the same sense, there must be a vaine and needelesse repetition made and the same thing twise, which is not in any wise to be allowed in so short a Creede as this. If it be said that these words are an exposition of the former, the answere is, that then they should be more plaine then the former. For when one sentence expounds an other, the latter must alwayes be the plainer: but of these two sentences, He was buried, he descended into hell, the first is very plaine and easie, but the latter very obscure and hard, and therefore it can be no exposition thereof: and for this cause this exposition neither is to be receiued. Act. 2. 24.

Thirdly, others there be which expound it thus, He descended into hell, that is, Christ Iesus, when he was dying vpon the crosse, felt and suffered the pangs of hell and the full wrath of God seazing vpon his soule. This exposition hath his warrant in Gods word, where hell often signifies the sorrowes and paines of hell, as Hanna in her song vnto the Lord saith, The Lord killeth and maketh aliue, hee bringeth downe to hell and raiseth vp, that is, he maketh men feele woe and miserie in their soules, euen the pangs of hell, and after restoreth them. 1. Sam. 2. 6. And Dauid saith, The sorrowes of death compassed mee, and the terrours of hell laid hold on me. Psal. 18. 5. This is an vsuall exposition receiued of the Church, and they which expound this Article thus, giues this reason thereof. The former words, was crucified, dead, and buried, doe containe (say they) the outward sufferings of Christ: now because he suffered not onely outwardly in bodie, but also inwardly in soule: therefore these wordes, he descended into hell, doe set forth vnto vs his inward sufferings in soule, whē hee felt vpon the crosse the full wrath of God vpon him. This exposition is good and true, and whosoeuer will may receiue it. Yet neuertheles it seems not so fitly to agree with the order of the former articles. For these words, was crucified, dead, and buried, must not be vnderstood of any ordinarie death, but of a cursed death in which Christ suffered the full wrath of God, euen the pangs of hell both in soule and bodie: seeing then this exposition is contained in the former wordes, it can not fitly stand with the order of this short Creede, vnlesse there should be a distinct article of things repeated before.

Gen 37. 35. or, the graue.

But let vs come to the fourth exposition, He descended into hell, that is, when he was

was dead and buried, he was held captiue in the graue, & lay in bōdage vnder death for the ſpace of three daies. This expoſition alſo may be gathered forth of the ſcriptures. S. Peter ſaith, God hath raiſed him vp, (ſpeaking of Chriſt) and looſed the ſorrowes of death, becauſe it was vnpoſſible that he ſhould be holden of it. Where wee may ſee, that betweene the death and reſurrection of Chriſt, there is placed a third matter, which is not mentioned in any clauſe of the Apoſtles Creede, ſaue in this: and that is his bondage vnder death, which commeth in betweene his death and riſing againe. And the words themſelues do moſt fitly beare this ſenſe, as the ſpeech of Iacob ſheweth, *I will goe downe into * hell vnto my ſonne mourning.* And this expoſition doth alſo beſt agree with the order of the Creede: firſt he was crucified and died, ſecondly he was buried, thirdly laid in the graue and was therein holde in captiuitie & bondage vnder death. And theſe three degrees of Chriſts humiliation, are moſt fitly correſpondent to the three degrees of his exaltation. The firſt degree of exaltation, he aroſe againe the third day, anſwering to the firſt degree of his humiliation, he died: the ſecond degree of his exaltation, he aſcended into heauen, anſwering to his going downe into the graue, was buried: and thirdly his ſitting at the right hand of God (which is the higheſt degree of his exaltation) anſwering to the loweſt degree of his humiliation, he deſcended into hell. Theſe two laſt expoſitions are commonly receiued, & we may indifferently make choiſe of either: but the laſt (as I take it) is moſt agreeable to the order and wordes of the Creede.

Gen 37. 53 * or, the graue.

Thus much for the meaning of the wordes. Now follow the vſes. And firſt of all Chriſts deſcending into hell, teacheth euery one of vs that profeſſe the name of Chriſt, that, if it ſhall pleaſe God to afflict vs, either in bodie or in minde, or in both, though it be in moſt grieuous and tedious manner, yet muſt we not thinke it ſtrange. For if Chriſt vpon the croſſe not onely ſuffered the pangs of hell, but after he was dead, death takes him, & as it were carries him into his denne or cabbin, and there triumpheth ouer him, holding him in captiuity and bondage, and yet for all this was he the ſonne of God: and therefore when Gods hand is heauie vpon vs any way, we are not to deſpaire, but rather thinke it is the good pleaſure of GOD to frame and faſhion vs, that we may become like vnto Chriſt Ieſus as good children of God. Dauid a man after Gods owne heart was by Samuel anointed King ouer Iſrael, but withall GOD raiſed vp Saul to perſecute him, as the fowler hunteth the Partridge in the mountaine, in ſo much that Dauid ſaid, there was but one ſteppe betweene him and death. So likewiſe Iob a iuſt man and one that feared God with all his heart, yet howe heauily did God lay his hande vpon him? his goodes and cattle were all taken away, and his children ſlaine, and his body ſtricken by Sathan with loathſome byles from the ſole of his foote to the crowne of his head: ſo as he was faine to take a potſheard & ſcrape himſelfe ſitting among the aſhes. And Ionah the ſeruant and Prophet of the moſt high God, when he was called to preach to Niniue, becauſe he refuſed for feare of that great city, God met with him; and he muſt be caſt into the ſea, and there be ſwallowed vp of a Whale, that ſo he might chaſtiſe him: and thus doth he deale with his owne ſeruāts, to make them conformable to Chriſt. And further, when it pleaſeth GOD to laye his hand vpon our ſoules, and make vs haue a troubled and diſtreſſed conſcience, ſo as we do as it were ſtruggle with Gods wrath as for life and death, and can finde nothing but his indignation glazing vpon our ſoules, which is the moſt grieuous and perplexed eſtate that any man can be in: in this caſe howeſoeuer we cannot diſcerne or ſee any hope or comfort in our ſelues, wee muſt not thinke it ſtraunge nor quite deſpaire of his mercy. For the ſonne of God himſelfe deſcended into hel, and death carried him captiue, and triumphed ouer him in the graue: and therefore though GOD ſeeme to bee our vtter enemie, yet we muſt not deſpaire of his helpe. In diuers pſalmes we read how Dauid was not onely perſecuted outwardly of his enemies, but euen his ſoule and conſcience were perplexed for his ſinnes, ſo as his very bones were conſumed within him, and his moiſture was turned into the drought in ſomer. This cauſed Iob to crie out that the arrowes of God were within him, and the venyme thereof did drinke vp his ſpirit, the terrours of God did fight againſt him, and the griefe of his ſoule was as waighty as the ſand of the ſea, by reaſon whereof he ſaith, that the Lord did make him a marke and a butte to ſhoote at: and therefore when God ſhall thus afflict vs, either either in bodie or in ſoule, or in both, wee muſt not alwaies think that it is the wrathfull hand of the Lord that beginnes to bring vs to vtter condemnation for our ſinnes, but rather his fatherly work to kill ſinne in vs, and to make vs grow in humilitie, that ſo wee may become like vnto Chriſt Ieſus. Secondly, whereas Chriſt for our ſakes was thus abaſed euen vnto the loweſt degree of humilation that can bee, it is an example for vs to imitate, as Chriſt himſelf preſcribeth: Learne of me that I am meeke and lowly. And that we may the better doe this, wee muſt learne to become nothing in our ſelues, that we may bee all in al forth of our ſelues in Chriſt: wee muſt loath and thinke as baſely of our ſelues as poſſibly may bee in regard of our ſinnes. Chriſt Ieſus vpon the croſſe was content for our ſake, to become a worme and no man, as Dauid ſaith, which did chiefly appeare in this loweſt degree of his humiliation, when as death did as it were tread on him in his denne; and the ſame minde muſt likewiſe be in vs which was in him. The liking that we haue of our ſelues muſt be meere nothing, but all our loue and liking muſt bee foorth of our ſelues in the death and blood of Chriſt.

Math. 11. 29.

Pſal. 22. 6.

And thus much of this clauſe, as alſo of the ſtate of Chriſts humiliation. Nowe followeth his ſecond eſtate, which is his exaltation into glorie, ſet downe in theſe wordes, The third day hee roſe againe from the deade, &c. And of it wee are firſt to ſpeake in generall, thē in particular according to the ſeuerall degrees thereof. In generall, the exaltation of Chriſt is, that glorious or happy eſtate, into which Chriſt entred after he had wrought the worke of our redemption vpon the croſſe. And he was exalted according to both natures, in regard of his Godhead, and alſo of his manhood. The exaltation of the Godhead of Chriſt, was the manifeſtation of the Godhead in the manhood. Some will paraduenture demand, how Chriſts Godhead can bee exalted, ſeeing it admits no alteration at all. Anſ. In it ſelfe it cannot be exalted, yet beeing conſidered as it is ioyned with the manhood into one perſon, in this reſpect it may be ſaid to bee exalted: & therefore I ſay, the exaltation of Chriſts Godhead is the manifeſtation of the glorie thereof in the manhood. For though Chriſt from his incarnation was both God and man, and his Godhead all that time dwelt in his manhood; yet from his birth vnto his death, the ſame Godhead did little ſhewe it ſelfe, and in the time of his ſuffering did as it were lie hidde vnder the vaile of his fleſh, as the ſoule doth in the body, when a man is ſleeping, that thereby in his humane nature hee might ſuffer the curſe of the Law, and accompliſh the worke of redemption for vs, in the low and baſe eſtate of a ſeruant. But after this worke was finiſhed, hee beganne by degrees to make manifeſt the power of his Godhead in his manhoode. And in this reſpect his Godhead may bee ſaide to bee exalted. The exaltation of Chriſts humanitie ſtood in two things. The firſt, that he laid downe all the infirmities of mans nature, which he carried about him ſo long as hee was in the ſtate of a ſeruant, in that he ceaſed to be wearie, hungry, thirſtie, &c. Heere it may be demanded, whether the woundes and skarres remaine in the body of Chriſt now after it is glorified. Anſw. Some thinke that they doe remaine as teſtimonies of that victorie which Chriſt obtained of his and our enemies, and that they are no deformitie to the glorious bodie of the Lord, but are themſelues alſo in him in ſome vnſpeakable manner glorified. But indeede it rather ſeemes to bee a truth, to ſay that they are quite aboliſhed; becauſe they were a part of that ignominious and baſe eſtate in which our Sauiour was vpon the croſſe: which after his entrance into glorie hee laid aſide. And if it may be thought that the wounds in the hands and feet of Chriſt remaine to bee ſeene, euen to the laſt iudgement, why may wee not in the ſame manner thinke that the veines of his body remaine emptied of their blood, becauſe it was ſhed vpon the croſſe?

Oiev. l. 6. de ſubſt. fœd. & Th. Bez.

The ſecond thing required in the exaltation of Chriſts manhood is, that both his bodie and ſoule were beautified and adorned with all qualities of glorie. His minde was inriched with as much knowledge & vnderſtanding as can poſſibly betall any creature, and more in meaſure then al men and angels haue: & the ſame is to be ſaid of the graces of the ſpirit in his will and affections: his bodie alſo was incorruptible, and it was made a ſhining bodie, a reſemblance whereof ſome of his diſciples ſaw in the mount: and it was indued with agilitie, to mooue as well vpward as downeward, as may appeare by the aſcenſion of his bodie into heauen, which was not cauſed by conſtraint or by any violent motion, but by a propertie agreeing to all bodies glorified. Yet in the exaltation of Chriſts manhood we muſt remember two caueats: firſt, that he did neuer lay aſide the eſſentiall properties of a true body: as length, breadth, thicknes, viſibility, locallity, which is to be in one place at once and no more, but keepeth all theſe ſtill, becauſe they ſerue for the beeing of his body. Secondly, wee muſt remember that the gifts of glorie in Chriſts bodie are not infinite, but finite: for his humane nature beeing but a creature, and therefore finite, could not receiue infinite graces and gifts of glory. And hence it is more then manifeſt that the opinion of thoſe men is falſe, which hold that Chriſts body glorified, is omnipotent and infinit, euery way able to doe whatſoeuer he will: for this is to make a creature to be the Creator.

Thus much of Chriſt exaltation in generall. Nowe let vs come to the degrees thereof, as they are noted in the Creede, which are in number three: I. He aroſe againe the third day: II. Hee aſcended into Heauen: III. He ſitteth at the right hand of God the father almighty. In the handling of Chriſts reſurrection wee muſt conſider theſe points: I. why Chriſt ought to riſe againe: II. the manner of his riſing: III. the time when he roſe: IV. the place where: V. the vſes thereof. For the firſt, it was neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould riſe againe, and that for three eſpeciall cauſes. Firſt, that hereby he might ſhew to all the people of God that he had fully ouercom death. For elſe, if Chriſt had not riſen, how ſhould we haue beene perſwaded in our conſciences that he had made a full and perfect ſatiſfaction for vs? nay rather we ſhould haue reaſoned thus: Chriſt is not riſen, and therefore he hath not ouercome death, but death hath ouercome him. Secondly, Chriſt which died, was the ſonne of God; therefore the author of life it ſelfe: and for this cauſe it was neither meete nor poſſible for him to be holden of death, but hee muſt needes riſe from death to life. Thirdly, Chriſts Prieſthood hath two parts: one, to make ſatisfaction for ſinne by his one onely ſacrifice vpon the croſſe: the other, to apply the vertue of this ſacrifice vnto euery beleeuer. Now he offered the ſacrifice for ſinne vpon the croſſe, before the laſt pange of his death, and in dying ſatisfied the iuſtice of God: and therefore beeing dead muſt needes riſe againe to performe the ſecond part of his prieſthood, namely to apply the vertue thereof vnto all that ſhal truely beleeue in him, & to make interceſſion in heauen vnto his father for vs here on earth. And thus much of the firſt point.

Now to come to the manner of Chriſts reſurrection, fiue things are to be conſidered in it. The firſt, that Chriſt roſe againe not as euery priuate man doth, but as a publike perſon repreſenting all men that are to come to life eternall. For as in his paſſion, ſo alſo in his reſurrection, he ſtood in our roome and place: & therfore when he roſe from death, we all, yea the whole Church roſe in him, & togither with him. And this point not conſidered, we do not conceiue aright of Chriſts reſurrection, neither can we reape ſound comfort by it. Eph. 2. 6.

The ſecond is, that Chriſt himſelfe and no other for him, did by his owne power raiſe himſelfe to life. This was the thing which he meant, when he ſaid, Deſtroy this temple, and in three daies I will build it vp againe: and more plainly, I haue (ſaith he) power to lay downe my life, and I haue power to take it againe. From whence wee learne diuers inſtructions. Firſt, whereas Chriſt raiſeth himſelfe from death to life, it ſerueth to prooue that he was not only man, but alſo true God. For the body beeing dead, could not bring againe the ſoule and ioyne it ſelfe vnto the ſame, and make it ſelfe aliue againe; neither yet the ſoule that is departed from the body, can returne againe and quicken the body: and therefore there was ſome other nature in Chriſt, namely his Godhead, which did reunite ſoule and body togither, & thereby quicken the manhood. Secondly, if Chriſt giue life to himſelfe beeing dead in the graue, then much more now beeing aliue in heauen glorified, is he able to raiſe vp his members from death to life. We are all by nature euen ſtarke dead in ſinne, as the dead body rotten in the graue: and therefore our duty is, to come to Chriſt our Lord by humble prayer, earneſtly intreating him that he would raiſe vs vp euery day more and more from the graue of our ſinnes to newneſſe of life. He can of men dead in their ſinnes, make vs aliue vnto himſelfe to liue in righteouſneſſe and true holines all the daies of our life. Ioh. 10. 18.

The third thing is, that Chriſt roſe again with an earthquake. And this ſerueth to prooue that he loſt nothing of his power by death, but ſtill remained the abſolute Lord and King of heauen and earth, to whome therefore the earth vnder his feete trembling doth him homage. This alſo prooueth vnto vs that Chriſt which lay dead in the graue, did raiſe himſelfe againe by his owne almightie power. Laſtly it ſerueth to conuince the keepers of the graue, the womē which came to embalme him, and the diſciples which came to the ſepulchre, and would not yet beleeue that he was riſen againe. But how came this earthquake? Anſ. S. Matthew ſaith, there was a great earthquake. For the angel of the Lord deſcended from heauen, &c. This ſhewes that the power of Angels is great, in that they can mooue and ſtirre the earth. Three angels deſtroied Sodom and Gomorrha. An angel deſtroied the firſt borne of Egypt in one night. In the hoaſt of Senacherib one angel ſlue in one night an hundreth foureſcore and fiue thouſand men. Of like power is the deuill himſelfe to ſhake the earth, and to deſtroy vs all, but that God of his goodneſſe limits and reſtraines him of his libertie. Well, if one Angel be able to ſhake the earth, what then will Chriſt himſelfe doe when he ſhall come to iudgement the ſecond time, with many thouſand thouſands of angels? oh how terrible and feareful will his comming be! Not without cauſe, ſaith the holy Ghoſt, that the wicked at that day ſhall crie out, wiſhing the hills to fall vpon them, and the mountaines to couer them for feare of that great and terrible day of the Lord.

Gen. 19. 1. 13.

Exod. 12. 29. 2. King. 19. 35.

The fourth thing is, that an Angel miniſtred to Chriſt, beeing to riſe againe, in that he came to the graue and rolled away the ſtone, and ſate vpon it. Where obſerue, firſt how the angels of God miniſter vnto Chriſt, though dead and buried; wherby they acknowledge that his power, maieſtie, and authoritie is not included within the bouds of the earth, but extends it ſelfe euen to the heauens themſelues and the hoaſts thereof, and that according to his humanitie. Wicked men for their parts laboured to cloſe him vp in the earth, as the baſeſt of all creatures; but the angels of heauen moſt readily accept him as their ſoueraigne Lord and king: as in like manner they did in his temptation in the wildernes, and in his agonie in the garden. Secondly that the opinion of the Papiſts & others, which thinke that the bodie of Chriſt went through the graue ſtone whē he roſe againe, is without warrant. For the ende no doubt, why the angel rolled away the ſtone was, that Chriſt might come forth. And indeed it is againſt the order of nature that one body ſhold paſſe through another, without corruption or alteration of either; conſidering that euery bodie occupies a place, and two bodies at the ſame inſtant can not be in one proper place.

Mat. 4. 11.

Furthermore it is ſaide, that when the angel ſate on the ſtone, his countenance was like lightening, and his rayment as white as ſnow: and this ſerued to ſhew what was the glory of Chriſt himſelfe. For if the ſeruant and miniſter be ſo glorious, then endles is the glorie of the Lord and maſter himſelfe. Laſtly it is ſaide, that for feare of the angel, the watchmen were aſtonied, and became as dead men: which teacheth vs, that what God would haue come to paſſe, al the world can neuer hinder. For though the Iewes had cloſed vp the graue with a ſtone, and ſet a band of ſouldiours to watch, leaſt Chriſt ſhould by any meanes be taken away, yet all this auaileth nothing: by an angel from heauē the ſeale is broken, the ſtone is remooued, and the watchmē are at their wits ends. And this came to paſſe by the prouidence of God; that after the watchmē had teſtified theſe things to the Iewes, they might at length be conuicted that Chriſt, whome they crucified, was the Meſſias.

The fifth and laſt point is, that Chriſt roſe not alone, but accompanied with others: as S. Matthew ſaith, that the graues opened, and many bodies of the Saints which ſlept aroſe, and came out of the graues, and went into the holy citie, and appeared vnto many after Chriſts reſurrection. And this came to paſſe that the Church of God might know & conſider that there is a reuiuing and quickning vertue in the reſurrection of Chriſt, whereby he is able not onely to raiſe our dead bodies vnto life, but alſo when we are dead in ſin, to raiſe vs vp to newnes of life. And in this very point ſtands a maine difference betweene the reſurrection of Chriſt and the reſurrection of any other man. For the reſurrection of Peter nothing auailes to the raiſing of Dauid or Paul: but Chriſts reſurrection auailes for all that haue beleeued in him: by the very ſame power wherby he raiſed himſelfe, he raiſeth all his members: and therfore he is called a quickning ſpirit. And let vs marke the order obſerued in riſing: For Chriſt riſeth, and then the Saints after

Col.1.18. Scripture, which saith that Christ is the first borne of the dead. Now he is the first borne of the dead, in that he hath this dignity and priuiledge to rise to eternall life the first of all men. It is true indeede that Lazarus & sundrie other in time rose before Christ: but yet they rose to liue a mortall life, and to die again: Christ he is the first of all that rose to life euerlasting and to glory: neuer any rose before Christ in this maner. And the persons that rose with Christ are to be noted, they were the Saints of God, not wicked men: whereby we are put in mind that the Elect children of God onely are partakers of Christs resurrection. Indeede both good and bad rise againe, but there is a great difference in their rising: for the godly rise by the vertue of Christs resurrection, and that to eternall glorie: but the vngodly rise by the vertue of Christ, not as he is a redeemer, but as he is a terrible iudge, and is to execute iustice on them. And they rise againe for this ende, that besides the first death of the bodie, they might suffer the second death, which is the powring forth of the wrath of God vpon bodie & soule eternally. This difference is prooued vnto vs by that 1.Cor.15.16. which Paul saith, Christ is the first fruits of them that sleepe. Among the Iewes such as had corne fields gathered some litle quantitie thereof, before they reaped the rest, and offered the same vnto God; signifying therby, that they acknowledged him to be the author and giuer of all increase: & this offering was also an assurance vnto the owner, of the blessing of God vpon the rest, and this beeing but one handfull did sanctifie the whole crop. Now Christ to the dead is as the first fruits to the rest of the corne, because his resurrection is a pledge and an assurance of the resurrection of all the faithfull. When a man is cast into the sea, and all his bodie is vnder the water, there is nothing to be looked for but present death; but if he carrie his head aboue the water, there is good hope of a recouery: Christ himself is risē as a pledge that all the iust shall rise againe: he is the head vnto his Church, and therefore al his members must needs followe in their time. It may be demanded, what became of the Saints that rose againe after Christs resurrection. Ans. Some thinke they died againe, but seeing they rose for this ende to manifest the quickning vertue of Christs resurrection, it is as like, that they were also glorified with Christ, and ascended with him to heauen,

Thus much of the manner of Christs resurrection. Now followes the time when he rose againe, and that is specified in the Creede, The third day he rose againe. Thus saith our Sauiour Christ vnto the Pharises, As Ionas was three dais and three nights in Mat.12. the Whales bellie: so shall the sonne of man be 39. three daies and three nights in the heart of the earth. And though Christ was but one day and two pieces of two daies in the graue; (for hee was buried in the euening before the Sabboth, and rose in the morning the next day after the Sabboth) yet is this sufficiēt to verifie the saying of Christ. For if the analogie had stood in three whole daies, then Christ should haue risen the fourth day. And it was the pleasure of God that hee should lie thus long in the graue, that it might be knowne that he was thoroughly dead: and hee continued no longer, that he might not in his bodie see corruption. Againe, it is saide, that Christ rose again in the end of the Sabboth, when the first day of the weeke begā to dawne. Mat.28.1. And this very time must be considered, as the reall beginning of the new spirituall world, in which we are made the sonnes of God. And as in the first day of the first world, light was commanded to shine out of darknes vpon the deepes; so in the first day of this new world, the son of righteousnes riseth and giues light to them that sit in darknes, & dispells the darknes that was vnder the old Testament. And here let vs marke the reason why the Sabboth day was changed. For the first day of the weeke, which was the day following the Iewes Sabboth, is our Sabboth day, which day we keepe holy in memorie of the glorious resurrection of Christ: and therefore it is called the Lords day. And it may not Apoc.1.10 vnfitly be tearmed [a] Sunday, though the [a] Hierome. name came first from the heathen, because on this day the blessed sonne of righteousnes rose from death to life.

His abode in the graue was about 38. hours

Let vs now in the next place proceede to the proofes of Christs resurrection, which are diligētly to be obserued, because it is one of the most principall points of our religion. For as the Apostle saith, He Rom.4.25 died for our sinnes, and rose againe for our iustification: and againe, If Christ be not risen, 1.Cor.15. then is our preaching vaine, and our faith is 17. also vaine. The proofes are of two sorts: first Christs appearances vnto men: secondly, the testimonies of men. Christs appearances rances were either on the first day, or on the daies following. The appearances of Christ the same day he rose again are fiue. And first of all early in the morning hee appeared to Marie Magdalen. In this appearance diuers thing are to be considered. The first, of what note and qualitie the partie was, to whome Christ appeared. Ans. Marie Magdalen was one that had bin possessed with seauen deuilles, but was deliuered and became a repentant sinner, and stoode by when Christ suffered; and came with sweet odours whē he was dead to embalme him. And therfore to her is granted this prerogatiue, that shee should be the first that should testifie his resurrection vnto men. And hence we learne, that Christ is ready & willing to receiue most miserable wretched sinners, euen such as haue bin vassals & bondslaues of the deeill, if they will come to him. Any man would think it a fearefull case, to be thus possessed with deuils, as Marie was: but let all those that liue in ignorance, and by reason thereof liue in sinne without repentance, know this; that their case is a thousand times worse then Marie Magdalens was. For what is an impenitent sinner? surely nothing els but the castle and hold of the deuill, both in bodie and soule. For looke as a captaine that hath taken some hold or skonse, doth rule and gouerne all therein, and disposeth it at his will and pleasure: euen so it is with all blinde and impenitent sinners; not one deuill alone, but euen legions of deuils possesse them, and rule their hearts: and therefore howsoeuer they many soothe themseues & say all is well, for God is mercifull; yet their case is farre worse then Maries was. Now then, would any be freed frō this fearefull bondage: let them learne of Marie Magdalen to follow Christ, and to seeke vnto him, and then albeit the deuill and all his angels possesse their hearts, yet Christ being the strong man, wil come & cast them all out, and dwell their himselfe.

The second is, what Christ in his appearance said to Marie. Ans. He saide, Touch me not: for I am not yet ascended to my father. Marie no doubt, was glad to see Christ, and therefore looked to haue conuersed as familiarly with him as shee was wont before his death, but he forbids her to touch him, that is, not to looke to inioy his corporal presence as before, but rather to seeke for his spirituall presence by faith, considering he was shortly to ascend to his father. For this cause when he appeared to his disciples, he sta'd not long with them at any time, but onely to manifest himselfe vnto them, thereby to procure the certentie of his resurrection. This prohibition shewes first of all, that it is but a fond thing to delight in the outward picture & portraiture of Christ, as the Iesuits doe, who stand much vpon his outward forme and limeaments. Secondly it ouerthroweth the popish crusifixes, and all the carued and molten images of Christ, wherein the Papists worship him. For corporal presence is not now required: therefore spirituall worship onely must be giuen vnto him. Thirdly, it ouerthrowes the reall presence of Christ in the Sacrament. Many are of mind that they can not receiue Christ, except they eate and drinke his bodie and blood corporally: but it is not much materiall whether we touch him with the bodily hand or no, so be it we apprehēd him spiritually by faith. Lastly, as we must not haue earthly considerations of Christ: so must we on the contrarie labour for the spirituall hand of faith, which may reach vp it selfe to heauen, and there lay hold on him. This is the very thing which Christ insinuateth vnto Marie in saying, Touch me not. And Saint Paul saith, Henceforth know we no man after the flesh, yea though we had knowne Christ after the flesh, yet now know we him no more, that is, we know him no more as a man liuing among vs, and therefore he addeth, If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: and this new creation is not by the bodily presēce of Christ, but by the apprehension of faith.

2. Cor. 5. 16.

The second appearance was to Marie Magdalen and to the other Marie as they were going from the graue to tell his disciples: at which time, Christ meeteth them, and bids them goe tel his brethren that he is risen againe. And whereas Christ sendeth women to his disciples, he purposed hereby to checke them for their vnbeleefe. For these women forsooke him not at his death, but stood by & saw him suffer, and when he was buried they came to embalme him: but all this while what became of his disciples? surely Peter denied him, and all the rest fled away, euen Iames and Iohn the sonnes of thunder, saue that Iohn stoode aloofe to behold his death. Hereupon Christ to make them ashamed of their fault, sendeth these women vnto them to publish, that vnto them which they say they is nothing ought aboue all other to haue published. Secondly this teacheth that whereas Christ buildeth his kingdome and publisheth his Gospell by Apostles, Euangelists, Pastours, teachers, he can if it so please him, performe the same by other meanes. In this his second appearance, he vsed weake and silly women to publish his resurrection, and thereby sheweth that he is not bound to the ordinarie meanes, which now he vseth. Thirdly, he sent them to his disciples, to shew that howsoeuer they had daelt vnfaithfully with him by forsaking him and denying him, yet hee had not quite forsaken them, but if they would repent and beleeue, he would receiue them into his loue and fauour againe, and therefore calleth them his brethren, saying, Goe and tell my brethren. This teacheth vs a good lesson, that howsoeuer our sinnes past are to humble vs in regard of our selues, yet must they not cut vs off or dismay vs from seeking to Christ; yea euen then when we are laden with the Mark.16.7 burden of them, we must come vnto him, and he will ease vs. Fourthly where as silly women are sent to teach Christs disciples, which were schollers brought vp in his owne schoole, we are admonished, that superioritie in place and calling, must not hinder vs sometime to heare and to bee taught of our inferiors. Iob saith, he neuer refused the counsell of his seruant: and Naaman the Syrian obeyed the counsell of a silly maide which aduised him to goe

2.King. 5. 13. to the Prophet of the Lord in Samaria to be cured of his leprosie: and when he had bin with the Prophet, he obeied the counsell of his seruant, that perswaded him to doe all the Prophet had said, Wash and be cleane.

Now after that the women are come to the disciples and make relation of Christs resurrection, the text saith, Their wordes Luk.24.11 seemed as fained thinges vnto them, neither beleeued they them. Hence we learne two things: the first, that men of themselues can not beleeue the doctrine of Christian religion: it is a hard matter for a man to beleeue sundry things in the worke of creation. The temporall deliuerance of the children of Israell seemed to them as a dreame: and the resurrection of Christ euen to Christs owne disciples seemed a faigned thing. The second, that it is an hard thing truly and vnfainedly to beleeue the points of religion. Disciples brought vp in the schoole of Christ, and often catechised in this very point of Christs resurrection, yet dull are they to beleeue it. This confuteth & condemneth our carnal gospellers, that make it the lightest & easiest thing that can be to beleeue in Christ: and therefore they say their faith is so strong, that they would not for all the world doubt of gods mercie: whereas indeede they are deceiued and haue no faith at all, but blind presumption.

The third appearance was on this maner. As two of Christs disciples were going frō Ieruſalem to Emmaus about three-Luk.24.13 score furlongs, and talked togither of all the things that were done, Iesus drew nere and talked with them, but their eyes were holden that they could not know him: & as they went he communed with them, and prooued out of the Scripture his resurrection, expounding vnto them all things that were writen of him: then they made him stay with them, and their eyes were opened, & they knew him by breaking of bread: but he was taken out of their sight. In this notable appearance we may obserue these foure points. The first, that Christ held their eyes that they could not know him: they saw a man indeede, but who he was, they could not tel. By this it is more then manifest, that the vse of our outward senses, as seeing, feeling, smelling, &c. is supplied vnto vs continually by the power of Christ; and therefore euen in these things we must acknowledge the continuall goodnesse of God. Now if one man can not so much as discerne an other but by the blessing of Christ, then shal we neuer be able to discerne the way of life from the way of death without him: and therefore we must pray vnto God that he would giue vs his holy spirit to inlighten the eyes of our vnderstanding, whereby we may be able to see and know the way that leadeth vnto life, and also to walke in the same.

The second, that as Christ was in expounding the Scriptures vnto them, their hearts burned within them. By this wee learne, that howsoeuer the ministers of God publish the Gospell to the outward eares of men; yet is it the proper worke of Christ alone to touch and inflame the heart by the fire of his holy spirit, and to quicken and raise men vp to the life of Luk.3.15. righteousnes and true holines: it is he only that baptizeth with the holy ghost & with fire. And it further admonisheth vs, that we should heare the word preached from the mouth of Gods ministers with burning and melting hearts: but, alas, the ordinarie practise is that contrary; mens eyes are drousie and heauie, and their hearts dead and frozen within them: and that is the cause why after much teaching there followes but little profit.

The third thing is, that Christ did eate with the two disciples & was knowne of them in breaking of bread. It is very like that our Sauiour Christ did in some speciall maner blesse the bread which he brake, whereby his disciples discerned him from others. And in like manner we must by blessing our meats and drinks distinguish our selues, though not from such as are the seruants of God, yet from all vngodly and careless men. Many beeing silent themselues do make their children to giue thankes, and to blesse their meates. And indeede it is a commendable thing if it be done sometimes to nurture the childe, but for men to disburden themselues wholly of this dutie, is a fault. And it is a shame, that that mouth which openeth it selfe to receiue the good creatures of God, should neuer open it self to blesse and praise God for the same. Therefore in this action of eating and drinking let vs shew our selues followers of Christ, that as by blessing the same he was knowne from all others; so we may also hereby distinguish our selues from the prophane and wicked of this world. Otherwise what difference shall there be betweene vs and the very hogge that eates mast on the ground, but neuer looke vp to the tree from whence it falls? And as Christ reuealed himselfe vnto his disciples, at that time when they caused him to eate meat with them; so let vs suffer Christ to be our gueſt, and let vs entertaine him in his members, and no doubt he will blesse vs, and withall reueale himselfe vnto vs. The fourth thing is, that hauing eaten, he is taken out of their sight. And this came to passe not because the bodie of Christ became spirituall, but because either he held their eyes as before, or he departed with celerity & speede according to the properties of a body glorified.

The fourth appearance of Christ was to Peter alone, mentioned only by S. Paul,

1. Cor. 15. 5. He was seene of Cephas.

Iob. 22. 19 The fifth appearance was to all the disciples together saue Thomas. In it we must consider three things, which are all effectuall arguments to proue Christs resurrection. The first, that he came and stood in the middest among them, the dores being shut. Now it may be demanded, how this could be. Anſ. The Papists say, his bodie was glorified and so passed through the dore, but (as I haue said) it is against the nature of a bodie, that one should passe through an other, as heate doth through a peece of yron, both bodies remaining intire and sound: therefore wee may rather thinke, that whereas Christ came in, when the dores were shut; it was either because by his mighty power he caused the dores to giue place, the disciples not knowing how: or els because he altered the very substance of the dores, that his bodie might passe through, as he thickned the waters to carrie his bodie when he walked vpō the sea. Now if this be true, as very like it is, that these dumbe creatures gaue place to Christ, and became pliable vnto his cōmandement, then much more ought we to carrie our hearts conformable and pliant to the will of our Lord Iesus in all his commandements. The second point is, that when as the disciples thought Christ to haue bin a spirit, he to proue the truth of his manhood, shewed vnto them his hands and feet, and the wound in his side, and calles for meate, & eates among them. But it may be asked how this could bee, considering that a glorified bodie hath no blemish, and needes not to eate, but is supported by God without meate: for if this be true in our bodies when they shall be glorified, then much more was it true in Christ. Anſ. True it is, a glorified bodie hath no blemishes; but our Sauiour Christ had not yet entred into the fulnesse of his glorie. If he had bin fully glorified, he could not so sensibly and plainely haue made manifest the truth of his resurrection vnto his disciples: and therefore for their sakes and ours he is content after his entrance into glory still to retaine in his body some remnants of the ignominies and blemishes, which if it had pleased him, he might haue laid aside; he is also content to eat, not for need, but to proue that his body was not a body in shew but a true bodie. This teacheth vs two lessons: first, if Christ for our good and comfort be content to retaine these ignominious blemishes, then answerably euery one of vs must as good followers of Christ referre the workes of our callings to the good of others, as Paul saith, He was free from al men, yet he was content to become all things vnto al men, that by all meanes he might winne the more. 2. Cor. 9. 19. Secondly we learne, that for the good of our neighbour, and for the maintaining of loue and charitie, we must be content to yeeld from our owne right, as in this place our Sauiour Christ yeelds of his owne glorie for the good of his Church.

The third point is, that he then gaue the Disciples their Apostolicall commission, saying, Go & teach all the nations: of which three points are to be cõsidered. The first, to whom it is giuen. Ans. To them all, as well to one as to another, and not to Peter onely. And this ouerthrowes the fonde and forged opinions of the Papists concerning Peters Supremacie. If his calling had been aboue the rest, then he should haue had a speciall commission aboue the rest: but one and the same commission is giuen alike to all. The second, that with the commission he giues his spirit; for whom he appointeth to publish his will and word, them he furnisheth with sufficient gifts of his holy spirit to discharge that great function: and therefore it is a defect, that any are set apart to be ministers of the Gospell of Christ, which haue not receiued the spirit of knowledge, the spirit of wisdome, and the spirit of prophesie in some measure. The third point is, that in conferring of his spirit he vseth an outward signe: for the text saith, He breathed on them, and said, receiue the holy Ghost. The reasons hereof may be these. First, when God created Adam and put into him a liuing soule, it is said, he breathed in his face. And so our Sauiour Christ in giuing vnto his Disciples the holy Ghost, doth the same, to shewe vnto them, that the same person that giueth life, giueth grace; & also to signifie vnto them, that being to send them ouer all the world to preach his Gospell, he was as it were to make a second creation of man, by renuing the image of God in him which he had lost by the fall of Adam. Againe he breathed on them in giuing his spirit, to put them in minde that their preaching of the Gospell could not be effectuall in the hearts of their hearers, before the Lord doth breath into them his spirit, & thereby draw thē to beleeue: and therefore the spouse of Christ desireth the Lord to send forth his north and south winde to blow on her garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Cant. 4. 15. This garden is the Church of God, which desireth Christ to comfort her, and to poure out the graces of his spirit on her, that the people of God which are the herbs & trees of righteousnes, may bring forth sweet spices whose fruit may be for meat & their leaues for medicines,

Thus much for the fiue appearances of Christ the same day he rose againe. Now follow the rest of his appearances which were in the fourtie dayes following, which are in number fixe. The first is mentioned by S. Iohn in these words, Eight daies after when the disciples were within, and Thomas with them, came Iesus when the doores were shut, and stood in the middest of them, & said, Peace be vnto you. Ioh. 20. 26. In it we must consider two things: I. the occasion thereof: II. the dealing of Christ. The occasion was this: after Christ had appeared vnto the other disciples in Thomas absence, they told him that they had seen the Lord: but he made answer, Except I see in his body the print of his nailes, and put mine hand into his side, I will not beleeue. Now eight dayes after, our Sauiour Christ appeared againe vnto all his disciples, especially for the curing of Thomas his vnbeleefe, which was no small sinne, considering it containes in it three great sinnes. The first is blindnes of minde, for he had beene a hearer of our Sauiour Christ a long time, and had beene instructed touching the resurrection diuers times: he was also with Christ and saw him when he raised Lazarus, and had seene, or at least wise had heard the miracles which he did: and also he had heard al the disciples say that they had seene the Lord, & yet wil it not sinke into his head. The second is deadnesse of heart. When our Sauiour Christ went to raise Lazarus that was dead, Thomas spake very confidently to him and said, Let vs goe, that wee may die with him, Ioh. 11. yet when Christ was crucified he fled away, & is the longest from Christ after his resurrection. & when he is certainly told thereof he wil not acknowledge it or yeeld vnto it. The third is wilfulnesse: for when the disciples told him that they had seene the Lord, he sayde flatly, that vnlesse he sawe in his handes the print of the nailes, he would not beleeue, and that which is worse then al this, hee continued eight dayes in this wilfull minde. Now in this exceeding measure of vnbeleefe in Thomas, any man, euen he that hath the most grace, may see what a masse of vnbeleefe is in himselfe, and what wilfulnesse and vntowardnesse to any good thing, in so much that wee may truely say with Dauid, Lord what is man that thou so regardest him? Psal. 8. And if such measure of vnbeleefe was in such men, as the disciples were, then wee may assure our selues, that it doth much more exceede in the common profession of religion in in these dayes, let them protest to the contrary what they will.

Nowe the cause of his vnbeleefe was this: he makes a lawe to himselfe that hee will see and feele or els he wil not beleeue: but this is flatte against the nature of faith which consisteth neither in seeing nor feeling. Indeed in thinges naturall a man must first haue experience in seeing and feeling and then beleeue: but it is contrary in diuinity, and man must first haue faith and beleeue, and then comes experience afterward. But Thomas hauing not learned this, doeth ouershoote himselfe: and herein also many deceiue themselues, which thinke they haue no faith because they haue no feeling. For the chiefest feeling that we must haue in this life, must be the feeling of our sinns and the miseries of this life; & though we haue no other feeling at all, yet we must not therefore cease to beleeue.

In Christs dealing with Thomas wee may consider three actions. The first, that Ioh. 20. 27 he speakes to Thomas alone, and answers him according to the very wordes which he had spokē of him in his absence, & that word for word. And by this he laboured to ouerthrow his vnbeleefe, & to cōuince him, that beeing absent he knewe what he spake. And by this we learne that though we want the bodily presence of Christ he being now in heauen, yet he knoweth wel what we say, & if neede were could repeat al our sayings word by word: & if it were not so, howe could it be true that we must giue an account of euery idle word? Nowe this must teach vs, to looke that our speech be gracious according to the rule of Gods holy word. Secondly this must make vs willing and ready to direct our prayers to Christ, considering he knoweth what wee pray for, & heareth euery word we speak. The second action is, that Christ condescends to Thomas, and giues him liberty to feele the print of the nailes, and to put his finger into his side. He might haue reiected Thomas for his wilfulnesse, yet to helpe his vnbeleefe, hee yeeldeth vnto his weakenesse. This sheweth that Christ is most compassionate to all those that vnfainedly repēt them of their sins & cleaue vnto him, although they doe it laden with Psa. 103. 13 manifold wants. David saith, that the Lord hath compassion on them that feare him, as a father hath compassion on his childrē: and he addes the reason. For he knoweth of May. 42. 3. what we are made. And the prophet Esay, He will not breake the bruised reed, and smoking flaxe he will not quench. When a childe is very sicke, in so much that it casteth vp all the meate which it taketh, the mother wil not be offended therat but rather pitie it. Now our Sauiour Christ is ten thousand times more merciful to them that beleeue in him, then any mother is or can be. The third action is, that when Thomas had seene and felt the woundes, Christ reuiued his faith, whereupon he brake forth and said, My Lord, and my God: in which Ioh. 20. 28. words he doeth most notably bewaile his blindnesse and vnbeleefe: & as fire that hath bin smoothered, so doeth his faith burst forth and shewe it selfe. And in this example of Thomas we may see the state of gods people in this life. First, God giueth the faith, yet afterward for a time he doth as it were, hide the same in some corner of their hearts; so as they haue no feeling thereof, but thinke themselues to be voide of all grace: & this he doeth for no other end but to humble them; and yet againe after al this, the first grace is further renued and reuiued. Thus dealt the Lord with Dauid and Salomon (for whereas he was a pen-man of Scripture, and therefore an holy man of God, we may not thinke that he was wholy forsaken) with Peter, and in this place with Thomas. And the experience of this shall euery seruant of GOD find in himselfe.

The second appearance of Christ was to seauen of his Disciples as they went on Ioh. 21. fishing, in which he giues three testimonies of his godhead: and that by death his power was nothing diminished. The first, that when the Disciples had fished all night and caught nothing, afterward by his direction they catch fish in aboundāce and that presently. This teacheth vs, that Christ is a soueraigne Lord ouer all creatures, and hath the disposing of them in his owne hands: and that if good successe follow not when men are painefull in their callings, it is because God will prepare and make them fitte for a further blessing. Christ comes in the morning and giues his disciples a great draught of fish: yet before this can be, they must labour all night in vaine. Ioseph must be made ruler ouer all Egypt, but first he must bee cast into a dungeon where he can see no sunne nor light, to prepare him to that honour. And Dauid must be king ouer Israel, but the Lord will first prepare him hereunto by raising vp Saul to persecute him: therfore

when God ſendeth any hinderances vnto vs in our callings, wee muſt not deſpaire nor be diſcouraged, for they are the means whereby God maketh vs fitte to receiue greater bleſſings at his hands either in this life or in the life to come. The ſecond is, that the nette was vnbroke, though it had in it great fiſhes to the number of an hundred fifty three. The third, that when the diſciples came to land, they ſaw hot coales and fiſh laid thereon, and bread. Nowe ſome may aſke, whence was this foode? Anſ. The ſame Lord that was able to prouide a Whale to ſwallow vp Ionas, and ſo to ſaue him: and he that was able to prouide a fiſh for Peters angle with a peece of twenty pence in his mouth; and to make a litle bread and a few fiſhes to feed ſo many thouſands in the wilderneſſe: the ſame alſo doeth of himſelfe prouide breade and fiſhes for his diſciples. This teacheth vs, that not only the bleſſing, but alſo this very hauing of meate, drinke, apparell, is frō Chriſt: and hereupon all ſtates of men, euen the kings of the earth are taught to pray that God would giue them their daily bread. Againe, when we ſitte downe to eate and drinke, this muſt put vs in minde that we are the gueſts of Chriſt himſelfe: our foode which we haue comes of his meere gift; and he it is that entertaines vs if we could ſee it. And for this cauſe wee muſt ſobetly and with great reuerence in feare and trembling vſe all Gods creatures as in his preſence. And when we eate and drinke, we muſt alwaies looke that all our ſpeech be ſuch as may beſeeme the gueſtes of our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt. Vſually the practiſe of men is farre otherwiſe; for in feaſting many take liberty to ſurfet, and to be drunke, to ſweare, & to blaſpheme: but if we ſerue the Lord, let vs remember whoſe gueſts we are, and who is our entertainer; and ſo behaue our ſelues as being in his preſence, that all our actions and wordes may tend to his glorie.

1. Cor. 15. 7. The third appearance was to Iames, as S. Paul recordeth, although the ſame bee not mentioned in any of the Euangeliſts.

Mat. 28. 16. The fourth was to all his diſciples in a mountaine, whither hee had appointed them to come.

Act. 1. 12. The fifth and laſt appearance was in the mount of Oliues, when he aſcended into heauen. Of theſe three laſt appearances becauſe the holy Ghoſt hath onely mentioned them, I omit to ſpeake, & with the repeating of them, I let them paſſe.

Thus much of the appearances of Chriſt after his reſurrection: the witneſſes thereof are of three ſorts: I. angels. II. women that came to the graue to embaulme him. III. Chriſts owne diſciples who did publiſh & preach the ſame, according as they had ſeene & heard of our Sauiour Chriſt: and of theſe likewiſe I omit to ſpeake, becauſe there is not any ſpeciall thing mentioned of them by the Euangeliſts.

Now follow the vſes, which are twofold: ſome reſpect Chriſt, and ſome reſpect our ſelues. Vſes which concerne Chriſt are three: 1. Whereas Chriſt Ieſus beeing ſtarke dead roſe againe to life by his owne power, it ſerueth to proove vnto vs that he was the ſonne of GOD. Thus Paul ſpeaking of Chriſt ſaith, that he was declared mightily to be the Sonne of God touching the ſpirit of ſanctification by the reſurrection from the dead. Rom. 1. 4. And by the mouth of Dauid God ſaid, Thou art my ſonne this day haue I begot thee. Pſal. 2. 7. Which place muſt be vnderſtood not ſo much of the eternall generation of Chriſt before all worldes, as of the manifeſtation thereof in time after this manner. This day; that is, at the time of thine owne incarnation, but eſpecially at the day of thy reſurrection, haue I begotten thee, that is, I haue made manifeſt that thou art my ſonne: ſo is this place expounded by Saint Paul in the Acts. Secondly Chriſts riſing from death by his owne power, prooues vnto vs euidently that he is Lord ouer al things that are: and this vſe S. Paul makes hereof, for ſaith he, Chriſt therefore dyed that hee might be Lord both of the dead and of the quicke. Rom. 14. 9. And indeede whereas he roſe againe on this manner, he did hereby ſhew himſelf moſt plainly to be a mighty prince ouer the graue, death, hell, and condemnation, and one that had al-ſufficient power to ouercome them. Thirdly, it prooues vnto vs, that he was a perfect Prieſt, and that his death and paſſion was a perfect ſatisfaction to the iuſtice of God for the ſins of mankind. For whereas Chriſt died, he died for our ſins: now if he had not fully ſatisfied for them all (though there had remained but one ſinne for which he had made no ſatisfaction) he had not riſen againe: but death which came into the world by ſinne, and is ſtrengthened by it, would haue held him in bondage: & therfore, wheras he roſe againe, it is more then manifeſt, that he hath made ſo full a ſatisfa-

Act. 13. 32. 33.

ction that the merit thereof doth and shall countervaile the iustice of God for all our offences. To this purpose Paul saith: If Christ be not risen againe, your faith is vaine, and you are yet in your sinnes, that is, Christ had not satisfied for your sinnes, or at least you could not possibly haue knowen that he had made satisfaction for any of them, if he had not risen againe. 1. Cor. 15. 6

The vses which concerne our selues are of two sorts, comforts to the children of God, and duties that are to be learned and practised of vs all. The comforts are especially three. First Christs resurrection serueth for the iustification of al that beleeue in him, euen before God the father: as Paul saith, Christ was giuen to death for our sinnes, and is risen againe for our iustification: which words haue this meaning: when Christ died, we must not consider him as a priuate man, as we haue shewed before, but as one that stood in the stead and roome of all the elect: in his death he bare our sinnes and suffered all that we should haue suffered in our owne persons for euer, and the guilt of our offences was laid vpon him: and therefore Esay saith, hee was numbred among the wicked. Nowe in this his rising againe hee freed and disburdened himselfe not from any sinnes of his owne, because he was without sinne, but from the guilt and punishment of our sinnes imputed vnto him. And hence it comes to passe that all those which put their trust and affiance in the merit of Christ, at the very first instant of their beleeuing haue their owne sinnes not imputed vnto them, and his righteousnesse imputed. Rom. 4. 25.

Secondly the resurrection of Christ serueth as a notable meanes to worke inward sanctificatiō, as Saint Peter saith, We are regenerate to a liuely hope by the resurrection of Iesus Christ from the dead. And S. Paul, We are then (saith he) buried with him by baptisme into his death, that like as Christ was raised vp from the dead by the glory of his father, so we also should walke in newenesse of life. For if we be grafted with him to the similitude of his death, we shall be also to the similitude of his resurrection. Which words import thus much, that as Christ by the power of his own godhead, freed his manhood from death and from the guilt of our sinnes: so doeth he free those that are knit vnto him by the bond of one spirit, from the corruption of their natures in which they are dead, that they may liue vnto God. In the naturall body, the head is the fountaine of al the senses and of motion: and therefore by sundry nerues dispersed through the body, the power of moouing and of sense is deriued euen to the least parts: so as the hands and the feete moouue by meanes of that power which comes from the head: and so it is in the spirituall body of Christ, namely the Church: he is the head and the fountaine of life and therefore he conueieth spirituall life to euery one of his members: and that very power of his godhead whereby he raised vp himselfe when he was dead, he conueieth from himselfe to his members, and thereby raiseth them vp from the death of sinne to newenesse of life. And looke as in a perfect bodie, when the head hath sense and motion, the hand that is of the same body hath also the sense and motion conuenient for it: so likewise Christ being the resurrection and the life: as there is spirituall life in him, so euery member of his shall feele in it selfe spirituall sense and motion, whereby it is raised vp from sinne and liueth vnto God. For the better conceiuing of this, wee must consider two things: the outward meanes of this spirituall life, and the measure of it. For the meanes, if we will haue common water we must goe to the well: and if we would haue water of life, we must go vnto Christ, who saith, If any man thirst let him come vnto me and drinke. Nowe this well of the water of life is very deepe and wee haue nothing to drawe with, therefore we must haue our pipes and conduites to conuey the same vnto vs, which are the word of God preached, and the administration of the sacraments. Christ saith, The dead shal heare the voice of the sonne of God, and they that heare it shall liue, where by the dead is meant, not the dead in the graue, but those that are dead in sinne. And againe Christ saith, the wordes which I speake are spirit and life, because the worde of God is the pipe whereby he conueieth into our dead hearts spirit and life. As Christ when hee raised vp dead men did onely speake the word and they were made aliue: & at the day of iudgement by his very voice, when the trumpe shall blowe, all that are dead shall rise againe. So it is in the first resurrection: they that are dead in their sinnes, at his voice vttered in the ministery of the word shal rise again. To go further, Christ raised three from the dead; Iairus daughter newly dead; the widowes sonne dead & wound vp and lying on the hearse; Lazarus Ioh. 7. 39. Ioh. 5. 25. Ioh. 6. 63.

zarus dead and buried and stinking in the grave: and al this he did by his very voice: so also by the preaching of his word, hee raiseth all sorts of sinners, euen such as haue lien long in their sinnes as rotting & stinking carrion. The sacraments also are the pipes and conduits wherby God conueyeth grace into the heart, if they bee rightly vsed, that is, if they be receiued in vnfained repentance for all our sinnes, and with a true and liuely faith in Christ for the pardon of the same sinnes.

Cant.2.4. And so, I take it, they are compared to flagons of wine, which reuiue the Church beeing sicke and fallen into a swound. As for the measure of life deriued from Christ,

Ose.6.1.2. it is but small in this life and giuen by litle & litle as Ose saith, The Lord hath spoyled vs, and he will heale vs; he hath wounded vs, & he will bind vs vp. After two daies he will reuiue vs, and in the third he will raise vs vp, and wee shall liue in his sight. The prophet Ezechiel in a vision is caried into the midst of a field, full of dead bones, and he is caused to prophecie ouer them, and

Eze.37.4. 7.8. say, O ye drie bones, heare the word of the Lord: at the first there was a shaking and the bones came together bone to bone, & then sinewes and flesh grew vpon them, and vpon the flesh grewe a skinne. Then he prophecied vnto the windes the second time, and they liued and stood vpon their feete, for the breath came vpon them, and they were an exceeding great army of mē. Hereby is signified not onely the state of the Iewes after their captiuity, but in them the state of the whole Church of GOD. For these temporall deliuerances signified further a spirituall deliuerance. And we may here see most plainly, that God worketh in the hearts of his children the gifts & graces of regeneration by little and litle. First he giueth no more then flesh, sinnewes and skin: then after he giueth thē

Eze.47.3. 4.5. further graces of his spirit, which quickeneth them and maketh them aliue vnto God. The same also see we may in the vision of the waters that ranne out of the Temple. First, a man must wade to the ankles, then after to the knees, and so to the loynes: then after the waters growe to a riuer that cannot bee passed ouer: and so the Lord conueyeth his graces by little & little, till at the last men haue a full measure thereof.

Rom.8.11. Thirdly the resurrectiō of Christ serues as an argument to proone vnto vs our resurrection at the day of iudgement. Paul saith, If the spirit of Christ that raised vp Iesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortall bodies. Some will say, that this is no benefit, for all must rise againe, as well the wicked as the godly. Answ. True indeede: but yet the wicked rise not againe by the same cause that the Godly doe. They rise againe by the power of Christ, not as he is a Sauiour, but as he is a iudge to condemne them. For God had said to Adam; at what time he should eate of the forbidden fruite, hee should die the death; meaning a double death, both the first and the second death. Nowe then the vngodly rise again that God may inflict vpon them the punishment of the second death, which is the reward of sinne, that so Gods iustice may be satisfied: but the godly rise againe by the power of Christ their head and redeemer, who raiseth thē vp that they may be partakers of the benefit of his death, which is to inioy both in body & soule the kingdome of heauen, which he hath so dearely bought for thē.

Thus much for the comforte. Now followe the duties, and they are also three. First as Christ Iesus when hee was dead rose againe from death to life by his owne power, so we by his grace, in imitation of Christ, must endeauour our selues to rise vp from all our sinnes both originall and actuall vnto newnesse of life. This is worthyly set downe by the Apostle, saying we Rom.6.4. are buried by baptisme into his death, that as Christ was raised vp from the dead by the glorie of the father, so we also should walke in newnesse of life: and therefore we must endeauour our selues to shewe the same power to be in vs euery day by rising vp from our owne personall sinnes to a reformed life. This ought to bee remembred of vs, because howesoeuer many heare and know this point, yet very few doe practise the same. For (to speake plainly) as dead men buried would neuer heare though a man should speake neuer so loude: so vndoubtedly amōg vs there be also many liuing men, which are almost in the same case. The ministers of God may crye vnto them daily, and iterate the same thing a thousand times, and tell them that they must rise vp from their sinnes and lead a newe life, but they heare no more then the dead carkas that lieth in the grave. Indeed men heare with their outward eares, but they are so farre from practising this duty that many iudge it to bee a matter of reproch proch and ignominie. And thoſe which make any conſcience of this duty, howe they are laden with nickenames & taunts, who knoweth not? I neede not to rehearſe them: ſo odious a thing nowe a daies is the riſing from ſinne to newneſſe of life. Sound a trumpet in a dead mans eares, he ſtirres not: and let vs crie for amendment of life till breath goe out of our bodies, no man almoſt ſaith, What haue I done? And for this cauſe vndoubtedly, if it were not for conſcience of that duty which men owe vnto God, we ſhould haue but fewe miniſters in England. For it is the ioy of a miniſter to ſee the vnfained conuerſion of his people: whereas, alas, men generally lye ſnorting in their corruptions, and rather goe forward in them ſtill, then come to any amendment; ſuch is the wonderfull hardneſſe that hath poſſeſſed the hearts of moſt men. He which hath but halfe an eie may ſee this to be true. Oh! how exceeds Atheiſme in all places, contempt of Gods worſhippe, prophanation of the Sabbath; the whoredomes & fornications, the cruelty and oppreſſion of this age, cry to heauen for vengeance. By theſe and ſuch like ſinnes the world crucifies Chriſt againe. For looke as Pilates ſouldiers with the wicked Iewes tooke Chriſt and ſtripped him of his garments, buffeted him, & ſlew him; ſo vngodly men by their wicked behauiour ſtrip him of all honour; and ſlay him againe. If an infidell ſhould come among vs, and yeeld himſelfe to bee of our religion, after hee had ſeene the behauiour of men, hee would peraduenture leaue all religion: for he might ſay, ſurely it ſeemes this God whome theſe men worſhippe, is not the true God, but a God of licentious liberty. And that which is more, whereas at all times wee ought to ſhewe our ſelues new creatures, & to walke worthy of our Sauiour and redeemer, and therefore alſo ought to riſe out of our ſinnes, and to liue in righteouſneſſe and true holines, yet we for the moſt part goe on ſtill forwarde in ſinne, and euery day go deeper then other to hell-ward. This hath beene heretofore the common practiſe, but let vs now learn after the example of Chriſt, beeing quickned and reuiued by his grace, to endeauour our ſelues eſpecially to come out of the graue of ſin, and learne to make conſcience of euery bad action. True it is a Chriſtian man may vſe the creatures of God for his delight, in a moderate & godly manner, but Chriſt neuer gaue libertie to any to liue licentiouſly: for he that is free is yet ſeruant vnto Chriſt, as Paul ſaith: and therfore we muſt not enterpriſe any thing but that which may be a worke of ſome good dutie vnto God; to which ende the Apoſtle ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand vp from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall giue thee life. If this will not mooue vs, yet let the iudgements of God draw vs hereunto, Bleſſed is hee (ſaith the holy Ghoſt) that hath part in the firſt reſurrection: for on ſuch the ſecond death hath no power: where mention is made of a double death: the firſt is the ſeparation of ſoule and bodie, the ſecond is the eternal condemnation of ſoule and bodie in hell fire. Would we now eſcape the ſecond death after this life? wee muſt then labour in this life to be partakers of the firſt reſurrection, and that on this manner: looke what ſinnes wee haue liued in heretofore, we muſt indeauour to come out of them all, and lead a better life according to all the commandements of God. But if it be ſo that ye will haue no care of your own ſoules, goe on hardly to your owne perill, and ſo ye ſhall be ſure to enter into the ſecond death, which is eternall damnation.

2. Cor. 7. 22.

Reu. 20. 6.

Secondly, we are taught by the example of Saint Paul to labour aboue all things, to knowe Chriſt and the vertue of his reſurrection. And this we ſhall doe, when we can ſay by experience, that our hearts are not content with a drowſie profeſſion of religiō, but that we feele the ſame power of Chriſt whereby he raiſed vp himſelfe from death to life, to be effectuall and powerfull in vs, to worke in our hearts a cōuerſion from all our ſinnes, wherein wee haue lien dead, to newneſſe of life, with care to liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus. And that we may further attaine to all this, we muſt come to heare the word of God preached and taught with feare and tembling; hauing heard the word, we muſt meditate therein, & pray vnto God, not onely publikely but priuately alſo, intreating him that he would reach forth his hand, and pull vs out of the graue of ſinne, wherein we haue lien dead ſo long. And in ſo doing, the Lord of his mercy, according as he hath promiſed, wil ſend his ſpirit of grace into our hearts, to worke in vs an inward ſenſe and feeling of the vertue of Chriſts reſurrection. So dealt he with the two diſciples that were going to Emmaus; they were occupied in the meditation of Chriſt his death and paſſion: and

Phil. 3. 10.

whiles they were in hearing of Christ who conferred with them, he gaue them such a measure of his spirit as made their hearts to burne within them, And Paul prayeth
Eph.1.19. for the Ephesians, that God would inlighten their eyes, that they might see and feele in themselues the exceeding greatnesse of the power of God, which he wrought in Christ Iesus, when he raised him from the dead.

Col.3.1. Thirdly as Saint Paul saith, If we be risen with Christ, then we must seeke the things that are aboue. But howe and by what meanes can we rise with Christ, seeing we did not die with him? Answ. We rise with Christ thus. The burgesse of a towne in the Parliament house beareth the person of a whole towne, and whatsoeuer he saith that the whole towne saith, and whatsoeuer is done to him, is also done to all the towne: so Christ vpon the crosse stoode in our place, and bare our person; and what he suffered, we suffered: and when he died, all the faithful died in him: and so likewise as he is risen againe, so are all the faithfull risen in him. The consideration whereof doth teach vs, that we must not haue our hearts wedded to this world. We may vse the things of this life, but yet so as though we vsed them not. For all our loue & care must be for things aboue, and specially we must seeke the kingdome of God and his righteousnesse, peace of conscience, and ioy in the holy Ghost. We must therefore sue for the pardon of sinne for reconciliation to God in Christ, and for sanctification. These are the precious pearles which we must seeke, and when we haue found them we must sell all that we haue to buy them; and hauing bought them we must lay them vp in the secret corners of our hearts, valuing and esteeming of them better then all things in the world beside.

Thus much of Christs resurrection, containing the first degree of Christs exaltation. Nowe followeth the second in these words, He ascended into heauen: in the handling whereof we are to consider these speciall points: I. the time of his ascension. II. The place. III. the manner. IV. the witnesses. V. the vses thereof. For the first, the time of Christs ascension was fortye Act.1.3.4. dayes after his resurrectiō, when he taught his disciples the things which appertaine to the kingdome of God. And this shews that he is a most faithfull king ouer his Church, procuring the good thereof.
Esa.9.6. And therefore Esay saith, The gouernment is on his shoulder: and the Apostle saith, he Heb.3.5.6. was more faithfull in all the house of God, then Moses was. Hence we gather that whereas the Apostle chaunged the Sabboth from the seauenth day to the eight, it was no doubt, by the counsel & direction of Christ before his ascension: & likewise in that they planted Churches & appointed teachers and meet ouerseers for the guiding and instruction hereof, we may resolue our selues that Christ prescribed the same vnto them before his ascension: and for these and such like causes did hee ascend no sooner.

Nowe looke what care Christ at his ascension had ouer his Church, the same must al masters of families haue ouer their households when God shall call them out of this world. They must haue care not only that their families be well gouerned while they liue; but also, that after their death, peace, loue, and good order may be cōtinued in their posterity. And therefore the prophet Esay is sent to Ezechias King of Iudah, to bid him set his house in order for Isa.38.1. he must die, signifying that it is the duty of a good master of a family, to haue care not onely for the gouernment of his house whilest he is aliue, but also that it may be well gouerned when he is dead. The same also must be practised of Gods ministers: a part of whose fidelity is this, that they haue not only a care to feede their particular flockes while they are aliue, but also that they further prouide for the people after their departure, as much as they can. Example whereof we haue in Peter, who saith I will indeauour alwaies that ye may bee 2.Pet.1.15 able also to haue remembrance of these things after my departure.

The place of Christs ascension was, the mount of Oliues neere Bethanie; & it was Luk.24.50 & 10.39. the same place from whence Christ went Act.1.12. to Ierusalem to be crucified. One place serued to be a passage both to pain & torments, and also to glorie. This shewes that the way to the kingdome of heaue is thorough afflictions. There are many which haue Gods hand heauy vpon thē in lingring sicknesses, as the dead palsie & such like; wherein they are faine to lie many yeares without hope of cure, whereupon their beddes which should be vnto them places of rest and ease, are but places of woe and misery. Yet may these men hence haue great comfort, if they can make good vse of their sicknesses: for the beds whereon they suffer so much torment, shall be places from whence they ſhal paſſe to ioy and happineſſe. Again, there be many that for the teſtimony of the trueth, and for religions ſake ſuffer impriſonment, with many afflictions; nowe if they can vſe their afflictions well, their priſons ſhall be Bethanies vnto them: although they bee places of bondage, yet God will at length make them places of entrance to libertie. Many a man for the maintaining of faith and good conſcience, is baniſhed out of his countrie, & is faine to liue in a ſtrange place among a people to whome he is vnknowne: but let him vſe it well: for though it be a place of griefe for a time, as Bethany was to Chriſt when he went to ſuffer, yet God wil make it one day to be his paſſage into heauen.

Thus much of the place of his aſcending. The third thing to be conſidered, is the manner of Chriſts aſcenſion; and it containeth three points. The firſt that Chriſt beeing nowe to aſcend, lifts vp his handes and bleſſed his diſciples. In the Scripture are mentioned diuers kindes of Luk.24.50 bleſſings. The firſt when one prayeth to God for a bleſſing vpon another; and this bleſſing doe kings and princes beſtowe vpon their ſubiects, and parents on their children: and for this cauſe children are well taught to aske their fathers and mothers bleſſing, that they may pray to God to bleſſe them. There is another kind of bleſſing, when a man doth not only pray for a bleſſing, but alſo pronounceth it, This did the prieſts in the old Teſtament: and thus Melchiſedeck when he mette Abraham bleſſed him, ſaying, bleſſed art thou
Gen.14.19 Abraham of God, themoſt high poſſeſſour of heauen and earth. And this was the ordinarie duty of the prieſts, preſcribed by God himſelfe: and therefore the very forme of words which they vſed is ſet downe after this maner, The Lord bleſſe thee and keepe
Num.6.22 thee, the Lord make his face to ſhine vpō thee, &c. The third kind of bleſſing is; when a man doth not only pray to God and pronounce bleſſing, but by the ſpirit of propheſie doth foretell a particular bleſſing vpon any. Thus Iſaac bleſſed Iaacob and Eſau, particularly foretelling both their eſtates. And Iaacob bleſſed the twelue Pa-
Gen.49. triarkes by the ſame ſpirit, foretelling thē what ſhould befall them many hundred yeares after. Nowe our Sauiour Chriſt did not bleſſe his diſciples any of theſe three waies: & therfore there remaineth a fourth kind of bleſſing which he vſed, & that was after this manner: Chriſt in bleſſing his diſciples did not only pronounce or foretel a bleſſing that ſhould come to his diſciples, but did conferre and giue the ſame vnto them. For he is the fountaine and author of all bleſſings. And therefore Paul
Eph 1.3. ſaith, that God the father hath bleſſed vs in all ſpirituall bleſſings in Chriſt. Hence we learne, firſt that all thoſe which denie themſelues and flie to Chriſt, and put their affiance in him, ſhall be freed frō the curſe of the lawe, and from the wrath of God due vnto them for their ſinnes, whatſoeuer they are. Secondly, that the curſes of men muſt not diſcourage vs from doing well. For though men curſe, yet Chriſt
Luk.6.26. bleſſeth: and for this cauſe he ſaith, Woe be vnto you when all men ſpeake well of you: as if he ſhould ſay, then you want the bleſſing of God. And we muſt remember, that whē men ſhall curſe vs for doing our dutye, euen then the bleſſing of God ſhal be vpon vs; and the curſe cauſleſſe ſhall not hurt. And God ſaith to Abraham he will curſe
Gen.12.3. thē that curſe him. Thirdly, we learne that no witchcraft, nor ſorcery, (which often are done with curſing) ſhal be able to hurt vs. For looke where Chriſt will bleſſe, there all the deuils in hell can neuer faſten a curſe. This is found true by experience. For when Balaā the wizzard ſhould haue curſed the people of Iſrael, & had aſſaied to do it many waies, but could not; at lēgth he ſaid, There is no ſorcerie againſt Iacob,* Nū 23.23 nor ſoothſaying againſt Iſrael. This is a notable cōfort to the people of God, that witches and ſorcerers, do what they can, ſhall neuer be able to hurt them. It may be, that their bad practiſes may annoy mens bodies and goods, yet the Lord will turne all to a bleſſing vpon his ſeruāts either in this life or the life to come.

* The engliſh trāſlation beeing otherwiſe here ſeems to faile.

The ſecond point is, that Chriſt went apart from his diſciples, he aſcended vpward toward heauen in their ſight. For the right vnderſtāding of this, ſundry ſpeciall points muſt be obſerued. The firſt that the lifting vp of his body was principally by the mighty power of his godhead, and partly by the ſupernaturall property of a glorified body, which is to mooue as well vpwarde as downeward, without conſtraint or violence. The ſecond, that Chriſt did goe from earth to heauen really and actually, and not in appearance only. The third, that he went viſibly in the ſight of his diſciples. The fourth, that hee went locally, by changing his place and going from earth to heauen, so as he is no more on earth bodily, as we are nowe on earth.

Mat.28.20 It may be obiected, that Christ made a promise that he would be with his Church to the end of the world. Ans. That promise is to be vnderstood of the presence of his spirit, or godhead, not of the presence of his manhood. Againe it may further bee alleadged, that if the godhead be on earth, then must the manhood be there also, because they are both vnited togither. Ans. It is not true, that of two things conioyned, where the one is, there must the other be also. For the sunne it selfe, and the sunnbeames are both ioyned togither, yet they are not both in all places togither. For the body of the sunne is onelie in the heauens, but the sunne beames are also vpon the earth. The argument therefore followes not: Christs manhood subsists in that

Vide Thō. cōtra Gent lib.4.c.49. person which is euery where: ergo his manhood is euery where. And the reason is, because the sonne of God subsists not onely in his diuine nature, but also by it: whereas he doeth not subsist at all by the manhoode, but onely in it: for hee subsisted before all eternitie, when the manhood was not. Nay rather because the manhood doeth subsist by the person of the sonne, therefore the person extendes it selfe further then the manhoode which is assumed and sustained by it, and hath his existing thence. For that very thing whereby any other thing either essentially or accidentally is, extends it selfe further then the thing whereby it is. As the humane nature whereby Peter is a man, extends it selfe further then to Peter, namely to all other men: and the whiteneslie whereby the snowe is white, extends it selfe further then to that snowe which a man holds in his hand.

Act.1 9. The third point is, that in the ascension a cloud tooke Christ from the sight of his disciples. And whereas he caused a cloude to come betweene their sight & himselfe, it signified vnto them that they must now be contented with that which they had seene, and not seeke to know further what became of him afterwarde: and the same thing is taught vnto vs also: we must content our selues with that which God hath reuealed in his word, and seeke no further specially in things which concerne God. For the like ende in the giuing of the lawe

Exod.19.9. in Sinai, God appeared in a cloud: and when he did manifest his glory in the tēple which Salomon made, a thicke cloude filled the same.

The fourth point to bee considered, is concerning the witnesses of his ascension, which were his owne disciples in the mount of Oliues at Bethanie, & none but Luk.24.50 they. Nowe it may be demaunded, why he Act.1.9. would not haue al the whole nation of the Iews to see him ascend, that so they might knowe that he was risen againe, and beleeue in him. Ans. The reason may be this: it was his good pleasure that the points of faith and religion, whereof this article is one, should rather be learned by hearing, then by seeing. Indeed Christs owne disciples were taught the same by sight, that they might the better teach others which should not see; whereas nowe the ordinary meanes to come by faith, is hearing.

The vses to be made of Christs ascension, are of two sorts; some are comforts to Gods church and people, and some are duties. The comforts are especially foure. The first is this: Christ Iesus did ascende Eph.4.8. vp to heauen, to lead captiuitie captiue; a most worthy benefitte. By captiuitie is meant, first sinne and Satan, which did & do lead men captiue into perdition: secōdly death and the graue, which held him captiue and in bondage for the space of three daies. And he leades them all captiue two waies: first in himselfe, in that he began his triumph vpon the crosse, as I haue shewed and continued the same till his very ascension: secondly in al his members, because by his mighty power beeing now ascended, he doth subdue and weaken the power of sinne and Satan; which he manifesteth euery day by killing the corrupti- Rō.16.20. on of their natures, & the rebellīō of their flesh. But it may be demanded, how Christ doth lead his enemies captiue, considering the deuill raignes euery where, and the world, and death, and hell. Ans. Christs victorie ouer his and our enemies hath fiue degrees. First it is ordained by God, secōdly it is foretolde, thirdly it is wrought, fourthly it is applyed, lastly it is accomplished. The ordaining of it was before all worldes: the foretelling of it was in all the ages of the olde testament: the working of it was vpon the crosse, and afterwarde: the applying hath bin since the beginning of the world more or lesse: and it is onely in part in this life; that while Christ in bruising of the head of Satā, he again may bruise his heele: the accomplishment shall not be before the last iudgement. For this great benefit bestowed on Gods Church, there are many duties to be learned. Firſt here is an inſtruction for all ignorant perſons and impenitent ſinners, which abound among vs in euery place, whoſoeuer they be, that liue in the blindnes of their minds, and hardneſſe of their hearts; they muſt know this, that they are captiues & bondſlaues of ſinne and Satan, of hell, death, and condemnation: & let no man flatter himſelfe of what ſtate or degree ſoeuer he be (for it is Gods truth) if he haue not repented of all his ſinnes, he as yet is no better then a ſeruant or vaſſall, yea a very drudge of the diuell. Now then, what wilt thou doe in this caſe? The beſt thing is, to lay to thy heart this benefit of Chriſt. He is aſcended vp to heauen to lead captiue and to vanquiſh the diuel & al his angels, vnder whome thou lieſt bounde, and that not onely in himſelfe, but in his members. Now thē if thou wilt become a true member of Chriſt, hee will free thee from this bondage. Therefore take heede how thou continueſt longer in thy old ſinnes, and in thy groſſe ignorāce: & ſeeing Chriſt hath made a way to liberty, let vs ſeeke to come out of this ſpirituall bondage: he is aſcended for this end and purpoſe to free vs from it; therefore if we refuſe this benefit, our ſtate will be the more damnable. A man lies bound hand and foote in a darke dungion, and the keeper comes and ſets open the priſon dore & takes off his bolts, and bids him come out; if he refuſe and ſay that he is wel: may it not be thought that he is a madde man, and will any be ſorie for his caſe? No ſurely. Wel, this is the ſtate of all impenitent ſinners. They lie faſt fettered and bound vnder the power of ſinne and Satan, and Chriſt it is who is aſcended into heauen to vnlooſe them of this bondage: he hath ſet open the priſon dore, & hath vnlocked our fetters: if we refuſe to come out, and lie ſtill in our ſinnes, there remaineth nothing for vs but euerlaſting thraldome. Let vs therefore in the feare of God, if wee haue a care of our owne ſoules, receiue and imbrace this benefitte which redounds vnto vs by Chriſts aſcenſion.

Secondly, in that Chriſt is aſcended to heauen to lead captiue ſinne and Satan, here is a good conſolatiō for all thoſe that are afflicted in conſcience for their ſinnes. There is no man in this caſe but he hath great cauſe to feare, yet muſt he not be diſcouraged. For Chriſt by his aſcenſion like a noble captaine hath taken ſin & Satan priſoners, and hath pinnioned them faſt, ſo as all the power they haue, is in Chriſts hand: and therefore for this cauſe although they are ſuffered to exerciſe and afflict vs, yet by his grace they ſhall neuer be able to preuaile againſt vs. Therefore we may ſafely caſt our care vpon God, and not feare ouermuch. Hēce alſo we may learne a third duty. There is no mā that knoweth what ſinne meaneth, and what the bloode of Chriſt meaneth, but in regard of the corruption of his owne nature, he will ſay with Paul that he is ſold vnder ſinne, & in regard thereof will crie out with him alſo, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from this bodie of death? yea it will make his heart to bleede within him. Now what ſhall he doe in this caſe? ſurely let him remember the end of Chriſts aſcenſion, which is to vanquiſh and ſubdue the rebellion of his nature, and labour to feele the benefit thereof: and then he ſhall no doubt find that Chriſt will diſſolue in him the workes of the deuil, and tread Sathā vnder his feete. And thus alſo thoſe that feele in themſelues the law of their members rebelling againſt the law of their minde, muſt come to Chriſt and he will helpe and free them. 1. Ioh. 3. 8. Rom. 16. 20.

The ſecond benefit of Chriſts aſcenſion is, that he aſcended vp to heauē to beſtow giftes vpon his Church, as it is ſaid in the place before mentioned. He aſcended vp an high, &c. He gaue gifts vnto men, that is, the gift of the knowledge of Gods word, the gift of preaching, and prophecie, and all other gifts needefull for the good of his Church. The conſideration of this, that Chriſt who is the fountaine of grace, and in whom are hidde al the treaſures of wiſdome and knowledge, ſhould be mindfull of vs and vouchſafe ſuch ſpeciall fauour to his Church, muſt cauſe euery one of vs who hath receiued any gift of God (as there is no man but he hath receiued his portion) to be humbled in his own eyes for the ſame. There is no cauſe why we ſhould be proud of our gifts, ſeeing we haue nothing, but that which we haue receiued. For to this ende Chriſt aſcended, to giue gifts vnto men, and therefore our gifts whatſoeuer they be, are not our own but we had them from Chriſt, and we are ſtewards of them a while, for the good of others. The more the Lord giueth to vs, the more he requireth at his handes; & as for ſuch as hauing good gifts abuſe the ſame, their ſinne is the more grieuous, and their danger the greater. Men of great gifts vnlesse they vse them aright with humbled hearts, shall want Gods blessing vpon them. For he giueth grace to the humble. The high hills after much tillage are often barren, whereas the lowe vallies by streames of waters passing through them, are very fruitfull: and the giftes of God ioined with a swelling heart are fruitlesse; but ioined with loue and the grace of humilitie they edifie.

Secondly, if Christ ascend vp to heauen to giue gifts vnto men; here we may see howe many a man and woman in these our dayes are ouerseene, in that they plead ignorance, and say that they hope God will haue them excused for it, seeing they are not learned; they haue dull wits, and it is not possible to teach them nowe, they are past learning: and hereupon they presume they may liue in grosse ignorance, as blind almost in religion as when they were first borne. But marke, I pray you, who it is that is ascended vp to heauen, namely Christ Iesus our Lord, who made thee of nothing. Nowe was he able to giue thee a being, when thou was not, and is hee not likewise able to put knowledge into thy soule, if so be thou wilt vse the meanes which he hath appointed? and the rather, seeing he is ascended for that ende: but if thou wilt not vse the meanes to come to knowledge, thy case is desperate and thou art the cause of thine owne condemnation, and thou bringest confusion vpon thine owne head. Therefore let ignorant mē labour for knowledge of gods word. Ignorance shall excuse none: it wil not stand for paiment at the day of iudgement. Christ is ascēded to this end to teach the ignorant, to giue knowledge and wisdome vnto the simple, and to giue gifts of prophecie vnto his ministers, that they may teach his people. Therefore I say againe, let such as be ignorāt vse the meanes diligently, and God will giue the blessing. Thirdly, whereas it is thought to bee a thing not possible, to furnish a whole church with preaching ministers, it seemes to be otherwise. For wherefore did Christ ascend to heauen? was it not to giue giftes vnto his Church? what is Christs hād now shortened? vndoubtedly we may resolue our selues, that Christ bestowed gifts sufficient vpon men in the Church: but it is for our sins that they are not imployed. The fountaines of learning the Vniuersities, though they are not dāmed vp, yet they streame not abroad as they might. Many there be in them indued with worthy gifts for the building of the Church, but the couetousnesse of mē hindereth the comfortable entrance which otherwise might be. Lastly, seeing Christ ascended to giue gifts needfull for his Church, as the gift of teaching, the gift of prophecie, the gift of tongues, of wisedome, and knowledge, the dutie of euery man is, especially of those which liue in the schooles of learning, to labour by all meanes to increase, cherish, and preserue their gifts, & as Paul exhorteth Timothie, to stirre vp the gift of God, that is, as men preserue the fire by blowing it, so by our diligence wee must kindle and reuiue the gifts and graces of God bestowed on vs. Christ hath done his part, and there is nothing required but our paines and fidelitie. 2. Tim. 1. 6. ἀναζωπυρεῖν.

The third benefite that comes by Christs ascension is, that he ascended to prepare a place for all that should beleeue in him: In my fathers house (saith Christ) are many dwelling places, if it were not so, I would haue told you, I goe to prepare a place for you. For by the sinne of Adam our entrance into heauen was taken away. If Adam by his fall did exclude himselfe from the earthly paradise, then how much more did he exclude himselfe from heauen? And therefore all mankind sinning in him, was likewise depriued of heauen. The people of Israel beeing in woe and miserie, cryed out that they had sinned, and therefore the the Lord had couered himselfe with a cloude, that their prayers could not passe through. And Esai saith that our sinnes, are a wall betwixt God and vs. And S. Iohn that no vncleane thing must enter into the heauenly Ierusalem. Now seeing we haue shut our selues out of heauen by our sinnes, it was requisit that Christ Iesus our Sauiour should goe before vs to prepare a place and to make readie a way for vs. For he is king ouer all, he hath the keies of heauen, he openeth and no man shutteth: & therfore it is in his power to let vs in, though we haue shut our selues out. But some may say, if this be the end of his ascension to prepare a place in heauen, then be like such as died before the comming of Christ were not in heauen. Ans. As there are two degrees of glory, one incōplete and the other complete or perfect, (for the faithful departed are in glorie but in part, and there remaineth fulnesse of Ioha. 14. 2. Gen. 3. 24. Lam. 3. 44. Reu. 21. 27 glory for ſuch then at the day of iudgement, when ſoule and bodie ſhall be both glorified togither:) ſo anſwerably there are two degrees of preparation of places in heauen. The places of glory were in part prepared for the faithfull frō the beginning of the world, but the full prepation is made by Chriſts aſcenſion. And of this laſt preparation is the place of Iohn to be vnderſtood.

The vſe of this doctrine is very profitable. Firſt it ouerthroweth the fond doctrine of the Church of Rome, which teacheth that Chriſt by his death did merit our iuſtification, and that we beeing once iuſtified doe further merit ſaluation, and purchaſe for our ſelues a place in heauen. But this is as it were to make a partition betweene Chriſt and vs in the worke of our redemption, whereas in truth not only the beginning and continuance of our ſaluation, but alſo the accompliſhment thereof in our vocation, iuſtification, ſanctification, glorificatiō, is wholly and only to be aſcribed to the meere merit of Chriſt: and therefore hauing redeemed vs on earth, he alſo aſcēds to prepare a place in heauen for vs. Secondly, this ſerueth to condemne the fearefull, lamentable, & deſperate ſecuritie of theſe our daies. Great is the loue of Chriſt in that he was content to ſuffer the pangs of hell to bring vs out of hell: and withall to goe to heauen to prepare a place for vs there: and yet who is it that careth for this place, or maketh any account thereof? who forſaketh this world, and ſeekes vnto Chriſt for it? And further, leaſt any man ſhould ſay, alas, I know not the way: therfore Chriſt before he aſcended made a newe and liuing way, with his owne blood, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. And to take away all excuſes from men, he hath ſet markes & bounds in this way, and hath placed guides in it, namely his miniſters, to ſhewe all the meſſengers a ſtraight and readie courſe into the kingdome of heauen. And though Chriſt haue done all this for vs, yet the blindneſſe and ſecuritie of men is ſuch, that none almoſt walketh in this way, nor careth to come into this manſion place, but in ſtead of this they walke in by-waies, according to the luſt of their own fleſh. When they are cōmāded to go Eaſtward to Ieruſalem, they turne Weſtward another way: when they are commanded to go on forward to heauen, they turne againe backward and goe ſtraight to hell. Men run on al the daies of their liues in the broad way that leadeth to deſtruction, and neuer ſo much at once make inquiry for a reſting place in heauē, but when the houre of death commeth, then they call for the guide, whereas all their liues before, they haue runne out of the way many thouſand miles: but then, alas, it is too late, vnleſſe it be the vnſpeakeable mercie of God. For they haue wandered ſo far aſtray, that in ſo ſhort a ſpace they cannot be able to come into the right way againe. Yet generally, this is the ſtate of moſt among vs, whoſe ſecuritie is ſo much the more grieuous and fearefull, becauſe Chriſt hath done al that heart can wiſh. There is nothing elſe required, but only that by his grace we ſhould walke in the way. There was neuer any that knew the ſtate of the people in theſe dayes, but he will grant, that this is moſt true which I ſay. Beſides, as by this, we are brought to a ſight of the deſperate ſecuritie of this age, ſo wee may further learne our owne duties. Is Chriſt gone to heauen before hand to prepare a place for thee, then practiſe that which Paul teacheth: Haue thy conuerſation in heauen. The wordes which he vſeth are very ſignificant, and the meaning of them is: Ye are free-denizens of the cittie of God, and therefore as freemen in Gods houſe, let all your cares & ſtudies, all your affaires and doings be in heauen. In the world if a man make purchaſe of an houſe, his heart is alwayes there: there he puls downe and buildes againe: there he makes him orchards & gardens: there he means to liue and die. Chriſt Ieſus hath bought the kingdom of heauen for vs (the moſt bleſſed purchaſe that euer was) and hath paid the deareſt price for it that euer was paid, euen his owne precious blood: and in this cittie he hath prepared for vs a dwelling place, and made vs free denizens of it: therefore all our ioy, and all our affaires ought to be there. It will be ſaide, how ſhall a man vpon earth haue his conuerſation in heauen. Anſw. We muſt converſe in heauen, not in body but in heart: and therefore, though our bodies be on earth, yet our hearts, ioy, and comfort, and all our meditation muſt be in heauen. Thus muſt we behaue our ſelues like good freemen in Gods houſe. It muſt be farre from vs, to haue our ioy and our hearts ſet on things of this world.

Phil. 3. 20. πολίτευμα ἐν οὐρανοῖς.

Thirdly, the conſideration of this, that Chriſt Ieſus hath prepared a place for vs in heauen, and alſo hath trained the way with his owne blood, muſt make euery

Luk. 13.24 one of vs to ſtriue to enter in at the ſtraight gate, as our Sauiour Chriſt counſelleth vs: & that as wraſtlers do, which ſtriue for life and death. Within this gate is a dwelling place of happineſſe ready for vs. If a man were aſſured that there were made for him a great purchaſe in Spaine or Turkey, ſo as if he would but come thither, he might enioy it; would he not aduenture the dangers of the ſea, and of his enemies alſo, if need were, that he might come to his own? Well, beholde Chriſt Ieſus hath made a purchaſe for vs in heauen, and there is nothing required of vs, but that we will come and enioy it. Why then ſhould men refuſe any paines, or feare in the way? nay we muſt ſtriue to get in. It may be we ſhall be pinched in the entrance, for the gate is ſtraite and lowe, and we muſt bee faine to leaue our wealth behind vs, and the pleaſures of this life; and enter wee muſt, though we ſhould be conſtrained to leaue our fleſh behind vs, for the purchaſe that is made is worth tenne thouſand worldes. And beſides, if we looſe it by fainting in the way, our purchaſe ſhall be the blackeneſſe of darkeneſſe for euer with the deuill and all his angels: who therefore would not ſtriue, though he loſt his life in the gate? The vrging of this point is needfull in theſe daies. There is ſtriuing enough for worldly prefermēt, but a man almoſt muſt goe alone in the ſtraight way that leadeth to heauen, he ſhal haue none to beare him company. And where are they that ſtriue to enter in? where is the violence offered to the kingdome of heauen? where be the violent which ſhould take it to thēſelues, as in the daies of Iohn Baptiſt?

Fourthly, if Chriſt haue prepared a place for vs in heauen, then we are in this world as pilgrimes and ſtrangers, & therfore muſt learne the counſell of Saint Peter: As ſtrangers and pilgrimes abſtaine frō fleſhly luſts, which fight againſt the ſoule. He that doeth eſteeme himſelfe as a pilgrime, is not to intangle himſelfe with the affairs of this world, nor put in practiſe the behauiour thereof, but to behaue himſelfe as a freeman of heauen, as ſtrangers vſe to liue in forraine countries, according to the faſhion of their owne. And therefore in thought, worde, and deede, in life and conuerſation, he muſt ſo carry himſelfe, as thereby hee may appeare to all the world of what countrey he is. An auncient diuine ſpeaking of ſuch as had curled and embroidered haire, biddeth them conſider, whether they muſt goe to heauen with ſuch haire or no: and whereas they adorned themſelues with winckles made of other womans haire, he askes them whether it may not be the haire of a damned perſon or no. If it may be, hee further demandeth howe it may beſeeme them to weare it which profeſſe themſelues to bee the ſonnes & daughters of God. The like may be ſaid of all other ſinnes: they that be of Gods houſe muſt behaue themſelues as freemen there. And when God hath made vs free, it doth not beſeeme vs to make our ſelues bondmen of ſinne & Satan and of this world. Tertul. lib. de habit. mul.

Fifthly, ſeeing Chriſt went to heauen to prepare a place for all that beleeue in him, here is a good duty for parents. Many of them are very careful to prefer their children to great places and noble mens houſes, and they are not to bee blamed therefore: but if they would indeede bee good parents to their children, they ſhould firſt endeauour themſelues to get roomes for them in heauen: they that doe this, are good parents indeede. Some will ſay, howe ſhall we get this preferment for them? Anſw. God hath two houſes, his Church, and the kingdome of heauen. The Church, is his houſe of grace: heauen is his houſe of glorie. Nowe if thou wouldſt bring thy child to a place in the houſe of glory, then thou art firſt of al to get him a place in the houſe of grace: bringing him vp ſo in the feare of God, that both in life and conuerſation he may ſhewe himſelfe to bee a member of the Church: and then aſſure thy ſelfe, that after this life, hee ſhall be remooued to the ſecond houſe of GOD, which is the houſe of glory, and there be freeman for euer in the kingdome of heauen. And if thou ſhalt thus prouide for thy Childe, thou ſhalt not leaue him as an orphan when thou dieſt, but he ſhall haue GOD for his father and Chriſt for his brother, and the holy Ghoſt his comforter. And therefore firſt of all and aboue all, remember to make thy child a member of Gods Church. Let the example of Dauid excite all parents hereunto; I had rather (ſaith he) be a dore-keeper in the houſe of God, then to dwell in the tabernacle of wickednesſe. For a day in thy courts is better then a thouſand elſewhere. Pſal. 84.10 gainst the tediousnes and feare of death. Thou which feareſt death, remember that Christ is gone to heauen to prepare a place for thy body, where it must be glorified and liue for euer with the blessed Trinitie and all the Saints and angels, though for a while it lye dead and rotte in the graue. Remeber this also, thou which continuest in any lingring sicknes, Christ Iesus hath prepared a place for thee, wherin thou shalt rest in ioy and blisse without all paine or faintnes.

The fourth benefit is, that Christ ascended vp to heauen to sende the comforter vnto his Church. This was a speciall ende of his ascension, as appeares by Christs owne words (It is (saith he) expedient that I goe away, for if I goe not, the Comforter will not come, but if I depart I will send him vnto you.) And againe, I will pray vnto the Father, and he shall giue you another Comforter, which shall abide with you for euer, euen the spirit of truth. But some will say, how can Christ send his spirit vnto his Church, for the person sending and the person sent are vnequall, whereas all three persons in Trinitie are equall, none greater or lesser then an other, none inferiour or superiour to other. Anſ. It is true indeede: but we must know, that the action of sending in the Trinitie makes not the persons vnequall, but onely shewes a distinction and order among equalls. The father sends the sonne, the father and the sonne both send the holy Ghost: yet the father is not aboue the sonne, neither the father or the sonne aboue the holy Ghost, but all are equall in degree, though in regard of order one is before an other: and it standeth with reason. For two men that are equall in degree, may vpon mutuall consent one send an other. But it may be further demanded, how the holy Ghost can be sent which is every where? Anſ. The holy Ghost indeede is every where, therefore he is sent not so much in regard of the presence of his essence or substance, as of his operation whereby he renueth and guideth the membres of Christ. Now then, this beeing so, here first we haue occasiō to consider the miserie of the world. When a man is troubled in his mind (as no vngodly man, but sometime he feeleth the terrour of conscience for his sinnes) then he labours to remooue it by merrie companie and pleasant bookes, whereas Christ at his ascension sent his holy spirit to be the comforter of his Church: and therefore when we are troubled in conscience for our sinnes, we should not (as is vsually) seeke such slender meanes, but rather seeke for the help and comfort of the holy Ghost, and labour to haue our sinnes washed away and our hearts purified and cleansed by the blood of Christ. As for wine & mirth and such like meanes of comfort, neither at the day of death, nor at the day of iudgment shall they stand vs in stead, or be able to comfort vs. Againe, when crosses and calamities fall, the counsell of the minister is not sought for, but the helpe of such as are called cunning men & cunning women is, that is, of charmers, inchanters, and figure-casters: a badde practise. Christ at his ascension sent his holy spirit vnto his Church and people, to bee their guide and comforter in their calamities and miseries: and therefore when any man is in distresse, he should haue recourse to the right meanes of comfort, namelie the word and Sacraments, and there hee should find the assistance of the H. Ghost. Thus the Prophet Isai informeth the Iewes: whē they shall say vnto you, inquire at them which haue a spirit of diuination, and at the southsayers which whisper and murmure: should not a people inquire at their God, from the liuing to the dead? to the law & to the testimonie. Rebecca, when the two twinnes stroue in her wombe, what did she? the text saith, she went to aske the Lord. Yet commonly the men of these daies leaue God and seeke to the instruments of the deuill. To goe yet further, God vseth for sundrie causes most of all to afflict his deareſt children. Iudgement saith Peter, begins at Gods house. S. Luke saith, that a certaine woman was bound of Satan eighteene yeares, but what was shee? a daughter of Abraham, that is, a child of God. When the like condition shall befall any of vs, let vs remember the end why Christ ascended vp to heauen: and let vs pray vnto GOD that he will giue vs his spirit, that thereby we may be eased and deliuered, or els inabled to persеuere & continue in patience: and this is the true way and meanes to lighten and ease the burthen of all afflictions. And for this cause Paul praieth that the Colossians might be strengthened with all might, through his glorious power vnto all patience and long suffering with ioyfulnesse. For to whomesoeuer God giueth grace to beleeue, to them also he giues power to suffer affliction by the inward worke of his spirit. Secondly, if Christ haue sent vnto his Church the holy spirit to be our cō-forter, our duty is, to prepare our bodies and soules to be fitte temples and houses for so worthy a guest. If a man were certified that a prince wold come to his house, he would dresse it vp and haue all things in as good order as might bee: and shall not we much more endeauour to purifie and clense our soules and bodies from all sinne, that they may be fit temples for the entertainment of the holy Ghost, whome Christ Iesus hath sent to be our comforter? The Shunamite was carefull to entertaine the man of God Elisha, for shee said to her husband. Let vs make him a little chamber, 2.Kin.4.10 I pray thee, with walls; & let vs set him there a bed and a stoole, a table and a candlestick. Nowe how much more carefull ought we to be to entertaine God himselfe, who is content to come and dwell with vs: and therefore we must adorne our bodies and soules with grace, that he may lodge, and suppe, and dine with vs, as he hath promised; but on the contrary, if we defile our bodies with sin, we banish the holy Ghost out of our hearts, and inuite the diuell to come and dwell with vs. For the more a man defileth his bodie, the fitter and cleaner it is for him. And to conclude this point, let vs remember that saying, which is vsed of some, that Christ when he went hence, gaue vs his pawne, namely his spirit, to assure vs, that hee would come to vs againe, and also he tooke with him our pawne, namely his flesh, to assure vs further, that we should ascend vp to him. Tuml.

Thus much for the benefits of Christs ascension. Now follow the duties whereunto wee are mooued, and they are two. First, we must be here admonished, to renounce the vbiquitie and the errour of the reall and essentiall presence of the bodie of Christ in the Sacrament of the Lords supper; as flatly oppugning this article of Christs ascension into heauen. For it is flat against the nature of a true body to subsist in many places at once. Secondly, as the Apostles then did, when they saw Christ ascending vp into heauen, so must we doe also: while he was present with them, they gaue him honour, but when they saw him Luk.24.52 ascending, they adored him with farre greater reuerence: and so must we nowe for the same cause bowe the knees of our hearts vnto him.

Thus much of the second degree of the exaltation of Christ. Now followes the third, in these words, And sitteth at the right hand of God the father Almighty. In the handling whereof, we are first to shew the meaning of the wordes, secondly the comforts and benefits that redound to Gods Church, thirdly the duties that wee are mooued vnto. For the meaning of the words: if we speake properly, God hath neither right hand nor left, neither can he be said to sit or stand; for God is not a bodie but a spirit: the words therefore containe a borrowed speech from earthly kings and potentates, whose manner and custome hath beene, to place such persons at their right hands, whom they purposed to aduance to any speciall office or dignity. So, King Salomon when his mother 1.Kin.2.19 came to speake with him rose vp from his throne, and met her, and caused a seat to be set at his owne right hand, and sate her vpon it, in token, no doubt, of honour which he gaue vnto her. To the same purpose Dauid saith, Vpon thy right hand did stand Psal.45.9. the Queene in a vesture of gold. And the sonnes of Zebedeus made suite to Christ, Math.20. that one of them might sit at his right hand, & the other at his left in his kingdome. Now their request was to haue the two speciall and principall dignities of his kingdome. Thus we see it is manifest, that the sitting at the right hand of an earthly Prince signifieth aduancement into authority and honour: and therefore the same phrase of speech applyed to Christ signifieth two things. First, his full and manifest exaltation in dignitie, honour, and glory: and in this sense it is said, that to him is giuē a name Phil.2.9. that is aboue all names, that at the name of Iesus euery knee shall bow. Secondly it signifieth his full and manifest exaltation into the authority and gouernment of his kingdome, which spreadeth it selfe ouer heauen and earth: so Dauid saith, The Psal.110.1. Lord said vnto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand vntill I make thine enimies thy foote-stoole. Which place beeing alleadged by S. Paul repeating the words, but changing the phrase, is thus set downe: He shall raigne 1.Cor.15. 25. til he haue put all his enemies vnder his feete. And to speake in briefe, the scope of the words is to shew, that Christ God & man after his ascension is aduanced to such an estate in which he hath fulnesse of glory, power, maiestie, and authority in the presence of his Father and all the Saints and holy angels. Furthermore in the wordes three circumstances must bee obserued. The first is the place where Christ is thus aduanced, noted in the former article, Hee ascen- ascended into heauen, & sits (namely in heauen) at the right hand of God. The place then where Christ Iesus in both his natures, as he is God and also man, doth rule in full glory, power, and maiestie; is heauen it selfe. To which effect Paul saith, Eph. 1.20. God raised Christ from the dead, and put him at his right hand in the heauenly places. And in the Epistle to the Hebrewes it is saide, Heb. 1.3. He sitteth at the right hand of the maiestie in highest places. This point wel considered, serues to discouer the ouersight of sundry Diuines, which holde and teach, that to sit at the right hand of God, is to bee euery where in all places, and not in heauen onely, that they might hereby lay a foundation for the vbiquity of Christs manhood: which neuertheless the heauens must contain till the time that all things be restored. The second circumstance, is the time when Christ beganne to sit at the right hand of God the father, which is to be gathered by the order of the articles. For first Christ died and was buried, then he rose againe and ascended into heauen, and after his ascension he is saide to sit at the right hand of his father. This order is also noted vnto vs by Saint Paul: Who shall condemne? (saith he) it is Christ which is Rom. 8.34 dead, yea or rather risen againe, who is also at the right hand of God. And Saint Marke saith, when Christ was risen againe he appeared to his disciples, and after he had Mar. 16.19 spoken vnto them he was receiued into heauē, and sate at the right hand of God. But it may be demanded, how this can stand with truth, that Christ should not begin to sit at the right hād of his father before the ascension, considering he is one God with the father, and therefore an absolute and soueraigne King from all eternity. Answ. As Christ is God or the Word of the father, he is coequall and coeternall with him in the regiment of his kingdome: and hath neither beginning, middle, or ending thereof; yet as Christ is God incarnate, & in one person God-man or Man-god, hee began after his ascension and not before, to sit at the right hand of his father: and as Act. 2.36. S. Peter saith, was made Lord, partly because as he was God, he did then manifest himselfe to be that which indeede he was before, namely God and Lord of heauen and earth; and partly, because as he was man, he receiued dominion of Lordship from the father, which he had not before; and thereby was euen in his manhood exalted to be king of heauen and earth: and in this sense Christ saith of himselfe, All power Mat. 28.19 is giuen to me in heauen and earth. The third circumstance is concerning the person, at whose right hand Christ sits, noted in the words of the article of God the Father Almighty; whereby is signified, that hee receiues all the honour, power, & glorie of his kingdome from his father: as he, that is set at the right hand of a prince, receiues the honour & authority which hee hath, from the prince. Nowe if it bee alleadged, that by this meanes Christ shall be inferiour to his Father, because hee which receiueth honour of another is inferiour to him of whome he receiueth it: the answer is, that in Christ we must consider his person and his office: In respect of his person as he is the eternal son of God he is equall to the father, and is not here said to sitte at his right hand: yet in respect of the office which he beares, namely as he is mediator, and as he is man, he is inferiour to the Father, and receiues his kingdome from him. As he is God, he is our king and head, & hath no head more then the father: as hee is mediatour, he is also our head, yet so as 1. Cor. 11. 3. hee is vnder the father as beeing his head. And wee must not thinke it strange that one and the same thing should bee both equall and inferiour to another, diuers respects considered.

Now in that Christs placing at the right hand of his father argues inferiority betweene the father & him, hence we learne that they are deceiued which from this article gather, that in the glorification of Christ there is a transfusion of the proprieties of the Godhead, as omnipotencie, omnipresence, &c. into his manhoode. For this is to abolish all inferioritie and to make an equalitie betweene the creature and the creatour.

And whereas againe the word Almighty is repeated, it is done vpon special reason: because Christ sitting at the right hand of God doth presuppose omnipotencie. For in vaine were all power in heauen and earth giuen to him, vnlesse he were omnipotent as the father to execute the same. And therefore the song of the Elders was on this manner, Worthy is the Lambe that Rev. 5.12. was killed to receiue power and riches, and wisdome, and strength, and honour, and glory, and praise.

The benefits which redound vnto vs by Christs sitting at the right hād of God are two, one concernes his priesthood, the other his kingly office. The benefit rising from his priesthood is his Intercession for vs: for this is one of the endes why Christ is now exalted in glorie, & sits at the right hand of his Father; namely to make request in the behalfe of all that come vnto him, as Paul saith, Christ is risen againe, and Rom.8.34 sitteth at the right hand of God, and maketh request for vs. Now that we may rightly vnderstād what his Intercession is, we are to consider these points. First to whome it is made: secondly, in what manner: thirdly, whether it be made by Christ alone or no: fourthly, what be the fruits and benefits thereof: fiftly, the duties whereunto we are moued thereby. For the first, Intercession is, to make suite, request, or intreatie in some ones behalfe to another: & this is done by Christ for vs vnto God, 1.Tim.2.5 as Paul saith, There is one God, and one mediatour betweene God and man, which is the man Christ Iesus. Here at the very first ariseth a difficultie: for in euery intercession there be three parties: the person offended; the person offending; the intercessour, distinct from them both. Now if Christ the sonne of God, make intercession to God for man, then he maketh intercession to himself, because he is true God, which cannot be: how then shall Christ be mediatour? Anſ. This point hath so troubled the church of Rome, that for the resoluing of it, they haue deuised an error, anouching that Christ is mediatour onely as he is man, not as he is God, which is vntrue. For as both natures doth concurre in the worke of satisfaction, so likewise they doe both concurre in the worke of intercession: and therefore a more meete and conuenient answere is this: Christ Iesus God-man in both natures, is directly our mediatour to the first person the father, as

1.Ioh.2.1 S. Iohn saith, If any man sinne, wee haue an aduocate with the father, Iesus Christ the iust. And thus we haue three persons in the worke of intercession really distinguished. The partie offended is God the Father; the partie offending is man; & thirdly the intercessour distinct from them both is Christ the second person in Trinitie. For howsoeuer in Godhead he and the Father be one, yet in person they are really distinguished, and he is as it were in the middle betweene the father & vs: for the Father is God and not man: we that beleeue in Christ are men not God: Christ himselfe both man and God. It may bee further replied that this answere will not stand, because not onely the father is offended, but also the sonne and the holy Ghost: and therefore there must be a mediatour to them also. Anſ. The intercession of Christ is directed to the father the first person immediatly: now the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost haue all one indiuisible essence, & by consequent one and the same will: whereupon the father being appeased by Christs intercession, the sonne and the holy Ghost are also appeased with him and in him. Thus then intercession is made to the whole Trinitie, but yet immediatly and directly to the first person, and in him to the rest.

The second point to be considered, is the manner of his intercession vnto his father. We must not imagine, that Christ now in heauen kneels down on his knees, and vtters words, and puts vp a supplication for all the faithfull to God the father: for that is not beseeming the maiestie of him that sits at the right hand of God. But the manner of his intercession is thus to be conceiued. When one is to speake to an earthly prince in the behalfe of an other; first of all he must come into the presence of the king, and secondly make his request: and both these, Christ performeth for vs vnto God. For the first, after his ascension he entred into heauen, where he did present vnto his father, first of all his owne person in two natures, and secondly the inualuable merits of his death and passiō, in which he was well pleased. And we must further vnderstand, that as on the crosse he stood in our roome, so in heauen he now appeares as a publike person in our stead, representing all the elect that shal beleeue in him, as the holy Ghost Heb.9.24 saith, Christ Iesus ascended vp into heauen to appeare in the sight of God for vs. And for the second, Christ makes request for vs in that he willeth according to both his natures, and desireth as he is man, that the father would accept his satisfaction in the behalfe of all that are giuē vnto him. And that he makes request on this manner, I proue it thus. Looke what was his request in our behalfe when he was here vpon earth, the same for substance it continues still in heauen: but here on earth the substance of his request was that he willed and desired that his father would be well pleased with vs for his merits, as appeares by his prayer in S. Iohn, Father, I will that Cap.17.24 those which thou hast giuen me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glorie which thou hast giuen me: for thou louedst me before the foundation of the world. Therfore he ſtill continues to make requeſt for vs by willing and deſiring that his Father would accept his merits in our behalfe. If it bee alleadged that Chriſt in this ſolemne prayer vſed ſpeech and proſtration of his bodie: the anſwere is, that theſe actions were no eſſentiall parts of his prayer. The proſtrating of his bodie ſerued onely as a token of ſubmiſſiō to God, as Chriſt was a creature: and the ſpeech which he vſed, ſerued onely to vtter and expreſſe his requeſt. Furthermore, a difference here muſt be marked betweene Chriſts paſſion & his interceſsion. The paſsion ſerues for the working and cauſing of a ſatisfaction to Gods iuſtice for vs; and it is, as it were, the tempering of the plaiſter: the interceſsion goes further: for it applies the ſatisfaction made, and laies the ſalue to the very ſore. And therefore Chriſt makes requeſt not onely for the elect generally, but for particular men, as Paul, Iames, Iohn, and that particularly, as he teſtifieth of himſelf ſaying, I haue prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith faile not. If any ſhall ſay, that Chriſts willing and deſiring of a thing can not bee a requeſt or interceſsion, the anſwere is, that in vertue and efficacie it counteruailes all the prayers in the world. For whatſoeuer Chriſt willeth, the ſame alſo the Father being well pleaſed with him, willeth; and therefore whatſoeuer Chriſt as a mediator willeth for vs at the hands of his Father, in effect or ſubſtance is a requeſt or prayer.

The third point is, that Chriſt alone & none with him makes interceſsion for vs. And this I proove by induction of particulars. Firſt of all this office appertaines not to the angels: they are indeede miniſtring ſpirits for the good of Gods choſen: they reioyce when a ſinner is conuerted; & when he dieth, they are ready to carie his ſoule into Abrahams boſome: & God otherwhiles vſeth them as meſſengers to Luke 1.13 reueale his will: thus the Angell Gabriel brings a meſſage to Zacharie the Prieſt, that God had heard his praier: but it is not once ſaide in all the Scriptures, that they make interceſsion to God for vs. As for the Saints departed, they can not make interceſsion for vs, becauſe they know not our particular eſtates here on earth, neither can they heare our requeſts. And therfore if we ſhould pray to them to pray for vs, we ſhould ſubſtitute them into the roome of God, becauſe we aſcribe that to them which is proper to him, namely, the ſearching of the heart, and the knowledge of all things done vpon earth; though withal we ſhould ſay, that they doe this not by themſelues but of God. As for the faithfull here on earth, indeede they haue warrant, yea commandement to pray one for another: yet can they not make interceſsion for vs. For firſt, he that makes interceſsion muſt bring ſomething of his owne that may be of value & price with God to procure the grant of his requeſt: ſecondly, he muſt doe it in his own name: but the faithfull on earth make requeſt to God one for another not in their owne names, nor for their own merits, but in the name & for the merits of Chriſt. It is a prerogatiue belōging to Chriſt alone to make a requeſt in his owne name, & for his owne merits, we therefore cōclude that the worke of interceſsion is the ſole worke of Chriſt, God & man, not belonging to any creature beſide in heauen or in earth. And whereas the Papiſts can not content themſelues with his interceſsion alone, as being moſt ſufficient: it argues plainly, that they doubt either of his power or of his will: whereupon their prayers turne to ſinne. Iam.1.6.

The fruits and benefits of Chriſts interceſsion are theſe. Firſt by meanes of it we are aſſured, that thoſe which are repentant ſinners ſhall ſtand and appeare righteous before God for euer: at what time ſoeuer Chriſt, being now in heauen, and there preſenting himſelfe and his merits before his father, ſhewes himſelfe deſirous and willing, and they whoſoeuer they are beeing ſinners, ſhould be accepted of God for the ſame euen then immediatly at that very inſtant this his wil is done and they are accepted as righteous before God indeed. When a man lookes vpon things directly through the aire, they appeare in their proper formes and colours as they are: but if they be looked vpon through a greene glaſſe, they all appeare greene: ſo likewiſe if God behold vs as wee are in our ſelues, we appeare as vile and damnable ſinners: but if he looke vpon vs as we are preſented before his throne in heauen, in the perſon of our Mediatour Chriſt Ieſus, willing that we ſhould bee approued for his merits: then we appeare without all ſpot and wrinkle before him. And this is the vſe Paul makes hereof: It is God (ſaith he) that iuſtifieth: and the reaſon is rende- Rom.8.34 red: for it is Chriſt that is dead, yea or rather, which is riſen againe, who is alſo at the right hand of God, and makes requeſt for vs.

Secondly

Secondly Christs interceſsion ſerues to preſerue all repentant ſinners in the eſtate of grace: that being once iuſtified and ſanctified, they may ſo continue to the ende. For when any ſeruant of God is ouertaken by the corruption of his owne nature, and falls into any particular ſinne, thē Christs interceſsion is made as a bleſſed hand to apply the ſalue of his death to that particular ſore. For he continually appeares before God, and ſhewes himſelfe to be willing that God the Father ſhould accept his one onely ſacrifice for the daily and particular ſinnes of this or that particular man: and this is done, that a man being iuſtified before God may not fall away quite from grace, but for euery particular ſinne may be humbled and receiue pardon. If this were not ſo, our eſtate ſhould be moſt miſerable, conſidering that for euery ſinne committed by vs after our repentance, we deſerue to be caſt out of the fauour of God.

Thirdly Christs interceſsion ſerueth to make our good works acceptable to God. For euen in the beſt workes that a man can do, there are two wants. Firſt they are good onely in part: ſecondly they are mingled with ſinne. For as a man is partly ſpirit or grace, and partly fleſh; ſo are his workes partly gratious & partly fleſhly. And becauſe grace is onely begun in this life, therfore all the works of grace in this life are ſinnefull and imperfect. Now by Christs interceſsiō his ſatisfaction is applyed to our perſons, and by conſequent the defect of our works is couered and remooued, and they are approoued of God the Father. In a viſion Saint Iohn ſaw an angel ſtāding before the altar with a golden cenſer full of ſweet odours to offer vp with the prayers of the Saints vpon the ſame. And this ſignifies, that Christ preſents our works before the throne of God, and by his interceſsiō ſanctifies them, that they may be acceptable to God. And, therefore we muſt remember that when we doe any thing that is accepted of God, it is not for our ſakes, but by reaſon of the value and vigour of Christs his merit.

Reuel 8.3.

Fourthly the interceſsion of Christ made in heauen, breedeth and cauſeth in the hearts of men vpon earth that beleeue another interceſsion of the ſpirit. as Paul ſaith, He giueth vs his ſpirit, which helpeth our infirmities and maketh requeſts for vs with ſignes which cannot be expreſſed, but he which ſearcheth the heart knoweth what is the meaning of the ſpirit, for he maketh requeſt for the Saints according to the will of God. Now the ſpirit is ſaid to make requeſt, in that it ſtirres & mooues euery contrite heart to pray with ſighes and groanes vnſpeakable to God for things needfull: and this grace is a fruit deriued from the interceſsion of Christ in heauē by the operation of the ſpirit. For as the ſunne though the bodie of it abide in the heauens, yet the beames of it deſcend to vs that are on the earth. So the interceſsion of Christ made in heauē is tyed as it were to his perſon alone, yet the grones and deſires of the touched heart, as the beames thereof, are here on earth among the faithfull. And therefore if wee deſire to know whether Christ make interceſsion for vs or no, we neede not to aſcend vp into the heauens to learne the trueth: but we muſt deſcend into our owne hearts and looke whether Christ haue giuen vs his ſpirit, which makes vs cry vnto God and make requeſt to him with grones and ſighs that can not be expreſſed: and if we finde this in our hearts, it is an euident and infallible ſigne that Christ continually makes interceſsion for vs in heauen. Hee that would know whether the ſunne ſhine in the firmament, muſt not clime vp into the clouds to look, but ſearch for the beames thereof vpon the earth: which whē he ſees, he may conclude, that the ſunne ſhines in the firmament. And if we would know whether Chirſt in heauen makes interceſsion for vs, let vs ranſacke our owne conſciences, and there make ſearch whether we feele the ſpirit of Christ crying in vs, Abba, Father. As for thoſe that neuer feele this worke of Gods ſpirit in them, their caſe is miſerable, whatſoeuer they be. For Christ as yet makes no interceſsion for them. cōſidering theſe two alwayes goe togither; his interceſsion in heauen, and the worke of his ſpirit in the hearts of men, mouing them to bewaile their owne ſinnes with ſighes and grones that can not be expreſſed, and to crie and to pray vnto God for grace: & therefore all ſuch, whether they be yong or old, that neuer could pray but mumble vp a few words for faſhions ſake, can not aſſure thēſelues to haue any part in Christs interceſsion in heauen.

Rom. 8.26

The duties to be learned hence are theſe Firſt, whereas Christ makes interceſsion for vs, it teacheth all men to be moſt carefull to loue and like this bleſſed Mediator, and to be readie & willing to become his ſerſeruants and diſciples, and that not for forme and faſhion ſake onely, but in all truth and ſincerity of heart. For he aſcended to heauen, & there ſits at the right hād of his father to make requeſt for vs, that we might be deliuered frō hel, & come to eternall life. Wicked Haman procured letters from King Ahaſhueroſh, for the de-ſtruction of all the Iewes, men, women, and children in his dominions: this done, Heſter the Queene makes requeſt to the king that her people might be ſaued, and the letters of Haman reuoked; ſhe obtained her requeſt and freedome was giuen, and contrary letters of ioyfull deliuerance were ſent in poſt haſt to all prouinces where the Iewes were, Whereupon aroſe a wonderfull ioy and gladneſſe among the Iewes, and it is ſaid, that therepon many of the people of the land became Iewes. Well Heſt.8.17. nowe behold a greater matter among vs then this: for there is the hand writing of condemnation, the law; and therein the ſentence of a double death, of body and ſoule, and Satan as wicked Haman accuſeth vs, and ſeekes by all meanes our condemnatiō: but yet behold not any earthly Heſter, but Chriſt Ieſus the ſonne of God is come downe from heauen, and hath taken away his hand writing of condemnation, and cancelled it vpon the croſſe, and is now aſcended into heauen, & there ſits at the right hād of his father, & makes requeſt for vs: and in him his father is well pleaſed, and yeeldeth to his requeſt in our behalfe. Now then what muſt wee doe in this caſe? Surely, looke as the Perſians became Iews when they heard of their ſafetie, ſo we in life and conuerſation muſt become Chriſtians, turne to Chriſt, imbrace his doctrine, and practiſe the ſame vnfainedly. And we muſt not cōtent our ſelues with a formall profeſſion of religion, but ſearch our owne hearts, and flie vnto Chriſt for the pardon of our ſinnes, and that earneſtly as for life and death as the theefe doth at the barre, when the iudge is giuing ſentence againſt him. When wee ſhall thus humble our ſelues, then Chriſt Ieſus that ſits at the right hand of God will plead our cauſe, and bee our atturney vnto his father, and his father againe will accept of his requeſt in our behalfe. Then ſhall we of Perſians become Iewes, and of the children of this world become the ſonnes of God. Secondly, when we pray to god, we muſt not do as the blind world doth, as it were, ruſh vpon God in praying to him without conſideration had to the Mediatour betweene vs and him, but we alwaies muſt direct our prayers to God in the name of Chriſt, for he is aduanced to power and glory in heauen, that he might be a fit patrone for vs who might preferre and preſent our prayers to God the father, Ioh.16.26 that thereby they might be accepted and we might obtaine our requeſt. So like-wiſe we muſt giue thankes to God in the name of Chriſt: for in him and for his ſake

God doth beſtow on vs his bleſſings.

Thus much of Chriſts interceſſion: the other benefit which concernes Chriſts kingly office is, that he ſits at the right hād of his father for the adminiſtration of that ſpeciall kingdome which is committed to him. I ſay ſpeciall, becauſe hee is our king not onely by right of creation gouerning all things created togither with the father and the holy Ghoſt, but alſo more ſpecially by the right of redemption in reſpect of another kingdome, not of this world, but eternall and ſpirituall reſpecting the very conſcience of man. In the adminiſtration whereof he hath abſolute power to command and forbidde, to condemne and abſolue, and therefore hath the keyes of heauen and hell to open and ſhutte:
which power no creature beſide no not the angels in heauen, can haue. For the better vnderſtanding of this which I ſay, we are to conſider, firſt the dealing of Chriſt toward his owne Church: ſecondly his dealing in reſpect of his enemies. And his dealing toward his owne Church ſtands in foure things. The firſt is the collecting or gathering of it: and this is a ſpeciall end of his ſitting at the right hand of his father. Chriſt ſaide to his Diſciples, I haue choſen you out of this world: and the ſame may truely be ſaide of all the Elect, that Chriſt in his good time will gather them all to himſelfe that they may be a peculiar people to God. And this action of his in collecting the Church, is nothing els but a tranſlation of thoſe whome hee hath ordained to life euerlaſting out of the kingdome of darknes, in which they haue ſerued ſinne and Satan into his own kingdome of grace, that they may be ruled and guided by him eternally. And this hee doth two waies: firſt by the preaching of the word, for it is a powerfull outward meanes, whereby he ſingleth and ſorteth his owne ſeruants from the blind and wicked world, as Paul ſaith, He gaue ſome to be Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, and ſome Eph.4.11.

Euangelists, and some Pastours and teachers, for the gathering togither of Saints. And hence we learne two things. The first, that euery minister of Gods worde, and euery one that intendeth to take vpon him that calling, must propound vnto himselfe principally this ende, to single out man from man, & gather out of this world such as belong to the Church of Christ: and as
Ier. 15. 19. Ieremie saith, to separate the precious from the vile. The second, that all those which will be good hearers of Gods word, must shew themselues so farre forth conformable vnto it, that it may gather them out of the world, & that it may worke a change in them, and make them the seruants of Christ: and if the preaching of the word doe not worke this good worke in our hearts, then the ende will be a separation from the presence of God. Christ when he came neere Hierusalem, and considered their rebellion wherby they refused to bee gathered vnto him, wept ouer it, and said,
Mat. 23. 37 O Ierusalem, Ierusalem, thou which stonest the Prophets, and killest them that are sent vnto thee, how oft would I haue gathered thy children togither as the henne gathereth her chickens vnder her wings, and thou wouldest not! And by this hee teacheth, that if the preaching of the worde turne not vs to Christ, it turnes to our destruction.

The other meanes of gathering the Church, and that more principall is, the inward operation, of the spirit, whereby the mind is inlightened, the heart is mollified, and the whole man is conuerted to God. And this ordinarily is ioyned with the ministery or preaching of the worde, as appeares by the example of Lydia. S.
Act. 16. Luke saith, God opened her heart to be attentiue to the doctrine of the Apostles. And by the example of Paul, when Christ saith, Act. 9. 6. Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? at this very speech he is conuerted, and said, Who art thou, Lord? what wilt thou that I do? And this is manifest also by experience. There is nothing in the world more contrary to the nature of man, then the preaching of the word: for it is the wisedome of God, to which the flesh is enimitie. Here then it may be demanded, how it can bee in force to turne any man to God. Answ. The worde preached is the scepter of Christs kingdome, which against the nature of man by the operation of the Holy Ghost ioyned therwith, doth bend & bow the heart, wil, and affections of man to the will of Christ.

The second worke of Christ is, after the Church is gathered, to guide it in the way to life euerlasting. He is the shepheard of his Church, which guideth his flocke in and out, and therefore Paul saith, They that are Christs, are guided by his spirit. And by
Rom. 8. 14. Esai the Lord saith, those his seruants which are turned from idolatrie, hee will Esa. 30. 21. guide in the way, and their eares shall heare a voice behind them, saying, This is the way, walke in it, when thou turnest to the right hand & to the left. Which voice is nothing els but the voice of the holy Ghost in the mouth of the ministers, directing them in the waies of God. The children of Israel were trauelling from Egypt to the land of Canaan full fourty yeares, whereas they might haue gone the iourney in fourty daies. Their way was through the wildernes of Arabia, their guides were a pillar of cloud by day, and a pillar of fire by night: the manner of their iourney was this: when the pillars mooued, they mooued; when the pillars stood still, they stood stil: and so long as the pillars either mooued or stood still, they likewise mooued or stood still. And by al this a further matter, namely the regiment of Christ ouer his Church, was signified. Euery one of vs are as passengers and trauailers, not to any earthly Canaan, but to the heauenly Ierusalem: and in this iourney we are to passe through the wild and desert wildernes of this world. our guide is Christ himselfe, figured by the pillar of fire and the cloud:
Esa. 4. 5. because by his word and spirit he sheweth vs how farre we may goe in euery action, and where we must stand, and he goes before vs as our guide to life euerlasting.

The third worke of Christ is, to exercise his Church vnto spirituall obedience by manifold troubles, crosses, temptations and afflictions in this world, as earthly kings vse to traine and exercise their subiects. When our Sauiour Christ was with his disciples in a shippe, there arose a great tempest vpon the sea, so as the shippe was almost couered with waues; but he was asleepe: and his disciples came and awooke
Mat. 8. 24. him, saying, Saue vs master, we perish. Behold here a liuely picture of the dealing of Christ with his seruants in this life. His manner is to place them vpon the sea of this world, and to raise vp against them bleake stormes & flaes of contrary winds by their enemies, the flesh, the deuill, the world. And further in the middest of all these daungers he for his owne part maketh keth as though he lay a-sleepe for a time, that he may the better make triall of their patience, faith, & obedience. And the ends for which he vseth this spirituall exercise are these. The first to make all his subiects to humble themselues, and as it were to go crooked and buckle vnder their offences committed against his maiestie in times past. Thus Iob after the Lord had long afflicted him, and laide his hand sore vpon him, saith, Behold I am vile: & againe, I abhorre my selfe and repent in dust and ashes. In the same manner we beeing his subiects and people, must looke to be exercised with temptations and afflictions which shal make vs bend and bow for our sinnes past, as the old man goeth crooked and doubles to the earth by reason of age. The second, is to preuent sinnes in the time to come. A father when he sees his child too bold and venterous about fire and water, takes it and holds it ouer the fire or ouer the water, as though he would burne or drowne it, whereas his purpose indeede is nothing els but to preuent danger in time to come. In like manner Christs subiects are bold to sinne by nature, and therefore to preuent a mischiefe he doth exercise them with affliction, and seemes for a season as though he would quite forsake his Church, but his meaning is onely to preuent offences in times to come. The third end is, to continue his subiects in obedience vnto his commandements: so the Lord saith, when he would bring his Church from idolatrie; Behold, I will stop thy way with thornes, & make an hedge, that shee shall not finde her pathes. The holy Ghost here borrowes a comparison from beasts, which going in the way, see greene pastures, and desire to enter in, and therefore go to the hedge, but feeling the sharpnes of the thornes dare not aduenture to goe in: So Gods people like vnto wilde beasts in respect of sinne, viewing the greene pastures of this world, which are the pleasures thereof, are greatly affected therewith: and if it were not for sharpnes of crosses & temptations, which are Gods spiritual hedge by which he keepeth them in, they would range out of the way, and rush into sinne, as the horse into the battel.

Iob. 39. 37 & 42. 6.

Osa. 2. 6.

The fourth and last worke of Christ in respect of his Church is, that he sits at the right hand of his father to defend the same against the rage of all enemies whatsoeuer they are: and this he doth two waies. First by giuing to his seruants sufficient strength to beare all the assaults of their enemies, the world, the flesh, and the deuill. For Paul saith, those to whome the Lord hath giuen the gift of faith, to them also he hath giuen this gift to suffer afflictions. And the same Apostle also praieth for the Colossians, that they may be strengthened with all might through his glorious power vnto all patience and long suffering with ioyfulnes. The euidence hereof we may most plainely see in the most constant deaths of the Martyrs of Christ, recorded both in the word of God, and in the Church histories. It is wonderful to see their courage and constancie. For at such times as they haue ben brought to execution, they refused to be bound or chained, willingly suffering most cruell torments, without shrinking or feare; such courage and strength the Lord gaue them to withstand the violent rage of all their aduersaries.

Phil. 1. 29.

Col. 1. 11.

Secondly, he defends his Church by limiting the power and rage of all enemies. And hence it is, that although the power of the Church of God on earth be weake and slender in it selfe, and contrariwise the power of the deuill exceeding great, yet can he not so much as touch the people of God. And he more preuailes by inward suggestions and temptations, then by outward violence. And if it were not that the power of Christ doth bridle his rage, there could be no aboad for the church of Christ in this world.

Thus we haue seene what are the works of Christ in gouerning his church: and we for our parts that professe our selues to be members thereof, must shew our selues to be so indeed, by an experience of these workes of his in our owne hearts. And we must suffer him to gather vs vnder his owne wing, and to guide vs by his worde and spirit, and we are to acquaint our selues with those spiritual exercises, wherby his good pleasure is to nurture vs to all obedience. Lastly, we must depend on his aide and protection in all estates. And seeing we in this land haue had peace & rest with the Gospel of Christ among vs along time, by Gods especial goodnesse, we must now after these daies of peace looke for daies of tribulation: we must not imagine that our ease and liberty will continue alwaies. For looke as the day and night doe one follow another; so likewise in the administration of the Church here vpon earth, Christ suffereth a continuall intercourse betweene peace and persecution. Thus he hath done from the beginning hitherto, and we may resolue our selues that so it will continue till the ende: and therefore it shall bee good for vs in these our daies of peace, to prepare our selues for troubles and afflictions: and when troubles come, we must still remember the fourth worke of Christ in the gouernment of his Church, namely that in all dangers he will defend vs against the rage of our enemies, as well by giuing vs power and strēgth to beare with patiēce & ioy whatsoeuer shal be laid vpō vs, as also bridle the rage of the world, the flesh, and the deuill, so as they shal not be able to exercise their power and malice to the full against vs.

Thus much of the dealing of Christ towards his owne Church and people. Now followeth the second point, namely his dealing toward his enemies; and here by enemies I vnderstand all creatures, but especially men, which as they are by nature enemies to Christ and his kingdome, so they persuere in the same enimity vnto the ende. Nowe his dealing towards them is, in his good time to worke their confusion, as he himselfe saith, Those mine enemies that would not that I should raigne ouer them, bring them hither and slay them before me. Luk. 19. 27. And Dauid saith, the Lord will bruise his enemies with a rodde of yron, & breake them in pieces like a potters vessell. Psal. 2. 9. and 110. 1. And againe, I will make thine enemies thy footestoole. As Iosuah dealt with the fiue Kings that were hid in the caue; he first makes a slaughter of their armies; then he bringes them forth and makes the people to set their feete on their neckes, and to hang them on fiue trees: So Christ deales with his enemies: hee treades them vnder his feete, and maketh a slaughter not so much of their bodies as of their soules. And this the Church of God findes to be true by experience, as well as it finds the loue of Christ towards it selfe. Now he confounds his enemies two waies. The first is by hardnes of heart, which ariseth when God withdraweth his grace from man, and leaueth him to himselfe, so as he goeth on forward from sinne to sinne, and neuer repenteth to the last gaspe. And we must esteeme of it as a most fearefull and terrible iudgement of God: for when the heart is possessed therewith, it becomes so flinty and rebellious that a man will neuer relent or turne to God. This is manifest in Pharao, for though God sent most grieuous plagues both vpon him and all the land of Egypt, yet would he not submit himselfe, saue onely for a fit, while the hand of God was vpon him: for after, he returned to the former obstinacy in which he continued till he was drowned in the sea. And this iudgement of God is the more fearefull, because when a man is in the middest of al his miserie, he feeles no misery. And as in some kinde of sicknes a man may die languishing; so where hardnes of heart raigns wholly and finally, a man may descend to the pit of hell triumphing and reioycing. And to come neare to our selues, it is to be feared least this iudgement of all iudgements be among vs in these our daies. For where is any turning to GOD by repentance? Still men go forward in sinne without remorse. We haue had the word preached among vs a long time, but it taketh no place in mens hearts. They are not softned with the hammer of Gods word: nay they are like the smiths stithy or anuill, which the more it is beat with the hammer the harder it is. But in the feare of God, let vs seeke to be changed, and take heede: the deceitfulnes of sinne is wonderfull. Let vs not be carried away with an ouerweening of our selues; a man may haue good gifts of God, as the gift of knowledge, the gift of propheſie, the gift of conceiuing a prayer (I say not of praying truly:) and hereupon thinke himselfe in good case; and yet for all this haue nothing but an impenitēt and flinty heart. For this cause it standeth euery man vpon to looke vnto it, least this iudgement of God take hold on him. And that we may auoide the same, we must labour for two things: I. to feele the heauy burden of our sinne, , and be touched in conscience for them, euen as we are troubled in our bodies with the aches & paines thereof: this is a token of grace. II. We must labour to feele in our soules the want of Christ: we say indeede that we feele it, but it is a very great matter to haue an heart that doth open it selfe, and as it were gape after Christ, as the dry and thirsty land where no water is. Though we haue knowledge and learning neuer so much, and many other gifts of God, yet if we haue not broken hearts that feele the burden of our sinnes, and the want of Christ, and that we stand in neede of euery drop of his blood for the washing away of all these our sinnes, our case is miserable. And the rather wee must preuent this hardnes of heart, because Christ Iesus in heauen heauen sits at the right hand of his father in full power and authority, to kill and confound all those that be his enemies, and will not submit themselues to beare his yoke.

The second way is, by finall desperation; I say, finall, because all kind of desperation is not euill. For when a man despaireth of himselfe and of his owne power in the matter of his saluation, it tends to his eternall comfort. But finall desperation is, when a man vtterly despaires of the pardon of his owne sinnes and of life euerlasting. Examples hereof wee haue in Saul that slue himselfe, and in Achitophel and Iudas, that hanged themselues. This sinne is caused thus: So many sinnes as a man committeth without repentance, so many most bloody wounds he giueth vnto his owne soule: and either in death or life God makes him feele the smart, and the huge waight of them all: whereby the soule sinkes downe into the gulfe of despaire without recouery. God said to Cain, If thou doe amisse, sinne lyeth at the doore. Where he vseth a borrowed speech from wild beasts, who so long as they are sleeping shrre not; but beeing awaked, they flie in a mans face and rend out his throat. In like manner the sins which thou committest, lie at the doore of thine heart. though thou feele them not: and if thou doe not preuent the danger by speedy repentance, God wil make thee to feele them once before thou die, and raise vp such terrours in thy conscience, that thou shalt thinke thy selfe to be in hell before thou art in hell: and therefore it is good for euery man to take heede how hee continues an enemie to Christ. The best course is to turne betime from our sinnes, and become the friends of Christ, that so we may escape these fearefull iudgments.

And whereas Christ in this manner gouernes all things in heauen and earth, wee are bound to performe vnto him three duties, reuerence, obedience, thankfulnes. For the first, Paul saith, God hath exalted him and giuen him a name aboue all names, that at the name of Iesus (which name, is his exaltation in heauen in full power & glorie) should euery knee bow. We dare not so much as speake of an earthly king vnreuerently: what reuerence then doe wee owe vnto Christ the king of heauen and earth? Dauids heart was touched in that he had cut off but the lap of Sauls garment, when he might haue slaine him, because hee was the Lords annointed: oh then, how much more ought our hearts to be touched, if we shall in the least measure dishonour Christ Iesus our Lord and king! Secondly, we are here taught to performe obedience to him, and to doe him all the homage we can. The master of the familie in all his lawfull commandements must be obeied: now the Church of Christ is a family, and we are members thereof: therefore we must yeeld obedience to him in al things: for all his commandements are iust. When Saul was chosen king ouer Israel, certain men which feared God, whose hearts God had touched, followed him to Gibea and brought him presents, but the wicked despised him: the same is much more to be verified in vs toward Christ our Lord. We must haue our hearts touched with desire to performe obedience vnto him: if not, we are men of Belial that despise him. If this obedience were put in practise, the Gospell would haue better successe in the hearts of the People, and the Lords Sabboth would be better kept, and men would beare greater loue both to God and to their neighbours then now they doe. The third dutie which we owe vnto him is thankfulnesse, for the endlesse care which he sheweth in the gouerning and preseruing of vs. When Dauid waxed old, and had made Salomon his sonne king in his stead, all the people shouted and cried, God saue king Salomon, God saue king Salomon, so as the earth rang againe. Shall the people of Israel thus reioyce at the crowning of Salomon, and shall not we much more reioyce when as Christ Iesus is placed in heauen at the right hand of his father, and hath the euerlasting scepter of his kingdome put into his hand? And we are to shew this thankfulnes vnto him by doing any thing in this world that may tend to his honour and glorie, though it be with the aduenture of our liues. When Dauid desired to drinke of the water of the wel of Bethlem three of his eighty men went and brake into the hoast of the Philistims, and brought him water. Thus they ventured their liues for Dauids sake: and shall not we much more willingly venture our liues to doe Christ seruice in token of thankfulnes for his continuall preseruing of vs?

Thus much of the highest degree of Christs exaltation in his kingdome. Now followeth the last point to bee beleeued concerning Christ in these wordes, From thence he shall come to iudge the quicke and the dead. And they containe a proofe or a particular declaration of the former article. For as on earth those that are set at the right hand of kings doe execute iustice in courts or assises for the maintenance of the state and peace of the kingdome: so Christ Iesus sitting at the right hand of his father, that is, being made soueraigne Lord of al things both in heauen and earth, is to hold a court or assise, in which he shall come to iudge both the quicke and the dead. Now in handling the last iudgement, we are to consider these points: I. whether there shall be a iudgement or not: II. the time of it: III. the signes thereof. IV. the manner of it: V. the vse which is to bee made thereof. Of these in order. For the first point, whether there shall be a iudgement or not? the question is needefull: for as S. Peter saith, There shall come in the last 2. Pet. 3. 3. daies mockers, which shall walke after their lusts, and say, Where is the promise of his comming? which daies are now. The answer to this question is set downe in this article, in which we professe that the comming of Christ to the last iudgement, is a point of religion specially to be held and auouched. The reasons to proone it, are principally two: first, the testimony of God himselfe in the bookes of the old and new testament, which affoard vnto vs plentiful proofes touching the last iudgement, so as hee which will but lightly read the same, shall not neede to doubt thereof. The second reason is taken from the iustice and goodnes of God, the properties whereof is, to punish wicked and vngodly men, and to honour and reward the godly: but in this world the godly man is most of all in misery, (for iudgement beginneth at Gods house) and the vngodly haue their hearts ease. Wicked Dives hath the world at will, but poore Lazarus is hunger-bitten, full of sores, and miserable euery way. This being so, it remaineth, that after this life there must needes be a iudgement and a second comming of Christ, when the godly must receiue fulnesse of ioy and glory, and the vngodly fulnes of woe and miserie. This second reason may stoppe the mouths of all gainsayers in the world whatsoeuer. But it may be obiected, that the whole world stands either of beleeuers or vnbeleeuers, and that there is no last iudgement for either of these: for the beleeuer, as Christ saith, hath euerlasting life, Ioh. 5. 24. and shall not come into iudgement: and the vnbeleeuer is condemned already, and therefore needeth no further iudgement. Ans. Where it is saide, he that beleeueth shall not come into iudgement, it must be vnderstood of the iudgement of condemnation, and not the iudgement of absolution: and he that beleeueth not is condemned already in effect & substance three waies: I. in the counsell of God, who did foresee and appoint his condemnation, as it is a punishment of sinne, and an execution of his iustice. II. in the word of God, where he hath his condemnation set down. III. he is condemned in his owne conscience: for euery vngodly mans conscience is a iudge vnto himselfe, which doth euery houre condemne him, and it is a fore-runner of the last iudgement. And notwithstãding all this, there may remaine a secõd iudgement, which is a manifestation and finishing of that which was begun in this world: and therefore the meaning of that place is this; he that beleeueth not is alreadie iudged in part, but so as the full manifestation therof, shal be at the second comming of Christ. Ioh. 3. 18.

The second circumstance, is the time of his iudgement: in handling whereof first let vs see what is the iudgement of men, secondly what is the truth. For the first, two opinions touching this time take place. The first is, that the second comming of Christ shal be about sixe thousand yeares from the beginning of the world, & for the Elects sake some of these daies must be shortened: and now since the beginning of the world, are passed fiue thousand and almost sixe hundred yeares, so as there remaines but some foure hundred. The grounds of this opinion are these. First the testimony of Elias, Two thousand yeares before the law: two thousand yeares vnder the law: & two thousand yeares vnder Christ. And for the Elects sake some of these yeares shall be shortned. Ans. This was not the sentẽce of Elias the Thisbite, but of another Elias which was a Iewe, no prophet. And whereas he saith: two thousand yeares before the law: and two thousand yeares vnder the law, he saieth. From the giuing of the law to the cõming of Christ, was about one thousand and fiue hundred yeares: and from the law to the creation about two thousand. Nowe if Elias can not set downe a iust number for the time past, which a meane man may doe, what shall we thinke that he can doe for the time to come? And if he deceiue vs in that which is more easie to finde, howe shal we trust him in things that be harder? The second reason is this: Howe long God was in creating the world, so long he shall be in gouerning the same; but he was sixe dayes in creating the worlde, and in the seauenth he rested, and so proportionally he shall be sixe thousand yeares in gouerning the world; euery day answering to a thousand years, as Peter saith: A thousand yeares are but as one day with God, and then shall the ende be. Ans. This reason likewise hath no ground in Gods word: as for that place of Peter, the meaning is, that innumerable yeares are but as a short time with God: and we may as well say, two thousand or tenne thousand yeares are but as one day with God. For Peter meant not to speake any thing distinctly of a thousand yeares, but of a long time. Thirdly it is alleadged, that within sixe thousand yeares from the creation of the worlde, shall appeare in the heauens strange coniunctions, and positions of the starres, which signifie nothing els but the subuersion of the state of the world: nay, some haue noted that the ende thereof should haue bin in the yeare of our Lord, a thousand fiue hundred eightie eight: their writings are manifest: but we find by experience that this opinion is false and friuolous, and their groundes be as friuolous. For no man can gather by the ordinarie course of the heauens, the extraordinarie change of the whole world.

A certen number put for an vncertein.

The second opinion is, that the ende of the world shall be three yeares & a halfe after the reuealing of Antichrist. And it is gathered out of places in Daniel and the Reuelation abused. Where a time and halfe a time signifie not three yeares and a halfe, but a short time. And therefore to take the words properly, is farre from the meaning of the holy Ghost. For marke, if the ende shall be three yeares and a halfe after the reuealing of Antichrist, then may any man know before hād the particular moneth wherein the ende of the worlde should be, which is not possible.

Now the truth which may be auouched against al is this, that no man can know or set downe or coniecture the day, the weeke, the month, the yeare, or the age, wherein the second comming of Christ and the last day of iudgement shall be. For Christ himselfe saith, Of that day and houre knoweth no man, no not the angels in heauen but God onely: nay Christ himselfe as he is man knew it not: And when the disciples asked Christ at his ascension, whether hee would restore the kingdome vnto Israel, he answered, It is not for you to know the times and seasons, which the father hath put in his owne power. And Paul saith, Of the times and seasons, brethren, you haue not need that I write vnto you. For you your selues know perfectly that the day of the Lord shall come, euen as a theefe in the night. Nowe wee knowe that a man that keepeth his house, can not coniecture or imagine when a theefe will come: and therefore no man can set downe the particular time or age, when Christ shall come to iudgement. This must we hold steadfastly, and if we read the contrarie in the writings of men, we are not to beleeue their sayings, but account of them as the deuices of men, which haue no ground in Gods word.

1. Thes. 5. 2.

To come to the third point, namely the signes of the last iudgement, they are of two sorts: some go before the comming of Christ, and some are ioyned with it. The signes that goe before, are in number seauen, recorded distinctly by the holy Ghost, The first, is the preaching of the Gospell through the whole world. So our Sauiour Christ saieth, This Gospell of the kingdome must be preached through the whole world for a witnesse vnto all nations, and then shall the ende come. Which place must thus bee vnderstood; not that the Gospell must bee preached to the whole world at any one time, for that (as I take it) was neuer yet seene, neither shall be, but that it shal be published distinctly and successiuely at seuerall times: and thus vnderstanding the wordes of Christ, if wee consider the time since the Apostles daies we shall finde this to be true, that the Gospell hath bin preached to all the world, & therefore this first signe of Christs comming is alreadie past and accomplished.

Math. 24. 14.

The second signe of his comming, is the reuealing of Antichrist, as Paul saith, The day of Christ shall not come before there be a departure first, and that man of sinne be disclosed, euen the sonne of perdition, which is Antichrist. Concerning this signe, in the yeare of our Lord, 602. Gregorie the eight Pope of Rome, auouched this solemnly as a manifest truth, that whosoeuer did take to himselfe the name of vniuersall bishop, the same was Antichrist. Nowe 5. yeares after, Boniface succeeding him, was by Phocas the Emperour intituled Vniuersal uerſall Biſhoppe, paſtour of the Catholike Church in the yeare of our Lord, 607. and of all Popes he was the firſt known Antichriſt, and ſince him all his ſucceſſours haue taken vnto them the ſame title of Vniuerſall and Catholike Biſhop, whereby it doth plainely appeare, that at Rome hath been and is the Antichriſt. And this ſigne is alſo paſt.

2. Thes. 2. 3.

The third is, a generall departing of moſt men from the faith. For it is ſaid in the place before named, Let no man deceiue you: for the day of Chriſt ſhal not come, except there be a departing firſt. General departure hath beene in former ages. When Arius ſpread his hereſie, it tooke ſuch place that the whole world almoſt became an Ariã. And during the ſpace of 900. years from the time of Boniface, the Popiſh hereſie ſpread it ſelfe ouer the whole earth, & the faithfull ſeruants of God were but as an handfull of wheate in a mountaine of chaffe, which can ſcarſe be diſcerned. This ſigne is in part alreadie paſt, neuertheleſſe it ſhall continue to the ende, becauſe men ſhall continually depart from the faith. And the nearer the ende of the worlde is, the more Satan rageth and ſeekes to bring men into his kingdome. Therfore it ſtandeth vs in hand to labour for the knowledge of true religion, and hauing learned it, moſt heartely to loue the ſame.

2. Theſ. 2. 3.

The fourth ſigne is, a general corruption in manners. This point the Apoſtle ſets downe at large, ſaying, Toward the latter dayes ſhal come perilous times, wherin mẽ ſhall be louers of themſelues, couetous, boaſters, proud, curſed ſpeakers, diſobedient to parents, vnthankefull, vnholy, & without naturall affection, truce-breakers, falſe accuſers, intemperate, fierce, deſpiſers of thẽ which are good, traytours, headie, high minded, louers of pleaſures more then louers of God, &c. This generall corruptiõ in the manners of men is noted by our Sauiour Chriſt, when hee ſaith, When he commeth he ſhall ſcarſe finde faith vpon the earth. This ſigne hath bin in former ages, and is no doubt at this day in the world. For it is hard to find a man that walketh iuſtly, ſoberly, and faithfully, doing the duties of his calling to God and man.

2. Tim. 3. 1

The fifth ſigne of Chriſts comming ſtands in terrible and greiuous calamities. For Chriſts diſciples asking him a ſigne of his comming, and of the ende of the world, he ſaith, There ſhall be warres and rumours of warres, nation ſhall riſe againſt nation, and realme againſt realme: and there ſhall be peſtilence and famine & earthquakes in diuers places, and men ſhall be at their wits endes. Theſe haue beene in former ages. In the firſt three hundred yeares of Chriſt were ten moſt fearefull perſecutions: and ſince in Europe the church of god hath bin wonderfully perſecuted by the Antichriſt of Rome in the hundred yeares laſt paſt.

Matth. 24. 6, 28.

The ſixt ſigne is, an exceeding deadnes of heart; ſo as neither iudgements from heauen, nor the preaching of the word ſhall mooue the hearts of men. So Chriſt ſaith, It ſhall be in the comming of the ſon of man, as it was in the dayes of Noe, and in the daies of Sodome: They knew nothing till the flood came, and fire from heauen deſtroyed them all. This ſigne vndoubtedly is manifeſt in theſe our dayes, howeſoeuer it hath bin alſo in former times. For where are any almoſt that are mooued with gods iudgements, or touched at the preaching of the word? nay rather men harden their hearts, and become ſecure and careleſſe. The ſmal fruit that the word of God bringeth foorth in the liues of men, ſhewes this to be moſt true.

Luke 17. 26.

The ſeauenth and laſt ſigne, ſet downe by the Apoſtle Paul is, that there ſhall be a calling of the Iewes before the Lorde come to iudgement: but of the time when this calling ſhall be, of the manner how, or the number of them that ſhal be called, there is no mention made in the worde of God. Nowe it is likely that this ſigne is yet to come.

Rom. 11. 25.

Theſe are the ſignes that go before the comming of Chriſt, all which are almoſt paſt, and therefore the ende can not be far off. Nowe followes the ſigne that is ioyned with the cõming of Chriſt, called the ſigne of the ſonne of man. What this ſigne is, we find not in the Scriptures. Some thinke it to be the ſigne of the croſſe: but that is friuolous: ſome, the glory and maieſtie of Chriſt, which ſhall bee made manifeſt in his appearance: which ſeemes to be otherwiſe by the very wordes of Chriſt, Then (ſaith he) ſhall appeare the ſigne of the ſon of mã, &c. & thẽ they ſhal ſee him in the clouds of heauen with power and great glorie: where he diſtinguiſheth the one from the other. But I rather conieture it to be the burning of heauen and earth with fire, at the very inſtant of Chriſts comming, mentioned by Peter. We muſt not here diſpute whence this fire ſhall come, or how it ſhall be kindled, for that the word of God hath concealed: & where God hath no mouth to ſpeake, there we muſt not haue an eare to heare.

Matth. 24. 30.

The vſes to bee made hereof, are theſe. When S. Peter had ſet downe the change that ſhall be at the comming of Chriſt, & that heauen & earth muſt be purged with fire, he makes this vſe thereof. Seeing all things muſt be diſſolued, what manner of men ought we to be in holy conuerſation and godlineſſe? and the reaſon is good. For if heauen and earth muſt be chaunged, and purged at Chriſts comming, then much more ought we to be chaunged, and to put off the old man of ſinne, & to become newe creatures created after the image of God in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe. If the brute creatures muſt be renued by fire, then much more are we to labour that the heat of Gods ſpirit may burne vp ſinne, and corruption in vs, & ſo change vs that we may be ready for him againſt his comming: els heauen and earth it ſelfe ſhall ſtand in iudgement againſt vs to our condemnation. Secondly, the conſideration of this, that the world ſhall be conſumed with fire, teacheth vs moderation and ſobrietie in the vſe of Gods creatures, as in coſtly buildings, gorgeous attire, and ſuch like. What madnes is this to beſtow all that we haue, on ſuch thinges, as at the day of iudgement ſhall be conſumed with fire? For looke whatſoeuer abuſe ſhall come to Gods creatures by our folly, the ſame ſhall then be abolished. Thirdly we muſt conſider that the cauſe why heauen and earth muſt be conſumed with fire, is mans ſin, by means whereof, they are made ſubiect to vanity & corruptiõ. Here then we haue iuſt occaſion to acknowledge the greatnes & wretchednes of our ſinnes. If any of vs had but ſeene the Iewes leproſie, it would haue made vs to wonder: for the contagion therof did infect not onely the whole man but his garments alſo that were about him, and ſometime the walls of his houſe: but howſoeuer wee cannot ſee that leproſie among vs, yet me may ſee a worſe. For the leproſie of our ſinnes doth not onely infect our garments, and the things about vs with our bodies: but euen the high heauens & the earth are ſtained with the contagion thereof, and are made ſubiect to vanitie and corruption: yea by ſinne in vs the moſt glorious creatures in them, as the Sunne, Moone, and ſtarres, are become ſubiect to vanity. Oh then, how wretched is the heart of man, that makes no bones of ſinne, which is the moſt noiſome thing in all the world, the ſtinke whereof hath infected both heauen and earth! If we could conſider this, we would not bee ſo ſlake in humbling our ſelues for the ſame as we are. We can not abide to looke on a poore lazar full of blanes and ſores: but if we could ſee our ſins in their right colours, they would make vs ſeeme vnto our ſelues tenne thouſand times more ougly then any lazar man can be: the contagion thereof is ſo great and noyſome, that the very heauens which are many thouſand miles diſtant from vs, are infected therewith. Yet here we are to knowe, that this fire ſhall not conſume the ſubſtance of heauen and earth, but onely change the quality, and aboliſh the corruption which our ſinnes haue brought vpon them. 2. Pet. 3. 11

The fourth point to be conſidered, is the manner of the laſt iudgement, in which we may obſerue two things: I. who ſhall be iudge: II. the proceeding of this iudge. The firſt is expreſſed in this article; From thence he ſhall come to iudge. Hee that is Chriſt Ieſus the ſecond perſon in Trinity. For the father hath committed all iudgement vnto him. It is indeede an action common to all the three perſons in trinity, but yet the execution thereof appertaines vnto the ſonne. The father indeede doth iudge the world but yet by the ſonne. But ſome may obiect, that the Apoſtles ſhall ſit on twelue thrones and iudge the twelue tribes of Iſrael. And S. Paul ſaith. The Saints ſhall iudge the world. Howe then is this true, that Chriſt is the only iudge of the world? Anſ. The authority of iudgement and giuing ſentence at the laſt day is proper to Chriſt alone, and doth not belong either to the Apoſtles or to the Saints: and they ſhall iudge at the laſt day onely as witneſſes and approuers of Chriſts iudgement. At the great day of aſſiſe beſide the iudge, the iuſtices on the bench are alſo in a maner iudges, not that they giue ſentence, but becauſe by their preſence they approue and witneſſe the equity of the ſentence of the iudge: ſo the definitiue ſentence doth belong to Chriſt: and the Apoſtles and Saints doe nothing but approue, and beeing preſent giue aſſent to his righteous ſentence. Mat. 19. 28 1. Cor. 6. 2.

The whole proceeding of the laſt iudgement may bee reduced to ſeauen points or heads. The firſt is the comming of the iudge in the cloudes. Here at the firſt may be demanded, why Chriſt holdes the laſt iudgement rather on earth thē in heauen? Anſw. He doeth it for two cauſes. One, the creature to be iudged hath ſinned here vpon earth: and he proceedes after the manner of earthly iudges, who holde their ſeſſions and aſſiſes there where treſpaſſes are commonly committed. The ſecond, becauſe the deuil and his angels are to be iudged, & it is a part of their puniſhment to be caſt out of heauen. For no vncleane thing may come into this heauenly Ieruſalem, and therfore they now remaine in the lower parts of the world, and there muſt be iudged. Furthermore, the ſecond comming of Chriſt is ſudden, as the comming of a theefe in the night. He wil come when the worlde thinketh not of him, as the ſnare doth on the bird. The conſideration whereof muſt teach vs the ſame duties which our Sauiour Chriſt taught the men of his time. Firſt he teacheth them what they muſt not doe: for he knowing al things knew alſo the diſpoſition of mās heart, and therefore he ſaith, Take heede to your ſelues, leaſt at any time your hearts be oppreſſed with ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, & the cares of this life, leaſt that day come vpon you vnawares. For theſe ſinnes benumme the heart, and ſteale away all grace. This exhortatiō in theſe our daies is moſt needfull. For mens hearts are like the ſmithes ſtithie, the more they are beaten with the hammer of Gods worde, the harder they are. Secondly he teacheth them what they muſt doe: Watch therefore (ſaith he) and pray continually: that ye may be counted worthy to eſcape all theſe things that ſhall come to paſſe, and that ye may ſtand before the ſon of man. But you will ſay: how may we be found worthie to ſtand before Chriſt at that day? Anſ. Doe but this one thing: for your liues paſt bee humbled before God, and come vnto him by true, heartie, and vnfained repentance, be changed and become newe creatures: pray vnto him earneſtly for the pardon of your ſinnes in Chriſt, and pray continually that GOD will turne your hearts from your old ſins euery day more and more: and then come the laſt iudgement when it will, ye ſhall be found worthy to ſtand before Chriſt at his comming. The repentant ſinner is he, that ſhall finde fauour in the ſight of God at that daie. The conſideration hereof may mooue vs to change our liues. Thoſe which were neuer yet humbled for their ſinnes, let them now beginne: and thoſe which haue alreadie begune, let them goe forward and continue. But the deuill will crie in the hearts of ſome mē, that this exhortation is as yet needleſſe: for the day of iudgement is not neere, becauſe all the ſignes are not yet paſſed. Anſ. Suppoſe the day of iugement be farre off, yet the day of thy death cannot be ſo, for the common ſaying is true, to day a man, to morrowe none. Nowe looke as death leaueth thee, ſo ſhall the day of iudgment finde thee. Impenitent Caine died long ſince, & yet the day of iudgement when it commeth, ſhall finde him impenitent ſtill. The ſame thing may be ſaid of Saul, Achitophel, and Iudas. They died deſperately & impenitent, & the Lord ſhall find them ſo at his comming. So will it be with thee, whatſoeuer thou art that repenteſt not. Death may come vpon thee, the next day or the next houre, therfore watch & pray. Prepare thy ſelfe againſt the day of death, that at the day of iudgement thou maieſt be found worthy to obtaine fauour in the ſight of the Lord. Securitie doeth ouerwhelme the world; but let vs for our parts learne to prepare our ſelues daily: for if the daie of death doe leaue thee vnworthy, then the Lord Ieſus at his comming ſhall finde thee vnworthy: and the deuill ſhal ſtand before thee and accuſe thee, thy conſcience ſhall condemne thee, and hell ſhall be readie to ſwallowe thee vp. If this admonition take no place in thy heart, then at the day of iudgement it ſhall ſtand againſt thee, and be a bill of inditement to thy further condemnation.

Luk. 21. 35

The ſecōd point followeth, that Chriſt after that he is come in the cloudes ſhall ſitte in a throne of glorie, as the ſoueraigne iudge of heauen and earth, after the manner of earthly kings, who when they will ſhewe themſelues vnto their ſubiects in maieſtie, power, and glorie, vſe to aſcend into the thrones of their kingdomes, and there to ſhewe themſelues and appeare in ſtate vnto all the people. Nowe what this throne is, and how Chriſt ſits in the ſame, the ſcripture hath not reuealed, and therefore I will not ſtand to ſearch. Yet here muſt we further marke, that this appearance of his in endleſſe glorie and maieſty ſhall be moſt terrible and dreadfull to the vngodly, & therefore in Daniel his throne is ſaid to be like a flame of fire, and at the very ſight thereof men ſhall deſire the mountaines to fall vpon them, and the hils to couer them.

Mat. 25. 31.

Dan. 7.

The

The third point, is the citing of all men and of the angels before his maiestie in that day, there to answere for themselues. This citing shall be done by the voice of Christ, as he himselfe saith, In that day all that are in the graues shall heare his voice, & they shall come foorth. And here we are to consider two things. I. the power of his voyce: II. the ministerie whereby it shall be vttered. For the first, no doubt the power of his voyce shall be vnspeakable, and therefore it is compared to a trumpet, the lowdest and shrillest of all musicall instruments; and to the crie of the marriners, whose manner hath beene in the doing of any businesse with all their strength at one instant to make a common shout. And sensible experience shal manifest the force thereof. For it shall cause all the dead euen from the beginning of the world to rise againe, though they haue lien rotten in the earth many thousand yeares: and all vncleane spirits shall be forced and compelled, will they, nill they, to come before Christ; who shall bee vnto them a most fearefull and terrible iudge, neither man nor angell shall bee able to absent or hide himselfe; all without exception must appeare, as well high as lowe, rich as poore: none shall be able to withdraw themselues no not the mighty Mōarches of the earth.

Iob. 5. 28.

1. Thess. 4. 6.

Furthermore, this voice shall be vttered by angels. As in the Church Christ vseth men as his ministers by whome he speaks vnto his people: so at the last day he shall vse the ministery of angels, whome he shal send forth into the foure windes to gather his elect togither: and therefore it is likely that this voyce shall be vttered by them. And by this which hath beene said, wee must be mooued to make conscience of al sinne. For there is no auoiding of this iudgement, we cannot absent our selues, no excuse will serue the turne: euen the most rebellious of all creatures whether man or angel, shall be forced to appeare: and therefore it standes vs in hand, while we haue time in this life, to looke vnto our estates, and to practise the duties of Christianitie, that when we shall be cited before his glorious maiesty at the last day, we may be cleared and absolued.

Mat. 24. 31.

The fourth point is, the separation of the sheepe from the goates, the good from the badde: for when all the kindreds of the earth, and all vncleane spirits shall stand before Christ, sitting in the throne of his glorie; then as a good sheapheard he shall separate them one from another, the righteous from the wicked, and the elect from the reprobate. Hee which knoweth the hearts of al men, knoweth also how to doe this, and he will doe it. This full and finall separation is reserued to Christ, and shall not be accomplished till the last day. For so it is in the parable, that the tares must growe with the wheate till harnest, & the reapers must separate them, and gather the wheate into the barne, but the tares must bee burned with vnquenchable fire. By the consideration of this one point, we learne diuers things: I. that in the Church of God in this world, good and badde are mingled togither, elect and reprobate: and we are not to imagine any perfection of the Church of God vpon earth, as many haue dreamed, which when they could not finde, they haue therefore forsaken all assemblies. I confesse indeede that the preaching of the word is the Lords fanne, whereby he clenseth his Church in part, but yet the finishing of this worke shall not be before the last iudgement. For whē the ministers of God haue done all that they can, yet shall the wicked be mingled with the Godly. Therefore the Church is compared to a barne flore, where is both wheate and chaffe: and a corne fielde, where is both tares and good corne: and a draw-net, wherin is both good fish & bad. Secondly, whereas the separation must not be before the ende of the world, hence we learne the state of Gods Church in this life. It is like a flocke of sheepe mingled with goates, and therefore the condition of Gods people in this worlde, is to be troubled many waies by those with whom they liue. For goates vse to strike the sheepe, to annoy their pasture, and to make their water muddy that they cannot drinke of it: and therefore we must prepare our selues to beare all annoyances, crosses, and calamities that shall befall vs in this world by the wicked ones, among whome we liue. Thirdly, we are taught, that howesoeuer the goats and the sheepe be very like, and feede in one pasture, and lie in one fold all their life time: yet Christ can and will seuer them asunder at the last day. Therefore considering as we were borne of Adam we haue the nature of the goate, yea of the wilde beast, and not of the sheepe; it standes vs in hand to lay aside our goatish conditions, and to take vnto vs the properties of the sheepe of Christ, which he expresseth in these words,

Mat. 13. 30.

words, My sheepe (saith he) heare my voyce, I know them, and they followe me. And the properties are three; to knowe him, to be knowne of him, and to follow him, namely in obedience: and he that findes them al in him selfe, weareth the brand and marke of the true sheepe of Christ: but contrariwise they that make profession of Christ, & yet therewithall ioyne not obedience, howsoeuer the worlde may account of them, they are but goates and no sheepe. Let vs therefore with the knowledge of Christ ioyne obedience to his word, that when the day shall come that the goates must be separated from the sheepe, we may be found to be in the number of the true sheepe of Christ. Wee may deceiue men both in life and death, & beare them in hand that we are sheepe, but when the iudgement shall come, we cannot deceiue Christ; he it is that formed vs, he knowes our hearts, and therefore can easily discerne what we are.

The fifth thing is the triall of euery mans particular cause, a point especially to be cõsidered. For as at the bar of an earthly iudge, the malefactour is brought out of prison and set before the iudge, & there examined: euen so in that great day, shal euery man without exception be brought before the Lord, to be tried. But how shall this triall be made? Ans. By workes: as the Apostle saith, We must all appeare before the iudgement seate of Christ, that euery man may receiue the things which are done in his bodie according to that he hath done, whether it be good or euil. And the reason is, because workes are the outward signes of inward grace and holinesse. And though we be iustified by faith alone without works, yet may we be iudged both by faith & works. For the last iudgement doeth not serue to make men iust that are vniust, but only to manifest them to be iust indeed, which are iust before, and in this life truely iustified. The consideration of this very point should moue vs all to repent vs of our sinnes past and to reforme our selues thoroughout, and to be plentifull in all good workes. And vndoubtedly if we seriously thinke vpon it, it will hold vs more straitly to all good duties, then if with the Papists, we held iustification by workes.

Furthermore in this triall two things must be scanned: I. howe all mens workes shall be made manifest: II. by what means they shall be examined. Of the manifestation of euery mans worke, Saint Iohn speaketh, And I sawe (saith he) the dead both great and small stand before God, and the bookes were opened: and another booke was opened, which is the booke of life, and the dead were iudged of those things which were written in the bookes according to their works. Reu. 20. 12

God is said to haue bookes not properly, but because all things are as certaine and manifest to him, as if he had his Registers in heauen to keepe rolles and recordes of them. His bookes are three; the booke of Prouidence, the booke of Iudgement, the booke of life. The booke of his prouidence is the knowledge of all particular things past, present, to come. Of this the Psalmist speaketh, Thine eies did see me whē I was without forme: for in thy booke were all things written which in continuance were fashioned, when there was none of them before. Psal. 139. 16.

The booke of iudgement is that whereby he giues iudgement: and it is twofold. The first is Gods knowledge or prescience, in which all the affaires of mē, their thoughts wordes, and deedes, are as certainely knowne and set down, as if they were put in bookes of Record. We may forget our sinnes, but God keepes them in a registers he knowes them euery one. The second booke is euery mās particular conscience, which also brings to remembrance & testifies what men haue done, and what they haue not done. Esa. 4. 3.

The booke of life is nothing els but the decree of Gods election, in which God hath set downe who be ordained to life eternall.

Now the opening of these bookes is a thing wherein the endles power of God shall most notably shew it selfe. For when we shall stand before the iudgement seate of Christ, hee then knowing all things in his eternall counsell, shall reueale vnto euery man his owne particular sinnes, whether they were in thought word, or deede, and then also by his mightie power hee shall so touch mens consciences, that they shall afresh remember what they haue done. Nowe indeede, the wicked mans conscience is shut vp as a chosed bookes; but then it shall be so touched, and as it were opened, that he shall plainly see and remember all the particular offēces which at any time he hath committed; & his very conscience shall be as good as a thousand witnesses: whereupon he shal accuse and vtterly condemne himselfe. The consideration of this ought to terrifie al those that liue in their sinnes: for howsoeuer they may hide and couer them from the world; world; yet at the last day, God will be sure to reueale them all.

Now after that mens workes are made manifest, they must further be tried whether they be good or euill. And that shall be done on this manner. They that neuer heard of Christ must be tried by the lawe of nature, which serues to make them inexcusable before God. As for those that liue in the Church, they shall be tryed by the Lawe and the Gospell, as Paul saith, Rom. 2. 12. As many as haue sinned by the lawe, shall be iudged by the lawe. And againe, Vers. 16. At the day of iudgement God shal iudge the secrets of our hearts according to his Gospell. And, Heb. 11. 7. By faith Noah builded an arke, whereby he condemned the old world. If this be true, then wee must in the feare of God heare his word preached and taught with all reuerence, and make conscience to profit by it. For otherwise in the day of iudgement when all our workes shall be tryed by it, the same word of God shall be a bill of inditement, and the fearefull sentence of condemnation against vs. Therefore let vs be humbled by the doctrine of the lawe, and willingly embrace the sweet promises of the Gospell: considering it is the onely touchstone, whereby all our wordes, thoughts, and workes must be examined.

The sixth point in the proceeding of the last iudgement, is the giuing of sentence, which is twofold: the sentence of absolution, and the sentence of condemnation, both which are to be obserued diligently, that we may receiue profit therby. And first of all Christ shall begin his iudgement with the sentence of absolution; which shewes that he is ready to shewe mercie & slow to wrath. In this sentence we are to consider foure points: I. a calling of the Elect to the kingdome of heauen: II. The reason thereof: III. a replie of the Elect: IV. the answer of Christ to them againe. The calling of the Elect is set downe in these wordes, Mat. 25. 34. Come ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdome prepared for you from the beginning of the world. And the words are to be obserued one by one. Come ye blessed] Though Christ now sitte in glory and maiestie in iudgement yet he ceaseth not to shewe his tender affection of loue vnto his chosen. And this ouerthroweth the opinion of the Church of Rome, which would haue vs rather to come vnto Christ by the intercession of Saints, then by our selues immediatly, because he is now exalted in glory & maiesty. But marke, when he was here on earth he said, Come vnto me all ye that are heauy laden and I will ease you. And when he shall be most glorious in maiestie and power at the day of iudgement, he wil then also say, Come ye blessed of my father: and therefore we may resolue our selues, that it is his will now, that we should come vnto him without any intercession of Saints. Ye blessed of my father] The elect are here called the blessed of God, because their righteousnes, saluation, & all that they haue, springs of the meere blessing of God. Nothing therefore must be ascribed to the worke of man. Inherit] that is, receiue as your inheritance: therefore the kingdome of heauen is Gods meere gift. A father giueth no inheritance vnto his sonne of merit, but of his free gift: whereupon it follows, that no man can merit the kingdome of heauen by his workes. The kingdome] that is, the eternall estate of glorie and happinesse in heauen: therefore in this life we must so vse this world, as though we vsed it not: all that we haue here is but vaine and transitorie: and all our studie and indeauour must be to come to the kingdome of heauen. Prepared] Here note the vnspeakable care of God for the faithfull. Had he such care to prouide a kingdome for his childrē before they were? then we may assure our selues, he will haue greater care ouer them now when they haue a beeing. For you] that is, for the elect and faithfull. Hence it appeares that there is no vniuersall election whereby (as some suppose) God decrees that all and euery man shal be saued. Indeede if he had said, Come ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdome prepared for all but receiued of you, it had beene something, but he saith only, prepared for you: and therefore all were not chosen to saluation.

The reason of this calling, is taken from workes as from signes, in these words, For I was hungrie & ye gaue me meate, &c. Whē he saith, for I was hungrie, hee meanes his poore and distressed members vpon earth: and thereby he signifies vnto vs that the miseries of his seruants are his owne miseries. Thus the Lord saith in Zachary, Zach. 2. 8. Hee which toucheth you toucheth the apple of mine eie. And whē Saul was going to persecute them in Damasco and els where that called on the name of Christ, hee cried from heauen, Act. 9. 4. Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And this is a notable comfort to Gods Church and people, that they haue an high Heb.4.15. high priest who is touched with the feeling of our infirmities: and if hee account our miseries his owne miseries, then noe doubt he will pittie our estate, and make vs able to beare the worst. And ye gaue me meate] Here we note, that the principall workes of men are those which are done to the poore members of Christ. We are indeede to helpe all, in as much as they are our very flesh and the creatures of God; but the rule of Saint Paul must bee remembred, Doe good to all, but especially Gal.6.10. to those that are of the houshold of faith. Many are of minde that the best workes are to build Churches and Monasteries, but Christ tels vs here, that the best worke of all is to releeue those that be the liuing members of his misticall body.

The third point is the replie of the Saints to Christ againe, in these wordes, Lord, when sawe we thee an hungred and fed thee? &c. They doe not deny that which Christ auouched, but doe, as I take it, standing before the tribunall seat of God, humble themselues, hauing still an after-consideration of the infirmities and offences of their liues past. Here note then, that it is a Satanicall practise for a man to bragge of workes and to stand vpon them in the matter of iustification before God. And we must rather doe as the Saints of God doe, abase our selues in regard of our sinnes past.

The last point is the answer of Christ to them againe, in these wordes, Verily, I say vnto you, in as much as ye did it to the least of these my brethren you did it to me. A most notable sentence: and it serueth to teach vs, howe we should behaue our selues in doing workes of mercy, which are duties to be performed in this life. We are not to doe them of any sinister respect, as for praise of men or commodity, but we must propound vnto our selues the party to whome we doe any good, and in him locke on Christ, and so doe it, as vnto Christ and for Christs sake onely: and this is a good worke indeede. Christ saith, Mar.10.41 Whosoeuer shall giue a cuppe of cold water to a disciple in the name of a disciple, shall not loose his rewarde. It is but a small gift, but yet the manner of doing it, namely in the name of a disciple, that is, in respect that he is a member of Christ, doeth make it an excellent worke of mercy. It is a speciall marke of a childe of God to shewe mercy on a Christian because he is a Christian. If any would knowe whether he be a Christian or no, let him search himselfe, whether he loue a man and can doe good vnto him, because he is a childe of God, and a member of Christ. For this is a plaine argument, that he also is the child of God. Many can loue, because they are loued againe, but to loue for Christ his sake, is a worke of Christ in vs and a speciall gift of God.

The sentence of condemnation followes in the second place and it containes foure points: I the reiection of the vngodly: II. the reason of their reiection: III. the defence which the wicked make for themselues: lastly, the answer of Christ to them againe. The reiection of the wicked is vttered by a terrible sentence, Away from me ye cursed into hell fire. The vse hereof in generall is twofold. First it serues to awake and excite all men and women in the world whosoeuer they be that shall heare it, to looke vnto their owne estates. It is wonderfull to see what great security raigneth euery where in these our daies. Men goe on in sinne from day to day and from yeare to yeare without repentance, nothing at all fearing the sentence of condemnation at the last day; like vnto many which for the obtaining of other mens goods are neither by the feare of arraignment or imprisonment kept in good order. The occasions of security are twofold I. the prosperity of the wicked, who of all men liue most at ease without trouble, either in body or in minde. II. Gods patience and long suffering; as Salomon saith, Because sentence against an euill Eccle.8.11 worke is not executed speedily, therefore the hearts of the children of men are fully set in them to doe euill. But to awake all those which liue in their security; they must remember that howesoeuer the Lord God doeth nowe deferre his iudgement, yet there is a day wherin he will no way shew mercy and long suffering, when they shall heare this fearefull sentence of condemnation pronounced against them, Away from me ye cursed. The second vse is to the godly: it serues to nurture them and to keepe them in awe before God: and no doubt this was a principall cause why this sentence was here penned by the h. Ghost. A wise master of a family will checke his seruant, & if the cause require, correct him in his childs presence, that the child it selfe may learne thereby to feare and stand in awe of his father: ſo Chriſt the moſt carefull and wiſe gouernour of his Church hath ſet downe this ſentence of condemnation againſt the wicked, that the childrē of God in this worlde whenſoeuer they ſhall heare or reade the ſame, might be mooued thereby to ſtand in feare of God, and more dutifully performe obedience vnto his commādements. Away from me.] Here we may learne, what a bleſſed thing it is for a man to haue a true fellowſhippe with Chriſt in this world. For in the day of iudgement the puniſhment of the wicked is to be cutte off from him, and driuen away from his preſence. Nowe he that would haue fellowſhip with God after this life, and eſcape that puniſhment, muſt ſeeke to haue it in this life: and he that wil not ſeeke to haue fellowſhip with him in this life, ſhall neuer haue it after in the day of iudgement. Againe, let vs marke that it is nothing to draw neere vnto Chriſt with our lippes, if the heart be not with him: for ſuch as come neere with the lippe and keepe aloofe in the heart, ſhall heare the ſentence pronounced, Away from me ye curſed: and ſhall be ſeuered as farre from Chriſt as hell from heauen. Therefore let vs not content our ſelues with formal profeſſion, but open the dores of our hearts, that the king of glory may come in. Ye curſed.] They are curſed who are borne in ſin and liue in their ſinnes, and al the dayes of their liues ſo perſeuere to the laſt gaſpe without ſeeking recouerie. Whoſoeuer he be, that is in this eſtate, the curſe of God hangeth ouer his head, and will ſo doe till he get reconciliation with God in Chriſt. This being ſo, aboue all things in this world we muſt labour to be at peace with God, & neuer ceaſe nor be quiet with our ſelues till we haue the ſame wrought and ſealed in our hearts. For before ſuch time as we be in Gods fauour, his fearefull curſe hangs ouer our heads, and if we ſo perſeuere without repentāce, the day will come when we ſhall heare this fearefull ſentence pronounced againſt vs: Away from me ye curſed into hell fire. What hell fire is, we muſt not curiouſly ſearch, but rather giue our whole endeauour to learne howe we may auoid it: as when a mans houſe is on fire, his care muſt be, not to ſearch how it came, but rather how to quench it: yet we are to knowe thus much, that by hell fire is not meant any bodily flame, but it ſignifies the ſeazing of the feareſull & terrible wrath of God both on body and ſoule for euer. For howſoeuer the body be ſubiect to burning with bodily fire, yet the ſoule beeing ſpirituall cannot burne; and therefore hell fire is not a materiall fire, but a grieuous torment, fitly reſembled thereby. Prepared for the deuill and his angels.] There is in euery mans heart by nature this corruption, whereby when he ſinneth, he thinks that there is no daunger but all is well, hauing as Eſay ſaith, made a couenant with hell. But here conſider, that although the deuill was once an angell of light, yet whē he had ſinned, he could not eſcape hell: it was prepared euen for him. How then ſhall vngodly men, which are not halfe ſo wilie, thinke to eſcape?

Nowe followeth the reaſon of their reiection in theſe words: For I was an hungred and ye gaue me no meate, &c. Hence wee learne theſe two points: I. that all mans religion and ſeruing of God is in vaine, if ſo be we ſhewe no compaſsion toward the poore members of Chriſt, in feeding, clothing, lodging, & viſiting of them. For we muſt thinke, that many of thoſe againſt whome this reaſon ſhall be brought, did know religion and profeſſe the ſame, yea, they propheſied in the name of Chriſt, and called on him, ſaying, Lord, Lord: and yet the ſentence of condemnation goeth againſt them, becauſe they ſhew no compaſsion toward the members of Chriſt, and therefore it is a principal vertue, and a ſpecial note of a Chriſtian, to ſhew the bowels of compaſsion towards his needie brethren. Here againe we note, that it is not ſufficient for vs to abſtaine from euil, but we muſt alſo doe good. For it is not ſaide, I was an hungred & ye tooke from me, but. When I was hungrie ye gaue me no meate. They are not charged with doing euill, but, for not doing good. S. Iohn ſaith, The axe is laid to the roote of the tree, and the reaſons followes, not becauſe the tree bare euill fruite, but becauſe it bare not good fruit: therefore it muſt be caſt into the fire. This condemnes a badde opinion of all worldly men, who thinke that al is wel, and that God will be merciſull vnto them, becauſe they doe no man harme. Thus we ſee howe the deuill blinds the eyes of men: for it wil not ſtand for payment at the day of iudgement to ſay, I haue hurt no man, vnleſſe we further doe all the good we can. Math. 3.

The third point is the defence which impenitent ſinners make for themſelues, in theſe words, Lord, when ſaw we thee an hun- hungred, or thirstie, or naked, or in prison, or sicke, and did not minister vnto thee? Thus in their own defence, that which Christ saith, they gainsay, & iustifie themselues. Here marke the nature of al impenitent sinners, which is to sooth and flatter themselues in sinne, and to maintaine their owne righteousnes, like to the proud Pharisie in his prayer, who bragged of his goodnes, and said, Lord, I thanke thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners &c. and in the very same manner ignorant persons of al sorts among vs, iustifie themselues in their strong faith, and bragge of their zeale of Gods glory, & of their loue to their brethren, and yet indeede shewe no signes thereof. And truly we are not to maruell when we see such persons to iustifie themselues before men, whereas they shall not be ashamed to doe it at the day of iudgement before the Lord Iesus himselfe. Luk. 18, 10

The last point, is Christs answer to thē againe in these words: Verily I say vnto you, in as much as yee did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to mee. This sentence being repeated againe, doth teach vs the lesson which we learned before, that when we are to shewe compassion to any man, especially if he be a mēber of Gods Church, we must not consider his outward estate or his basenes, in that he wants foode or raiment, but behold Christ in him, not respecting him as a man, but as a member of Christ. This it is, that must moove vs to compassion, and cause vs to make a supplie of his wants more then any respect in the world beside. And surely when Christ in his members comes to our dores and complaines that he is hungrie & sicke, and naked, if our bowels yearne not towards him, there is not so much as a sparke of the loue of God in vs.

The seauenth point in the proceeding of the last iudgement is, the retribution or reward in these words: and they shall goe into euerlasting paine, and the righteous into life eternall. Howe doe the wicked enter into hel and the godly into heauen? Answ. By the powerfull & commanding voice of Christ, which is of that force, that neither the greatest rebell that euer was among men, nor all the deuils in hell, shall be able to withstand it. And seeing that after the day of iudgement we must remaine for euer either in heauen or in hell, we are to looke about vs and to take heed vnto our hearts. Indeede if the time were but a thousand or two thousand yeares, then with more reason men might take liberty to themselues: but seeing it is without ende we must be most carefull thorough the whole course of our liues so to liue and behaue our selues, that when the day of iudgement shall come, we may auoid that fearfull sentence of euerlasting woe and condemnation, which shall be pronounced against the wicked. And whereas all wicked men shall goe to hell at Christs commaundement, it teacheth vs, willingly to obey the voice of Christ in the ministery of the word. For if wee rebel against his voice in this world, when in the day of iudgement sentence shall be pronounced against vs, we shall heare an other voice, at the giuing whereof, wee must obey whether we will or noe, and thereupon goe to euerlasting paine, whither we would not. Let vs therefore in time denie our selues for our sinnes past, and onely relie vpon Christ Iesus for the free remission of them al; and for the time to come, leade a new reformed life.

Thus much of the order of Christ his proceeding at the day of iudgment. Nowe follow the vses thereof, which are either comforts to Gods Church, or duties for all men. The first comfort or benefit is this, that the same person which died for vs vpon the crosse to worke our redemption, must also be our iudge. And hence we reape two speciall comforts. I. The people of God shall hereby inioy full redemption from all miseries and calamities which they had in this life. So Christ himselfe speaking of the signes of the ende of the world saith to his disciples; Whē you see these things, lift vp your heads: for your redemption draweth neere. Then he shal wipe all teares from their eies. Secondly, we shal hereby haue a finall deliuerance from all sinne. Nowe what a ioyfull thing it is, to be freed from sinne, may plainly appeare by the crie of Saint Paul: O wretched man that I am who shall deliuer me from this body of death? And certen it is, that he which knowes what sinne is, & seriously repents him of the same, would wish with all his heart to be out of this world, that he might leaue off to sinne, and thereby cease to displease God. Luk. 21, 28

The second comfort is this: the godly in this worlde haue many enemies: they are reuiled, slandered, and oftentimes put to death: well, Christ Iesus at the day of iudgement will take euery mans case into his his own hand: he will then heare the complaint of the godly, howesoeuer in this world they found no remedie: and then he Apoc. 6. 10. wil reuenge their blood that is shedde vpon the earth, according to their prayer. This comfort is to be considered especially of all those that are any way persecuted or molested by the wicked of this world.

Nowe followe the duties to be learned of euery one of vs, and they are diuers. First, the consideration of the last iudgement serueth to teach all ignorant persons and impenitent sinners, repentance & humiliation for their sinnes, and to moove them with all speede to seeke vnto Christ for the pardon of the same. When Paul
Act. 17. 3. preached to the Athenians, hee willed thē to repent vpon this ground & reason, because the Lord hath appointed a day wherein he will iudge the world in righteousnes. To speake plainely; we can be content to heare the word, and to honour him with our lippes, yet for the most part, all is done but for fashions sake: for still wee liue in our old sinnes: our hearts are not turned: but in the feare of God let vs bethinke our selues of the time, when we shall come before the iudge of heauen and earth, and haue all our sinnes laid open, and we must answere for them all. This is the point which the holy Ghost vseth as a reason to moove men vnto repentance: & assuredly if this will not moue vs, there is nothing in the world wil. Secondly, to this purpose Paul saith. If we would iudge our selues, wee
1. Cor. 11. 31. should not be iudged. Wouldest thou then escape the iudgement of Christ at the last day? then in this life iudge thy selfe. Now a man in iudging of himselfe must performe foure things: I. he must examine himselfe of his owne sinnes: II. he must confesse them before the Lord. III. He must condemne himselfe, & as a iudge vpon the bench, giue sentence against himselfe. Lastly, he must plead pardon, and crie vnto God as for life and death, for the remission of all his sinnes: and he that doeth this vnfainedly shall neuer be iudged of the Lord at the last day: but if wee slacke and neglect this dutie in this life, thē vndoubtedly there remaines nothing but eternall woe in the world to come.

Thirdly, by this we may learne, one not to iudge or condemne another, as Paul saieth. Iudge nothing before the time vntill the
1. Cor. 4. 5 Lord come, who will lighten all things that are in darkenes, and make the counsels of the hearts manifest. And Christ saieth, Iudgement is mine: and iudge not, and ye shall not be iudged. And againe, Paul saith to the Rom 14. 10. Romans, Why doest thou iudge thy brother? for we must all appeare before the iudgement seat of Christ: but some will aske, how doth one iudge another. Ans. Thus: I. When a man doth well, to say of him that he doth euill: II. When a man doeth euill, then to make it worse: III. when a thing is doubtfull, to take it in the worst part. And by any of these three waies we are not to iudge either of mens persons or of their actions.

Fourthly, we must endeauour our selues to keepe a good conscience before God and before all men. This is the practise of Act. 24. 15 Saint Paul, who in consideration & hope of a resurrection vnto iudgement as well of the iust as of the vniust, endeauoured himselfe to haue alwayes a cleare cōsciēce both towards God, and towardes men. His example is worthie our marking and imitation; for fewe there be that vpon this occasion make any conscience either of dutie to God or to their brethren.

Fiftly, the last iudgement must stirre vs vp to a reuerend feare of God, & cause vs to glorifie him: as the Angell saith in the Reuelation, Feare God and giue glorie Rev. 14. 17. to him: for the houre of his iudgement is come. And doubtlesse if any thing in the world will moove a man to feare the Lord, it is this, to remember the fearefull and terrible day of iudgement.

Nowe hauing spoken hitherto of the first person the father, and also of the son, it followeth in the next place to speake of the third person in these wordes, I beleeue in the holy Ghost. In which we may consider two things, the title of the person, and the action of faith, repeated from the beginning. The title is, Holy Ghost or Spirit. It may here be demanded, how this title can be fitte to expresse the third person, which seemes to bee common to the rest: for the father is holy, and the sonne is holy; againe, the father is a spirit, and the sonne is a spirit. Answ. Indeede the father & the sonne are as wel to be tearmed holy in respect of their natures, as the third person: for all three subsisting in one and the same Godhead, are consequently holy by one and the same holinesse: but the third person is called holy, because beside the holinesse of nature, his office is to sanctifie the Church of God. Nowe if it be said that sanctification is a worke of the whole Trinitie, the answere is, that although it be so, yet the worke of sanctification agrees to the holy Ghost in speciall manner. The Father sanctifieth by the sonne and by the holy Ghost: the sonne sanctifieth from the father and by the holy Ghost: the holy Ghost sanctifieth from the father and from the sonne by himselfe immediatly; and in this respect is the third person tearmed holy. Againe, the third person is tearmed a Spirit, not onely because his nature is spirituall (for in that respect the father is a spirit and the sonne is a spirit;) but because he is spired or breathed from the Father and from the sonne, in that he proceeds from thē both. Thus we see there is a speciall cause why the third person is called the Holy Ghost.

Nowe the action of Faith which concernes the third person, is to beleeue in him. Which is, I. to acknowledge the Holy Ghost as he hath reuealed himselfe in the word. II. In speciall to beleeue that he is my sanctifier & comforter. III. To put all the confidence of my heart in him, for that cause. In these wordes are comprised foure points of Doctrine, which are to be beleeued concerning the holy Ghost. The first, that he is very God. For we are not to put our affiance or confidence in any but in God alone. And no doubt the penners of the Creede, in that they prefixed these words, I beleeue in, before the article of the third person, meant thereby to signifie that he is true God, equall with the father and the sonne, according to the tenour of the Scriptures themselues. Peter saith to Ananias: Why hath Satan filled Act. 5. 3. 4 thine heart that thou shouldst lie vnto the holy Ghost? and continuing the same speach, he changeth the tearme only, and saith, Thou hast not lied vnto men, but vnto God. Whereby he insinuateth that the holy Ghost is very God. In the vision of the prophet Isai, the words by him set downe are thus: Isay. 6. 9. I heard the voice of Iehoua, saying, Whome shall I send, &c. and he said, Goe and say to this people: Ye shall heare indeede, but ye shall not vnderstand. But Paul quoting the same place, spake on this manner: Well spake the Act. 28. 25. Holy Ghost by Esai the Prophet saying, Goe vnto this people & say vnto them. Now these places beeing compared togither make it plaine, that the title of Iehoua, agreeth to the holy Ghost. But yet the enemies of this trueth which thinke that the holy Ghost is nothing els but the action or operation of God, obiect out of the scriptures to the contrarie: I. God knoweth the sonne: the holy Ghost knoweth not the sonne: for none knoweth the sonne but the father: ergo, Math. 11. 27. the holy Ghost is not God. Answ. That place excludeth no person in Trinitie, but onely creatures, and false Gods, and the meaning is this: None, that is no creature, or idol god, knoweth the sonne of God, but the father. And the oppositiō is made to exclude creatures, not to exclude the holy Ghost. Againe they obiect, that the holy Ghost maketh request for vs with grones and sighes that cannot be vttered: Rom. 8. 16. therefore (say they) the holy Ghost is not God, but rather a gift of God. For he that is true God cannot pray, grone, or sigh. Answ. Pauls meaning is thereby to signifie that the holy Ghost causeth vs to make requests, and stirreth vp our hearts to grone and sigh to God: for he said before, We haue receiued the Spirit of adoption, Rom. 8. 1. whereby we cry Abba, father. Yet further, they obiect the words of the angel Gabriel to the virgin Marie, saying, The vertue of Luk. 1. 30. the most High hath ouer-shadowed thee: and hence they gather, that if the holy Ghost be the vertue of God then he is not God indeede. Answ. As Christ is called the Word of God, not a word made of letters or syllables, but a substantiall word, that is, being for euer of the same substance with the father: so in this place the holy Ghost is called the vertue of the most highest, not because he is a created quality, but because he is the substantiall vertue of the Father and the Sonne: and therefore God equall with them both. Furthermore they alleadge, that neither the Scriptures nor the practise of the Primitiue Church doeth warrant vs to pray to the holy Ghost. Ans. It is not true. For whensoeuer wee direct our praier to any one of the three persons, in him we pray to thē all. Besides we haue example of praier made to the holy ghost, in the word of God. For Paul saith to the Corinthians, The grace of our Lord Iesus, 2. Cor. 13. 13. the loue of God the father, & the fellowship of the holy Ghost bee with you all. And the wordes are as if S. Paul had said thus; O father, let thy loue, O Sonne, let thy grace, O holy Ghost, let thy fellowshippe bee with them al. And therefore this first doctrine is true, and as wel to be beleeued as any other, that the Holy Ghost is God.

The second point is, that the H. Ghost is a distinct person from the Father and the Sonne. Hereupon the articles touching the three persons are thus distinguished: I beleeue in the father, I beleeue in the son, I beleeue in the holy Ghost. This point alſo is conſonant to the Scriptures which make the ſame diſtinction. In the baptiſme of Chriſt, the father vttereth a voice from heauen, ſaying, This is my beloued Sonne in whome I am well pleaſed: and not the Sonne, or the holy Ghoſt. Secondly the Sonne ſtood in the water, and was baptized by Iohn, and not the Father, or the holy Ghoſt. Thirdly, the holy Ghoſt deſcended from heauen vpon Chriſt in the forme of a doue; and not the Father, or the Sonne, but the holy Ghoſt alone. Chriſt in his commiſſion vnto his diſciples, ſaith, Goe teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. Now if the holy Ghoſt had beene the ſame perſon either with the Father, or with the Sonne, then it had bin ſufficient to haue named the Father and the Sonne onely. And the diſtinction of the third perſon from the reſt may bee conceiued by this, that the holy Ghoſt is the H. Ghoſt, & not the father or the ſon.

The third point to be beleeued is, that the holy Ghoſt proceedeth from the Father and the ſonne. For a further proofe hereof, conſider theſe places. Paul ſaith, Ye are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit: for the ſpirit of God dwelleth in you. But if any man haue not the ſpirit of Chriſt, he is not his. And againe, Becauſe ye are ſonnes, God hath ſent forth the ſpirit of the Sonne into your hearts. Where wee may obſerue, that the holy Ghoſt is the ſpirit both of the father and of the ſonne. Nowe the holy Ghoſt is called the ſpirit of the father, not onely becauſe he is ſent of him, but becauſe he proceedeth from the Father; as Chriſt ſaith to his diſciples, When the Comforter will come, whome I ſhall ſend vnto you from the Father, euen the ſpirit of truth which proceedeth of the Father, he ſhall teſtifie of me. And therefore likewiſe hee is the ſpirit of the ſonne, not onely becauſe he is ſent of the ſonne, but alſo becauſe he proceedeth from him. Againe, in the Trinity the perſon ſending doth communicate his whole eſſence and ſubſtance to the perſon ſent. As the Father ſending the Sonne doth communicate his eſſence and ſubſtance to the ſonne. For ſending doth preſuppoſe a communication of eſſence. Nowe the Father and the Sonne ſend the holy Ghoſt: therefore both of them communicate their ſubſtance and eſſence vnto the ſame perſon. Thirdly Chriſt ſaith, The holy Ghoſt hath receiued of mine which he ſhall ſhew vnto you, namely knowledge and truth, to be reuealed vnto his Church. Whence we may reaſon thus: the perſon receiuing knowledge from an other, receiues eſſence alſo: the holy Ghoſt receiues truth and knowledge from Chriſt to be reuealed vnto the Church: and therefore firſt of all he hath receiued ſubſtance and eſſence from the Sonne. But ſome peraduenture will ſay, where is it written in all the Bible in expreſſe words, that the holy Ghoſt proceedes from the ſonne as he proceedes from the Father? Anſw. The Scripture ſaith not ſo much in plaine tearmes, yet we muſt know that that which is gathered forth thence by iuſt conſequence, is no leſſe the truth of God, then that which is expreſſed in words. Hereupon al Churches, ſaue thoſe in Greece, with one conſent acknowledg the truth of this point.

Rom.8.9.

Ioh.14.16.

The fourth & laſt point is, that the holy Ghoſt is equall to the father and the ſonne. And this we are taught to acknowledge in the creede, in that we doe as well beleeue in the holy Ghoſt, as in the father and the ſonne. And though the H. Ghoſt be ſent of the father and the ſonne, yet (as I haue ſaid before) that argues no inequality (for one equall may ſend an other by conſent) but order onely, whereby the holy Ghoſt is laſt of all the three perſons. Againe in that the Holy Ghoſt receiueth from the ſonne, it prooues noe inferiority. Becauſe he receiues from the ſonne whatſoeuer he receiues by nature, and not by grace. And he receiues not a part, but all that the ſonne hath, ſauing the proprietie of his perſon.

Now followe the benefits which are giuen by the holy Ghoſt, and they are of two ſorts: ſome are common to all creatures, and ſome are proper to men. The benefit of the holy Ghoſt common to all creatures, is the worke of creation & preſeruation. For all things were created and made, and afterward preſerued by the holy Ghoſt. So Elihu ſaith, The ſpirit of GOD hath made me. And Moſes ſaith, In the beginning the ſpirit mooued vpon the waters. The phraſe is borrowed from a bird, who in hatching of her young ones, ſits vpon the egges, mooues her ſelfe vpon them, and heats them. And ſo likewiſe the holy Ghoſt in the beginning did by his owne power cheriſh and preſerue the maſſe or lump wherof all things were made, & cauſed it to bring forth the creatures. This being euident, that the holy Ghoſt hath a ſtroke in the worke of creation & preſeruation, we must vnfainedly acknowledge that we were first created, and since that time continually preserued by the benefit euen of the third person.

The benefits proper vnto men, are of two sorts: some are common to all men both good and bad, and some proper to the Elect and faithfull. The benefits common to all men are diuers. 1. the gift of practising a particular calling. As in the bodie seuerall members haue seueral vses; so in euery societie seuerall men haue seuerall offices and callings, and the gifts whereby they are inabled to performe the duties thereof, are from the holy Ghost. When Gedeon became a valiant captaine to deliuer the Israelites, it is said he was clothed with the spirit. Bezaleel and Aholiab beeing set a part to build the tabernacle, were filled with the spirit of God in wisedome and in vnderstanding, and in all workmanship, to finde out curious works, to worke in gold and in siluer & in brasse; also in the art to set stones, and to carue in timber, &c. By this it is manifest, that the skil of any handicrafte is not in the power of man, but comes by the holy ghost. And by this we are taught to vse all those gifts well, whereby we are inabled to discharge our particular callings; that they may serue for the glory of God, and the good of his Church: and those that in their callings vse fraud and deceit, or else liue inordinately, doe most vnthankfully abuse the gifts of God, and dishonour the spirit of God the author of their gifts, for which thing they must giue an account one day.

Exo 31.3.

The second gift common to all, is Illumination, wherby a man is inabled to vnderstand the will of God in his word. The Iews in the reading of the old Testament had a vaile ouer their hearts: and the like haue all men by nature, to whome the word of God is foolishnes. Paul at his cõuersion was smitten blind, and skales were vpon his eyes: the like also be ouer the eyes of our mindes, and they must fall away before we can vnderstand the will of God. Nowe it is the worke of the holy Ghost to remoove these skales and filmes from our eyes. And for this very cause he is called the anneinting and eye-salue: for as it doth cleare the eyes, and take away the dimnesse of them; so doth the holy Ghost take away blindnes frõ our minds, that we may see into the truth of Gods word. This beeing a common gift, and receiued both of good and bad, it standeth vs in hand not to content our selues with the bare knowledge of the word, but therewithall we must ioyne obedience, and make conscience thereof, or else that will befall vs which Christ foretold, that he which knoweth his masters will and doth it not, shall bee beaten with many stripes.

1.Ioh.2.20

Apoc.3.18

Luk.12.47

The third gift of the holy Ghost, is the gift of prophesie, whereby a man is made able to interpret and expound the Scriptures. Now albeit this gift bee very excellent and not giuen to euery man, yet is it common both to good and badde. For in the day of iudgement when men shall come to Christ and say, Master, wee haue prophesied in thy name, he shall answer againe, I neuer knew you, depart from me ye workers of iniquity. Hereupon those that are in the calling of the ministerie, and haue receiued the gift of prophecie, must not herewithall be puffed vp. For if they be not as well doers of Gods will, as teachers, their gifts will turne to their further condemnation. As the carpenters that built Noahs arke when the floode came were drowned, because they would not obey Noahs preaching; so those that haue the gift of prophesie, and are builders in Gods house, if they builde not thẽselues as well as others, for al their preaching, at the day of iudgement, they shall be condemned: and therefore it standeth them in hand, not to content themselues with this, that they know and teach others Gods will, but they themselues must be the first doers of the same.

1.Cor.12.10.

The fourth common gift of the holy Ghost, is Ability to bridle and restraine some affections, so as they shall not breake out into outragious behauiour. Haman a wicked man, and an enemie to Gods Church, when he saw Mordecai the Iewe sitting in the kings gate, and that he would not stand vp or moove vnto him, hee was full of indignation: neuertheless the text saith, that he refrained himselfe. And when Abimelech an heathen king had taken Sara Abrahams wife. God said vnto him, I know that thou diddest this with an vpright heart: and the text addeth further, I haue kept thee, that thou shouldest not sinne against me. And thus the Lord giueth to men, as yet without the spirit of sanctification, this gift to bridle themselues, so as in outward action they shall not practise this or that sinne. For why did not Abimelech commit adultery? surely becaus GOD kept him from it. Againe in the hiſtories of the heathen we may read of many that were iuſt, liberall, meeke, continent, &c. and that by a generall operation of the holy Ghoſt that repreſſeth the corruption of nature, for the common good. Here then if any man aske, how it commeth to paſſe that ſome men are more modeſt and ciuell then others, ſeeing all men by nature are equally wicked, the anſwer may be, not as the common ſaying is, becauſe ſome are of better nature then others (for al the ſonnes of Adam are equall in regard of nature: the child new borne in that reſpect is as wicked as the eldeſt man that euer liued) but the reaſon is, becauſe God giues this common gift of reſtraining the affections more to ſome then to others. This muſt be conſidered of vs all. For a man may haue the ſpirit of God to bridle many ſinnes, and yet neuer haue the ſpirit to mortifie the ſame, and to make him a new creature. And this beeing ſo, we muſt take heede that we deceiue not our ſelues. For it is not ſufficient for a man to liue in outward ciuilitie, and to keepe in ſome of his affections vpon ſome occaſiō (for that a wicked man may doe) but we muſt further labour to feele in our ſelues the ſpirit of God, not onely bridling ſinne in vs, but alſo mortifying and killing the ſame. Indeede both of them are the good gifts of Gods ſpirit, but yet the mortification of ſinne is the chiefeſt, beeing an effectual ſigne of grace, and proper to the elect.

The fifth grace and gift of the holy Ghoſt is, to heare and receiue the word of God with ioy. In the parable of the ſower, one kinde of bad ground are they, which when they haue heard, receiue the word with Luk.8.13. ioy. And this is that, which the author of the Hebrewes calls the taſting of the good word of God, and of the power of the world to come. We know that there is great difference betweene taſting of meate and eating of it. They that ſit downe at the table do both taſte and eat, but they that dreſſe the meate doe only ſee and taſte thereof: ſo it is at the Lords table. Many there bee that haue this gift, truly both to taſte and eate of the bodie and blood of Chriſt offered in the word and Sacraments: and ſome againe doe only taſte and feele the ſweetnes of them and reioyce therein, but yet are not indeede partakers therof. Now if this be ſo, then all thoſe which heare the word of God muſt take heede how they heare, and labour to find theſe two things in themſelues by hearing: 1. that in heart and conſcience they be throughly touched and humbled for their ſinnes: 1 I. that they be certenly aſſured of the fauour and loue of God in Chriſt, and that the ſweete promiſes of the Goſpel doe belong to them: and in conſideration hereof they muſt make conſcience of all ſinne both in thought, word, and deede, through the whole courſe of their liues. And this kinde of hearing bringeth that ioy which vaniſheth not away.

Thus much of the benefits of the holy Ghoſt common to all men both good and badde: now follow ſuch as are proper to the Elect, all which may be reduced vnto one, namely, the inhabitation of the ſpirit, whereby the Elect are the temples of the holy Ghoſt: who is ſaide to dwell in men, not in reſpect of ſubſtance (for the whole nature of the holy Ghoſt cannot be compriſed in the bodie or ſoule of man) but in reſpect of a particular operation: and this dwelling ſtands in two things. The firſt, that the holy Ghoſt doth abide in them, not for a time onely, but for euer: for the word dwelling, noteth perpetuitie. Secondly, that the holy Ghoſt hath the full diſpoſition of the heart, as when a man commeth to dwell in an houſe, whereof he is lord, he hath libertie to gouerne it after his owne will. Now this diſpoſition of the hearts of the faithfull by the holy Ghoſt, ſtands in fiue ſpeciall and notable gifts; euery one worthie our obſeruation.

The firſt is a certen knowledge of a mans owne reconciliation to God in Chriſt. As it is ſaide in Eſai, By his knowledge my righteous ſeruant ſhall iuſtifie many. Eſa.53.11. And Chriſt ſaith, This is life eternall that they know thee to be the onely verie God, and Ioh.17.3. whō thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt. This knowledge is not generall: for then the deuills might be ſaued; but it is particular, whereby a man knoweth God the father to bee his father, and Chriſt the redeemer, to bee his redeemer, and the holy Ghoſt to be his ſanctifier and comforter. And it is a ſpeciall worke of the holy Ghoſt, as Paul ſaith, The ſpirit of God beareth witneſſe to our Rom.8.16 ſpirits, that we are the children of God. And, we haue receiued the ſpirit which is of God, 1.Cor.2.12 that we might know the things that are giuen vnto vs of God.

The ſecond gift is regeneration, whereby a man of a limme of the deuill is made a member of Chriſt, and of a childe of Satan (whom euery one of vs by nature doe as liuely reſemble as any man doeth his owne parent) is made the child of GOD.

Ioh.3.5. Except a man (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt) be borne againe by water and the ſpirit, hee can not enter into the kingdome of heauen.

Math.3.11 Iohn Baptiſt in ſaying that Chriſt baptized with the holy Ghoſt and fire, compares the ſpirit of God to fire and water. To fire for two cauſes: I. as it is the nature of fire to warme the body that is benummed and frozen with colde: ſo when a man is benummed and frozen in ſinne, yea when he is euen ſtarke dead in ſinne, it is the property of the Holy Ghoſt to warme and quicken his heart, and to reuiue him. II. Fire doth purge and eate out the droſſe from the good mettall: now there is no droſſe nor canker that hath ſo deeply eaten into any mettall as ſinne into the nature of man, therefore the Holy Ghoſt is as fire to purge and eate out the hidden corruptions of ſinne out of the rebellious heart of man. Againe the holy Ghoſt is compared to cleare water for two cauſes: I. man by nature is as drie wood without ſappe, and the propertie of the holy Ghoſt is as water to ſupple and to put ſap of grace into the head & rotten heart of man. II. the property of water is to cleanſe and purifie the filth of the bodie: euen ſo the holy Ghoſt doth ſpiritually waſh away our ſinnes, which are the filth of our nature; and this is the ſecond benefit of the Holy ghoſt. By this we are taught that he which would enter into the kingdome of God, and haue the Holy Ghoſt to dwell in him, muſt labour to feele the worke of regeneration by the ſame ſpirit: and if a man would knowe whether hee haue this worke wrought in him or no, let him marke what Saint Paule ſaith, they that

Rom.8.5. are of the ſpirit ſauour the things of the ſpirit: but they that liue after the fleſh, ſauour the things of the fleſh. If therfore a man haue his heart continually affected with that which is truely good either more or leſſe; it is a certaine token that his wicked nature is changed, and he regenerate: but contrariwiſe if his heart be alwaies ſet on the pleaſures of ſinne, and the things of this world, he may iuſtly ſuſpect him ſelfe that he is not regenerated. As for example: if a man haue all his minde ſet vpon drinking and gulling in of wine and ſtrong drinke, hauing little delight nor pleaſure in any thing els, it argues a carnal minde & vnregenerate, becauſe it effects the things of the fleſh; & ſo of the reſt. And on the contrarie, he that hath his minde affected with a deſire to doe the will of God in practiſing the workes of charitie and religion, he I ſay, hath a ſpiritual & a renued heart, and is regenerate by the holy Ghoſt.

The third worke of the holy Ghoſt is, to gouerne the hearts of the elect: this may be called ſpirituall regiment. A man that dwelleth in a houſe of his owne, orders and gouerns it according to his own will: euen ſo the holy ghoſt gouernes all them in whome he dwelleth, as Paul ſaith, they Rom.8.14 that are the ſonnes of God are led by his ſpirit, a moſt notable benefit: for looke where the holy Ghoſt dwelleth, there he will be Lord, gouerning both heart, minde, will, and affections; and that two wayes: I. by repreſſing all badde motions vnto ſinne, ariſing either from the corruption of mans nature, from the world, or from the deuill. II. by ſtirring vp good affections & motions vpon euery occaſion: ſo it is ſaid, The fleſh (that is, the corruption of mans Gal.5.17. nature) luſteth againſt the ſpirit: & the ſpirit (that is, grace in the heart) luſteth againſt the fleſh; & that after a double ſort: firſt by labouring to ouermaſter and keep downe the motions thereof: ſecondly, by ſtirring vp good motions & inclinations to pietie and religion. In Eſay the holy Ghoſt hath moſt excellent titles: The ſpirit of the Eſa.11.2. Lord: the ſpirit of wiſdome & vnderſtanding: the ſpirit of counſel, and of ſtrength: the ſpirit of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lord. Now he is ſo called, becauſe he ſtirres vp good motions in the godly, of wiſdome, of knowledge, of ſtrength, of vnderſtanding, of counſell, and of the feare of the Lord. And S. Paul ſaith, that the fruits of the ſpirit are ioy, peace, loue, long ſuffering, Gal.5.22. gentleneſſe, goodneſſe, faith, meekenes, temperance, &c. all which are ſo termed, becauſe where the holy Ghoſt ruleth, there he ingendreth theſe good gifts and motions of grace: but among all the inward motions of the ſpirit, the moſt principall are theſe: I. an vtter diſliking of ſinne, becauſe it is ſinne. And that is, when a man hath an eye not ſo much to another mans ſinnes, as to his owne, & ſeeing them, is truely ſorrowfull for them, and diſliketh them, & himſelfe for them; not ſo much becauſe there is a place of torment, or a day of iudgement to come, wherein he muſt anſwer to God for them all: but as if there were no hell or iudgement, becauſe God is diſpleaſed by them, who hath beene vnto him a moſt louing and mercifull father in redeeming him by Chriſt. The ſecond is an hūgring deſire aboue all things in this world, to be at vnitie with God in Chriſt for the ſame ſinnes. This is a motion of the holy Ghoſt, which no man can haue but he in whome the holy Ghoſt doth dwell. The third, the gift of heartie prayer. For this cauſe the holy Ghoſt is Zach.12.10. called the ſpirit of ſupplications, becauſe it ſtirreth vp the heart, and makes it fit to pray: & therefore Paul ſaith, that the ſpi-

Rom.8.26 rit of God helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what to pray, as we ought, but the ſame ſpirit it ſelfe maketh request for vs with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed. This is an ordinarie worke of the holy Ghoſt in all that beleeue: & he that would know whether he haue the ſpirit dwelling truely in his heart, ſhal know it by this: A mother carrieth her child in her armes: if it cry for the dugge, and ſucke the ſame, it is aliue: beeing obſerued many daies togither, if it neither crie nor ſtirre, it is dead. In like manner it is an infallible note of a true child of God to crie to his father in heauen by praier but he that neuer crieth nor feeleth himſelfe ſtirred vp to make his mone to God, is in a miſerable caſe, & he may well be thought to be but a dead child, & therfore let vs learne in prayer vnfainedly to poure out our ſoules before God, conſidering it is a ſpecial gift of the holy Ghoſt beſtowed on the children of God.

The fourth worke of the holy Ghoſt in the heart of the Elect is, comfort in diſtreſſe, and therefore our Sauiour Chriſt
Ioh.15.26 calleth him the Comforter whom he will ſend: and in the pſalme he is called the oyle
Pſal.45.9. of gladneſſe, becauſe he maketh glad the heart of man in trouble & diſtreſſe. There be two things that fil the heart full of endleſſe griefe: the firſt, outward calamities, as when a man is in any daunger of death, whē he looſeth his goods, his good name, his friends, and ſuch like. The ſecond is, a troubled conſcience, whereof Salomon ſaith, A troubled ſpirit, who can beare it? and of all other it is the moſt heauie and grieuous croſſe that can be. When as the hand of God was heauie vpon Iob, this was the foreſt of all his affliction, and therefore he crieth out that the arrowes of the Almightie did ſticke in his ſoule. Now what is the comfort in this caſe? Anſ. In the middeſt of all our diſtreſſes the holy Ghoſt is preſent with vs to make vs reioyce and to fill vs with comforts that no tongue can expreſſe out of the word of God and ſpecially the promiſes thereof. And hereupon, the vngodly man when afflictions befall him, is readie to make away himſelfe becauſe he wants the comfort of the holy Ghoſt.

The laſt benefite wrought in the hearts of the Elect is, the ſtrengthening of them to doe the weighteſt duties of their callings: and hence the holy Ghoſt is called the ſpirit of ſtrength. There be diuers things Eſa.11.2.
to bee done of a Chriſtian man that are farre beyond the reach of his power; as firſt, when he ſeeth his owne ſinnes and is truly humbled for them, then to lift vp the hand of faith to heauen, and thereby to catch holde on the mercie of God in Chriſt, is the hardeſt thing in the whole worlde: and this doe all thoſe know to be true in ſome part, which know what it is to beleeue. Secondly, it is as hard a thing in the time of temptation to reſiſt temptation, as for drie woode to reſiſt the fire when it begins to burne. Thirdly, when a man is put to his choice, either to looſe his life, goods friends, and all that he hath, or elſe to forſake religion; euen then to forſake all and to ſticke vnto Chriſt, is a matter of as great a difficulty as any of the former. Fourthly, when a man wanteth the ordinarie meanes of Gods prouidence, as meate, drinke, and clothing, then at the very ſame inſtant to acknowledge Gods prouidence, to reioyce in it, and to relie thereon, is as much as if a man ſhould ſhake the whole earth. It is againſt our wicked nature to truſt God, vnles he firſt lay downe ſome pawne of his loue and mercie to vs. How then, will ſome ſay, ſhall any one be able to doe theſe things? Anſ. The holy Ghoſt is the ſpirite of ſtrength, and by him we doe all things, as Paul ſaith, I am able to do all things through the helpe of Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth me. Phil.4.13.

Concerning theſe giftes of the holy Ghoſt, two queſtions may be mooued. Firſt, what is the meaſure of grace in this life. Anſ. Small, in reſpect. In this world, we receiue, as Paul ſaith, not the tenths, but the firſt fruits of Gods ſpirit, and the earneſt Rom.8.23 of the ſpirit. Now the firſt fruites properly 2.Cor.1.22. are but as an handfull or twaine of corne, to a whole corne field, cōtaining many acres and furlongs of ground. And the earneſt in a bargaine it may be is but a penie laid downe for the paying of fewnty thouſand pound. The ſecond queſtion is, whether the graces of the holy Ghoſt may be wholly

wholly loſt or not? Anſ. The common gifts of the ſpirit may be loſt & extinguiſhed. But the gifts proper to the Elect can not. Indeede they may be diminiſhed and couered as coales vnder aſhes, and as the ſappe in the roote of the tree in the winter ſeaſon, not appearing at all in the branches; and the feeling of them may be loſt: but they cānot either finally or totally be loſt. It is true that God doth forſake his children; but that is onely in part, as he left Ezechias to proone and trie what was in his heart. A mother that loues her child moſt tenderly, ſets it down in the flore, lets it ſtand, and fall, and breake the face, and all this while ſhee hides her ſelfe, not becauſe her purpoſe is to leaue her childe quite, or to make it hurt it ſelfe; but that when ſhe taketh it vp againe, it may loue her the better. So dealeth the holy Ghoſt with men to make thē know their weaknes and frailtie: he hides himſelf as it were in ſome corner of the heart for a ſeaſon, that they may the more earneſtly hunger after grace, the want whereof they feele. 2. Chr. 32. 31.

The vſe of this article whereby we confeſſe that we beleeue in the holy Ghoſt is manifold. Firſt, conſidering that all the gifts which any man hath, whether they be gifts of knowledge in the word of God or of humaine learning, or againe giftes whereby men are inabled to practiſe their trades or handicrafts, doe come not from our ſelues but from the holy Ghoſt, we are taught this dutie. Looke what gifts ſoeuer we for our parts haue receiued of the ſpirit of God, we muſt vſe them ſo, as they may euer ſerue for the glorie of God and good of our brethren, and not to the practiſing and ſetting forth of any manner of ſinne, and by conſequent to the ſeruice of the deuill. For that is as if a man receiuing riches and reuenewes of his prince, ſhould ſtraightway go to the princes enemie and employ them for his benefit; which were a point of exceeding treacherie.

Furthermore, in euery place the greater part of men are blinde and ignorant perſons both young & old; and aged folkes, as they are ignorant themſelues, ſo they nuzzle vp their youth in ignorant. Conferre with them, you ſhal finde that they can ſay nothing but that which may bee learned by cōmon talke, as that there is a God, and that this God muſt be worſhipped: but aske them further of the meanes of their ſaluation, and of their duties to God and man, and they wil anſwere you, that they are not booke-learned: tell them further that the ordinarie meanes to bring men to knowledge is the preaching of the word, which if they will not vſe, they ſhal be inexcuſable; they will ſay, alas, we are dull of memorie, and cannot learne. Well, for all this, thou ſaieſt thou beleeueſt in the holy Ghoſt, and he is thy ſchoolemaſter to teach thee: though thy capacitie be dull, yet he is able to open thine vnderſtanding: for as there is outward teaching by the miniſter, ſo the worke of the holy Ghoſt is ioyned withall to enlighten the conceit of the mind, that they which heare the word with reuerence may profit thereby and get knowledge. But if for all this men will not learne, but remaine ignorant ſtil, then let them marke the example of the ſonnes of Eli: he in ſome part did rebuke them for their wickednes, but yet they would not obey; & the reaſon is there ſet down, becauſe the Lord would deſtroy them. In the ſame manner howſoeuer we may not iudge of any mans perſon, yet this may be ſaide, that if men refuſe to heare the word of God when they may, or if in hearing they will not obey, it is a fearefull ſigne that God will at length deſtroy them. When a trumpet is ſounded in a mans eare, and he lies ſtill, not ſtirring at all, he is certainely dead. And ſurely when the trumpet of the Goſpell is ſounded in the eares of our heats, if we awake not out of our ſinnes to newneſſe of life, we are no better then dead men before God. Wherefore the caſe being thus dangerons, and the puniſhment ſo great, let vs labour in time for the knowledge of Gods will, and preuent Gods iudgements before they light vpon vs. 1. Sa. 2. 25

Thirdly, as the Apoſtle ſaith, If wee liue in the ſpirit, we muſt walke in the ſpirit, that is, if we be dead vnto ſinne by the power of the holy Ghoſt, and be raiſed vp to newneſſe of life, then we muſt walke in the ſpirit. Nowe to walke in the ſpirit, is to lead our liues in ſhewing forth the fruites of the ſpirit. In Eſai the holy Ghoſt is compared vnto water powred foorth on the drie land, which maketh the willowes to bloſſome and to beare fruite: wherefore thoſe that haue the gifts of the ſpirit muſt be trees of righteouſnes bringing forth the fruits of the ſpirit, which (as they are ſet downe by Paul) are principally nine. Gal. 5. 25. Eſa. 44. 3.4

The firſt fruit is loue, which reſpects both God and man. Loue vnto God is an inward and ſpirituall motion in the heart, whereby whereby God is loued abſolutely for himſelfe. This loue ſhews it ſelf in two things: I. When a mans heart is ſet & diſpoſed to ſeeke the honour and glory of God in all things. II. when a man by all meanes ſtriues and endeauours himſelfe to pleaſe God in euery thing, counting it a moſt miſerable eſtate to liue in the diſpleaſure of God: and the heart that is thus affected, can haue no greater torment then to fall into ſinne, whereby God is offended and his diſpleaſure prouoked. By theſe two ſignes a man may know whether hee loue God or no, and by them alſo muſt he teſtifie his loue. Now our loue to man is a fruite of this loue of God: for God is to be loued for himſelfe: man is loued for God. This loue muſt not be in ſhewe onely, but in deede and action. Saint Iohn biddeth vs not to loue in word & tongue onely, but in deede and truth. Brotherly loue doth not alwaies lie hid, but when an occaſion is offered, it doth breake forth into action; it is like fire, which though for a time it be ſmothered, yet at length it breakes foorth into a flame. And ſo much loue a man ſheweth to his neighbour, as he hath; and where none is ſhewed, none is.

1. Ioh. 3. 18.

The ſecond fruit is Ioy, when a man is glad at the good of his neighbour as at his owne good: and this is a ſpeciall worke of the holy Ghoſt. For the nature of man is to pine away, and to grieue at the good of an other; and contrariwiſe it is a worke of grace to reioyce thereat. Paul ſaith, Reioyce with them that reioyce. And this was the holy practiſe of the friends and neigbours of Zacharias and Elizabeth, when Iohn Baptiſt was borne, they came and reioyced with them.

Rom. 12. 15.

Luk. 1. 58.

The third fruit of the ſpirit, is peace. Of this Paul ſpeaketh moſt excellently, ſaying, If it be poſſible, as much as in you is, haue peace with all men. It is nothing els but concord which muſt be kept in an holy manner, with all men, both good and badde, ſo farre forth as can be. Iſai the Prophet ſpeaking of the fruites of the Goſpel ſaith, The wolfe ſhall dwell with the lambe, and the leopard with the kidde, &c. Where note, that in the kingdome of Chriſt, when a man is called into the ſtate of grace, howſoeuer by nature he be as a wolfe, as a leopard, as a lyon, or as a beare; yet he ſhall then lay away his cruell nature, and become gentle, and liue peaceably with all men. Now for the practiſing of this peace, there are three duties eſpecially to be learned and performed: I. rather then peace ſhould be broken, a man muſt yeeld of his owne right. When Publicans came to our Sauiour Chriſt for tribute, he had a lawfull excuſe: for howſoeuer he liued in low eſtate among men, yet he was the right heire to the kingdome, and therefore was free; neuertheleſſe hee ſtood not on his priuiledge, but calleth Peter, ſaying, Leaſt we offend them, goe to the ſea and caſt in an angle, and take the firſt fiſh that commeth vp: and when thou haſt opened his mouth, thou ſhalt finde a piece of twentie pence: take it, and giue it to them for thee and me. Here we ſee that our Sauiour Chriſt, rather then hee would breake the common peace, yeelds of his owne right; and ſo we muſt doe if we will be good followers of him. Secondly, when any man ſhall ſinne either in word or in deede, ſpecially if it be vpon infirmitie, we muſt auoid bitter inuectiues and mildly tell him of his fault. and in all meeknes and loue labour for his amendment. So Paul teacheth vs, ſaying, If any man be fallen into any fault by occaſion, reſtore ſuch an one with the ſpirit of meeknes, conſidering thy ſelfe, leaſt thou be alſo tempted, &c. Beare ye one anothers burden. Thirdly, euery man within the compaſſe of his calling, muſt be a peace-maker betweene them that are at variance. This is a ſpeciall dutie of godlineſſe and chriſtianitie, and therefore our Sauiour Chriſt doeth highly commend ſuch, & pronounceth this bleſſing vpon them, that they ſhall be called the children of God.

Math. 17. 26, 27.

Gal. 6. 1.

Math. 5. 9.

The fourth point of the ſpirit, is long ſuffering: and it ſtandeth in two points: I. when a man deferreth his anger and is hardly brought to it: II. beeing angrie doth yet moderate the ſame. and ſtay the hotneſſe of that affection, For the firſt, to bridle anger, it is a ſpeciall worke of the holy Ghoſt, and the meanes to attaine vnto it are theſe: I. not to take notice of the iniuries and wrongs done vnto vs, if they be not of great moment; but to let them paſſe, as not knowing them. Salomon ſaith, It is a mans diſcretion to deferre his anger. Now how is that done? it is added in the next words, It is the glorie of a man to paſſe by infirmitie: that is, when a man ſhal ouerſhoote himſelfe, either in word or in deede, it to let paſſe either wholly, or till a time conuenient, as though we know not of it. The ſecond way to deferre & bridle anger is, when a mā hath iniured vs either in word or deed, to thinke with our ſelues that we haue iniured other in the ſame maner: and for this cauſe Salomon ſaith, Giue not thine heart to all that men ſpeake, leaſt thou heare thy ſeruant curſing thee: for oftentimes thine heart alſo knoweth that thou haſt curſed others. Eccles. 7. 23. A man muſt not liſten to euery mans words at all times: but hee is to thinke that he hath ſpokē or done the ſame to other men, and that nowe the Lord meeteth with him by the like, as it is ſaid, With what meaſure yee mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you againe. Matth. 7. 2. This is a thing which few conſider. Euill men deſire good report, & would haue all men ſpeake well of them, whereas they can ſpeake well of none: but indeede they muſt beginne to ſpeake well of others before others ſpeake well of them. Thirdly, a man muſt conſider how God dealeth with him. For ſo often as he ſinneth he prouoketh God to caſt him away and to confound him eternally; yet the Lord is mercifull and long ſuffering. Euen ſo when men doe offend and iniure vs, we muſt doe as God doth: not be angrie, but fight againſt our affections, endeauouring to become patient and long ſuffering as God is with vs. The ſecond propertie of long ſuffering, is to keepe the affection of anger in moderation and compaſſe. It is not alwayes a ſinne to be angry, and therefore it is ſaid of Chriſt (in whome was no blemiſh of ſin) that he was angrie: Mark. 3. 5. yet we muſt looke that our anger be moderate not continuing ouerlong, as Paul ſaith, let not the ſunne goe downe vpon your wrath.

The fifth fruit of the ſpirit is gentlenes, whereby a man behaueth and ſheweth himſelfe friendly and courteous to euery man, as Paul ſaith to Titus, Put them in remembrance that they ſpeake euill of no man, that they be no fighters but ſoft, ſhewing all meekenes vnto all men, whether they be good or bad. Tit. 3. 2. This gentlenes ſtandeth in theſe points: I. to ſpeake to euery man friendly and louingly. II. to ſalute friendly and courteouſly. III. to be ready vpon euery occaſion to giue reuerence and honour to euery man in his place. It is made a queſtion of ſome, whether a man is to ſalute and ſpeake vnto them that are knowne to be lewd and wicked men: but here wee ſee whatour dutie is, in that we are taught to be courteous to all men both good and badde, yet ſo as we approue not of their ſinnes: as for that which S. Iohn ſaith of falſe prophets, Receiue them not, neither bid them God ſpeede, 2. Ioh. 10. it is to be vnderſtood of giuing an outward approbation to falſe teachers.

The ſixt fruit is goodnes, which is, when a man is readie to doe good and become ſeruiceable in his calling to all men at all times vpon all occaſions. This was to bee ſeene in that holy man Iob: he ſaith, that he was eyes to the blind, and feete to the lame, a father vnto the poore, and when he knew not the cauſe, he ſought it out. Iob. 36. 15 And S. Paul ſhewed this fruit moſt notably after his conuerſion, for he ſaith, that he was made all things to all men that he might ſaue ſome. 1. Cor. 9. 22. Hee was content to vndergoe any thing for the good of any man. And as we haue heard, the godly are trees of righteouſneſſe bearing fruit not for thēſelues but for others, & therefore Paul in the Epiſtle to the Galatians giueth this rule, Do ſeruice one to another in loue. Gal. 5. 13. In theſe daies it is hard to find theſe duties performed in any place. For both practiſe and prouerbe is commonly this, Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all: but it is a graceleſſe ſaying; and the contrarie muſt be practiſed of all, that deſire to be guided by the ſpirit.

The ſeuēth fruite is faith. Faith or fidelitie ſtandeth in theſe two duties. One, to make conſcience of a lie, and to ſpeake euery thing whereof we ſpeake, as we think it is, and not to ſpeake on thing and think an other. A rare thing it is, to finde this vertue in the world now adaies: who is he that maketh conſcience of a lie? and is not truth baniſhed out of our coaſts; conſidering that for gaines and outward commodities men make no bones of glozing and diſſembling? but alas, the practiſe is damnable, and the contrarie is the fruit of the holy Ghoſt, namely to ſpeake the truth from the heart: and he that can doe this, by the teſtimonie of God himſelfe ſhall reſt in the mountaine of his holines, Pſal. 15. euen in the kingdome of heauen. The ſecond point, wherein fidelitie conſiſteth is, when a man hath made a promiſe that is lawfull and good, to keepe and performe the ſame. Some thinke it a ſmall matter to breake promiſe, but indeede it is a fruit of the fleſh; and contrarywiſe a fruit of the ſpirit to performe a lawfull promiſe: and a mans word ſhould be as ſure as an obligation: and in conſcience a man is bound to keepe promiſe ſo farre forth as hee will, to whome the promiſe is made. Indeede if a man be releaſed of his promiſe, he is then free: otherwiſe if we promiſe mise and doe not performe, we doe not onely cracke our credit before men, but also sinne before God.

The eight fruit of the spirit is meekenes, which is a notable grace of God, when a man prouoked by iniuries doth neither intend nor enterprise the requitall of the same. And it stands in three duties. The first is to interpret the sayings and doings of other men in better part as much as possibly may be. The second, when men mistake and misconstrue our sayings and doings, if the matter be of smaler moment, to be silent & patient as Christ was, when he was accused before the high Priests & Pharises: this being withall remembred, that if the matter be of weight & moment, we may defend our selues by soft and mild answers. The third, is not to contend in word or deed with any man, but when we are to deale with others, to speake our minde, and so an ende.

The last fruit of the spirit is temperance, whereby a man bridleth his appetite or lust in meate, drinke, and apparell. In bridling the lust, these rules must be obserued. I. Eating and drinking must be ioyned with continuall fasting, after this manner. We must not glut our selues, but rather abstaine from that which nature desireth, and as some vse to speake, leaue our stomackes craving. II. A man must so eate and drinke, as afterward hee may the better be inabled for Gods worship. Creatures are abused when they make vs vnfit to serue God. The common fault is, on the Sabbath day men so pamper themselues, as that they are made vnfit both to heare and learne Gods word, and fitte for nothing but to slumber and sleepe: but following this rule of temperance these faultes shall be amended. III. This must be a caueat in our apparell, that wee bee attired according to our callings in holy comelinesse. The Lord hath threatned to visit all those that are cloathed in strange apparell. And holy comelinesse is this, when the apparell is both for fashion and matter so made & worne, that it may expresse & shew forth the graces of God in the heart, as sobrietie, temperance, grauitie, &c. and the beholder may take occasion by the apparell, to acknowledge and cõmend these vertues. But lamẽtable is the time, looke on men and women in these dayes, & you may see & read their sinnes written in great letters on their apparel, as intemperance, pride, & wantonnes. Euery day new fashions please the world; but indeede that holy comelines which the holy Ghost doth commend to vs, is the right fashion when all is done. And these are the nine fruits of the spirit, which we must put in practise in our liues and conuersations.

Tit. 2. 3.

Fourthly, if we beleeue in the H. Ghost, and thereupon doe perswade our selues, that he will dwell in vs: we must dayly labour as we are commanded to keepe our vessels in holinesse & honour vnto the Lord; and the reason is good. If a man be to entertaine but an earthly prince or some mã of state, he would be sure to haue his house in a readinesse, and all matters in order against his comming, so as euery thing might be pleasing vnto so worthy a guest: well now, behold, we put our confidence and affiance in the holy Ghost, and doe beleeue that he will come vnto vs, & sanctifie vs, and lodge in our hearts. He is higher then all states in the world whatsoeuer, and therefore we must looke that our bodies and soules be kept in an honourable and holy manner, so as they may be fit temples for him to dwell in. S. Paul biddeth vs not to grieue the holy spirit, where the holy Ghost is compared to a guest, and our bodies and soules vnto Innes: and as men vse their guests friendly and courteously, shewing vnto them all seruice and dutie: so must we doe to Gods spirit which is come to dwell and abide in vs, doing nothing in any case, which may disquiet or molest him. Nowe there is nothing so grieuous vnto him as our sinnes, and therfore we must make conscience of all manner of sinne, least by abusing of our selues, we doe cause the holy Ghost (as it were) with griefe to depart from vs. When the arke of the couenãt which was a signe of the presence of God, was in the house of Obed Edom, the text saith, that the Lord blessed him & all his house: but when the holy Ghost dwells in a mans heart, there is more then the arke of the Lord present, euen God himself: & therfore may we looke for a greater blessing. Nowe then shal we grieue the holy Ghost by sinning, seeing we reape such benefit by his aboad? It is saide that our Sauiour Christ was angrie when he came into the temple at Ierusalem, and saw the abuses therein. Now shall he be angrie for the abuses that are done in a temple of stone, & seeing the temples of our bodies which are not made of stone, but are spirituall, figured gured by that earthly temple, seeing them (I say) abused by sinne, wil he not be much more angrie? yea we may assure our selues he cannot abide that. And therefore if we beleeue in the holy Ghost, we must hereupon be moued to keepe our bodies and soules pure and cleane. And further, to perswade vs hereunto, we must remember this, that when we pollute our soules and bodies with any maner of sinne, we make them euen stables and styes for our wretched enemie the deuill to harbour in. For when Satan is once cast out, if afterward we fall againe to our old sinnes and loosenesse of life, and to defile our bodies, they are then most cleane and neat for them to dwell in: whereupon hee will come and bring seuen other deuils worse then himselfe, and so a mans last end shall be worse then his beginning. Now what a fearefull thing is this, that the bodie which should be a temple for the H. Ghost, by our sins should be made a stable for the deuil. Furthermore S. Paul biddeth vs, not to quench the spirit. The graces of the holy spirit in this life, are like sparks of fire, which may soone bee quenched with a little water. Now so oft as we sinne, we cast water vpon the grace of God, and as much as we can put out the same: therefore it stands vs in hand to make conscience of euery thing wherein we may offend & displease God. And we may assure our selues, that so long as we liue and lie in our corruptions and sinnes, the holy Ghost will neuer come & dwell with vs. He is a spirit most pure and chaste, and therefore must haue an vndefiled temple to dwell in.

1. Thess. 4. 4.

Eph. 4. 30.

2. Sam. 6. 11.

1. Thes. 5. 19.

Thus we haue heard what is to bee beleeued concerning the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost. Now, looke as we beleeue in God distinguished into three persons: so we must remember, that when wee performe diuine worship to him, we may distinguish the persons, but we are not to seuer them: when we pray to the Father, we must not omit the Sonne or the holy Ghost, but make our prayers to them all: for as in nature they are one, & in person not deuided but distinguished: so in all worship we must neuer confound or seuer the persons, but distinguish them, and worship the Trinitie in vnitie and vnitie in Trinitie: one God in three persons, and three persons in one God.

Hitherto we haue intreated of the first part of the Creede concerning God: now followes the second part thereof concerning the Church: and it was added to the former vpon speciall consideration. For [a] the right order of a confession did require, that after the Trinitie the Church should bee mentioned, as the house after the owner, the temple after God, and the cittie after the builder. Againe, the Creede is concluded with points of doctrine concerning the Church, because whosoeuer is out of it, is also foorth of the number of Gods children: and he cannot haue God for his father, which hath not the Church for his mother.

Aug. l. 4. de symb ad Catech.

Question is made what the wordes are which are to be supplied in this article, the holy Catholicke Church, whether, I beleeue, or, I beleeue in: and auncient expositours haue sufficiently determined the matter. One [b] saith, In these wordes, in which is set forth our faith of the God-head, it is saide, In God the Father, in the Sonne, and in the holy Ghost; but in the rest where the speech is not of the God-head, but of creatures and mysteries, the preposition In is not added that it should be, in the holy Church, but that wee should beleeue there is an holy Church not as God, but as a companie gathered to God. And men should beleeue that there is remission of sinnes, not, in the remission of sinnes: and they should beleeue the resurrection of the bodie, not, in the resurrection of the bodie: therefore by this preposition the Creator is distinguished from the creatures, and things pertaining to God, from things pertaining to men. An other vpon these wordes, This is the worke of God that ye beleeue in him, saith, If ye beleeue in him, ye beleeue him, not if ye beleeue him, ye beleeue in him, for the deuils beleeued God, but did not beleeue in him. Againe of the Apostles, we may say, we beleeue Paul, but we do not beleeue in Paul: we beleeue Peter, but we beleeue not in Peter. For his faith that beleeueth in him which iustifieth the vngodly, is imputed to him for righteousnesse. What is it therefore to beleeue in him? by beleeuing to loue and like, and as it were to passe into him, and to bee incorporated into his members. Now the reasons which some Papists bring to the contrary to proue that wee may beleeue in the creatures, and in the Church, are of no moment. First they alleadge the phrase of Scripture, Exod. 14. 31. They beleeued in God, and in Moses. 1 Sam. 27. 12. And Achis beleeued in David. 2. Chr. 20. 20. Beleeue in the Prophets and prosper. Ans. The Hebrewe phrase in which the seruile letter Beth is vsed, must not be translated with a prepoſition that ruleth an accuſatiue or ablatiue caſe, but with a datiue on this maner, Beleeue Moſes, Dauid the Prophets: & it doth not impart any affiãce in the creature, but onely a giuing of credence by one man to another. Secondly they alleadge, that ancient fathers read the article on this manner. I beleeue in the holy Catholike Church. Anſ. Indeede ſome haue done ſo: but by this kind of ſpeech they ſignified no more but thus much, that they beleeued that there was a Catholicke Church.

Thus hauing found what words are to be ſupplied, let vs come to the meaning of the article. And that we may proceede in order, let vs firſt of al ſee what the Church is. The Church is a peculiar companie of men predeſtinated to life euerlaſting and made one in Chriſt. Firſt I ſay, it is a peculiar companie of men: for Saint Peter ſaith, Ye are a choſen generation, a royall prieſthood, an holy nation, and a peculiar people. He ſpeakes indeede of the Church of God on earth, but his ſaying may be alſo extended to the whole Church of God, as well in heauen as in earth. Now becauſe there can be no companie vnleſſe it haue a beginning and a cauſe whereby it is gathered: therefore I added further in the definition, predeſtinate to life euerlaſting. Noting thereby the ground & cauſe of the Catholike church, namely Gods eternall predeſtination to life euerlaſting: and to this purpoſe our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Feare not little flocke, for it is your fathers will to giue you the kingdome: ſignifying thereby, that the firſt and principall cauſe of the Church, is the good pleaſure of God whereby he hath before all workes purpoſed to aduance his Elect to eternall ſaluation. Therefore one ſaith well, [a] onely the Elect are the Church of God. And further, becauſe no companie can continue and abide for euer, vnleſſe the members thereof be ioyned and coupled togither by ſome bond, therefore I adde in the laſt place, made one with Chriſt. This vnion maketh the Church to bee the Church: and by it the members thereof, whether they be in heauen or in earth, are diſtinguiſhed from all other companies whatſoeuer. Now this coniunction betweene Chriſt and the Church is auouched by S. Paul when he ſaith, Chriſt is the head to the bodie, which is his Church: and when he aſcribes the name of Chriſt not onely to the perſon of the Sonne but to the Church it ſelfe, as in the epiſtle to the Galatians. To Abraham and to his ſeede were the promiſes made: he ſaith not, and to his ſeede: as ſpeaking of many, but, and vnto his ſeede, as ſpeaking of one, which is Chriſt: that is, not the redeemer alone, but alſo the Church redeemed. For Chriſt as he is man is not the onely ſeede of Abraham. And this definition of the Church is almoſt in ſo many words ſet downe in the Scriptures, in that it is called the Familie of God, partly in heauen, and partly in earth, named of Chriſt: and it is alſo called the heauenly Ieruſalem, the mother of vs all: and the celeſtiall Ieruſalem: and, the congregation of the firſt borne. Now for the better vnderſtanding of the nature, eſtate, and parts of the Church, two points amõg the reſt muſt be conſidered; the efficient cauſe thereof, Gods Predeſtination; and the forme, the myſticall vnion.

In handling the doctrine of Predeſtination, my meaning is, only to ſtand on ſuch points as are reuealed in the word and neceſſarie, tending to edification. And firſt I will ſhew what is the truth, and ſecondly the contrarie falſhood. In the truth I conſider foure things: I. what Predeſtination is: II. what is the order of it: III. what be the parts of it: IV. what is the vſe.

Predeſtination may thus be defined: It is a part of the counſell of God, whereby hee hath before all times purpoſed in himſelfe to ſhew mercie on ſome men, and to paſſe by others, ſhewing his iuſtice on them for the manifeſtation of the glory of his owne name. Firſt, I ſay, it is a part of his counſell, becauſe the counſell or decree of God, vniuerſally extends it ſelfe to al things that are: and Predeſtination is Gods decree ſo farre forth as it concernes the reaſõable creatures eſpecially men. Now in euery purpoſe or decree of God, three things muſt be conſidered; the beginning, the matter, the end. The beginning is the will of God whereby he willeth and appointeth the eſtate of his creatures: and it is the moſt abſolute, ſupreame, and ſoueraigne cauſe of all things that are, ſo farre forth as they haue beeing: hauing nothing either aboue it ſelfe or out of it ſelfe, to be an impulſiue cauſe to mooue or incline it; and to ſay otherwiſe is to make the wil of God to be no will. Indeede mens wills are mooued and diſpoſed by externall cauſes, out of themſelues borrowed from the things wherof deliberation is made, becauſe they are to be ruled by equitie and reaſon: and a mans bare will without reaſō is nothing. Nowe Gods will is not ruled by another rule of reaſon or iuſtice, but it ſelfe is an abſolute rule both of iuſtice and reaſon. A thing is not firſt of all reaſonable and iuſt, and then afterward willed by God: but it is firſt of all willed by God, & thereupon becomes reaſonable and iuſt. The matter of his purpoſe is a decreed manifeſtatiō of two of the moſt principall attributes of the Godhead, mercy and iuſtice: and that with a limitation or reſtraint of mercy to ſome of the creatures, & iuſtice to ſome others, becauſe it was his good will & pleaſure. And we are not to imagine that this is a point of crueltie in God: for his very eſſence or nature is not iuſtice alone, or mercy alone, but iuſtice and mercy both together: and therefore to purpoſe the declaration of them both vpon his creatures ouer whome he is a ſoueraigne Lord; and that without other reſpects, vpon his very will and pleaſure, is no point of iniuſtice. The ſupreame end of the counſel of God, is the manifeſtation of his owne glorie partly in his mercy, and partly in his iuſtice. For in common equitie, the ende which hee propoundes vnto himſelfe of all his doings, muſt bee anſwerable to his nature; which is maieſtie and glorie and (as I haue ſaide) iuſtice and mercy it ſelfe.

And becauſe Pauls diſputation in the 9. to the Romanes giues light and ſufficient confirmation to this which I nowe teach, I will ſtand a little to open and reſolue the ſame. From the 1. verſe to the 6. hee ſets downe his griefe conceiued for his brethren the Iewes, and therewithall, that it might not be thought that hee ſpake of malice, he doth onely in cloſe and obſcure maner inſinuate the Reiection of that nation. This done in the 6. v. he anſwers a ſecret obiection which might be made, on this manner: If the Iewes be reiected, then the word of God is of none effect: that is, then the couenant made with the forefathers is void: but the couenant can not be voide: therefore the Iewes are not reiected. The aſſumption he taks for graunted, & denies the conſequence of the propoſition. And the ground of his deniall is, becauſe there is a diſtinction betweene man & man, euen among the Iewes, whereby ſome are indeede in the couenant ſome not. And this diſtinction is prooued by three examples: the firſt in this verſe that of the children of Iacob the common parent of all the Iewes, ſome are Iſrael, that is, truly in the couenant as Iacob was: and ſome are not Iſrael. Now it might be further obiected, that the Iewes are not onely the poſteritie of Iacob, but the ſeede of Abraham in whome all nations of the earth are bleſſed: and therefore not to be reiected. And to this Paul anſwers verſ. 7. alleadging a ſecond example of the diſtinction betweene man and man out of the familie of Abraham, in which ſome were indeede ſonnes, ſome were not. For the proofe of this, firſt he ſets downe the wordes of the text in Moſes, In Iſaac ſhall thy ſeede be called: and ſecondly makes an expoſition of them with a collection on this manner: Al they which are the ſonnes of the promiſe are the ſeede of Abraham or the ſonnes of God: but Iſaac is a ſonne of promiſe and not Iſmael: therefore Iſaac is the ſeede of Abraham and heire of the bleſſing, and not Iſmael. The propoſition is in the 8. verſe, the aſſumption in the 9. verſe, the concluſion in the 7. verſe. Here marke, I. how he makes a double ſeede, one according to the fleſh, the other ſpirituall: and two kind of ſonnes, one of the fleſh, the other the ſonne of the promiſe or the ſonne of God: for he puts the one for the other. II. That the diſtinction betweene Iſaac and Iſmael, whereby one is in the couenant of grace, the other nonſtands not in their foreſeene faith and vnbeleefe, and the fruits of them: but in the purpoſe and will of God it ſelfe. For Iſaac is called the child of promiſe, becauſe by the vertue of it he was borne, & beleeued, and was adopted the childe of God, and made heire of the couenant giuen to Abraham: and therefore conſequently the right of adoption befell him by the meere good pleaſure of God, which is the firſt cauſe of our ſaluation without reſpect of any thing in the perſon of Iſaac. For what God by his promiſe brings to paſſe in time, that he moſt freely decreed before all times. Now conſidering the Iewes might ſay that Iſmael was reiected, becauſe he was borne of the handmaide Hagar, whereas they, for their parts deſcend of Abraham and Sarai, by Iſaac the lawfull ſonne, Paul addes a third example of the diſtinction betweene man and man out of the familie of Iſaac, in which Iacob was a true ſonne and heire of the promiſe, and Eſau was not. Now the diſtinction of theſe two perſons is propounded in the tenth verſ. and confirmed

verse 11, 12, 13. in which are set downe three things: I. the time of this distinction, yer the children were borne, and therefore whē they had neither done good nor euil. And this circumstance is noted, to shewe that God was not mooued by any preuision or preconsideration of Iacobs godlinesse & Esaus prophanenes to preferre the one before the other. II. the ende why the distinction was made at this time & not afterward when they were borne is, that the purpose of God which is according to his election might remaine sure, not of works but by him that calleth: that is, that by this meanes it might appeare, that when God receiues any man into the couenant of eternall life, it proceeds not of any dignitie in the man whom God calleth, but from his mercie & alone good pleasure, that his decree of sauing the elect might remaine firme & sure for euer. Hence it is manifest that there is an vnchangeable decree of electiō of some men (for he that takes all & excepts none can not be said to choose) to saluation, depending vpon the alone will of God; and therefore necessarily by the lawe of contraries, there is an opposite decree of reprobatiō: for in that God ordaineth some to eternall saluation, he testifies thereby, that his purpose is to passe by some without shewing of mercie. III. The authour of this distinction, God himselfe by his purpose before all times, which purpose he made manifest by testimony giuen to Rebecca, saying, the greater shall serue the yonger: that is, the first borne and more excellent according to the flesh, shall loose his birthright and the blessing of his father, & in respect of title to the couenant, be subiect to the yonger. And becausse this testimonie concerning the freedome & seruitude of Iacob & Esau might seeme sufficient to prooue the election of the first and the reiection of the second, therefore Paul addes a second testimonie out of Malachi, I haue loued Iacob and hated Esau: that is, I haue purposed to loue Iacob and to hate Esau. And these wordes no doubt are alleadged to expoūd the former place out of Moses, and shewe that the bondage of Esau was ioyned with the hatred of God, and the freedome of Iacob with the loue of God as tokens thereof.

Against this receiued exposition of the former wordes which I haue nowe propounded, sundrie expositions are made. First, that the prerogatiue of Isaac aboue Ismael, and Iacob aboue Esau, was onely in temporarie blessings, in that GOD vouchsafed vnto thē the right of the land of Canaan. Ans. If these places are to bee vnderstood of temporal blessings and not spirituall, then the Apostle hath not fitly alleadged the former examples, to prooue the reiection of the Iewes from the Couenant. For though it be graunted, there bee a difference betweene man and man in respect of earthly blessings, yet doeth it not followe that there shall be the same difference in things concerning the kingdome of heauen. If a father for some cause disinherit one or two of his childrē, it were absurd thereupon to conclude that he might therefore kill any of the rest. Againe, the land of Canaan was not onely an earthly inheritance, but also a pledge and figure vnto our forefathers of a better inheritance in heauen: and therefore the excluding of Ismael and Esau from the land of Canaan was a signe that they were excluded from the Couenant of grace, and the right of eternall life. Some others say, that by Iacob and Esau are not meant two persons, but the two nations of the Idumeans and the Israelites. Ans. It is a manifest vntruth. For it was not possible for two nations to striue in the wombe of Rebecca, vnlesse we considered them as they were comprehended vnder the two heades, to wit, the very persons of Iacob and Esau. And whereas they say that Esau in person neuer serued Iacob, but onely in his posteritie, the answere is, that Iacobs freedome and prerogatiues were spirituall, and not temporall, which by faith hee sawe a farre off, but inioyed not: and therefore proportionally Esau was debased to the condition of a seruant in respect of his younger brother, not so much in respect of his outward estate and condition, as in regard of the couenant made with his auncestours from which he was barred. And though it be graunted that by Iacob and Esau two nations and not two persons are to bee vnderstood, yet all comes to one head, for the receiuing of the natiō of the Israelites into the Couenant, and the excluding of the nation of the Edomites, both descending of Iacob and Esau, serue as well to prooue Gods eternall election and reprobation, as the receiuing and reiecting of one man. Others say that these wordes, I haue hated Esau, are thus to be vnderstoode, I haue lesse loued Esau then Iacob. But how then shal we say that

Paul

Paul hath fitly alleadged this text to proue the reiection of the Iewe from the fauour of God and the couenant of grace, considering that of men whereof one is loued more of God, the other lesse; both may stil remaine in the Couenant. Lastly, it is alleadged that the former expositiō makes Ismael and Esau damned persons. Answ. We must leaue vnto God all secret iudgement of particular persons, and yet neuertheless Paul doth very fitly in their two persons, both descending of Abraham, & both circumcised; set foorth examples of such, as for their outward prerogatiues, are indeede barred from the couenant of life euerlasting before God. And againe the opposition made by Paul requires that the contrary to that which is spoken of Isaac and Iacob, should be said of Ismael and Esau. And there is nothing spoken of either of them in the Scriptures which argues the disposition of men ordained to eternal life. Ismael is noted with the brand of a mocker, and Esau of a prophane man.

To proceede in the text, because the doctrine of Paul deliuered in the former verses might seeme straunge vnto the Romans, therefore in the 14. verse, he layes down an obiection, and answers the same. The obiection is this: If God put distinction betweene man and man, without respect had to their persons, vpon his own will and pleasure, then is he vniust: but he is not vniust: therefore he makes no such distinction. The answere is, God forbidde. Whereby he denies the consequence of the proposition, on this manner: Though God should elect some to saluation, and reiect some others, and that vpon his will, yet were there no iniustice with GOD. The reason of this answere followes in the 18. verse. God hath absolute power or freedome of will, whereby without beeing bound to any creature, hee may and can first of all haue mercie on whome he will, and secondly harden whome he will. For the proofe of the first, that GOD hath mercie on whome he will, be layes downe the testimonie of Moses, verse. 15. I will haue mercie on him on whome I will shewe mercie, and I will haue compassion on him on whome I will haue compassion. And in verse 16. makes his election thence, that it [namely the purpose of God according to election, verse. 11.] is not in him that willeth, or in him that runneth, but in God that sheweth mercie. Whereby he teacheth, that the free election of God in order goes before all things that may in time befall mā: and that therefore neither the intentions and indeauours of the minde, nor the workes of our life, which are the effects of election, can bee the impulsiue causes to mooue God to choose vs to saluation. The second, that God hardens whom he will, is confirmed and made plaine by the testimonie of Scripture concerning Pharao verse. 17.

In the 19. verse there followes another obiection, arising out of the answere to the former, on this manner: If God will haue some to be hardened and reiected, & his will cannot be resisted, then with no iustice can he punish them that are necessarily subiect to his decree: but God will haue some to be hardened and reiected, & his will cannot be resisted: therefore (saith the aduersarie) with no iustice can he punish man that is necessarily subiect to his decree. Heere marke, that if there had bin an vniuersall election of all men, and if men had beene elected or reiected according as God did foresee that they would beleeue or not beleeue, the occasion of this obiection had beene cut off. But let vs come to Pauls answer. In the 20. verse he takes the assumptiō for granted, that some are reiected because God will: and that the will, that is, the decree of God cannot be resisted: and onely denies the coherence of the proposition, checking the malipert pride of the aduersarie, and shewing that the making of this wicked and blasphemous collection against the will of God, is as if a man should sue God at the law, and bring him as it were to the barre, & plead against him as his equall, whereas indeede the creature is nothing to the creatour, & is absolutely to submitte it selfe to his will in all things. In verse. 21. he proceedes to a second answer, shewing that Gods will is not to be blamed, because by his absolute soueraigntie and the right of creation, hee hath power to choose men, or to reiect & harden them. And where there is right & power to doe a thing, the will of the doer is not to be blamed. Nowe that God hath this right and power ouer his creature, it is prooued by a comparison from the lesse to the greater, on this manner. The potter hath power ouer the clay to make of the same lumpe one vessell to honour, and another to dishonour: therefore may God much more make some vessels of mercie, and some vessels of wrath prepared to destruction. The first part of the comparison is verse. 21

the second part verſ. 22. 23. And leaſt any man ſhould thinke that God makes veſſels of honour and diſhonour without ſufficient and iuſt cauſe in himſelfe, as the potter may doe: therefore he ſets downe endes of the will of God: he makes veſſels of diſhonour to ſhewe his wrath, and to make manifeſt his power: and againe he condemnes no man till he haue ſuffered him with long patience. And he makes veſſells of honour that he might declare the riches of his glorie vpon them. Hence it is manifeſt firſt that the ende of Predeſtination is the glory of God, which is to bee made manifeſt partly in his iuſtice and partly in his mercy: ſecondly that men are not elected or refuſed of God for their foreſeene corruptions or vertues: for then Paul would not haue ſaid, that God made veſſels of diſhonour, but that beeing ſo already, he left them in their diſhonour.

Thus from the 6. verſe of this chapter to the 24. Paul hath deſcribed vnto vs the doctrine of Gods eternall predeſtination and that by the iudgement of [a] Diuines in all ages.

[a] Aug. de Prædeſt. ſanct. ad Paulinum ep. 79. Enchir. 98. 99 ad Sixtum. 105. epiſt. Hieró. Hedibiæq. 10. Bed. in Rō. & Aquinas &c.

The order of Gods predeſtination is this. It is the propertie of the reaſonable creatures to conceiue one thing after another, whereas God conceiues all things at once with one act of vnderſtanding, and all things both paſt and to come are preſent with him; & therfore in his eternall counſell he decrees not one thing after another but all things at once. Neuertheleſſe for our vnderſtanding ſake, we may diſtinguiſh the counſel of God concerning man into two acts or degrees: the firſt is, the purpoſe of God in himſelfe, in which hee determines what he wil doe, and the end of al his doings: & that is to create al things ſpecially man for his owne glorie, partly by ſhewing on ſome men his mercy, and vpon others his iuſtice. The ſecond is, an other purpoſe whereby he decrees the execution of the former, and laies downe meanes of accompliſhing the ende therof. Theſe two acts of the counſell of God are not to bee ſeuered in any wiſe; nor confounded, but diſtinctly conſidered with ſome difference. For in the firſt, God decrees ſome men to honour by ſhewing his mercie and loue on them, and ſome againe to diſhonour by ſhewing his iuſtice on them: and this man more then that, vpon his will and pleaſure, and there is no other cauſe hereof, knowne to vs. In the ſecond, knowne and manifeſt cauſes are ſet down of the execution of the former decree. For no man is actually condemned; yea God decrees to condemne no man but for his ſins: and no man is actually ſaued but for the merit of Chriſt. Furthermore this latter act of the counſel of God muſt be conceiued of vs in the ſecond place and not in the firſt. For euermore the firſt thing to be intended is the ende it ſelfe, and then afterward the ſubordinate meanes and cauſes whereby the ende is accompliſhed. Againe the ſecond act of Gods counſell containes two other, one which ſetteth downe the preparation of the meanes whereby Gods predeſtination begins to come in execution: and they are two, the creation of man righteous after the image of God, the voluntary fall of Adam, and withall the ſhutting vp of all men vnder damnation: the other appoints the applying of the ſeuerall meanes to the perſons of men; that Gods decree, which was ſet downe before all times, may in time be fully accompliſhed; as ſhal afterward in particular appeare.

Predeſtination hath two partes, the Decree of Election, the Decree of Reprobation or No-election. This diuiſion is plaine by that which hath beene ſaid out of the 9 chapter to the Romanes, and it may be further confirmed by other teſtimonies. Of ſome it is ſaid, that the Lord knowes who are his: and of ſome others, Chriſt ſhall ſay in the day of iudgement, I neuer knew you. In the Acts it is ſaid, that as many of the Gentiles as were ordained to life euerlaſting beleeued. And Iude ſaith of falſe prophets, that they were ordained to condemnation.

Iud. 4.

In handling of the decree of election, I will conſider three things: I. what election is: II. the execution thereof: III. the knoweledge of particular Election. For the firſt, Gods election is a decree in which according to the good pleaſure of his will, he hath certainly choſen ſome men to life eternall in Chriſt for the praiſe of the glorie of his grace. This is the ſame which Paul ſaith to the Epheſians, God hath choſen vs in Chriſt before the foundation of the world, that wee ſhould be holy and without blame before him in loue: who hath predeſtinate vs to bee adopted through Ieſus Chriſt vnto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will. Nowe that wee may the better conceiue this doctrine, let vs come to a conſideration of the ſeuerall points thereof. Firſt of all I ſay, Election is Gods decree. For there is nothing in the world that comes to passe either vniuersally or particularly without the eternall and vnchangeable decree of God. And therefore whereas men are actually chosen, and brought to life euerlasting it is because God did purpose with himselfe & decree the same before all worlds. Now touching the decree it selfe, sixe things are to be obserued. The first, what was the motiue or impulsiue cause that mooued God to decree the saluation of any man. Ans. The good pleasure of God. For Paul saith, He will haue mercie on whome he will haue mercie: & He hath predestinate vs according to the good pleasure of God. As for the opinion of them that say, that foreseene faith and good workes are the cause that mooued God to choose men to saluation, it is friuolous. For faith and good workes are the fruites and effects of Gods election. Paul saith, he hath chosen vs, not because hee did foresee that we would become holy, but that we might be holy. And, he hath predestinate vs to adoption. Which is all one as if he had said he hath predestinate vs to beleeue, because adoption comes by beleeuing. Now if men are elected that they might beleeue, then are they not elected because they would beleeue. For it cannot be that one thing should be both the cause and the effect of another.

Rom. 8.18 Eph. 1.5. Eph. 1.4. Ioh. 1.12.

The second point is, that Gods electiō is vnchangeable; so as they which are indeede chosen to saluation cannot perish, but shall without faile attaine to life euerlasting. Paul takes it for a conclusion, that the purpose of God according to election must remaine firme and sure; and againe, that the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. And Samuel saith, The strength of Israel will not lie or repent. For he is not a man that he should repent. Such as Gods nature is, such is his will and counsel: but his nature is vnchangeable, I am Iehouah, saith he, and I change not: therefore his will likewise and his counsels bee vnchangeable. And therefore whensoeuer the spirit of God shall testifie vnto our spirits that we are iustified in Christ, and chosen to saluation; it must be a meanes to cōfort vs, and to establish our hearts in the loue of God. As for the opinion of them that say, the elect may fall from grace and be damned, it is full of hellish discomfort, & no doubt from the deuill. And the reasons commonly alleadged for this purpose are of no moment, as may appeare by the skanning of thē. First they obiect that the churches of the Ephesiās, Thessaloniās, & the dispersed Iewes are all called Elect by the Apostles themselues, yet sundry of them afterward fell away. Answ. I. There are two kinds of iudgement to bee giuen of men, the iudgement of certenty, and the iudgement of charity. By the first indeede, is giuen an infallible determination of any mans election; but it belongs vnto God principally and properly: & to men but in part, namely so farre forth as God shal reueale the estate of one mā vnto another. Nowe the iudgement of charitie belongs vnto all men; and by it leauing all secret iudgements vnto God, wee are charitably to thinke, that all those, that liue in the church of God, professing themselues to be members of Christ, are indeede elect to saluation, till God make manifest otherwise. And on this manner, and not otherwise doe the Apostles call whole Churches elect. II. they are called elect of the principall part, and not because euery member therof was indeede elect; as it is called an heape of corne though the bigger part be chaffe. Secōdly it is alleadged, that Dauid praies that his enemies may be blotted out of the booke of life, which is the election of God, and that Moses and Paul did the like against themselues. Answer. Dauids enemies had not their names written in the booke of life, but onely in the iudgement of men. Thus Iudas so long as hee was one of the disciples of Christ, was accounted as one hauing his name writtē in heauen. Nowe hence it followes, that mens names are blotted out of Gods booke, when it is made cleare and manifest vnto the worlde, that they were neuer indeede written there. And where Moses saith, Forgiue them this sinne: if not, blotte me out of thy booke: and Paul, I could wish to be accursed, &c. their meaning was, not to signifie that men elected to saluation might become reprobates: onely they testifie their zealous affections, that they could bee content to be depriued of their owne saluation, rather then the whole bodie of the people should perish, and God loose his glory. As for that which Christ saith, Haue I not chosen you twelue, and one of you is a deuill? it is to be vnderstood not of election to saluation, but of election to office of an Apostle; which is temporary and changeable.

Eph. 1.4. 1. Thes. 1.4 1. Pet. 1.1. Psal. 69 28 Exo. 32.32 Rom. 9.3. Ioh. 6.70.

The third point is, that there is an actuall election made in time, beeing indeede a fruite of Gods decree, & answerable able vnto it, and therefore I added in the description these wordes, whereby he hath chosen some men. All men by nature are sinners and children of wrath, shut vp vnder one and the same estate of condemnation. And actuall election is, when it pleaseth God to seuer and single out some men aboue the rest, out of this wretched estate of the wicked world, and to bring them to the kingdome of his owne sonne. Thus Christ saith of his owne disciples, I haue chosen you out of the world. Ioh.15.19

The fourth point is the actuall or reall foundation of Gods election, and that is Christ: and therfore we are said to be chosen to saluation in Christ. He must be considered two wayes: as he is God, we are predestinate of him, euen as we are predestinate of the father and the Holy Ghost. As he is our Mediatour we are predestinate in him. For when God with himselfe had decreed to manifest his glory in saiuing some men by his mercy, he ordained further the creation of man in his owne image, yet so as by his owne fall he should infold himselfe and all his posterity vnder damnation: this done, he also decreed that the Word should be incarnate actually, to redeeme those out of the former misery, whome he had ordained, to saluation. Christ therefore himselfe was first of all predestinate as he was to be our head, and as Peter saith, ordained before all worlds; & we secondly predestinate in him, because God ordained that the execution of mans election should be in him. Here if any demand, how we may be assured that Christ in his passion stood in our roome & stead, the resolution will be easie, if we consider that he was ordained in the eternall counsell of God, to be our surety and pledge, and to be a publike person to represent all the Elect in his obedience and sufferings: and therefore it is, that Peter saith, that he was deliuered by the foreknowledge and determinate counsell of God. And Paul, that grace was giuen vnto vs through Christ Jesus before the world was. Eph.1.4. 1.Pet.1.20 Aug.de prædest.sanct. c.13. Act.2.23. 2.Tim.1.6

The fifth point is, concerning the number of the Elect. And that I expressed in these words, hath chosen some men to saluation. If God should decree to communicate his glory and his mercie to all and euery man, there could be no election. For he that takes all, cannot be said to choose. Therefore Christ saith, Many are called, but few are chosen. Some make this question, howe great the number of the elect is, and the answer may be this, that the elect considered in themselues be innumerable, but cōsidered in comparison to the whole world they are but fewe. Hence it followes necessarily, that sauing grace is not vniuersall, but indefinite or particular, vnlesse we wil against common reason make the streams more large and plentifull then the very fountaine it selfe. And this must excite vs aboue all things in the world to labour to haue fellowship with Christ, & to be partakers of the speciall mercy of God in him, yea to haue the same sealed vp in our hearts. Benefits common to all, as the light of the sunne, &c. are not regarded of any. Things common to fewe, though they be but temporall blessings, are sought for of all. God giues not riches to all men, but to some more, to some lesse, to some none. And herevpon howe doe men like drudges toile in the world from day to day, & from yeare to yeare, to inrich themselues? Therfore much more ought men to seeke for grace in Christ, considering it is not common to all. We must not content our selues to say, God is merciful, But we must goe further, and labour for a certificate in the conscience, that we may be able to say that God is indeed mercifull to vs. When the Disciples would haue knowne howe many should be saued, hee omitting the question, answers thus, Striue to enter in at the straight gate. Eph.1.6.

The last point is, the ende of Gods election, and that is the manifesting of the praise and excellency of the glorious grace of God.

Thus hauing seene what election is, let vs come to the executiō thereof. Of which remember this rule, Men predestinate to the ende, that is, glory: or eternall life: are also predestinate to the subordinate meanes, whereby they come to eternall life: and these are vocation, iustification, sanctification, glorification. For the first, he that is predestinate to saluation, is also predestinate to be called, as Paul saith. Whom he hath predestinate, them also he calleth. Secondly, whome God calleth, they also were predestinate to beleeue; therefore sauing faith is called the faith of the Elect. And in the Acts, as many as were ordained to life euerlasting, beleeued. Thirdly whom God hath predestinate to life, them he iustifieth, as Paul saith, whome he hath predestinate, thē he calleth, and whom he calleth, them hee iustifieth. Fourthly, whome he hath predestinate to life, them he hath predestinate to Rom.8.30. Tit.1.1. Act.13.48. Rom.8.30.

sanctification and holinesse of life, as Peter saith, that the Iewes were elect according to the foreknowledge of God the father vnto 1.Pet.1.2. sanctification of the Spirit. Lastly, they that are predestinate to life, are also predestinate to obedience, as Paul saith to the Ephesians, Ye are the workemanshippe of God Eph.2.10. created in Christ Iesus vnto good workes, which God hath ordained that we should walke in them.

This rule beeing the trueth of GOD, must be obserued: for it hath speciall vse. First of all it serues to stoppe the mouthes of vngodly and prophane men. They vse to bolster vp themselues in their sinnes by reasoning on this manner: If I be predestinate to eternal life, I shal be saued whatsoeuer come of it, how wickedly & lewdly soeuer I liue: I will therefore liue as I list, and followe the swinge of mine owne wil. But alas, like blinde bayeards they thinke they are in the way, whē as they rush their heads against the wall, and farre deceiue themselues. For the case standes thus: all men that are ordained to Saluation, are likewise ordained in the counsell of God to vse all the good meanes whereby they come to saluation. And therfore all the elect that liue in this world, shall be called, iustified, sanctified, and lead their liues in all good conscience before God and men: and they that liue and continue in their own wicked waies disputing on this manner, If I be ordained to saluation, I shall not be damned; ouershoote themselues, & as much as they can, plunge themselues headlong into the very pit of hel. And for a man to liue and die in his sinnes, let the world dispute as they wil, it is an infallible signe of one ordained to damnation. Secondly, there bee others that thinke that the preaching of the word, the administration of the Sacraments, admonitions, exhortations, lawes, good orders, and al such good meanes are needlesse, because Gods counsels be vnchangeable: if a mā shall be condemned, nothing shall helpe: if a man be saued nothing shall hinder. But wee must still for our part remēber, that GOD doth not onely ordaine the ende, but also the meanes whereby the ende is compassed: and therefore the very vse of all prescribed meanes is necessary. And for this cause we must be admonished with diligence to labour and vse all good meanes, that we may be called by the ministerie of the Gospel, and iustified, and sanctified, & at length glorified. If a king should giue vnto one of his subiects a princely pallace, vpon condition that hee shall goe vnto it in the way which he shall prescribe; oh what paines would the man take to know the way, and afterward to keepe and continue in it? but behold, the kingdome of heauen is the most glorious and royal pallace that euer was; and God hath bestowed the same on his elect: and he requires nothing at their hands but that they wold turne their faces from this world, & walke vnto it in the way which he hath chalked foorth vnto them in his word. Therefore if we would haue life euerlasting, wee must come foorth of the broad way that leades to destruction, and enter into the straite way that leades to eternall life. We must acquaint our selues with the guides, which are the ministers of the word, that wil crie vnto vs, Here is the way, walke ye in it, when we goe to the right hand or to the left. Vocation, iustification, sanctification, repentance, newe-obedience, are the markes of the way, and we must passe by them all: and thus our weary soules welting a while in this wretched worlde, shal at length be receiued into eternall ioy and happinesse.

Touching the knowledge of particular election, two speciall points are to be skāned: I. whether a man may knowe his election: 2. howe it may be knowne. For the first, Papists are of minde that no man can certenly knowe his owne election vnlesse he be certified thereof by some speciall reuelation from God: but the thing is false and erronious which they say. When the Disciples of our Sauiour Christ returned from preaching, and shewed what wonders they had done, and howe deuills were subiect vnto them, the text sayeth, they reioyced greatly. But Christ answered them againe, saying, In this reioyce not, but Luk.10.20 rather reioyce that your names are written in heauen. Whereby he signifies that men may attaine to a certaine knoweledge of their owne election. For we can not, neither doe we reioyce in things either vnknown or vncerten. Saint Peter saith, Giue 2.Pet.1.10 all diligence to make your election sure. Now in vaine were it to vse diligence if the assurance of election could not be any waies compassed without an extraordinary reuelation. And Paul saith to the Corinthians, Proue your selues whether ye be in the 2.Cor.13.5 faith or not. Where he takes it for granted, that he which hath faith may knowe that he hath faith, and therfore may also know his election: becauſe ſauing faith is an infallible marke of election.

The ſecond point is, how any man may come to know his owne election. And there be two waies of knowing it. The one is by aſcending vp as it were into heauen, there to ſearch the counſell of God, and afterward to come downe to our ſelues. The ſecond by deſcending into our owne hearts to goe vp from our ſelues, as it were by Iacobs ladder, to Gods eternall counſell. The firſt way is dangerous, and not to be atrempted. For the wayes of God are vnſearcheable & paſt finding out. The ſecond way alone is to be followed, which teacheth vs by ſignes & teſtimonies in our ſelues, to gather what was the eternal coũſel of God concerning our ſaluation. And theſe teſtimonies are two: the teſtimony of Gods ſpirit, & the teſtimonie of our ſpirits, as Paul ſaith, the ſpirit of God beareth witneſſe together with our ſpirits, that we are the ſonnes of God.

Rom. 8. 16

Touching the teſtimonie of Gods ſpirit, two queſtions may be demanded. The firſt is, by what meanes the ſpirit of God giueth a particular teſtimonie in a mans conſcience of his adoption. Anſ. It is not done by any extraordinary reuelation, or enthuſiaſme, that is, an ordinarie reuelation without the worde; but by an application of the promiſes of the Goſpel in the forme of a practicall ſyllogiſme, on this manner: Whoſoeuer beleeueth in Chriſt, is choſen to life euerlaſting. This propoſition is ſet downe in the word of God, and it is further propounded, opened, and applied to all that be in the Church of God, by the miniſters of the Goſpel ſet apart for this end. Now while the hearers of Gods word giue themſelues to meditate and conſider of the ſame promiſe, comes the ſpirit of God and enlightens the eyes, & opens the heart, and giues them power both to will to beleeue, and to beleeue indeede: ſo as a man ſhall with freedome of ſpirit, make an aſſumption and ſay, but I beleeue in Chriſt, I renounce my ſelfe, all my ioy and comfort is in him: fleſh and blood cannot ſay this, it is the operation of the holy Ghoſt. And hence ariſeth the bleſſed concluſion which is the teſtimonie of the ſpirit; therefore I am the childe of God.

The ſecond queſtion is, howe a man may diſcerne betweene the illuſion of the deuil, & the teſtimonie of the ſpirit. For as there is a certen perſwaſiõ of Gods fauour from Gods ſpirit; ſo there be ſleights and frauds of the deuill whereby he flatters & ſoothes men in their ſinnes: and there is in all men naturall preſumption in ſhew like faith, indeed no faith. And this counterfeit mock-faith is farre more common in the world then true faith is. Take a view hereof in our ignorant and careleſſe people; aske any one of them, whether he be certen of his ſaluation or no; he will without bones-making, proteſt that he is fully perſwaded and aſſured of his ſaluation in Chriſt: that if there bee but one man in a countrey to be ſaued it is he: that he hath ſerued God alwayes: and done no man hurt: that he hath euermore beleeued, and that hee would not for all the world, ſo much as doubt of his ſaluation. Theſe and ſuch like preſumptious conceits in blinde and ignorant perſons, runne for currant faith in the world. Nowe the true teſtimonie of the ſpirit is diſcerned from naturall preſumption, and all illuſions of the deuill by two effects and fruits thereof, noted by Paul in that he ſaith, that the ſpirit makes vs crie Abba, that is, father. The firſt is, to pray ſo earneſtly with grones and ſighes, as though a man would euen fil heauen & earth with the crie not of his lippes, but of his heart, touched with ſence and feeling of his manifold ſinnes and offences. And this indeede is a ſpeciall & principall note of the ſpirite of adoption. Now looke vpon the looſe and careleſſe man, that thinks himſelfe ſo filled with the perſwaſion of the loue and fauour of God, ye ſhall finde that he very ſeldome or neuer prayes: and when he doth, it is nothing els but a mumbling ouer the Lords prayer, the Creede, and the tenne commandements for faſhions ſake. Which argues plainely that the perſwaſion which he hath of Gods mercy is of the fleſh and not of the ſpirit. The ſecond fruite is, the affection of a dutifull child to God a moſt louing Father: and this affection makes a man ſtand in feare of the maieſtie of God whereſoeuer hee is, and to make conſcience of euery euill way. Nowe thoſe that are carried away with preſumption, ſo ſoone as any occaſion is giuen, they fall ſtraight into ſinne without miſlike or ſtay, as fire burnes with ſpeed when drie wood is laid vnto it. In a word, where the teſtimonie of the ſpirit is truly wrought, there be many other graces of the ſpirit ioined therewith, as when one branch in a tree buddeth the reſt budde alſo.

The teſtimonie of our ſpirit is the teſtimonie of the heart and conſcience, purified & ſanctified in the blood of Chriſt. And it teſtifieth two wayes, by inward tokens in it ſelfe, by outward fruits. Inward tokens are certaine ſpeciall graces of God imprinted in the ſpirit, whereby a man may certenly be aſſured of his adoption. Theſe tokens are of two ſorts, they either reſpect our ſinnes, or Gods mercie in Chriſt. The firſt are in reſpect of ſinnes paſt, preſent, or to come. The ſigne in the ſpirit which concerneth ſinnes paſt, is godly ſorrow, which I may tearme a beginning & mother grace of many other gifts and graces of God. It is a kinde of griefe conceiued in heart in reſpect of God. And the nature of it may the better bee conceiued, if wee compare it with the contrarie. Wordly ſorrow ſprings of ſinne, and it is nothing els but the horrour of conſcience, & the apprehenſion of the wrath of God for the ſame: nowe godly ſorrow, it may indeede be occaſioned by our ſinnes, but it ſprings properly from the apprehenſiō of the grace & goodnes of God. Worldly ſorrow is a griefe for ſinne onely in reſpect of the puniſhment: godly ſorrow is a liuely touch and griefe of heart for ſinne becauſe it is ſinne, though there were no puniſhment for it. Now that no man may deceiue himſelfe in iudging of this ſorrow, the holy Ghoſt hath ſet downe ſeué fruits or ſignes thereof wherby it may be diſcerned. The firſt is, Care to leaue all our ſins: the ſecond is, Apologie whereby a man is mooued and carried to accuſe and condemne himſelfe for his ſinnes paſt, both before God and man. The third is Indignation, whereby a man is exceedingly angrie with himſelfe for his offences. The fourth is Feare, leaſt he fall into his former ſinnes againe. The fifth is Deſire, whereby he craueth ſtrength and aſsiſtance, that his ſinnes take not hold on him as before. The ſixth is zeale, in the performance of all good duties contrarie to his ſpeciall ſinnes. The ſeuenth is reuenge, whereby he ſubdues his bodie leaſt it ſhould hereafter be an inſtrument of ſinne as it hath bin in former time. Nowe when any man ſhall feele theſe fruits in himſelfe, hee hath no doubt the godly ſorrow, which here wee ſpeake of;

2. Cor. 7. 10.

The token which is in regard of ſinnes preſent, is the combate betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, proper to them that are regenerate, who are partly fleſh and partly ſpirit. It is not the checke of conſcience which all men finde in themſelues both good and bad, ſo oft as they offend God: but it is a fighting & ſtriuing of the mind, will, and affections with themſelues, whereby ſo farre forth as they are renued, they carrie the man one way, and as they ſtill remaine corrupt, they carry him flat contrarie. Men hauing the diſeaſe called Ephialtes, when they are halfe aſleepe feele as it were ſome weightie thing lying vpon their breaſts, and holding them downe: now lying in this caſe, they ſtriue with their hands and feete and with all the might they haue to raiſe vp themſelues, and to remooue the weight, and can not. Behold here a liuely reſemblance of this combat. The fleſh which is the inborne corruption of mans nature, lies vpon the hearts of the children of God, and preſſeth them downe, as if it were the very weight of a mountaine: now they, according to the meaſure of grace receiued, ſtriue to raiſe vp themſelues from vnder this burden, and to doe ſuch things as are acceptable to God; but can not as they would.

Gal. 1. 17.

The token that reſpects ſinne to come, is care to preuent it. That this is the marke of Gods children, appeareth by the ſaying of Iohn, Hee that is borne of God ſinneth not, but keepeth himſelfe that the wicked one touch him not. And this care ſhewes it ſelfe not onely in ordering the outward actions, but euen in the very thoughts of the heart. For where the Goſpel is of force it brings euery thought into captiuitie to the obedience of Chriſt: and the Apoſtles rule is followed, Whatſoeuer things are true, whatſoeuer things are honeſt, &c. thinke on theſe things.

1. Ioh. 5. 18.

2. Cor. 10. 5.

Phil. 4. 8.

The tokens which concerne Gods mercie are ſpecially two. The firſt is: when a man feeles himſelfe diſtreſſed with the burthen of his ſinnes, or when he apprehends the heauie diſpleaſure of God in his conſcience for them: then further to feele how he ſtandes in neede of Chriſt, and withall heartily to deſire, yea to hunger & thirſt after reconciliation with God in the merit of Chriſt, and that aboue all other things in the world. To al ſuch Chriſt hath made moſt ſweete and comfortable promiſes, which can appertaine to none but to the Elect. Ioh. 7. 37. If any man thirſt, let him come to me and drinke: hee that beleeueth in me, as ſaith the Scripture, out of his bellie ſhall flow riuers of water of life. Reuel. 21. 6. I will giue vnto him which is a thirst of the well of the water of life freely. Nowe if he that thirsteth, drinke of these waters, marke what followeth, Ioh. 4.14. Whosoeuer drinketh of the water that I shall giue him, shall neuer be more athirst: but the water that I shall giue him, shall be in him a well of water springing vp vnto euerlasting life.

The second is a straunge affection wrought in the heart by the spirit of God, whereby a man doth so esteeme and value, and as it were, set so high a price on Christ and his righteousnes, that hee accounts euen the most pretious things that are, to be but as dung in regard thereof. Phil. 3. 8. This affection was in Paul, and it is expressed in the parable in which after a mã Mat. 13. 44 hath found a treasure, he first hides it, and then sels all he hath and makes a purchase of the fielde where it is. Nowe euery man will say of himselfe, that he is thus affected to Christ, & that he more highly esteemes the least drop of his blood, then al things in the world beside: whereas indeed most men are of Esaus minde, rather desiring the red broth then Isaaks blessing; and of the same affectiõ with the Israelites, which liked better the onyons and flesh pottes of Egypt, then the blessings of God in the land of promise. Therefore that no man may deceiue himselfe, this affection may be discerned by two signes. The first is to loue and like a Christian man because he is a Christian. For he that doeth aright esteeme of Christ, doeth in like manner esteeme of the members of Christ. And of this very point our Sauiour Christ saith, Mat. 10. 41 He that receiueth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receiue a Prophets reward, and he that receiues a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, shall receiue the reward of a righteous man. And Saint Iohn saith, Hereby we knowe that we are translated from death to life, because we loue the brethrẽ: that is such as are mẽbers, euen because they are so. The second signe of this affection is a loue and desire to the comming of Christ, whether it be by death vnto any man particularly, or by the last iudgement vniuersally, and that for this ende that there may be a full participation of fellowship with Christ. And that this very loue is a note of adoption, it appeares by that which Saint Paul saith that the crowne of righteousnesse 2. Tim. 4. 8 is laid vp for all them that loue the appearing of Christ.

The outward token of adoption is New-obedience, wherby a mã indeauours to obey Gods commandements in his life and conuersation: as Saint Iohn saith, 1. Iohn 2. 3. Hereby we are sure that we know him, if wee keepe his commandements. Nowe this obedience must not be iudged by the rigour of the morall law, for then it should be no token of grace, but rather a meanes of damnation: but it must be esteemed and considered as it is in the acceptation of Mal. 3. 17. God, who spares them that feare him as a father spares an obedient soone, esteeming things done not by the effect and absolute doing of them, but by the affection of the doer. And yet least any man should here bee deceiued, wee must knowe that the obedience, which is an infallible marke of the Childe of God, must be thus qualified. First of all it must not be done vnto some fewe of Gods commandements, but vnto them all without exception. Herod heard Iohn Baptist willingly, & did many things: and Iudas had excellent things in him, as appeares by this, that he was content to leaue all and to follow Christ, and he preached the Gospell of the kingdome in Iurie as well as the rest: yet alas, all this was nothing: for the one could not abide to become obedient to the seauenth commaundement in leauing his brother Philips wife; and the other would not leaue his couetousnesse, to die for it. Vpright and sincere obedience doth inlarge it selfe to all the commandements, as Dauid saith, Psal. 119. 6 I shall not be confounded, when I haue respect to all thy commaundements. And Saint Iames saith, he which faileth in one lawe is Iam. 2. 10. guilty of all that is, the obedience to many commaundements is indeede before God no obedience, but a flatte sinne, if a man wittingly and willingly carrie a purpose omit any one dutie of the lawe. Hee that repents of one sinne truely, doeth repent of all: and he that liues but in one knowen sinne without repentance, though he pretend neuer so much reformation of life, indeed repents of no sinne. Secondly this obedience must extend it selfe to the whole course of a mans life after his conuersion and repentance. We must not iudge of a man by an action or two, but by the tenour of his life. Such as the course of a mans life is, such is the man: though hee, through the corruption of his nature, faile in this or that particular action yet doth it not preiudice his estate before GOD, so be it he renue his repentance for his seuerall slipps and fals not lying in any sinne; and withall from yeare to yeare walke vnblameable before God and men. S. Paul

2. Tim. 2. 19. faith, The foundation of God remaineth sure: the Lord knoweth who are his. Nowe some might hereupon say, it is true indeede, GOD knowes who are his; but how may I be assured in my selfe that I am his? to this demaund, as I take it, Paul answers in the next words, Let every one that calleth on the name of the Lord depart from iniquitie: that is, let men inuocate the name of God, praying seriously for things whereof they stand in neede, withall giuing thanks, and departing from all their former sinnes, and this shall be vnto them an infallible token that they are in the election of God. Thirdly in outward obedience it is required that it proceede from the whole man: as the regeneration which is the cause of it, is through the whole man in bodie, soule, and spirit. Againe, obedience is the fruit of loue, and loue is from the pure heart, the good conscience, and faith vnfained.

1. Thess. 3. 13.

Thus we haue heard the testimonies & tokens whereby a man may be certified in his cõscience that he was chosen to saluation before all worlds; If any desire further resolution in this point, let them meditate vpon the 15. Psal. and first Epistle of S. Iohn, beeing parcels of Scripture penned by the holy Ghost for this ende.

Here some will demaund howe a man may be assured of his adoption, if he want the testimonie of the spirit to certifie him thereof. Ans. Fire is knowne to be no painted but a true fire, by two notes; by heate, and by the flame: now if the case fall out that the fire want a flame, it is still knowne to be fire by the heate. In like manner, as I haue saide, there be two witnesses of our adoption. Gods spirit, and our spirit: now if it fall out that a man feele not the principall, which is the spirit of adoption, hee must then haue recourse to the second witnesse and search out in himselfe the signes & tokens of the sanctification of his owne spirit, by which he may certenly assure himselfe of his adoption, as wee know fire to be fire by the heat though it want a flame.

Againe it may bee demaunded on this manner: how if it come to passe that after inquirie, we find but few signes of sanctification in our selues. Ans. In this case we are to haue recourse to the least measure of grace, lesse then which, there is no sauing grace; and it stands in two things: an hearties disliking of our sinnes because they are sinnes, and a desire of reconciliation with God in Christ for them all: and these are tokens of adoption, if they bee soundly wrought in the heart, though all other tokens for the present seeme to be wanting. If any shall say, that a wicked man may haue this desire, as Balaam, who desired to die the death of the righteous: the answer is, that Balaam indeed desired to die as the righteous man doth, but he could not abide to liue as the righteous: he desired the end, but not the proper subordinate meanes which tende vnto the end; as vocation, iustification, sanctification, repentance, &c. the first is the worke of nature, the secõd is the worke of grace. Now I speake not this to make men secure and to content themselues with these small beginnings of grace, but onely to shew how any may assure themselues that they are at the least babes in Christ: adding this withal, that they which haue no more but these small beginnings must bee carefull to increase them, because he which goes not forward goes backward.

Lastly it may be demanded what a man should doe if he want both the testimonie of Gods spirit and his owne spirit, and haue no meanes in the world of assurance. Ans. He must not vtterly despaire, but be resolued of this, that though he want assurance now, yet he may obtaine the same hereafter. And such must be admonished to heare the word of God preached: and being outwardly of the Church, to receiue the Sacraments. When wee haue care to come into the Lords vineyard & to conuerse about the wine-presse, we shall finde the sweete iuyce of heauenly grace pressed forth vnto vs plentifully by the word and sacraments, to the comfort of our consciences, concerning Gods election. This onemercie that God by these meanes in some part reuealeth his mercy, is vnspeakable. When sicknesse or the day of death comes, the deerest seruants of God, it may be, must inconnter with the temptations of the deuill, and wrastle in conscience with the wrath and displeasure of God, as for life and death: and nõ man knowes, how terrible these things are, but those which haue felt them. Now when men walke thus through the valley of the shadow of death, vnlesse God should as it were open heauen, and streame downe vnto vs in this world some light some beames of his loue in Christ by the operation of his spirit, miserable were the case euen of the righteous.

Thus much of Election, now followes

Repro-

Reprobation, in handling whereof we are to obſerue three things. I. what it is. II. howe God doth execute this decree. III. howe a man may iudge of the ſame.

For the firſt, Reprobation is Gods decree in which becauſe it ſo pleaſed him, hee hath purpoſed to refuſe ſome men by meanes of Adams fall and their owne corruptions, for the manifeſtation of his iuſtice. Firſt, I ſay, it is a decree, and that is euident thus. If there be an eternall decree of God, whereby hee chooſeth ſome men, then there muſt needs be another decree whereby he doth paſſe by others and refuſe them. For election alwayes implies a refuſal. Againe, what God doeth in time, that he decreed to doe before time: as the caſe falls out euen with men of meane wiſedome, who firſt of all intend with themſelues the things to be done and after doe them. But God in time refuſeth ſome men as the Scripture teſtifieth, and it appeareth to be true by the euent: Therefore God before al worlds decreed the reiecting of ſome men.

Now in this decree foure points are to be conſidered. The firſt is the matter or obiect thereof, which is the thing decreed, namely, the reiection of ſome men in reſpect of mercie, or the manifeſtation of his iuſtice vpon them. This may ſeeme ſtrange to mans reaſon, but here wee muſt with all ſubmiſſion ſtrike our top-ſailes, for the worde of God ſaith, as much in plaine tearmes, The Apoſtle Iude ſpeaking of falſe Prophets ſaith, that they were of olde ordained to this damnation. And Paul ſaith in emphaticall tearmes, that God makes veſſels of wrath prepared to deſtruction: and ſome are reiected, whom hee oppoſeth to them, which are elected to ſaluation.

Rom. 9. 22. 2. Cor. 4. 3. 2. Thel. 2. 9. 13.

The ſecond point is the impulſiue cauſe that mooued God to ſet downe this decree concerning his creature, and that was nothing out of himſelfe, but his very will and pleaſure. He hardened Pharaoh with finall hardnes of heart, becauſe he would: and therefore he decreed to doe ſo becauſe he would. And our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, I thanke thee, O father, Lord of heauen and earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and men of vnderſtanding, and haſt opened them vnto babes. But vpon what cauſe did God ſo? It followes in the next wordes, It is ſo, O Father, becauſe thy good pleaſure is ſuch. And if it be in the power and libertie of a man to kill an oxe or a ſheepe for his vſe, to hunt & kill the hare and partridge for his pleaſure: then much more without iniuſtice may it bee in the will and libertie of the creator to refuſe & forſake his creature for his glorie. Nay, it ſtands more with equitie a thouſand fold, that all the creatures in heauen and earth ſhould ioyntly ſerue to ſet forth the glory and maieſtie of God the creator in their eternall deſtruction, then the ſtriking of a flie or the killing of a flea ſhould ſerue for the dignitie of all men in the world. For al this, it is thought by very many to be very hard to aſcribe vnto GOD who is full of bountie and mercie ſuch a decree, and that vpon his very will: but let vs ſee their reaſons. Firſt of all they ſay it is a point of crueltie with God to purpoſe to create a great part of the worlde to damnation in hel fire; the anſwer is, that by the vertue of this decree, God cannot be ſaid to create any man to damnation, but to the manifeſtation of his iuſtice and glorie in his due and deſerued damnation: and the doing of this is abſolute iuſtice. Secondly it is alleagded that by this means God ſhal hate his owne creature, and that before it is: but it is an vntrueth. We muſt diſtinguiſh betweene Gods purpoſe to hate an actuall hating. Nowe indeede God before all worldes did purpoſe to hate ſome creatures: and that iuſtly ſo farre foorth as his hating of them will ſerue for the manifeſtation of his iuſtice: but he neither hates them indeede, nor loues them before they are: and therefore actuall hatred comes not in till after the creation. Whome God hath decreed to loue, them, when they are once created, he begins to loue in Chriſt with actuall loue: and whom he hath decreed to hate, them beeing once created, he hates in Adam with actuall hatred. Thirdly it is obiected that by this doctrin God ſhall be the author of ſinne, for he which ordaines to the end, ordaines to the meanes of the ende: but God ordaines men to the ende, that is, damnation: therefore he ordaines them to the means thereof, that is ſinne. Anſ. The propoſition being thus vnderſtood, hee which ordaines a man to an ende, in the ſame order and manner ordaines him to the meanes, is falſe. For one may be ordained to the end ſimply, the end being ſimply good; and yet not be ſimply ordained to the meanes, becauſe they may be euil in themſelues, & onely good in part, namely ſo far forth as they haue reſpect of goodnes in the mind of the ordainer. Secondly, the aſſumption is falſe; for the ſupreame end of gods coũſell is not damnation, but the declaration of his iuſtice in the iuſt deſtruction of the creature: neither doeth God decree mans damnation as it is damnation, that is, the ruine of man and the putting of him forth to periſhment, but as it is a reall execution of iuſtice. Thirdly we muſt make diſtinction betweene ſinne it ſelfe and the permiſſion thereof, and betweene the decree of reiection, and actuall damnation: nowe the permiſſion of ſinne, and not ſinne it ſelfe properly is the ſubordinate meanes of the decree of reiection. For when God had decreed to paſſe by ſome men, hee withall decreed the permiſſion of ſinne, to which permiſſion men were ordained: & ſinne it ſelfe is no effect, but onely the conſequent of the decree: yet ſo, as it is not only the antecedent, but alſo the efficient & meritorious cauſe of actuall damnation

Matth. 11. 25.

The third point is, the reall foundation of the execution of this decree, in iuſt condemnation and that is the voluntary fall of Adam and of all his poſterity in him with the fruit thereof, the generall corruption of mans nature. For howſoeuer God hath purpoſed to refuſe men becauſe it ſo pleaſed him, yet when his purpoſe comes to execution he condemneth no man but for his ſinnes: and ſinne though it were not in the counſell of God an impulſiue cauſe that mooued him to purpoſe a declaration of Iuſtice and iudgement, yet was it a ſubordin ate meanes of damnatiõ: God in wonderfull wiſedome ordering & diſpoſing the execution of this decree, ſo as the whole blame and fault of mans deſtruction ſhould be in himſelfe. And therfore the Lord in the Prophet Oſe ſaith, Hoſ. 13.9. One hath deſtroyed thee, but I will helpe thee: that is, ſaluation is of God, and the condẽnation of men is from themſelues. Nowe wheras many deprauing our doctrine ſay, that we aſcribe vnto God an abſolute decree in which he doth abſolutely ordaine men to damnation, they may here be anſwered. If by abſolute, they vnderſtãd that which is oppoſed to conditional, then wee hold and auouch, that all the eternall decrees of God are ſimple or abſolute, and not limited or reſtrained to this or that condition or reſpect. If by abſolute, they vnderſtand a bare and naked decree without reaſon or cauſe, then wee deny Gods decrees to be abſolute. For though the cauſes thereof bee not knowne to vs, yet cauſes there be, knowne to him, and iuſt they are: yea the very will of God it ſelfe is cauſe ſufficient, it beeing the abſolute rule of iuſtice. And though men in reaſon can not diſcerne the equitie and iuſtice of Gods will in this point, yet may wee not thereupon conclude that therefore it is vniuſt. The ſonne may ſhine, clearely though the blinde man ſee it not. And it is a flate miſtaking to imagine that a thing muſt firſt of all bee iuſt in it ſelfe, and then afterward be willed of God. Whereas contrariſe, God muſt firſt wil a thing before it can be iuſt. The will of God doth not depend vpon the qualitie and nature of the thing, but the qualities of things in order of cauſes followe the wil of God. For euery thing is as God wils it. Laſtly, if it be called an abſolute decree becauſe it is done without all reſpect to mans ſinne, then we ſtill denie it to be abſolute. For as God condẽnes man for ſin: ſo he decreed to condemne him for & by his ſinne: yet ſo, as if the queſtion be made what is the cauſe why he decrees rather in his iuſtice to condemne this man then that man, no other reaſon can bee rendred, but his will.

The laſt point, is the ende of Gods decree, namely the manifeſtation of his iuſtice, as Salomon ſaith, The Lord hath made all things for his owne ſake, and the wicked for the day of euill. And Paul ſaith, that God made veſſels of wrath, to ſhew his wrath and to make his power knowne. Prou. 16.4 Rom. 9.22

Thus we haue ſeene what Reprobation is: nowe followes the execution thereof, for that which God decrees before time, in time he executes. And here a ſpeciall rule to be remembred is this. Thoſe which are ordained to iuſt damnation, are likewiſe ordained to be left to themſelues in this worlde, in blindnes of minde and hardneſſe of heart, ſo as they neither ſhall nor will repent of their ſinnes. The trueth of this we may ſee in Gods word. For S. Peter ſpeaking of the Prieſts and Doctours, and chiefe of the people among the Iewes ſaith plainely, They ſtumbled at the word, and are diſobedient. Why ſo? the reaſon is there ſet downe becauſe they were ordained to it of olde. And ſo Paul ſaith to the Corinthians, that he handled not the word of God deceitfully, but in the declaration of the trueth he approoued himſelfe to euery mans conſcience in the ſight of God. Nowe hereupon it might be ſaid: howe then comes it to paſſe that all receiue not the Goſpell in Corinth; and to this he anſwers with a 1. Pet. 2.8.

terrible ſentence, If (ſaith he) our Goſpell
2.Cor.4.3 be hid, it is hid to them that periſh: giuing vs to vnderſtand, that God leaues the to theſelues in this world, whome he purpoſeth to refuſe. And the Lord by the Prophet Eſai ſaith of the Iewes, by hearing they ſhall
Eſa.7.4. heare and not vnderſtand, and by ſeeing they ſhall ſee and not perceiue, leaſt they ſhould heare with their eares, and ſee with their eyes, and vnderſtand with their hearts, and ſo turne and be ſaued.

The vſe of this is manifold: firſt it ſerueth to ouerthrow the opinion of carnall men which reaſon thus: If I be ordained to damnation, let me liue neuer ſo godly and well, I am ſure to be damned, therefore I wil liue as I liſt: for it is not poſſible for me to alter Gods decree. Blaſphemous mouthes of men make nothing of this and like ſpeeches, & yet they ſpeake flat contraries. For whome God hath purpoſed in his eternall counſell to refuſe, them alſo he hath purpoſed for their ſinnes, to leaue to the blindneſſe of their minds and hardnes of their hearts, ſo as they neither will nor can liue a godly life.

Secondly, this rule doth as it were, lead vs by the hand to the conſideration of the fearefull eſtate of many people among vs. We haue had for the ſpace of thirty yeares and more the preaching of the Goſpell of Chriſt, and the more plentifully by reaſon of the ſchooles of learning. But what hath bin the iſſue of it? I doubt not but in many it hath bin the meanes of their conuerſion and ſaluation: but to ſpeake generally of the greater part there is litle or no fruit to be ſeene. The moſt after this long preaching remaine as blinde, as impenitent, as hard hearted, and as vnreformed in their liues as euer they were, though they haue heard the Lord calling them to repentance from day to day, and from yeare to yeare. Well if this rule bee the trueth of God, as no doubt it is, then I ſay plainely, that there is a moſt fearefull iudgement of God among vs. My meaning is not to determine or giue ſentence of any mans perſon, of any towne or people, neuertheleſſe this may be auouched, that it is a terrible and dangerous ſigne of the wrath of God, that after this long & daily preaching, there is ſtill remaining a general hardneſſe of heart, impenitencie, & want of reformation in the liues of men. The ſmithes ſlithy, the more it is beaten the harder it is made: and commonly the hearts of men, the more they are beaten with the hammer of Gods word, the more dull, ſecure, and ſenceleſſe they are. This beeing ſo, it ſtands euery man in hand to looke to his owne eſtate. We are carefull to flie the infection of the bodily plague: oh then! how carefull ſhould we be to flie the common blindneſſe and hardneſſe of heart, which is the very plague of all plagues, a thouſand fold worſe then all the plagues of Egypt? And it is ſo much the more fearefull, becauſe the more it takes place, the leſſe it is perceiued. When a malefactour on the day of aſſiſe is brought forth of the iayle, with great bolts and fetters to come before the iudge, as he is going all men pitty him and ſpeake comfortably vnto him: but why ſo? becauſe he is nowe to be arraigned at the barre of an earthly iudge. Nowe the caſe of all impenitent ſinners is farre more miſerable, then the caſe of this man: for they lie fettered in bondage vnder ſinne and Sathan; and this ſhort life is the way, in which they are going euery houre to the barre of Gods iuſtice, who is the King of kings and Lord of lords, there to be arraigned and to haue ſentence of condemnation giuen againſt them. Nowe canſt thou pitie a man that is before an earthly iudge, and wilt thou not bee touched with the miſerie of thine owne eſtate who goeſt euery day forward to the barre of Gods iuſtice; whether thou be ſleeping or waking ſitting or ſtanding, as a man on the ſea in a ſhippe goes continually toward the hauen, though he himſelfe ſtirres not his foote. Beginne now at length to lay this point to your hearts, that, ſo long as ye runne on in your blinde waies without repentance, as much as ye can, ye make poſt haſt to hel-ward; & ſo longe as you continue in this miſerable condition, as Peter ſaith, Your iudgement is not farre off, and your damnation ſleepeth not. Thirdly, ſeeing thoſe whome God hath purpoſed to refuſe ſhall be left vnto themſelues, and neuer come to repentance, we are to loue and imbrace the word of God preached and taught vnto vs by the miniſters of the Goſpell: withall ſubmitting our ſelues vnto it, and ſuffering the Lord to humble vs thereby, that we may come at length out of the broad way of blindnes of minde and hardneſſe of heart leading to deſtruction, into the ſtrait way of true repentance and reformacion of life, which leadeth to ſaluation. For ſo long as a man liues in this world after the luſts of his owne heart, hee goes on walking in the very ſame broad way to hell, in which all that are ordained to condemnation walke: and what a fearefull thing is it, but for a little while to bee a companion in the way of deſtruction with them that periſh: and therefore I ſay once againe, let vs all in the feare of God, lay his word vnto our hearts, and heare it with reuerence, ſo as it may be in vs the ſword of the ſpirit to cut downe the ſinnes and corruptions of our natures, and worke in vs a reformation of life and true repentance.

The third point concerning the decree of Reprobation, is the Iudgement to bee giuen of it. This iudgement belongeth to God principally and properly, becauſe he knoweth beſt what he hath determined concerning the eſtate of euery man, and none but he knowes who they be which are ordained to due and deſerued damnation. And againe, he onely knoweth the hearts and wils of men, and what grace he hath giuen them, what they are, and what all their ſinnes be, and ſo doth no angel nor creature in the world beſide. As for men, it belongs not to them to giue iudgement of reprobation in themſelues or in others, vnleſſe God reueale his will vnto them and giue them a gift of diſcerning. This gift was beſtowed on ſundrie of the Prophets in the old teſtament, and in the uewe teſtament on the Apoſtles, Dauid in many Pſalmes makes requeſt for the confuſion of his enemies, not praying onely againſt their ſinnes, (which we may doe) but euen againſt their perſons which we may not doe. No doubt he was guided by Gods ſpirit, and receiued thence an extraordinary gift to iudge of the obſtinate malice of his aduerſaries. And Paul praies againſt the perſon of Demetrius, ſaying, The Lord reward him according to his doings. And ſuch kind of praiers were lawfull in them, becauſe they were carried with pure and vpright zeale, and had noe doubt a ſpeciall gift whereby they were able to diſcerne of the finall eſtate of their enemies. Againe, God ſometimes giues this gift of diſcerning of ſome mēs final impenitencie to the Church vpon earth, I ſay not, to this or that priuate perſon, but to the body of the Church or greater part thereof. S. Iohn writing vnto the Churches ſaith, There is a ſinne vnto death, (that is, againſt the holy Ghoſt) I ſay not that thou ſhouldeſt pray for it: in which whros he takes it for graunted, that this ſinne might be diſcerned by the Church in thoſe daies. And Paul ſaith, If any man beleeue not the Lord Ieſus, let him be had in execration, Mara-natha, that is, pronounced accurſed to euerlaſting deſtruction. Whence it appeares, that the Church hath power to pronounce men reiected to euerlaſting damnation, vpon ſome ſpeciall occaſions though *I dare not ſay ordinarily and vſually. The primitiue church with one conſent prayed againſt Iulian the Apoſtata, and the praiers made were not in vaine, as appeared by the euent of his fearfull ende. As for priuate and ordinarie men, for the tempering and rectifying of their iudgements, in this caſe they muſt follow two rules. The one is, that euery member of the church is bound to beleeue his owne election. It is the commandemēt of God binding the very conſcience, that we ſhould beleeue in Chriſt. Nowe to beleeue in Chriſt, is not onely to put our affiance in him, and to be reſolued that we are iuſtified and ſanctified & ſhall be glorified by him, but alſo that wee are elect to ſaluation in him before the beginning of the world, which is the foundation of the reſt. Againe, if of things that haue neceſſary dependance one vpon an other, we are to beleeue the one, then we are to beleeue the other. Now election & adoption are things conioyned, and the one neceſſarily dependes vpon the other. For all the elect (as Paul ſaith) are predeſtinate to adoption: and we are to beleeue our owne adoption: and therefore alſo our election. The ſecond rule is, that concerning the perſons of thoſe that be of the church, we muſt put in practiſe the iudgement of charitie, and that is to eſteeme of them as of the elect of God till God make manifeſt otherwiſe. By vertue of this rule the miniſters of Gods word are to publiſh and preach the Goſpel to all without exception. It is true indeede there is both wheat and darnell in Gods field, chaffe & corne in Gods barne, fiſh and droſſe in Gods net, ſheepe and goats in Chriſts folde: but ſecret iudgements belong vnto God, and the rule of loue, which is to thinke & wiſh the beſt of others, is to be followed of vs that profeſſe faith working by loue.

* ſic Chryſ.

It may be demanded, what we are to iudge of them that as yet are enemies of God. Anſw. Our dutie is, to ſuſpend our iudgement concerning their finall eſtate: for we know not whether God will call them or noe: and therfore we muſt rather pray for their conuersion then for their confusion.

Againe, it may be demanded, what is to be thought of al our ancestours and forefathers that liued and died in the times when poperie tooke place. Ans. We may well hope the best and thinke that they were saued: for though the Papacie be not the Church of God, and though the doctrine of Poperie rase the foundation, yet neuertheleſſe in the very midſt of the Romane Papacie God hath alwaies had a remnant which haue in ſome measure truly serued him. In the old testament when open Idolatrie tooke place in all Israel, God saide to Eliah, I haue reserued seauen thousand to my selfe that neuer bowed knee to Baal. and the like is and hath beene in the generall apoſtaſie vnder Antichriſt. Saint See Illyr. Cacal. test. verit. Iohn saith, that when the woman fled into the wilderneſſe for a time, euen then there was a remnant of her seede which kept the cõmandements of God, and had the testimonie of Iesus Christ. And againe, when ordinarie Reu. 12. 17 meanes of saluation faile, then God can & doth make a supple by meanes extraordinarie, and therefore there is no cause why we should say, that they were condemned.

Thirdly it may be demanded, whether the common iudgement giuen of Francis Spira that he is a reprobate be good or not Ans. Wee may with better warrant say no; then any man say, yea. For what gifts of discerning had they, which came to visit him in his extremitie; and what reasons induced them to giue this peremptorie iudgement? He said himselfe that he was a reprobate: that is nothing; a sicke mans iudgment of himselfe is not to bee regarded. Yea, but he dispaired; a senſleſſe reason: for so doth many a man yeare by yeare, and that very often as deepely as euer Spira did; and yet by the good helpe of the ministerie of the word, both are and may be recouered. And they which will auouch Spira to be a reprobate, must goe further and proouе two things, that hee dispaired both wholly and finally: which if they can not proouе, we for our parts must suspend our iudgements, and they were much to blame that first published the booke.

Lastly it may be demanded, what is to be thought of them that make very fearefull end in raging and blaspheming Ans. Such strange behauiours are oftentimes the fruits of violent diseases which torment the bodie, and bereaue the minde of sence and reason: and therefore if the persons liued well, we must thinke the best: for we are not by outward things to iudge of the estate of any man. Saloman saith, that all things come alike to all, and the same condition to the iust and to the wicked.

Thus much of the parts of predestination. Now followes the vse thereof: and it concernes partly our iudgements, partly our affections, and partly our liues. The vses which concerne iudgement are three. And first by the doctrine of predestination we learne that there cannot be any iustification of a sinner before God by his workes. For Gods election is the cause of iustification, because whome God electeth to saluation after this life, them he electeth to be iustified in this life. Now election it selfe is of grace and of grace alone, as Paule saith, Election is by grace, and if it be Rom. 11. 5 of grace, it is no more of workes: or els were grace no grace: therefore iustification is of grace and of grace alone: and I reason thus: The cause of a cause is the cause of all things caused: but grace alone is the cause of predestination, which is the cause of our vocation, iustification, sanctification, &c. Grace therefore is also the alone cause of all these. Therefore the Scriptures ascribe not onely the beginning, but also the continuance and accomplishment of all our happines to grace. For first, as election, so vocation is of grace. Paule saith, God hath called vs not according to our works 2. Tim. 1. 9 but according to his purpose and grace. Again, faith in Christ is of grace. So it is said, To you it is giuen to beleeue in Christ. Also Phil. 1. 29. the iustification of a sinner is of grace. So Paule saith plainly to the Romans: You are Rom. 3. 24 iustified freely by his grace. Againe, sanctification and the doing of good workes is of grace. So it is said, We are his workemanship Eph 2. 10. created in Christ Iesus vnto good workes, which God hath ordained that we should walk in the. Also perseuerance in good works & godlines is of grace. So the Lord saith, I will Ier. 32. 40. make an euerlasting couenant with them, that I will neuer turne away from them to do them good, but I will put my feare in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me. Lastly, life euerlasting is of grace. So Paul saith, Life euerlasting is the gift of God through Ie- Rom. 6. 23 sus Christ. Now they of the church of Rome teach the flat contrarie: they make two iustifications; the first whereby a man of an euill man is made a good man: the second, whereby of a good man he is made better.

The

The first they ascribe to grace; but so, as the second is by workes. Secondly hence we learne, that the art of iudiciall astrologie is vaine and friuolous. They that practise it, doe professe themselues to tell of things to come almost whatsoeuer, and this they doe by casting of figures: and the speciall point of their art is to iudge of mens natiuities. For if they may knowe but the time of a mans birth, they take vpon them to tell the whole course of his life from yeare to yeare, form weeke to weeke, and from day to day, from the day of his birth to the houre of his death: yea that which is more, they professe themselues to tell all things that shall befal men either in body, goods, or good name, and what kinde of death they shall die. But that this their practise is not of God, but indeede vnlawefull, it may appeare by this, because it stands not with the doctrine of Gods predestination. Two twinnes begotten of the same parents, & borne both at one & the same time, by the iudgement of Astrologians must haue both the same life and the same death, & be euery way alike both in goods and good name: yet we see the cõtrarie to be true in Iacob & Esau, who were borne both of the same parents at one time. For Iacob tooke Esau by the heele, so as there could not be much difference betweene them in time: yet for all this Esau was a fierce man and wilde, giuen to hunting; but Iacob was milde of nature, and liued at home: the one had fauour at Gods hand and was in the couenant, but God kept backe that mercy from the other. Againe, in a pitcht field are slaine a thousand men at one and the same time: now if we consider the time of their births, it may be, they were borne at a thousand sundrie times, and therefore vnder so many diuers positions of the heauens, & so by the iudgment of all Astrologers should haue all diuers and sundrie liues and endes: but we see according to the determination of the counsell of God, they haue all one and the same ende: and therefore this must admonish all those that are brought vp in schooles of learning, to haue care to spend their time in better studies: and it teacheth those that are fallen into any manner of distresse, not to haue recourse vnto these fonde figure-casters. For their astrological iudgements are false and foolish, as wee may see by the two former examples. Thirdly, the knowledge of God is one of the most speciall points in Christian religion: & therfore the Lord saith, Let him that reioyce, reioyce in this, that he vnderstandeth & knoweth me. For I am the Lord which shew mercie and iudgement in the earth. Ier. 9. 24. And our Sauiour Christ saith, This is life eternal to know thee, the onely very God, and whome thou hast sent Iesus Christ. Ioh. 17. 3. Now Gods predestination is a glasse wherein we may behold his maiestie. For first, by it we see the wonderfull wisdome of God, who in his eternall counsel did foresee and most wisely set downe the estate of euery man: secondly his omnipotencie, in that he hath power to saue and power to refuse whom he will: thirdly, his iustice and mercie both ioyned togither in the execution of election: his mercy in that he saueth those that were vtterly lost; his iustice in that he ordained Christ to be a mediatour to suffer the curse of the law, and to satisfie his iustice for the elect: fourthly his iustice in the execution of the decree of Reprobation; for though he decreed to hold backe his mercie from some men, because it so pleased him, yet he condemneth no man but for his sinnes. Now the consideration of these and the like points, bring vs to the knowledge of the true God.

The vses which concerne our affections are these. First the doctrine of predestination ministers to all the people of God matter of endlesse consolation. For considering Gods election is vnchangeable, therefore they which are predestinate to saluation can not perish: though the gates of hell preuaile against them so as they be hardly saued, yet shal they certenly be saued; therefore our Sauiour Christ saith, that in the latter daies shall arise false Christs and false prophets, which shall shew greate signes & wonders, so that if it were possible they should deceiue the very Elect. Mat. 24. 24. In which words he takes it for granted, that the elect of God can neuer finally fall away. And hereupon he saith to his disciples when they reioyced that the deuills were subiect to them, rather reioyce that your names are written in heauen. Luk. 10. 20. And S. Paul speaking of Hymeneus and Philetus, which had fallen away from the faith, least the Church would be discouraged by their fal, because they were thought to be worthie men and pillars of the Church; he doth comfort them from the very ground of election, saying, The foundation of God remaineth sure and hath this seale: The Lord knoweth who are his. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Where

Gods

Gods election is compared to the foundation of an houſe, the building whereof may be ſhaken, but the ground worke ſtãdeth faſt: and therefore Paul ſaith further, Rom.8.33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods elect? Nowe then that we may haue comfort in diſtreſſe, and ſome thing to ſtay vpon in all our troubles: we in this world are as ſtrangers in a far countrie: our paſſage homeward is ouer the ſea of this worlde: the ſhippe wherein we ſaile is the Church: and Satan ſtirres vp many blaſts of troubles and temptations, and his purpoſe is to ſinke the ſhip, or to driue it on the rocke; but we muſt take the anchor of hope and faſten it in heauen vpon the foundation of Gods election: which beeing done, wee ſhall paſſe in ſafety and reioyce in the middeſt of all ſtormes and tempeſts. Secondly whereas God refuſeth ſome men, and leaues them to themſelues, it ſerues to ſtrike a feare into euery one of vs whatſoeuer we be, as Saint Paul ſaith in the like caſe, the Iewes beeing the naturall branches are broken off through vnbeleefe, and thou ſtandeſt by faith: be not high minded, but Rõ.11.20 feare. This indeed was ſpoken to the Romanes, but we muſt alſo lay it vnto our hearts. For what is the beſt of vs, but a lumpe of clay? and howſoeuer in Gods counſell we are choſen to ſaluation, yet in our ſelues we are all ſhutte vp vnder vnbeleefe, and are fit to make veſſels of wrath. Our Sauiour Chriſt calleth Iudas a deuill, and we knowe his lewde life and fearefull end: nowe what are we better then Iudas by nature? If we had beene in his ſtead, without the ſpeciall bleſſing of God, we ſhould haue done as he did: he betraied Chriſt; but if God leaue vs to our ſelues, we ſhall not onely betray him, but by our ſinnes euen crucifie him a thouſand waies. Furthermore let vs bethinke our ſelues of this, whether there be not already condẽned in hell, who in their liues were not more grieuous offendours then we. Eſai calleth the people of his time a people of Eſa.1.10. Sodome and Gomorrha; giuing the Iewes then liuing to vnderſtand, that they were as bad as the Sodomites, and as the people of Gomorrha, on whome the Lord hath ſhewed his iudgements long before. If this be true, thẽ let vs with feare & trembling be thankefull to his maieſty that he hath preſerued vs hitherto from deſerued damnation.

The vſes which reſpect our liues and conuerſations are manifold. Firſt ſeeing God hath elected ſome to ſaluation, and hath alſo laid downe the meanes in his holy word whereby we may come to the knowledge of our particular election, wee muſt therefore as Saint Peter counſelleth vs, giue al diligence to make our election ſure. 2.Pet.1.10
In the world men are carefull and painfull ynough to make aſſurance of landes and goods to themſelues, and to their poſteritie: what a ſhame is it then for vs, that we ſhould be ſlacke in making ſure to our ſelues the election of God, which is more worth then al the world beſide? and if we ſhall continue to be ſlacke herein, the leaſes of our landes and houſes and all other temporall aſſurances ſhall be bills of accuſation againſt vs at the day of iudgement to condemne vs. Secõdly, by this doctrine we are taught to liue godly and righteouſly in this preſent world; becauſe all thoſe whome God hath choſen to ſaluation, he hath alſo appointed to liue in newneſſe of life, as Saint Paul ſaith, God hath choſen vs Eph.1.4.
in Chriſt before the foundation of the worlde, that we ſhould be holy and without blame be- Eph.2.10.
fore him. And againe, We are created in Chriſt Ieſus vnto good workes, which God hath ordained that we ſhould walke in them. 1.Theſ.2.13.
And, God hath choſen you to ſaluation thorough ſanctification of the ſpirit and faith of the trueth. The elect are veſſels of honour: Rom.9.21.im.2.21.
and therefore all thoſe that will be of the number of the elect, muſt carry themſelues as veſſels of honour. For ſo long as they liue in their ſinnes they bee like veſſels of diſhonour, imploying themſelues to the moſt baſe ſeruice that can be, euen to the ſeruice of the deuil. The ſunne was ordained to ſhine in the day, and the moone in the night, and that order they keepe: yea euery creature in his kinde obſerueth the courſe appointed vnto it by creation, as the graſſe to growe, and trees to bring forth fruit: nowe the elect were ordained to this ende to lead a godly life, and therefore if we would either perſwade our ſelues or the world, that we are indeede choſen to ſaluation, we muſt be plentifull in all good workes, and make conſcience of euery euill way; and to do otherwiſe, is as much as to change the order of nature, and as if the Sunne ſhould ceaſe to ſhine by day and the Moone by night. Thirdly, when God ſhall ſend vpon any of vs in this worlde croſſes and afflictions, either in body or in minde, or any way els (as this life is the vaile of miſerie and teares, and iudgement muſt beginne beginne at Gods house) we must learne to beare them with all submission and contentation of minde. For whom God knew before, them he hath predestinate to be made like vnto his sonne. But wherein is this likenesse? Paul saith, in the fellowship of his afflictions, and in a conformity to his death. And the consideration of this, that afflictions were ordained for vs in the eternall predestination of God, must comfort our hearts, and restraine our impacience so oft as we shall goe vnder the burden of them. Hence againe we learne, that they which perswade themselues that they are in the fauour of God, because they liue at ease in wealth and prosperity, are farre deceiued. For Saint Paul saith. GOD suffereth with long patience the vessels of wrath prepared to destruction, to make knowne his power and to shew forth his wrath on them. This beeing so, no man then by outward blessings ought to plead that he hath the loue of God. Sheepe that goe in fat pastures come sooner to the slaughterhouse then those which are kept vpon the bare common: and they which are pampered with the wealth of this world, sooner forsake God, and therefore are sooner forsaken of God, then others. Salomon saith. No man knoweth loue or hatred, that is, by outward things: for all things come alike to all: the same condition is to the iust and to the vniust, to the wicked and good, to the pure and polluted. Lastly, it may be an offēce vnto vs, when we cōsider that the doctrine of the Gospell is either not knowne, or els despised and persecuted of the whole world; but we must stay our selues with this consideration, that nothing comes to passe by chance; that God knowes who are his; and there must be some in the world, on whome God hath in his eternall counsell purposed to manifest his power and iustice. Againe, Ministers of the Gospel may be discouraged, when after long preaching they see little or no fruit of their labours: the people whome they teach remaining as blind, impenitent, and vnreformed as euer they were. But they must also consider, that it is the purpose of God to choose some to saluation and to refuse others: and that of the first, some are called sooner, some latter, and that the second being left to themselues neuer come to repentance. To this Paul had regard when he said, If our Gospell be hid, it is hid to them that perish. And againe, We are vnto God the sweete sauour of Christ in them that are saued and in them that perish.

Eccles. 9. 1.

Hitherto I haue deliuered the truth of this weighty point of religion, which also is the doctrine of the Church of England: now it followeth that we should consider the falshood. Sundrie Diuines haue deuised, and in their writings published a new frame or platforme of the doctrine of Predestination: the effect whereof is this. The nature of God (say they) is infinite loue, goodnesse, and mercie it selfe: and therefore he propounds vnto himselfe an ende answerable therevnto, and that is the communication of his loue and goodnes vnto all his creatures. Now for the accomplishing of this supreame and absolute ende, he did foure things. First he decreed to create mā righteous in his owne image: secondly, he foresaw the fall of man after his creation, yet so, as he neither willed nor decreed it: thirdly, he decreed the vniuersall Redemption of al and euery man effectually by Christ, so be it they will beleeue in him: fourthly, he decreed to call al and euery man effectually, so as if they will, they may be saued. This beeing done, hee in his eternall counsell foreseeing who would beleeue in Christ, did thereupon elect them to eternall saluation: and againe foreseeing who would not beleeue but contemne grace offered, did thereupon also decree to reiect them to eternall damnation.

This platforme howsoeuer it may seeme plausible to reason, yet indeede it is nothing else but a deuise of mans braine: as will appeare by sundrie defects and errors that be in it. For first whereas it is auouched that Adams fall came by the bare prescience of God, without any decree or will of his, it is a flat vntruth. The putting of Christ to death was as great a sinne as the fall of Adam; nay in some respects greater. Now that came to passe not only by the foreknowledge of God, but also by his determinate counsell. And therefore as the Church of Ierusalem saith, Herod and Pontius Pilate with the Gentiles and the people of Israel gathered themselues togither to doe whatsoeuer thine hand and thy counsell had determined before to be done: so may we say, that Adam in his fall did nothing but that which the hand of God and his counsell had determined before to be done. And considering the will of God extends it self: to the least things that are, euen to sparrowes; whereof none doe light vpon the ground without our heauenly father, how can a man in reaſon imagine that the fall of one of the moſt principall creatures that are, ſhall fall out altogither without the will and decree of God? And there can be nothing more abſurd then to ſeuer the foreknowledge of God from his counſell or decree. For by this meanes, things ſhall come to paſſe God [a]nilling, or not knowing, or not regarding them. Now if any thing come to paſſe God nilling it, then that is done which God would not haue done; and to ſay ſo, is to bereaue him of his omnipotencie. And if we ſhall ſay that things fall out, God not knowing of thē; we make him to be imprudent, and denie his omniſcience. Laſtly, if we ſhall ſay that a thing is done, God not regarding it; wee bring in an idol of our owne braines, and ſtabliſh the idle-God of the Epicures. But it is obiected to the contrary, that if God any way decreed and willed the fall of Adam, then he was the authour of ſinne: which once to ſay, is blaſphemie. Anſ. The argument followes not. There bee three actions in the will of God; one whereby he doth abſolutely wil any thing and delight in it: and of all ſuch things God himſelfe is the author. The ſecond is, wholly or abſolutely to Nill a thing: and all things thus nilled, can not poſsibly come to paſſe, or haue the leaſt beeing in nature. There is alſo a third action which comes as a meane betweene the two former, which is remiſſely or in part both to nill & will a thing: whereby though God approoue not euill, as it is euill, and therefore doth it not: yet he willeth the permitting of it to be done by others, or the beeing of it; becauſe in reſpect of God that decreeth the permitting of euill, it is good that there ſhould be euill. And on this maner and no otherwiſe God willed the fall of Adam: and therefore in the reaſon of any indifferent man, though hee decreed the fall, yet ſhall he be free from the blame thereof, which lies wholly vpon the doers; theſe two caueats alwaies remembred: firſt that God by his will did not conſtraine or force the will of Adam to ſinne, or infuſe into it any corruption; and that therefore he ſinned willingly and freely, onely by the [b] neceſsitie of immutabilitie, and not by the neceſsitie of coactiō: ſecondly that God willed the fall for a moſt worthie ende, which was, to lay downe a way tending to the manifeſtation both of iuſtice and mercie. Againe it is alleadged that if God willed Adams fall, then his will is flat contrarie to it ſelfe, becauſe hee wills that which he had by expreſſe commandement forbidden, Anſ. Indeede if God ſhould both will and forbid one and the ſame thing, in one and the ſame reſpect, there ſhould be a contradiction in Gods will: but that God doth not. He forbad Adams fall, as it was ſinne: for ſo in euery commandement ſinne as it is ſinne is condemned and puniſhed; and yet becauſe it was in a new reſpect, a meanes of manifeſting his glorie, who is able to bring light out of darkneſs; therefore he willingly decreed the permiſsion of it. Inceſt as it is ſin, it is condemned in the ſeuenth commandement, and puniſhed with death: yet as inceſt was a puniſhment of Dauids adultery, God is ſaid to take his wiues and to giue them to his ſonne Abſolom. 2 Sam. 12. 11.

Some againe, as it appeares by their writings, feare to aſcribe vnto GOD ſo much as a permiſsion of Adams fall: but no doubt they are deceiued. For if theſe rules bee true; that God is omnipotent; that he workes all things that are by the counſell of his will, and gouernes them; that hee hath care and regard ouer man; that nothing is hid from him; that he is vnchangeable, there muſt needes be permiſsion of euill. If the deuill could not enter ſo much as into an heard of ſwine without permiſsion, ſhall we thinke that hee could compaſſe the fall and ouerthrow of man, without a permiſsion? Indeede to permit, is not to hinder euill when one may; and with men it is a fault, but not with God, becauſe hee is not bound to hinder the euill which he permits. Mark. 5. 13

The ſecond fault is, that they make the Preſcience of mans faith and vnbeleefe, to be the [c] impulſiue cauſe of Gods decree. For they ſay that God eternally decrees to ſaue or refuſe men, becauſe he did foreſee that they would beleeue or not beleeue. But indeede it is a manifeſt vntruth. Among the cauſes of al things that are, there is an order ſet downe by God himſelfe, in which order ſome cauſes are higheſt, ſome loweſt, ſome in the middeſt. Nowe the higheſt cauſe of all is that, which ouerrules all and is ouerruled of none: and that is Gods will, beyond which there can be no higher cauſe: for God is placed aboue all, and ſubiect to none. And this very will of his is the cauſe of all things that haue beeing: for wee muſt not imagine that a thing firſt of all exiſteth, and then afterward is willed of God; but firſt of all all God wills a thing, and then afterward it comes to haue a beeing. Now to ſay that foreſeene faith or vnbeleefe are the mouing cauſes whereby God was induced to ordaine men either to ſaluation or to iuſt damnation, is to vndoe this diuine order of cauſes, and to diſplace the links; in that Gods will is made a ſecondarie or middle cauſe ſubordinate to other cauſes placed aboue it: yea this is to make the will of God to depend vpon the qualitie and condition of the creature, whereas contrariwiſe all things depend vpon Gods will. Againe, Paul ſaith that God hath opened the myſterie of his will, according to his good pleaſure, which he had purpoſed to himſelfe: whereby he makes a diſtinction betweene the creature and the Creatour. Men, when they purpoſe the doing of any thing, borrow reaſons of their purpoſes and wils out of themſelues from the things to bee done; becauſe mans bare will is no ſufficient cauſe to warrant the doing of this or that, in this or that manner, vnleſſe there be iuſt reaſon. But Gods will is a ſimple and abſolute rule of righteouſneſſe, and a thing is good, ſo farre forth as God wills it. Therefore there is no cauſe, why he ſhould goe foorth of himſelfe for externall inducements and reaſons of his eternall counſell: his very will in himſelfe is a ſufficient reaſon of all his purpoſes and decrees. And hereupon Paul ſaith, that Gods purpoſe was in himſelfe, to ſhew that there is no dependence of his will vpon the creature, and that in ordering and diſpoſing of his decrees he had no reference or reſpectiue conſideration of the qualities and workes of them. Thirdly by this doctrine, there is faſtened vpon God want of wiſedome, who is wiſedome it ſelfe: and that is very abſurd. A ſimple man that hath in him but a ſparke of the wiſedome of God, firſt of all intends with himſelfe the end and euent of the buſineſſe to be done, and then afterward the meanes whereby the ende is accompliſhed: but in this platforme God is brought in, in the firſt place to foreſee and conſider with himſelfe the meanes which tende to the ende, namely faith and vnbeleefe of men, and then afterward to determine with himſelfe what ſhall be the ende and finall condition of euery man either in life or death: as if a man ſhould purpoſe with himſelfe to build an houſe without any conſideration of the ende why; and afterward conceiue with himſelfe the particular vſes to which he will applie it. Fourthly hence it followeth, that faith ſhall not onely be an inſtrument, but alſo an efficient cauſe in the acte of iuſtification of a ſinner before God. For the cauſe of a cauſe is alſo the cauſe of a thing cauſed; but foreſeene faith is an impulſiue cauſe whereby God was mooued to chooſe ſome men to ſaluation (as it is ſaide:) and therefore it is not onely an inſtrument to apprehende Chriſts righteouſneſſe, but alſo a cauſe or meanes to mooue God to iuſtifie a ſinner; becauſe iuſtification proceedes of Election which comes of foreſeene faith: now this is erroneous by the doctrine of all Churches, vnleſſe they bee Popiſh. Fifthly, this doctrine takes it for graunted, that all both young and olde, euen Infants that die in their infancie, haue knowledge of the Goſpell, becauſe both faith and vnbeleefe in Chriſt preſuppoſe knowledge of our ſaluation by him: conſidering that neither ordinarily, nor extraordinarily men beleeue or contemne the thing vnknowne. But how falſe this is, euen common experience doth ſhew. Laſtly, this platforme quite ouerthrowes it ſelfe. For whereas all men equally corrupt in Adam, are effectually both redeemed and called, the difference betweene man and man, ſtandes not in beleeuing or not beleeuing, for all haue power to beleeue: but in this properly, that ſome are confirmed in faith, ſome are not. Now when all without exception are indued with grace ſufficient to ſaluation, I demaund why ſome men are confirmed in grace, and others not confirmed; as alſo of Angels, ſome were confirmed and ſtand, and ſome not confirmed, fell? No other reaſon can be rendred but the will of God. And to this muſt all come, ſtriue as long as they will, that of men beeing in one and the ſame eſtate ſome are ſaued, ſome iuſtly forſaken, becauſe God would. Againe, as the foreſeeing of faith doth preſuppoſe Gods giuing of faith, vnleſſe men will ſay it is naturall: ſo the foreſeeing of faith in ſome men alone, doth preſuppoſe the giuing of faith to ſome men alone. But why doth not God conferre the grace of conſtant faith to all? no other reaſon can be rendered, but becauſe he will not. Thus then thoſe men whoſe faith was foreſeene, are ſaued, not becauſe their faith was foreſeene, but becauſe God would.

Eph. 1. 9.

The

The third fault is, that they ascribe vnto God a conditionall Purpose or counsell, whereby he decrees that all men shall be saued, so be it they will beleeue. For it is euery way as much against cõmon sense, as if it had beene saide, that God decreed nothing at all concerning man. A cõditionall sentẽce determins nothing simply but conditionally, and therefore vncertenly: and when we speake of God, to determine vncertenly, is as much as if he had determined nothing at all, specially when the thing determined is in the power of mans will, and in respect of God, the decree may come to passe or not come to passe. Men, if they might alwaies haue their choise, desire to determine of all their affaires simply without condition: and when they doe otherwise it is either because they know not the euent of things, or because things to be done are not in their power. No reason therefore that we should burden God with that, whereof we would disburden our selues. Againe, the maiestie of God is disgraced in this kinde of decree. God for his part would haue all men to be saued: why then are they not? men will not keepe the condition and beleeue. This is flat to hang Gods will vpon mans will, to make euery man an Emperour, and God his vnderling, and to chãge the order of nature by subordinating Gods will, which is the first cause, to the will of man, which is the second cause: whereas by the very law of nature, the first cause should order and dispose the second cause. But for the iustifying of a conditionall decree it is alleadged, that there is no eternall and hidden decree of God beside the Gospel, which is Gods predestination reuealed. Ans. It is an vntruth. There be two wills in God, [a] one whereby he determineth what he will doe vnto vs or in vs: the other, [b] whereby he determineth what we shall doe to him. Nowe Predestination is the first: whereupon it is commonly defined to be the preparation of the blessing of God, wherby they are deliuered which are deliuered, and the Gospell is the second. Againe, Predestination determines who they are, and how many which are to be saued, and hereupon Christ saith, I know whom I haue chosen: but the Gospell rather determines what kinde of ones and how they must be qualified which are to be saued. Lastly, Predestination is Gods decree it selfe: and the Gospell is an outward meanes of the execution of it: and therefore though the Gospell be propounded with a conditions; yet the decree of God it selfe, may be simple and absolute.

[a] quid vult fieri de nobis, or, in nobis.
[b] quid vult fieri a nobis.

Ioh. 13. 18

The fourth defect, is the opinion of Vniuersall sauing grace; appertaining to all and euery man: which may bee fitly termed the Schoole of vniuersall Atheisme. For it pulls downe the pale of the Church, & laies it waste as euery common field: it breeds a carelesnes in the vse of the meanes of grace, the word and Sacraments, when as men shall be perswaded that grace shal be offered to euery one effectually, whether he be of the church or not, at one time or other, whereseuer or howseuer he liue: as in the like case, if men should be told that whether they liue in the market towne or no, there shall be sufficient prouision brought them, if they will but receiue it and accept of it, who would then come to the market?

Vniuersall grace hath three parts. Vniuersall Election: vniuersall Redemption: vniuersall Vocation. Vniuersall Election of all and euery man, is a witlesse conceit: for if mẽ vniuersally be appointed to grace without exception, thẽ there is no electing or choosing of some out of mankinde to grace: and if some alone be appointed to grace, as it must needes be in election, then is not grace vniuersal. And it is flat against the word of God. For Christ auoucheth plainly that fewer be chosen then called, and (as afterward we shall see) all are not called. And he further saith, that all which are giuen vnto him shall be one with him and haue life euerlasting: but all men shall not be one with him and haue life euerlasting: and therfore all men are not giuen to Christ of the father, that is ordained to saluation. And the Scripture saith, that all mens names are not written in the booke of life: and that the kingdome of heauen was not prepared for all. And whereas men build this their vniuersal election vpon the largenesse of the promise of the gospell: vpon the like ground they might as well make an vniuersall decree of Reprobation, wherby God decrees all men to be damned indefinitely vpon this condition, if they doe not beleeue. Now if vniuersall Reprobation be absurd, as it is indeede; then vniuersall Election of all and euery man must take part therewith.

As for the vniuersall Redemption of all and euery man, it is no better thẽ a forgery of mans braine. There shall be many in the the day of iudgement of whome Christ

Matth.7.23 shall say, that he neuer knew them. Againe he saith, He which beleeueth not is alreadie
Ioh. 3.36. iudged, and the wrath of God abides vpon him. But if all were effectually redeemed, and onely condemned for not beleeuing in Christ, it should haue beene saide that they are already iudged, & that the wrath of God not abides but returnes vpon them.
Ioh. 17.9. Christ makes no interceſſiō for the world:
and therefore his redemptiō is not effectuall to all men. For the interceſſion is the meanes of applying the satisfaction. If it be saide that by the world is meant onely contemners of grace, it appeares to be otherwise in that Christ opposeth the world to them which are the fathers, and are giuen to Christ by him: thereby signifying that by the world he meanes al such as are not the fathers, and were neuer giuen to Christ.
Ioh.10.17 And he laies downe his life for his sheepe:
nowe the sheepe haue all these brands or markes; they heare his voice, they know him, they follow him, they shall not perish, none shall plucke them out of Christs hands: and these are onely such of whome Paul saith Rom.8.33. Who shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods elect? it is God that iustifieth, who shall condemne? And if this should bee true, that Christ was crucified and died no lesse to make satisfaction for the sinnes of the dāned, then for the sinnes of Peter and Paul and the rest of the Saints, it followes necessarily that all their sinnes are forgiuen; cōsidering that remission of sinne depends inseparably vpon satisfactiō made to Gods iustice for sinne: and satisfaction doth necessarily abolish all fault. We graunt that Christs death is sufficient to saue many thousand worlds: wee graunt againe it is euery way most effectuall in it selfe: but that it is effectual in or vnto the person of euery man, that we deny. For if it were thus effectuall, then it should be applyed to the person of euery man, as to Cain, Iudas, Nero, Heliogabalus, &c. euen as the plaister is laid to the sore: beeing applied, Christs righteousnesse should be imputed for the iustification & sanctification of all and euery man: and thus some iustified before God & sactified should after go to hell and be damned, whereas Dauid neuer so much as dreaming of this diuinity saith Psal. 32.1. that they are blessed which haue the pardon of their sinnes: and Paul, that they Rom 5.1. which are iustified haue peace with God.
But let vs heare what reasons may be al-leadged to the Vniuersalitie of redempti-tion. I. Ezechiel, 33 v. 11. As I liue, saith the Lord, I will not the death of the wicked:

but, that the wicked returne from his wicked way. Answ. The place is to be vnderstood not simply but in respect; of the twaine God rather wills the repentance of the sinner then his death. Againe, he wills not death as it is the destruction of his creature; and so this place may be vnderstood:
yet neuertheless he wills the same as it is a meanes of manifestation of his iustice:
and therefore the Prophet Esai saith, that Es.45.7. God createth euill. II. 1. Tim. 2. GOD would haue all men to be saued, and come to the acknowledgement of the truth. Ans. The place is meant not of the persons of all particular men, but of the orders & kinds of men. For in the first verse Paul exhorted Timothie that prayer should be made for all men: and in the second verse opening his owne meaning, he addeth these words, for kings and all that be in authoritie:
as though he should say, wee must pray not onely for priuate men and for the common people, but also for publike persons, though they persecute the Gospell.
But why? because in that very order God hath his elect which shall be saued. And on this manner Paul expounds himselfe
Gal. 3.17. elsewhere. There is neither Iew nor Grecian:
there is neither bond nor free: there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ.
III. Rom. 11. v. 32. God hath shut all in vnbeleefe that he might haue mercie on all.
Answ. The word all, must be vnderstood of all that are to be saued, both of Iewes and Gentiles, as the article added to all τὰς πάντας importeth, and the meaning is, that God will saue all whome he purposeth to saue of his mercy, and not of their merit, because all are sinners as well Iewes as Gentiles: thus Paul expounds himselfe, Galat.
3.22. The Scripture hath concluded al vnder sinne, that the promise by the faith of Iesus
Christ should be giuen vnto thē that beleeue.
And if we should expound the word all, for euery particular man, as some would haue it, Paul must contradict himselfe, who saide before, that God would haue mercie on whom he will haue mercy, and whome he will he hardeneth, and in this very chapter his drift is to prooue the reiection of the Iewes, and the calling of the Gentiles. I V. Iohn. 3.16. God so loued the world that he hath giuen his only begottē Son, that whosoeuer beleeueth in him shall not perish but haue euerlasting life: and Ioh. 6.51. I will giue my flesh for the life of the world. Ans.

By

By world, wee must not vnderstand euery particular man in the world, but the Elect among the Iewes and Gentiles: for in both these places Christ doth ouerthwart the conceit of the Iewes, which thought that they alone were loued of God, and not the Gentiles. And how this word is to be vnderstood in the new Testament, Paul doth fully declare. Rom. 11. v. 12. If (saith he) the fall of them, that is, the Iewes, be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, &c. and vers. 15. If the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiuing be but life from the dead? Where by the world, he vnderstands the body of the Gentiles in the last age of the world. And this he fully declares his owne meaning, when he saith to the Corinthians, God was in Christ reconciling the world vnto himselfe. V. Rom. 14 vers. 15. Destroy not him with thy meate for whome Christ died. 2. Pet. 2. 1. Denying the Lord that bought them, and bring vpon themselues swift damnation. Therefore Christ died for them also which are condemned. Answ. The reason is not good. For in these and such like places the Scripture speakes of men, not as they are indeede before God, but as they are in appearance and profession, and as they are in the acceptation with men. For so long as a man holdes and imbraces the Christian faith, so long in the iudgement of charity we must esteeme him to be one that is redeemed by Christ, though indeede he be not. And this is the meaning of Peter when he saith, that false prophets deny the Lord that bought them. VI. In the preaching of the Gospel grace is freely offered not only to the Elect, but to all men indifferently: and God in offering grace deludes no man: and therefore Christs death appertaines and belongs to all men indifferently. Ans. The preaching of the Gospell is an ordinance of God appointed for the gathering togither and the accomplishment of the number of the Elect: and therefore in the ministery of the word, grace and saluation is offered principally & directly to the elect, and onely by consequent to them which are ordained to iust damnation: because they are mingled with the elect in the same societies, and because the ministers of God, not knowing his secret counsell, in charitie thinke all to be elect. And though God in offering grace doe not conferre it to all, yet is there no delusion. For the offering of grace doth not onely serue for the conuersion of a sinner, but also to be an occasiō by mens fault of blinding the minde, and hardening the heart, & of taking away excuse in the day of iudgement.

2. Cor. 5. 18.

To conclude this point; Vniuersal redemption of all men we grant: the Scripture saith so: and there is an vniuersalitie among the Elect and beleeuers: but vniuersall Redemption of all and euery man as well the damned as the elect & that effectually, we renounce as hauing neither footing in the scripture, nor in the writings of any auncient and orthodoxe diuine, for many hundred yeares after Christ, his words not depraued and mistaken.

As for Vniuersall vocation, it is of the same kinde with the former: because it is flatte against the word of God in which is set downe a distinction of the whole world from the creation to the daies of Christ into two parts: one, the people of God beeing receiued into the couenant: the other, (beeing the greatest part of the world) No-people, and forth of the couenant. From the beginning of the world to the giuing of the law, the church was shut vp in the families of the Patriarkes: and the couenant in the very familie of Abraham was restrained to Isaak: and the members of these families, for this cause, were called the sonnes of God: the rest of the world beside beeing teamed as they were indeede, the sonnes of men. From the giuing of the law till Christ, the nation of the Iews was the Church of God, and the rest of the world beside, no people of God. And therefore Esai calls them prisoners and them that are in darkneſſe: & Ose, such as are without mercy and no people: and Zachary, such as are not ioyned to the Lord: and Paul, such as are set to walke in their owne wayes, beeing without God and without Christ in the world. And this distinction betweene Iewe and Gentile stoode till the very ascension of Christ. And hereupon when he was to sende his Disciples to preach, he charged them not to goe into the way of the Gentiles; and not to enter into the cities of the Samaritanes, but rather to goe to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel: and when the woman of Canaan made request for her daughter, he gaue a deniall at the first vpon this distinction, saying, It is not meete to take the childrens bread and giue it vnto dogges: and againe, I am not sent but vnto

the lost sheepe of the house of Israel. It will be said, that this distinction arose of this, that the Gentiles at the first fell away from the couenant, and contemned the Messias. It is true indeede of the first heads of the Gentiles the sonnes of Noe: but of their posterity it is false, which in times following did not so much as heare of the couenant, and the Messias. The prophet Esai saith of Christ, A nation that knew not thee, Esa. 55.5. shall runne vnto thee. And Paul speaking to the Athenians saith, that the times of Act. 17.30 this their ignorance God regarded not: but now admonisheth all men euery where to repent: and to the Romans he saith, that the mystery touching Christ and his benefits Rom. 16.26 1. Tim. 3. 16. was kept secret since the world began, and now opened and published among all nations. And if the Gentiles had but knowne of the Messias, why did not their Poets and Philosophers who in their writings notoriously abuse the Iewes with sundry * nicknames, at the least signify the contempt of the Redeemer? Wherfore to hold, and much more to auouch by writing, that all and euery one of the heathen were called it is most absurd: and if it were so, the Caniballs and the sauadge nations of America should haue knowne Christ without preaching, which by the histories of those countries, is knowne to be false.

* Apella, Verpus, Recutitus, Sabba arius, Cultor numen.

Againe, if the Vocation of euery man be effectuall, then faith must be common to all men either by nature or by grace, or both: now to say the first, namely that the power of beleeuing is common to all by nature, is the heresie of the Pelagians, and to say it is common to all by grace is false. 2. Thes. 3.1 All men haue not faith, saith Paul: nay many to whom the Gospell is preached, doe not so much as vnderstand it and giue assent vnto it; 2. Cor. 4.4 Satan blinding thier minds that the light of the glorious Gospell of Christ should not shine vnto them. and to say that faith is partly by nature and partly by grace, is the condemned heresie of the semi-Pelagian: for we can not so much as 2. Cor. 3.5 thinke a good thought of our selues.

The last defect in the platforme is that they ascribe vnto God a wrong end of his counsels; namely the cõmunication of mercie or goodnesse in eternall happines. For the absolute and soueraigne ende of al Gods doings must be answerable to his nature, which is not mercie & loue alone, but also iustice it selfe: and therefore the right ende is the manifestation of his glorie both in iustice and mercy by the expresse testimonie of scripture. Againe, if the communication of his goodnes were the highest ende of all his counsels, all men without exception should be saued, because God can not be frustrated of his end and purpose: and if but one man be damned, he is damned, either because God wil not saue him, or because he cannot. If they say he will not, then is he changeable; if he cannot, then is he not omnipotent, considering his purpose was to conuey happinesse to all creatures.

Thus much of the efficient cause of the Church, namely Gods Predestination: which doctrine could not here bee omitted, considering no man can beleeue himselfe to be a member of the Church, vnlesse withall he beleeue that he is predestinate to life euerlasting. Now we come to the second point, namely the Mystical Vnion, which is the very forme of the Church, whereby all that beleeue are made one with Christ. To the causing of this Vnion, two things are required, a Donation or giuing of Christ vnto man, which is to be made one with him; and a Coniunction betweene them both. Of the first, the Prophet Esai saith, Vnto vs a Esa. 9.6. child is borne, and vnto vs a Sonne is giuen; and Paul, Who spared not his owne Sonne, Rom. 8.32 but gaue him for vs all: howe shall he not with him giue vs all things also? And touching it sundry points must bee considered. The first is, what is meant by this giuing? Ans. It is an action or worke of God the Father by the holy Ghost, whereby Christ as Redeemer in the appointed time is really communicated to all ordained to saluation in such manner, that they may truly say, that Christ himselfe with all his benefits is theirs, both in respect of right thereto, and in respect of all fruit redounding thence, and that as truly as any man may say, that house and land giuen him of his ancestours is his owne both to possesse and to vse.

Gal. 3.28.

The second point is, what is the verie thing giuen? Ans. Whole Christ God and man is giuen, because his humanity without his Godhead, or the Godhead without the humanity doth not reconcile vs to God, Yet in this giuing there must be a diuers consideration had of the two natures of Christ: for the communication of the Godhead is meerely energeticall, that is, onely in respect of operation; in that it doth make the manhood personally vni-

ted

ted vnto it to be propitiatorie for our sins and meritorious of life eternall. And to auouch any communication of the godhead in respect of essence, were to bring in the heresie of the Maniches, and to maintaine a composition & commixtion of our natures with the nature of God. Againe, in the manhood of Christ we must distinguish betweene the subiect it selfe, the substance of body and soule, and the blessings in the subiect which tend to our saluation. And the communication of the aforesaid manhood is in respect of both, without separation: for no man can receiue sauing vertue from Christ, vnlesse first of all he receiue Christ himselfe, as no man can haue the treasure hidde in the field, vnlesse he first of all haue the field: & no man can be nourished by meate and drinke vnlesse first of all he receiue the substance of both. And this is the cause why not onely in the preaching of the word but also in the institution of the Lords supper, expresse mention is made, not onely of Christs merit, but also of his very body & blood, whereby the whole humanitie is signified, as appeares by that place, where it is sayd, that the Word was made flesh. And though the flesh of it selfe profit nothing as S. Iohn saith, yet as it is ioyned to the godhead of the sonne and doeth subsist in his person, it receiueth thence quickening vertue, to reuiue and renue all those to whome it shall be giuen. Lastly among the blessings that are stored vp in the manhood of Christ for our saluation, some are giuen vnto vs by imputation as when we are iustified by the righteousnesse indeede inherent in his manhood, but imputed vnto vs: some by infusion, as when holinesse is wrought in our hearts by the spirit, as a fruite of that holinesse which is in the manhood of Christ, and deriued from it, as the light of one candle from another.

Ioh. 6. 53. 54.

Ioh. 1. 14.

The third point is, in what manner Christ is giuen vnto vs. Answ. God the father giueth Christ vnto his Church not in any earthly or bodily manner, as when a king bestoweth a gift with his own hand, and putteth it into the hand of his subiect: but the manner is altogither celestiall and spirituall: partly because it is brought to passe by the meere diuine operation of the holy Ghost, and partly because in respect of vs, this gift is receiued by an instrument which is supernatural, namely, faith, wherby we lay holde on, and apply vnto our selues the Euangelicall promises. And this manner of giuing may be conceiued thus. A man that neuer stirred foote out of England holds and enioyes land in Turkie: but how comes it to be his? Thus: the Emperour was willing and content to bestow it; and the man for his part as willing to accept and receiue it: & by this meanes that which at the first was the Emperours, by mutuall consent becomes the mans. In the same manner God the father hath made an Euangelicall couenant with his Church: in which of his mercie he hath made a graunt of his owne sonne vnto vs, with righteousnesse and life euerlasting in him: and we againe by his grace accept of this graunt and receiue the same by faith: and thus by mutuall consent according to the tenour of the couenant, any repentant sinner may truely say, though I now haue my aboade vpon earth, and Christ in respect of his manhood be locally in heaue̅s yet is he truely mine to haue and to inioy, his body is mine, his blood is mine. As for the giuing and receiuing of the body and blood of Christ in bodily manner (which the Papists maintaine in auouching the reall transubstantiation of bread & wine in the sacrament into the body and blood of Christ, and the Lutherans also in teaching that his body and blood is substantially either in, or with, or vnder the bread and wine) is an erroneous conceit flat opposite to sundry points of the Christian faith. For Christ to this very houre retaineth still the essence and essentiall properties of a true body, and we beleeue that really and visibly he ascended into heauen, and there abides till his second comming to the last iudgement: who then hauing but common reason would imagine a cō-munication of the body of Christ pent vp in the element of bread, and conueyed into our bodyes by the mouth and stomacke?

The third point is, whether we are not Lords of Christ, he being thus giuen vnto vs? Anſ. No: for this donation is not single but mutuall. As Christ is giuen vnto vs, so we againe are giuen to Christ, as he himselfe saith, Those whome thou hast giuen me, father, I haue kept. And we are giuen vnto him in that our bodies and soules are made his not onely as he is God, but also as he is our redeemer: & our sins with the guilt thereof are made his by imputation, and the punishment thereof is wholly laid vpon him. This is all the dowrie which the Church, being the ſpouſe of Chriſt, hath brought vnto him.

The fifth point is, how any man in particular may knowe that Chriſt is giuen vnto him of the father. Anſ. When God giues Chriſt to man, he withall giues man grace and power to receiue Chriſt, and to apprehend him with all his benefits: and this wee doe when wee vtterly renounce our ſelues, this world and all things therein, bewaile our ſinnes paſt, reſting on the death of Chriſt for the pardon of them al, and as it were with both the armes of faith catching hold vpon him in al eſtates, both in life and death. When the heart of any man is truly diſpoſed and inclined to doe theſe & the like things, we may truely ſay, that God hath giuen him grace to receiue Chriſt.

The ſecond thing required to make vs one with Chriſt is, the Myſticall vnion, which is a Coniunction whereby Chriſt and his Church are actually coupled into one whole Myſtical bodie. Nowe that we may the better conceiue the nature of it, ſundrie queſtions are to be mooued. The firſt, what kind of coniunction this is? Anſ. In the ſcripture we meete with three kind of coniunctions. The firſt is, coniunction in nature, when ſundry things are coupled by one and the ſame nature. As the father, the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt, beeing three diſtinct ſubſtances are all one, and therefore ioyned in one Godhead or diuine nature. Now Chriſt and the beleeuer are not ioyned in nature: for then they twaine ſhould haue one bodie and ſoule. The ſecond coniunction is in perſon, whē things in nature different, ſo concurre together, that they make but one perſon; as the body and ſoule make one man: & the Godhead of the ſonne with his manhood make but one Chriſt: in whom there is an vnion of diſtinct natures with vnitie of perſon. Nowe Chriſt and a Chriſtian are not ioyned in perſon: for Chriſt is one perſon, Peter a ſecond perſon, and Paul a third diſtinct from them both: and ſo many men as there be, ſo many ſeuerall perſons. The third coniunction is in ſpirit; & this is the coniunction meant in this place: whereby Chriſt & his Church are ioyned togither: for the very ſame ſpirit of God that dwelleth in the manhood of Chriſt & filleth it with all graces aboue meaſure, is deriued thence and dwelleth in all the true members of the Church, and filleth them with the like graces in meaſure, and therefore Saint Iohn ſaith, Hereby we knowe that we dwell in him and he in vs, becauſe he hath giuen vs of his ſpirit. Hence it followes, that the bond of this coniunction is one and the ſame ſpirit deſcending from Chriſt the head to all his members, creating alſo in them the inſtrument of faith whereby they apprehend Chriſt and make him their owne.

The ſecond is, what are the things vnited? Anſw. Not the bodie of the beleeuer, to the bodie of Chriſt, or the ſoule to his ſoule, but the whole perſon of the man to the whole perſon of Chriſt: yet in this order; we are firſt of all & immediately ioyned to the manhood of Chriſt, and by the manhood to the Godhead.

The third queſtion is, what is the manner of this coniunction? Anſ. We muſt not thinke that Chriſt and his Church are ioyned by imagination, as the mind of man and the thing whereof he thinkes: or by conſent of heart as one friend is ioyned with another, and as the Iewes conuerted were all of one heart and ſoule: or by any abode in one place, or by touching, as ſea and land are both ioyned togither and make one globe: or by any compoſition or commixtion of ſubſtances, as when many ingredients are put togither, to make one medicine. But this coniunction is altogither ſpiritual as the former Giuing was; and incomprehenſible to mans reaſon: & therefore we muſt rather labour to feele it by experience in the heart, then to conceiue it in the braine. Yet neuertheleſſe it ſhall not be amiſſe to conſider a reſemblance of it in this compariſon. Suppoſe a man hauing the parts of his body diſioyned farre aſunder, his head lying in Italie, one arme in Germanie, the other in Spaine, and his legges with vs in England: ſuppoſe further all theſe parts or quarters haue all one ſoule, extending it ſelfe vnto them all, and quickening each of them ſeuerally as though they were neerely ioyned togither: & though the parts be ſeuered many hundred miles aſunder, yet the diſtance of place doeth not hinder the coniunction, conſidering one & the ſame ſoule doth inlarge it ſelfe and giue life vnto them all. In the ſame manner the head of the myſticall body Chriſt our Sauiour is nowe in heauen, and ſome of his members in heauen with him & ſome in earth: and of theſe, ſome in England, ſome in Germany, ſome in Italy, ſome in Spaine, diſtant many thouſand miles aſunder: and the spirit of God is as it were the soule of his bodie which giueth spirituall life to all the members: distance of place doeth not hinder this coniunction, because the holy Ghost which linketh all the parts togither is infinite.

The benefits which we receiue by this Mysticall vnion are manifold. For it is the ground of the conueiance of all grace. The first is, that by meanes hereof euery Christian as he is a Christian or a man regenerate hath his beginning and beeing in Christ, howsoeuer as he is a man he hath his beeing and subsisting in himselfe, as Paul saith, Ye are of God in Christ. And We are members of his bodie of his flesh and of his bones. Howe will some say can this be? After this manner. The comparison is taken from our first parents, Eue was made of a rib taken out of Adams side, hee beeing cast into a slumber: this being done, Adam awaked and said, This nowe is bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh. Christ was nailed on the crosse and his most precious blood was shed, and out of it arise and spring all true Christians; that is, out of the merit of Christs death and passion, whereby they become new creatures. Secõdly, euery one that beleeueth in Christ by reason of this vnion hath an vnspeakable prerogatiue: for hereby he is first vnited to Christ, and by reason thereof is also ioyned to the whole trinitie, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost, and shall haue eternall fellowshippe with them. Thirdly, sundry men specially Papists deride the doctrine of iustification by imputed righteousnes: thinking it is absurd, that a man should be iust by that righteousnesse which is inherent in the person of Christ: as if we should say, that one man may liue by the soule of another: or be learned by the learning of another. But here we may see that it hath sufficient foundation. For there is a most neere and straite vnion betweene Christ and all that beleeue in him: and in this vnion Christ with al his benefits according to the tenour of the couenant of grace, is made ours really: and therefore we may stand iust before God by his righteousnesse; it beeing indeede his, because it is in him as in a subiect; yet so, as it is also ours; because it is giuen vnto vs of God. Nowe there is no such vnion betweene man and man, and for that cause one man cannot liue by the soule of another, or be learned by the learning of another. Fourthly from this fountaine springs our sanctification, whereby we die to sin and are renued in righteousnes and holinesse. Wormes and flies that haue lien dead all winter, if they be laid in the sunne in the spring time begin to reuiue, by vertue thereof: euen so, when we are vnited to Christ, and are (as it were) laid in the beames of this blessed sonne of righteousnes, vertue is deriued thence, which warmeth our benummed hearts dead in sinne, and reuiueth vs to newnes of life: wherby we begin to affect and like good things, and put in practise all the duties of religion. Fifthly, hence we haue the protection of Gods angels; for they alwayes waite and attend on Christ, and because we are made one with him, they attend vpon vs also. Lastly by reason of this vnion with Christ, euery beleeuer commeth to haue interest and to recouer his title in the creatures of God, & to haue the holy and lawfull vse of them all. For we must consider, that although Adam created in the image of God, was made lord ouer all things in heauen and earth; yet when he fell by eating the forbidden fruite; he, and in him all mankind lost the title and vse of them al. Now therefore that a man may recouer his interest, hee must first of all bee vnited and made one with Christ: and then by Christ, who is Lord and King ouer all, shall hee recouer that title in the creatures of God, which he had by creation; and be made Lord ouer them againe. But some will say, if this bee so, then a Christian man may haue and enioy all creatures at his pleasure; and therefore the goods of other men, Ans. The reason is not good, for in this life we haue no more but [a] right vnto the creature, and [b] right in it, that is, actuall possession is reserued for the life to come. Therefore wee must content our selues with our allowed portions giuen vnto vs by God, by his grace vsing them in holy manner, expecting by hope the full fruition of all things till after this life. Againe, if all titles to the creatures be recouered by Christ, it may be demanded, whether infidels haue any interest to their goods or no? Ans. Infidels before mẽ are right lords of all their landes and possessiõs which they haue obtained by lawfull meanes; and in the courts of men they are not to be depriued of them: but before God they are but vsurpers: because they hold thẽ not in capite, that is in Christ: neither haue they any holy & right vse of thẽ, for to the vnclean, al things are vnclean. And they must first of all become members of Christ

The duties which are to be learned of the doctrine of this vnion are manifolde. And firſt of all we are taught to purge our handes and hearts of all our ſinnes, and eſpecially to auoide al thoſe ſinnes whereby mens bodies are defiled, as drunkenneſſe, vncleaneneſſe, fornication: for they driue away the ſpirit of God frō his own houſe, and diſſolue the bond of the coniunction betwene Chriſt and vs. Secondly we muſt euery one of vs, which profeſſe our ſelues to be members of Chriſt, labour to become conformable vnto him in holineſſe of life, and to become new creatures: for this vnion requireth thus much. Let a man take the grafts of a crabbe tree, & ſet them into good ſtockes: yet will they not change their ſappe, but bring foorth fruit according to their owne nature, euen ſowre crabbes: but it muſt not be ſo with vs: we are indeede wild oliues, and the branches of wild vines; yet ſeeing we are perſwaded that we are grafted into Chriſt and made one with him, we may lay aſide our wild and ſoure nature, and take vpon vs the nature of the true vine, beare good fruite, haue good iuyce in vs, and render ſweete wine. Thirdly we are taught hence to be plentifull in all good workes, conſidering we are ioyned to him that is the fountaine of grace. And therefore Chriſt ſaith, I am the true vine and my father is the husband man: euery branch that beareth not fruite in me, he taketh away: & euery one that beareth fruit he purgeth it that it may beare more fruite. And the prophet Eſai compares the Church of God to a vineyard with a tower and wine-preſſe in it. And God himſelfe comes often downe vnto it, to ſee the fruits of the vally, to ſee if the vine budde, and the Pomegranets flouriſh. And further we muſt bring foorth fruite with patience. For the Lord of this vineyard comes with croſſes and afflictions, as with a pruning knife in his hand, to pare and to dreſſe vs that we may be ſet to bring forth fruite plentifull in duties of pietie to God, and in duties of loue to all men, yea to our enemies. Chriſtian men are trees of righteouſneſſe growing by the waters of the ſanctuarie: but what trees? not like ours: for they are rooted vpward in heauen in Chriſt, and their graines and braunches growe downeward that they may beare fruite among men.

Hitherto we haue heard what the Church is, nowe to beleeue the Church is nothing els but to beleeue that there is a companie of the predeſtinate made one in Chriſt, & that withall we are in the number of them.

Before wee proceede any further, three rules muſt be obſerued touching the Church in generall. The firſt, that Chriſt alone is the head of the Catholike Church, and that he neither hath nor can haue any creature in heauen or earth to bee fellowe herein. For the Church is his bodie, and none but hee can performe the dutie of an head vnto it: which dutie ſtandes in two things: the firſt is, to gouerne the Church by ſuch power and authority whereby he can and doeth preſcribe lawes properly binding the conſciences of all his mēbers; the ſecond is, by grace to quicken and to put ſpirituall life into them, ſo as they ſhal be able to ſay, that they liue not, but Chriſt in them. As for the Supremacie of the ſea of Rome whereby the Pope will needes ſtand miniſteriall head to the Catholike church, it is a ſatanicall forgerie. For the headſhip (as I may terme it) of Chriſt is of that nature or qualitie, that it can admit no deputy, whether we reſpect the commanding or the quickening power of Chriſt before named. Nay Chriſt needes no vicar or deputie; for he is alſufficient in himſelfe and alwaies preſent with his church, as he himſelfe teſtifieth, ſaying, Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midſt among them. And whereas all commiſſions ceaſe in the preſence of him that giues the cōmiſſion: it is as much pride and arrogancie for the Pope to take vnto himſelfe the title of the head & vniuerſall Biſhop of the church; as it is for a ſubiect to keepe himſelfe in commiſſion in the preſence of his King.

Eph. 2. 22. Colo. 2. 19

The ſecond rule is, that there is no ſaluation out of the church, and that therefore euery one which is to be ſaued, muſt become a member and a citizen of the catholike and apoſtolike church: and ſuch as remaine for euer out of the ſame periſh eternally. Therefore S. Iohn ſaith, They went out of vs, they were not of vs: for if they had beene of vs, they would haue remained with vs: but this cōmeth to paſſe that it might appeare, that they are not all of vs. And againe, that ſuch as be holy are in the citie of God; but without, that is, foorth of the church, are dogs, enchanters, whoremongers, adulterers, &c. And the arke out of which all periſhed, figured the church, out of which

1. Iohn. 2. 19.

which are all condemned. And for this Act.2.47. cause Saint Luke saith, that the Lord added to the Church from day to day such as should be saued. And the reason hereof is plaine: for without Christ there is no saluation, but out of the militant Church there is no Christ nor faith in Christ: and therfore no saluation. Againe, foorth of the militant Church there are no meanes of saluation, no preaching of the worde no inuocation of Gods name, no Sacraments, and therefore no saluation. For this cause euery man must be admonished euermore to ioyne himselfe to some particular Church being a sound member of the Catholike church.

The third rule is, that the church which here we beleeue is onely one. As Christ himselfe speaketh, My doue is alone, and my Cant.6.8. vndefiled is the onely daughter of her mother. And as there is onely one God and one Redeemer, one faith, one baptisme, & one way of saluation by Christ onely, so there is but one Church alone.

The Catholicke church hath two parts: the Church Triumphant in heauen, and the Church Militant on earth.

The triumphant Church may thus be described: It is a companie of the spirits of iust men, triumphing ouer the flesh, the deuill, and the world, praysing God. First I say it is a Heb.12.23 companie of the spirits of men as the holy Ghost expresly tearmeth it, because the soules onely of the godly departed, as of Abraham, Isaak, Iacob, Dauid, &c. are as yet ascended into heauen, and not their bodies. Furthermore the properties of this company are two. The first is, to make triumph ouer their spirituall enemies the flesh, the deuill, the world: for the righteous man so long as he liues in this world is in continuall combate without truce with all the enemies of his saluation: and by constant faith obtaining victory in the ende of his life, he is translated in glorious and triumphant manner into the kingdome of glory. This was signified to Iohn in a vision in which he saw an innumerable Reu.7.10 company of all sorts of nations, kindreds, people, and tongues stand before the Lambe clothed in long white robes with palmes in their hands in token that they had beene warriours but nowe by Christ haue gotten the victory and are made conquerours. Their second propertie is to praise and magnifie the name of God, as it followeth in the former place, saying Amen: praise and glory, and wisedome, and thanker, honour, power, & might be vnto our God for euermore. Hence it may be demanded whether angels be of this Triumphant Church or no? Answ. The blessed angels be in heauen in the presence of God the Father, the sonne, & the holy Ghost, but they are not of the misticall body of Christ, because they are not vnder him as he is their redeemer, cõsidering they cannot be redeemed, which neuer fell: and it cannot bee proued that they now stand by the vertue of Christs redemption: but they are vnder him as he is their Lord and King, and by the power of Christ as he is God, and their God, are they confirmed. And therefore as I take it, we can not say, that Angels are members of the mysticall body of Christ or of the triumphant Church; though indeede, they be of the companie of the blessed.

The Church militant may bee thus described: It is the company of the elect or faithfull, liuing vnder the crosse, desiring to be remooued and to be with Christ. I say not that the Militant Church is the whole bodie of the elect, but only that part thereof which liueth vpon earth: and the infallible marke thereof is that faith in Christ which is taught and deliuered in the writings of the Prophets and Apostles: and this faith againe may be discerned by two markes. The first is, that the members of this companie liue vnder the crosse, and profit by it in all spirituall grace. And therefore it is Act.14.22 said, that we must through many afflictions enter into the kingdome of heauen. And our Sauiour Christ saith, If any man will come Luk.9.23.
after me, let him deny himselfe, and take vp his crosse euery day and followe me. The second marke is a desire to depart hence and to be with Christ, as Paul saith, Wee
2.Cor.5.8 loue rather to be remooued out of this bodie and to be with Christ. And againe, I desire to Phil.1.23. be loosed and to be with Christ, which is best of all. Where yet we must remember, that the members of Christ doe not desire death simply & absolutely, but in two respects: I. that they might leaue off to sinne, and by sinning leaue to displease God. II. That they might come to enioy happinesse in heauen, and to be with Christ.

Touching the general estate of the militant Church, two questions are to bee considered. The first, howe far forth God is present with it, assisting it by his grace. Ans. God giues his spirit vnto it in such a measure, that although the gates of hel can not preuaile against it, yet neuertheless it remaines still subiect to errour both in in doctrine and manners. For that which is true in euery member of the Church is also true in the whole: but euerie member of the Militant Church is subiect to error both in doctrine and manners: because men in this life are but in part enlightened and sanctified; and therefore still remaine subiect to blindnesse of minde and ignorance, and to the rebellion of their wils & affections: whereby it comes to passe that they may easily faile either in iudgement or in practise. Againe, that which may befall one or two particular Churches may likewise befall all the particular Churches vpon earth, all beeing in one and the same condition, but this may befall one or two particular Churches to faile either in doctrine or manners. The Church of Ephesus failed in leauing her first loue, where-vpon Christ threatneth to remoue from her the Candlesticke. And the Church of Galatia was remoued to another Gospel from him that had called thē in the grace of Christ: nowe why may not the same things befal twentie yea an hundred churches which befell these twaine? Lastly experience sheweth this to be true, in that generall councels haue erred. The councell of Nice beeing to reforme sundrie behauiours among the Bishops and Elders, would with common consent haue forbidden marriage vnto them, thinking it profitable to be so; vnlesse Paphnutius had better informed them out of the scriptures. In the third Councell at Carthage certaine bookes Apocrypha, as the booke of Syrach, Tobie, and the Machabees, are numbred in the Canon, and yet were excluded by the counsell of Laodicea. And the saying of a Diuine is receiued, that former Councels are to be reformed and amended by the latter. But Papists maintaining that the church cannot erre, alleadge the promise of Christ: Howbeit whē he is come which is the spirit of trueth, he will lead you into all truth. &c. The promise is directed to the Apostles, who with their Apostolicall authority had this priuiledge granted them that in the teaching & penning of the Gospell they should not erre: and therefore in the councell at Ierusalem they conclude thus, It seemes good vnto vs, and to the holy Ghost. And if the promise be further extended to all the Church, it must be vnderstood with a limitation: that God will giue his spirit vnto the members thereof to lead them into all truth, so farre forth as shall be needfull for their saluatiō.

The second question is, wherein stands the dignitie & excellencie of the church? Ans. It stands in subiection and obedience vnto the will and worde of his spouse and head, Christ Iesus. And hence it followes, that the church is not to challenge vnto her selfe authority ouer the scriptures, but onely a ministery or ministeriall seruice whereby she is appointed of God to preserue and keepe, to publish and preach them, and to giue testimonie of them And for this cause it is called the pillar & ground of trueth. The church of Rome not content with this saith further that the authoritie of the church in respect of vs is aboue the authority of the scripture, because (say they) we cannot knowe Scripture to be Scripture but by the testimonie of the church. But indeed they speak an vntruth. For the testimonie of men that are subiect to errour cannot be greater and of more force with vs, then the testimony of God who cannot erre. Againe, the church hath her beginning from the word: (for there cannot be a church without faith, and there is no faith without the word, & there is no word out of the scriptures) and therfore the church in respect of vs, dependes on the Scripture, and not the Scripture on the church. And as the lawyer which hath no further power but to expound the law, is vnder the lawe: so the Church which hath authoritie onely to publish and expound the Scriptures, cannot authorize them vnto vs, but must submitte her selfe vnto them. And whereas it is alleadged that faith comes by hearing, & this hearing is in respect of the voice of the church, and that therefore faith comes by the voice of the church: the answer is, that the place must be vnderstood not of that generall faith whereby we are resolued that Scripture is Scripture, but of iustifying faith wherby we attaine to saluation. And faith comes by hearing the voice of the church; not as it is the churches voice, but as it is a ministery or meanes to publish the word of God, which is both the cause and obiect of our beleeuing. Nowe on the contrarie we must hold, that as the carpenter knows his rule to be straight, not by any other rule applied vnto it, but by it selfe: for casting his eie vpon it, he presently discernes whether it be straight, or no: so we knowe and are resolued that Scripture is Scripture, euen by the scripture it selfe, though the church say nothing, so be it wee haue the spirit of discerning when we reade, heare, and conſider the Scripture. And yet the teſtimonie of the Church is not to be deſpiſed, for though it breed not a perſwaſion in vs of the certainetie of the Scripture, yet is it a very good inducement thereto.

The Militant church hath many parts. For as the Ocean ſea which is but one, is deuided into parts according to the regions and countries againſt which it lieth, as into the Engliſh, Spaniſh, Italian ſea, &c. ſo the Church diſperſed ouer the face of the whole earth, is deuided into other particular Churches according as the countries are ſeuerall in which it is ſeated, as into the Church of England and Ireland, the Church of France, the Church of Germanie, &c.

Againe, particular Churches are in a twofold eſtate: ſometime lye hid in perſecution, wanting the publike preaching of the worde, and the adminiſtration of the Sacraments: and ſometime againe they are viſible, carrying before the eyes of the world an open profeſſion of the name of Chriſt: as the moone is ſometime eclypſed, and ſometime ſhineth in the full. In the firſt eſtate was the Church of Iſraell in the dayes of Eliah, when he wiſhed to die: becauſe the people had forſaken the couenant of the Lord, broken downe his altars, ſlaine his prophets with the ſword, and he was left alone and they ſought to take his life alſo. Behold a lamētable eſtate when ſo worthy a prophet could not find another beſide himſelfe that feared God: yet marke what the Lord ſaith vnto him, I haue left ſeauen thouſand in Iſrael, euen all the knees that haue not bowed vnto Baal, and euery mouth that hath not kiſſed him. Againe it is ſaid, That Iſrael had beene a long ſeaſon without the true God, without prieſt to teach, and without the lawe. Neither muſt this trouble any that God ſhould ſo farre forth forſake his Church: for when ordinarie meanes of ſaluation faile, he thē gathereth his elect by extraordinary meanes: as whē the children of Iſrael wandered in the wilderneſſe wanting both circumciſion and the Paſſeouer, he made a ſupply by Manna and by the pillar of a cloud. Hence we haue direction to anſwer the Papiſts, who demaund of vs where our Church was threeſcore yeares agoe before the dayes of Luther: we ſay, that then for the ſpace of many hundred yeares, an vniuerſall Apoſtaſie ouerſpread the whole face of the earth; and that our Church then was not viſible to the worlde, but lay hidde vnder the chaffe of poperie. And the trueth of this, the Records of all ages manifeſt.

1.Kin. 19. 14.18.

2.Chr. 15. 3.

The ſecond eſtate of the church is, when it flouriſheth and is viſible, not that the faith & ſecret election of men can be ſeene (for no man can diſcerne theſe things but by outward ſigns) but becauſe it is apparēt in reſpect of the outward aſſemblies gathered to the preaching of the word & the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, for the praiſe and glory of God and their mutuall edification. And the viſible Church may be thus deſcribed: It is a mixt company of men profeſſing the faith, aſſembled together by the preaching of the word. Firſt of all I call it a mixt cōpanie, becauſe in it there be true beleeuers and hypocrites, Elect and Reprobate; good and bad. The Church is the Lords field, in which the enemie ſowes his tares: it is the corne flore in which lieth wheat and chaffe: it is a band of men, in which beſide thoſe that be of valour and courage there be white liuerd ſouldiours. And it is called a church of the better part, namely the elect whereof it conſiſteth, though they be in number few. As for the vngodly, though they be in the church, yet are they no more parts of it indeede, then the ſuperfluous humours in the veines are parts of the body. But to proceed; how are the members of the viſible Church qualified and diſcerned? the anſwer followeth in the definition. profeſſing the faith. Wherby I meane the profeſſion of that religion which hath beene taught from the beginning, and is now recorded in the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles. And this profeſſion is a ſigne and marke wherby a man is declared and made manifeſt to be a member of the Church. Math. 13. 25.37.

Againe, becauſe the profeſſion of the faith is otherwhiles true and ſincere, and otherwhiles onely in ſhew. therfore there be alſo two ſorts of members of the viſible church, members before God and members before men. A member of the church before God is he, that beſide the outward profeſſiō of the faith, hath inwardly a pure heart, good conſcience, and faith vnfained, whereby he is indeede a true member of the Church. Members before men, whome we may call reputed members, are ſuch as haue nothing els but the outward profeſſion, wanting the good conſcience, and the faith vnfained. The reaſon why they are to be eſteemed members of vs, is, becauſe we are bound by the rule of charitie to thinke of men as they appeare vnto vs; leauing ſecret iudgement vnto God.

I added in the laſt place, that the church is gathered by the word preached, to ſhewe that the cauſe whereby it is begunne and continued, is the worde: which for that cauſe is called the immortall ſeede whereby we are borne anewe and milke, whereby we are fedde and cheriſhed to life euerlaſting. And hence it followeth neceſſarily, that the preaching of the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, ioyned with any meaſure of faith and obedience, is an vnfallible marke of a true Church. Indeede it is true, there be three things required to the good eſtate of a Church, the preaching of the Goſpell, the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and the due execution of Diſcipline according to the worde: yet if the two latter be wanting, ſo be it there be preaching of the word with obedience in the people, there is for ſubſtance a true Church of God. For it is the banner of Chriſt diſplaied, vnder which all that war againſt the fleſh, the deuill, the worlde, muſt range themſelues. As the Lord ſaith by the Prophet Eſai, I will liſt vp my hand to the Gentiles, and ſet vp my ſtandard vnto the people, and they ſhall bring their ſonnes in their armes, and their daughters ſhall be carried vpon their ſhoulders. Hence it followeth, that mē which want the preaching of the Goſpell, muſt either procure the ſame vnto thēſelues; or if that cānot be, becauſe they liue in the middeſt of Idolatrous nations, as in Spaine and Italie, it is requiſite that they ſhould ioine themſelues to thoſe places where with libertie of conſcience they may enioy this happy bleſſing. Men are not to haue their hearts glued to the honours and riches of this world; but they ſhould be of Dauids mind, and rather deſire to be dorekeepers in the houſe of god then to dwell in the tents of vngodlineſſe. In the Canticles the ſpouſe of Chriſt ſaith, Shewe me, O thou whome my ſoule loueth, where thou feedeſt, where thou lyeſt at noone: for why ſhould I be as ſhee that turneth aſide to the flocke of thy companions? To whome he anſwereth thus: If thou knowe not, O thou the faireſt among women, get thee forth by the ſteppes of the flocke, and feed thy kiddes by the tents of the ſhepheards: that is, in thoſe places where the doctrine of righteouſnes and life euerlaſting by the Meſſias, is publiſhed. When the Shunamites childe was dead, ſhee tolde her husband that ſhee would goe to the man of God, to whome he anſwered thus; Why wilt thou goe to him to day, it is neither new moone nor ſabbath daie: wherby it is ſignified that when teaching was skarce in Iſrael, the people did reſort to the Prophets for inſtruction and conſolation. And Dauid ſaith, that the people whereſoeuer there aboad was, went from ſtrength to ſtrength till they appeared before God in Sion. And oftentimes they beeing Proſelytes, their aboad muſt needes be out of the precinctes of Iewrie.

1.Pet.1.23 Heb.5.13. 1.Cor.3.2 Eſa.49.22 Cant.1.6. Verſ.7. 2.kin.4.23 Pſal.84.7.

Thus we ſee what the viſible Church is: now further concerning it, three queſtions are to be skanned. The firſt is, howe we may diſcerne whether particular men and particular Churches holding errours, be ſound mēbers of the Catholike church or no. For the anſwering of this, we muſt make a double diſtinction, one of errours, the other of perſons that erre. Of errours ſome are deſtroyers of the faith, ſome onely weakners of it. A deſtroyer is that, which ouerturneth any fundamētall point of religion; which is of that nature, that if it be denied, religion it ſelfe is ouerturned; as the deniall of the death of Chriſt, and the immortality of the ſoule, iuſtification by workes, and ſuch like: and the ſumme of theſe fundamentall points is compriſed in the Creede of the Apoſtles & the Decalogue. A weakening errour is that, the holding whereof doth not ouerturne any point in the foundation of ſaluation; as the errour of freewill, and ſundrie ſuch like. This diſtinction is made by the holy Ghoſt, who ſaith expreſly that the doctrines of repentance, and faith, and baptiſmes, and laying on of handes, and the reſurrection, and the laſt iudgement, are the foundation, namely of religion: and againe, that Chriſt is the foundation, and that other doctrines conſonāt to the word, are as gold and ſiluer laid therevpon. Secondly, perſons erring, are of two ſorts: ſome erre of weakeneſſe, beeing carried away by others: or of ſimple ignorance, not yet being conuicted and informed concerning the truth. Some againe erre of obſtinacie, or affected ignorance, which hauing beene admoniſhed and conuicted, ſtill perſeuere in their forged opinions. This beeing ſaid, we nowe come to the point. If any man or Church, ſhall hold an error of the lighter kinde, hee ſtill remaines a member of the Church of God, and ſo muſt be reputed of vs. As when a Lutherane

2.Tim.2.17. Gal.5.2,3. Heb.6.1. 1.Cor.3.10

rane ſhall holde, that images are ſtill to be retained in the Church; that there is an Vniuerſall election of all men, &c. for theſe and ſuch like opinions may be maintained, the foundation of ſaluation vnraſed. This which I ſay is flatlie auouched by Paul. If any man (ſaith he) build on this foundation, gold, ſiluer, pretious ſtones; timber, haie, or ſtubble, his worke ſhall be made manifeſt by the fire, &c. and if any mans worke burne, he ſhall looſe, but yet hee ſhall be ſafe himſelfe. And therefore the haie and ſtubble of mens errours that are beſide the foundation, on which they are laid, doe not debarre them from beeing Chriſtians or members of the Church. A man breakes downe the windowes of his houſe; the houſe ſtandes: he breakes down the roofe or the wals; the houſe yet ſtands though deformed: heo pulls vp the foundation: the houſe it ſelfe falles and ceaſeth to be an houſe. Nowe religion which we profeſſe is like an houſe or building: and ſome points thereof are like windowes, doores, walls, roofes, and ſome are the very foundation: & the former may be battered, the foundation ſtanding. Againe if the errour be directly or by neceſſarie conſequent, euen in common ſenſe againſt the foundation, conſideration muſt be had whether the Church or partie erreth of weakeneſſe or malice: if not weakeneſſe, the party is to be eſteemed as a member of the Catholike Church. And thus Paul writes vnto the Church of Galatia, as to a Church of God, though by falſe teachers it had beene turned away to another Goſpel, and embraced the foundamentall errour of iuſtification by workes. But when any man or Church ſhall hold fundamentall errours in obſtinacie or affected ignorance, we are not then bound to repute them any longer as Churches or Chriſtians, but as ſuch to whome condemnation belongs, as Paul ſheweth by the example of Iannes and Iambres. And as Iannes and Idmbres, ſaith he, withſtood Moſes, ſo doe theſe alſo reſiſt the trueth, men of corrupt mindes, reprobate concerning the faith. Yet withall, this caueat muſt euer bee remembred, that we rather condemne the errour then the perſon that erreth, becauſe Gods mercie is like to a bottomleſſe ſea, wherby he worketh what he wil & when he will in the hearts of miſerable ſinners.

1. Cor. 3. 15.

2. Tim. 3. 8

The ſecond queſtion is, where at this day we may find ſuch viſible Churches as are indeede found members of the Catholike Church. And for the reſoluing of it, we are to goe through all countries and religions in the world. And firſt to begin with Turkes and Iewes, we are not in any wiſe to acknowledge their Aſſemblies for Churches, becauſe they worſhip not God in Chriſt who is the head of the Church.

As for the Aſſemblies of Papiſts which haue bin a great part of the world, if thereby we vnderſtand companies of men holding the Pope for their head, & beleeuing the doctrine eſtabliſhed in the councill of Trent; in name they are called churches; but indeede they are no true or ſound members of the Catholike church. For both in their doctrine and in the worſhip of God, they raſe the very foundation of religion; which wil appeare by theſe three points. Firſt of all they holde iuſtification by workes of grace: auouching that they are not onely iuſtified before God by the merit of Chriſt, but alſo by their owne doings. Which opinion flatly ouerturneth iuſtification by Chriſt. For as Paul ſaith to the Galatians, If ye be circumciſed Chriſt profiteth you nothing, that is, if ye looke to be iuſtified by the works of the ceremoniall law, yee are fallen from Chriſt: ioyne circumciſion and Chriſt together in the matter of iuſtification, and ye doe quite ouerthrow iuſtification by Chriſt. Now if this be true, which is the word of God that can not lie, then we ſay to the Papiſts; If ye wil needes be iuſtified by workes of grace, ye are fallen from grace. The ſecond point is, that they maintaine a daily real ſacrifice of the bodie of Chriſt in the Maſſe for the ſinnes of the quicke and dead. And this is alſo a fundamentall hereſie. For Chriſts ſacrifice on the croſſe muſt either be a perfect ſacrifice or no ſacrifice: and if it be often iterated and repeated by the Maſſe-prieſt, it is not perfect but imperfect. The third point is, that they worſhip the Images of the Trinitie and of Saints departed, & their Breaden-god, which is as vyle an abomination as euer was among the Gentiles: all being directly againſt the true meaning of the ſecond commaundement, and defacing the worſhip of God in the very ſubſtance thereof. Thus then it appeares that the olde Church of Rome is changed, and is now at this day, of a ſpouſe of Chriſt become an harlot: and therefore no more a church of Chriſt indeede, then the carkaſſe of a dead man that weareth a liuing mans garment is a liuing man though he looke neuer so like him. And whereas they plead for themselues that they haue succession from the Apostles, the answer is, that succession of person is nothing without succession of doctrine, which they want: and we see that Heretickes haue succeded lawefull Ministers. Secondly, whereas it is alleadged that in the Popish assemblies the sacrament of Baptisme is rightly for substance administred; and that also is is a note of a Church, three things may be answered. First, that baptisme seuered from the preaching of the Gospel, is no more a signe of a church then the seale seuered from the indenture is of force; & that is nothing. Circumcision was vsed in Colchis, yet noe Church, & among the Samaritanes, and yet no people. Secondly, Baptisme in the assemblies of the church of Rome, is as the purse of the true man in the hand of the theife: & indeede it doeth no more argue them to be churches, then the true mans purse argues the theife to be a true man. For Baptisme though it be in their assemblies, yet doth it not appertaine vnto them, but vnto another hidden church of God, which he hath in all ages gathered forth of the middest of them. Thirdly, though they haue the outward Baptisme, yet they by necessarie consequent of doctrine, ouerturne the inward baptisme that standes in iustification and sanctification. Moreouer wheras it is alleadged: that they maintaine the bookes of the old and newe testament penned by the Prophets and Apostles; the answer is, that they doe it with adding to the Canon, and by corrupting the native sense of the Scriptures in the very foundation: and therefore they are but as a lanthorne that shewes light to others, & none to it selfe. Fourthly, it is further saide that they hold the Creede of the Apostles, and make the same confession of faith that we doe. I answer, that in shew of words they do so indeed; but by necessarie consequets in the rest of their doctrine they ouerturne one of the natures and all the offices of Christ, and therewithall most of the arricles of the Creede. And herein they deale as a father, that in outward shewe tenders the body of his childe, and will not abide the least blemish vpon it: and yet by secret conueyances inwardly annoyes the heart, the braine, or the liuer, and so in trueth destroyes the same. Fifthly it is alleadged, that Antichrist must sitte in the temple of God, that is, the church: therfore say some that desire an vnion between vs and the Papists, popish assemblies are true churches: but the argument is not good. For it is one thing to be in the church and another thing to bee of it. And Antichrist is said to sit in the church, not as a member thereof, but as an vsurper, or as the pyrate in the shippe of the marchant: & hence it can not be prooued, that the assēblies of Papists are churches, but that in them and with them there is mingled an other hidden church in the middest wher-of Antichrist the Pope ruleth, though him selfe hath no part therein. Lastly, whereas some, beeing no Papists, thinke their churches to be like a body diseased and full of sores and wounds from the head to the foote, and the throat also cut, yet so as life is still remaining; we may better thinke (their foule errours considered and their worship of God, which is nothing els but a mixture of Iudaisme and Paganisme) that it is a rotten and dead corpes voide of spirituall life. And therfore we haue seuered our selues from the church of Rome vpon iust cause: neither are we schismaticks in so doing, but they rather; because the ground and the proper cause of the schisme is in them.

Herodot. Hol. 1.9.

As for the assemblies of Anabaptists, Libertines, Antinomies, Tritheits, Arrians, Samosatenians, they are no churches of God, but conspiracies of monstrous hereticks iudicially condemned in the primitiue church, and againe by the malice of Satan renued & reuiued in this age. The same we are to thinke and say of the Familie of loue.

As for the churches of Germany commonly called the churches of the Lutheranes, they are to be reputed of vs as the true churches of GOD. Though their Augustane Confession haue not satisfied the expectation of other Reformed churches: yet haue they all the same enemies in matter of religion, and do alike confesse the Father, the Sonne and the holy Ghost: and of the office of the Mediatour, of faith and good works, of the Word, the Church and the Magistrate, are all of one iudgement. They differ indeede from vs in the questiō of the sacrament, but it is no sufficient cause to induce vs to hold them as no Church: for that there is a true or reall receiuing of the body and blood of Christ in the Lords supper, wee all agree; & we ioyntly confesse that Christ is there present so far forth that he doth truly feed vs with his very bodie & blood to eternall life: and all the controuersie lies in the manner of receiuing; we contenting our selues with that spirituall receiuing which is by the hand of faith, they adding therto the corporall, whereby they imagine thēselues to receiue Christ with the hand and mouth of the body. And though to maintaine this their opinion, they be constrained to turne the ascension of Christ into a disparition, whereby his bodie being visible becomes inuisible, yet in the maine points we agree: that Christ ascended into heauen: that he entered into his kingdome in our name and for vs: that we are gouerned and preserued by his power & might: and that whatsoeuer good thing we haue or do, proceedes wholly from the grace of his spirit. Indeede the opinion of the Vbiquity of the body of Christ reuiueth the condemned heresies of Eutiches and Nestorius, and it ouerturneth by necessarie cōsequent most of the articles of faith: but that was priuate to some men, as Brētius and others, and was not receiued of whole churches: and whereas the men were godly and learned, and we are vncertene with what affection, & how long they held this errour, we rest our selues in condemning it, leauing the persons to God. Againe Popish Transubstantiation and Lutherian Consubstantiation, are both against the trueth of the manhood of Christ; yet with great difference. Transubstantiation is flatte against an article of faith: for if Christs bodie be made of bread and his blood of wine (which must needes be if there be a conuersion of the one into the other) then was not he conceiued and borne of the Virgin Marie: for it cannot both be made of Bakers bread and of the substance of the virgin. Againe it aboliſheth the outward signe in the Lords supper, as also the analogie between the signe and the thing signified, and so ouerturnes the sacrament: but Consubstantiatiō doth not so, neither doth it ouerturne the substance of any article of Religion, but onely a maine point of Philosophie, which is, that a bodie doeth occupie onely one place at once.

Furthermore, the Churches of Helvetia, and Savoie, and the free citties of France, and the lowe Countries, and Scotland are to be reuerenced as the true Churches of God, as there confessions make manifest. And no lesse must wee thinke of our owne Churches in England and Ireland. For we holde, beleeue, and maintaine, and preach the truth faith, that is, the auncient doctrine of saluation by Christ, taught and published by the Prophets and Apostles, as the booke of the articles of faith agreed vpon in open Parliament doe fully shewe: & withall nowe we are, and haue beene readie to testifie this our faith, by venturing our liues euen in the cause of religion against forraigne power, and especially the Spaniard: and hereupon all the churches in Europe giue vnto vs the hand of fellowshippe. And whereas sundrie among vs that separate and indeede excommunicate them selues, giue out that there is no Church in England, no Ministers, no Sacraments: their peremptorie asseuerations wanting sufficient ground, are but as paper-shotte. They alleadge that our assemblies are full of grieuous blottes and enormities. Answ. The defects and corruptions of Churches must be distinguished: and they be either in doctrine, or manners. Againe corruptions in doctrine must further be distinguished: some of them are errours indeede, but beside the foundation; and some errours directly against the foundation: and these ouerturne all religion, whereas the former doe not. Nowe it cannot be shewed that in our Churches is taught any one errour that raseth the foundation, and consequently annihillateth the trueth of Gods Church. Indeede there is controuersie among vs touching the point of Ecclesiasticall regiment: but marke in what manner. We all ioyntly agree in the substance of the regiment, confessing freely that there must be preaching of the word, administratiō of the Sacraments according to the institution, and the vse of the Power of the Keyes in admonitions, suspentions, excommunications: the difference betweene vs is only touching the persons, and the manner of putting this gouernment in execution: and therefore men on both parts, though both hold not the trueth in this point; yet because both hold Christ the foundation, they still remaine brethren and true members of Christ. As for corruptions in manners, they make not a Church to be no Church but a badde Church. When as the wicked Scribes and Parisies sitting in Moses chaire, taught the things which he had writ'en, the people are commanded to heare them, and to doe the things which they say, not doing the things which they Mat. 23. 2.

doe. And whereas it is said, that we hold Christ in word, & deny him indeed, that is answered thus: deniall of Christ is double, either in iudgement, or in fact: deniall in iudgement ioyned with obstinacie, makes a Christian to be no Christian; deniall in fact, the iudgement still remaining sound, makes not a man to be no Christian, but a badde Christian. When the Iewes had crucified the Lord of life, they still remained a church, if any vpon earth: and notwithstanding this their fact, the Apostles acknowledged that the couenant and the promises still belonged vnto them: and they neuer made any separation from their Synagogues, till such time as they had beene sufficiently conuicted by the Apostolicall ministerie that Iesus Christ was the true Messias.

Act. 2. 39.

Thus we see where at this day we may finde the true Church of God. Nowe I come to the third question; and that is, at what time a man may with good conscience make separation from a Church. Ans. So long as a Church makes no separation from Christ, we must make no separation from it: and when it separates from Christ, wee may also separate from it: and therefore in two cases there is warrant of separation. The one is, when the worship of God is corrupt in substance. And for this we haue a commandement, Be not, saith Paul, vnequally yoked with infidels: for what fellowship hath righteousnesse with vnrighteousnesse, or what communion hath light with darknesse? or what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath the beleeuer with the Infidel? or what agreement hath the temple of God with Idols? Wherefore come out from among them, and separate your selues, saith the Lord. And we haue a practise of this in the olde Testament. When Ieroboam had set vp idols in Israel, then the Priests and Leuites came to Iudah and Ierusalem to serue the Lord. The second is, when the doctrine of religion is corrupt in substance: as Paul saith, If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to the wholesome wordes of our Lord Iesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godlinesse, he is puffed vp: from which separate your selues. A practise of this wee haue in the Apostle Paul, who beeing in Ephesus in a Synagogue of the Iewes, spake boldely for the space of three moneths, disputing and exhorting to the things which concerne the kingdome of God: but when certaine men were hardened and disobeyed, speaking euil of the way of god, he departed from them and seperated the disciples of Ephesus: and the like he did at Rome also. As for the corruptions that be in the manners of men that be of the Church, they are no sufficient warrant of separation, vnlesse it be from priuate companie, as wee are admonished by the Apostle Paul; & by the examples of Dauid and Lot. By this which hath beene said, it appeares that the practise of such as make separation from vs, is very badde and schismaticall, considering our Churches faile not either in the substance of doctrine, or in the substance of the true worship of God.

Nowe to proceede in the creede. The Church is further set forth by certaine properties & prerogatiues. The properties or qualities are two, holinesse & largenesse. That the Church is holy, it appeares by Peter, which calls it an holy nation, and a chosen people: and by S. Iohn, who calls it the holy citty. And it is so called that it may be distinguished from the false Church, which is tearmed in Scriptures the Synagogue of Satan, and the malignant Church.

Nowe this holinesse of the Church is nothing else but a created qualitie in euery true member thereof, whereby the image of God, which was lost by the fal of Adam is againe renued and restored. The author of it is God by his word and spirit, by litle and litle abolishing the corruption of sinne, and sanctifying vs thoroughout, as Christ saith, Father, sanctifie them in thy trueth, thy word is trueth. And holinesse must he conceiued to be in the Church on this manner: it is perfect in the Church Triumphant, and it is onely begunne in the Church Militant in this life: and that for speciall cause, that wee might giue all glorie to God; that we might not be high minded, that we might worke our saluation with feare and trembling; that we might deny our selues and wholly depend vpon God. Hence we learne three things: first that the church of Rome erreth in teaching that a wicked mā yea such an one as shal neuer be saued, may be a true mēber of the Catholike Church: for in reason, euery man should be answerable to the quality and condition of the church whereof he is a mēber: if it be holy, as it is, he must be holy also. Secōdly we are euery one of vs, as Paul saith to Timothie, to exercise our selues vnto godlines, making cōscience of all our former vnholy waies.

Thirdly our dutie is, to eſchew the ſocietie of Atheiſts, drunkards, fornicatours, blaſphemers, and all wicked and vngodly perſons, as Paul ſaith, Be no companions of them, and haue no fellowſhip with vnprofitable workes of darkeneſſe. And he chargeth the Theſſalonians, that if any man among them walk inordinately they haue no companie with him that he may be aſhamed.

2.Theſſ.3.14.

The largenes of the Church is noted in the word Catholicke, that is, generall or vniuerſall. And it is ſo called for three cauſes. For firſt of all it is generall in reſpect of time; becauſe the Church hath had a beeing in all times and ages euer ſince the giuing of the promiſe to our firſt parents in Paradiſe. Secondly it is generall in reſpect of the perſons of men: for it ſtands of all ſorts and degrees of men, high and low, rich and poore, learned and vnlearned, &c. Thirdly it is Catholike or vniuerſall in reſpect of place; becauſe it hath beene gathered from all parts of the earth, ſpecially now in the time of the newe Teſtament; when our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that the Goſpell ſhall be preached in the whole world. To this purpoſe Iohn ſaith in the Reuelation, I beheld and loe a great multitude which no man could number of all nations and kinreds, and peoples, and tongues, ſtood before the throne and before the lambe, cloathed with long white robes and palmes in their hands.

Mat.26.13

Catholica. i. per totum orbem diffuſa. Aug. epiſt. 170.

And the Church which we here profeſſe to beeleeue, is called Catholicke, that wee way diſtinguiſh it from particular Churches, which are not beleeued, but ſeene with eye, whereof mention is made often in the Scriptures. Rom.16.5.1.Cor. 16.19. the Church in their houſe: and, the Churches of Aſia. Col.4.15. Salute Nymphas & the Church in his houſe. Act.12.22. the Church of Ieruſalem. Act.13.1. the Church at Antioche, &c.

That the Church is Catholicke in reſpect of time, place, perſon, it miniſters matter of endleſſe comfort vnto vs. For herby we ſee that no order, degree, or ſtate of men are excluded from grace in Chriſt, vnleſſe they will exclude themſelues. Saint Iohn ſaith, If any man ſinne, we haue an Aduocate with the father, Ieſus Chriſt the righteous. Now it might be anſwered, it is true indeed Chriſt is an aduocate to ſome men, but he is no aduocate to me. Saint Iohn therefore ſaith further, and he is the reconciliation for our ſinnes, and not for our ſinnes onely, but for the whole world, that is, for all beleeuers of what condition or degree ſoeuer.

Thus much of the properties of the Church: now follow the prerogatiues or benefits which god beſtoweth on it which are in number foure. The firſt is expreſſed in theſe words, the communion of ſaints. Where communion ſignifieth that fellowſhip or ſocietie that one hath with another: and by Saints we vnderſtand not dead men inrolled in the Popes calender, but all that are ſanctified by the blood of Chriſt, whether they be liuing or dead: as Paul ſaith, Vnto the Church of God which is at Corinthus, to them that are ſanctified in Ieſus Chriſt Saints by calling. And God is the God of peace in all the Churches of the Saints. Now if we adde the clauſe I beleeue, vnto theſe words, the meaning is this; I confeſſe and acknowledge that there is a ſpirituall fellowſhip and ſocietie among all the members of Chriſt, being the faithfull ſeruants and children of God: and withall I beleeue that I am partaker of the ſame with the reſt.

1.Cor.1.2. & 14.33.

This communion hath two partes, fellowſhippe of the members with the head, and of the members with themſelues. The communion of the members with their head is not outward, but altogether ſpirituall in the conſcience: and for the opening of it, we muſt conſider what the Church receiueth of Chriſt, and what he receiues of it. The church receiues of Chriſt foure moſt worthy benefits. The firſt, that Chriſt our Mediatour, God and man, haue truly giuen himſelfe vnto vs, & is become our lot and portion, and withall God the father, and the holy ſpirit, in him, as Dauid ſaith Iehoua is the portion of mine inheritance, & of my cup: thou ſhalt maintaine my lot: the lines are fallen vnto me in pleaſant places: yea I haue a faire heritage. And, My fleſh faileth, and my heart alſo: but God is the ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for euer. The ſecond is, the Right of adoption, whereby all the faithfull whether in heauen or earth are actually made the children of God. The benefit is wonderfull, howſoeuer carnall men eſteeme not of it. If a man ſhould either by election or birth, or any way elſe be made the ſonne and heire of an earthly prince, he would thinke thinke himselfe highly aduanced: how highly then are they extolled which are made the sonnes of God himselfe? The third benefit is a title and right to the righteousnes of Christ in his sufferings, & his fulfilling of the law. The excellencie of it is vnspeakeable, because it serues to award the greatest temptations of the deuill. When the deuill replieth thus, thou art a transgressour of the law of God therefore thou shalt be damned: by meanes of that communion which we haue with Christ, we answer againe: that Christ suffered the curse of the law to free vs from due & deserued damnation: & when he further replies, that seeing we neuer fulfilled the law we cannot therefore enter into heauen: we answer againe, that Christs obedience is a fulfilling of the lawe for vs, and his whole righteousnesse is ours to make vs stand righteous before God. The fourth benefit is a right to the kingdome of heauen, as Christ comforting his disciples saith, Feare not little flocke, it is your fathers pleasure to giue you a kingdome: & hence it is sundry times called * the inheritance and the lot of the Saints.

Pſal.16.5.

*Act. 26. 18. Col. 1. 12. Eph. 1. 18.

Furthermore, for the conueyance of these benefits vnto vs, God hath ordained the preaching of the word and the administration of the Sacraments, specially the Lords supper; and hath commanded the solemne and ordinarie vse of them in the Church. And hereupon the Lords supper is called the Communion. The cuppe of blessing (saith Paul) which we blesse, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? & the bread which we breake, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? that is, a signe and seale of the communion.

1. Cor. 10. 16.

Againe, the things which Christ receiueth of vs are two: our sinnes with the punishment thereof made his by application or imputation: and our afflictions with all the miseries of this life which he accounts his owne, and therefore doth as it were put vnder his shoulders to beare the burden of them. And this communion betweene Christ and vs is expressed in the Scriptures by that blessed and heauenly bargaine in which there is mutuall exchange betweene Christ and vs: hee imparts vnto vs, milke and wine without siluer or mony to refresh vs, and gold tried by the fire that we may become rich, and white raiment that we may be cloathed, and eye-salue to annoint our eies that we may see: & we for our parts returne vnto him nothing but blindnesse and nakednesse, and pouerty, & the loathsome burden of our filthy sinnes.

Isa. 55. 1. Reu. 3. 18.

The second part of the communion is that which the Saints haue one with an other. And it is either of the liuing with the liuing, or of the liuing with the dead. Now the communion of the liuing standes in three things: I. the like affection: II. in the gifts of the spirit: III. in the vse of temporall riches. For the first: communion in affection is, whereby all the seruants of God are like affected to God, to Christ, to their owne sinnes, and each to other. They are all of one nature and heart alike disposed, though they be not acquainted nor haue any externall fellowship in the flesh. As in a familie children are for the most part one like an other and brought vp alike: euē so it is in Gods family which is his Church: the members thereof are all alike in heart & affection: and the reason is, because they haue one spirit to guide them all: and therefore Saint Peter saith, The multitude of them that beleeued were of one heart and of one soule, neither any of them said that any thing which he possessed was his owne, but they had all things common. And the Prophet Esay foretelling the vnitie which should be in the kingdome of Christ, saith, The woolfe shall dwell with the lambe, and the leopard shal lie with the kidde, and the calfe and the lyon, and the fat beast togither, and a little child shall lead them. The cowe and the beare shall feede, and their young ones shall lie togither: and the lyon shall eate straw like the bullocke. The sucking child shall play vpon the hole of the aspe, and the weaned child shall put his hand into the cockatrice hole: By these beasts are signified, men that be of a wicked and brutish nature: which, when they shall be brought into the kingdome of Christ, shall lay aside the same and become louing, gentle, courteous and all of one minde. And S. Peter requires of the church the practise of brotherly loue, & that is to carrie a tender affection to men, not because they are of the same flesh, but because they are ioyned in the bond of one spirit with vs. Furthermore by reason of this that all the children of God are of one heart, there followes another duty of this communion, whereby they beare one the burdens of an other, and when one member is grieued all are grieued; when one reioyceth all reioyce, as in the body when one member suffereth all suffer.

Act. 4. 32. Isa. 11. 6. 7. 2. Pet. 1. 7. Gal. 6. 2.

The

The ſecond branch of their communion, is in the gifts of Gods ſpirit, as loue, hope, feare, &c. And this is ſhewed, when one man doth imploy the graces of God beſtowed on him, for the good and ſaluation of an other. As a candle ſpendeth it ſelfe to giue light to others: ſo muſt Gods people ſpend thoſe gifts which God hath giuen them for the benefit of their brethren. A Chriſtian man howſoeuer he be the freeſt man vpon earth, yet is he ſeruant to all men, eſpecially to the Church of God to doe ſeruice vnto the members of it by loue for the good of all. And this good is procured, when we conuey the graces of God beſtowed on vs to our brethren: and that is done fiue waies: I. by example: II. by admonition: III. by exhortation: IV. by conſolation: V. by prayer. The firſt, which is good example, we are inioyned by Chriſt, ſaying, Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes and glorifie your father which is in heauen. And that our hearts might be touched with ſpeciall care of this duty, the Lord ſets before vs his owne bleſſed examples, ſaying, Be ye holy as I am holy: and, Learne of me that I am meeke and lowly. And paul ſaith, Be yee followers of me as I follow Chriſt: and the higher men are exalted, the more carefull ought they to be in giuing good example. For let a man of note or eſtimation doe euill, and he ſhall preſently haue many followers. Euill example runnes from one to an other like a leproſie or infection: and this Chriſt ſignified when he ſaid that the figtree planted in the vineyard, If it beares no fruite makes all the ground barren. The ſecond meanes of communication of the gifts of God vnto others, is admonition, which is an ordinance of God whereby Chriſtian men are to recouer their brethren from their ſinnes. A man by occaſion fallen into the water is in daunger of his life; and the reaching of the hand by an other is the meanes to ſaue him. Now euery man when he ſinneth doth, as much as in him lieth, caſt his ſoule into the verie pitte of hell: and wholeſome admonitions are as the reaching out of the hand to recouer him againe. But it will peraduenture be ſaid, how muſt we proceede in admoniſhing of others? Anſ. We are to obſerue three things. The firſt is, to ſearch whether we that are to reprooue, be faultie our ſelues in the ſame thing or no. Firſt, we muſt take out the beame that is in our own eye, and ſo ſhal we ſee clearely to pull out the mote in our brothers eie. Secondly, before wee repooue, we muſt be ſure that the fault is committed: we muſt not goe vpon heare-ſaie or likelihoods: and therefore the holy Ghoſt ſaith, Let vs conſider or obſerue one another to prouoke vnto loue or good workes. Thirdly, before we reprooue, we muſt in Chriſtian wiſdome make choice of time and place: for all times and places ſerue not to this purpoſe. And therefore Salomon ſaith, It is the glorie of a man to paſſe by an offence. Furthermore in the act of admoniſhing, two things are to be obſerued: I. a man muſt deliuer the wordes of his admonition (ſo farre forth as he can) out of the word of God, ſo as the partie which is admoniſhed, may in the perſon of man ſee God himſelfe to reprooue him. II. his reprooue muſt be made with as much compaſſion and fellow-feeling of other mens wants as may be. As Paul ſaith, If any man be fallen by occaſion into any fault, ye which are ſpirituall [a] reſtore ſuch an one with the ſpirit of meekeneſſe. The third way of communicating good things to others is exhortation: and it is a meanes to excite and ſtirre them on forward, which doe alreadie walke in the waie of godlineſſe. Therefore the holy Ghoſt ſaith, Exhort one another daily, leaſt any of you be hardened through the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne. But alas, the practiſe of this dutie, as alſo of the former is hard to be found among men; for it is vſuall in families that maſters & fathers inſtead of admoniſhing their ſeruants and children, teach them the practiſe of ſinne in ſwearing, blaſpheming, ſlandering, &c. and as for exhortation, it is not vſed. Let a man that hath the feare of God offend neuer ſo little, inſtead of brotherly exhortation hee ſhall heare his profeſſion caſt in his teeth, and his hearing of ſermons: this practiſe is ſo general, that many beginning newly to tread in the ſteppes of godlines, are hereby daunted, & quite driuen back. The fourth way is conſolation, which is a meanes appointed by God whereby one man ſhould with words of heauenly comfort refreſh the ſoules of others afflicted with ſickeneſſe or any other way feeling the hād of God either in bodie or in mind. And this dutie is as little regarded as any of the former. In time of mens ſickeneſſe neighbours come in, but what ſay they? I am ſorrie to ſee you in this caſe, I hope to ſee you well againe, I would be sorry else, &c. Not one of an hundred can speake a word of comfort to the wearie: but we are faulty herein. For with what affection doe wee beleeue the communion of Saints, when we our selues are as drie fountaines, that doe scarse conuey a drop of refreshing to others. The last meanes is praier, whereby Gods Church procureth blessings for the seuerall members therof, and they againe for the whole. And herein lies a principall point of the Communion of saints; which ministreth notable comfort to euery Christian heart. For hence wee may reason thus: I am indeede a member of the Catholike Church of God, and therefore though my owne praiers be weake, yet my comfort is this, I know that I am partaker of all the good praiers of all the people of God dispersed ouer the face of the whole earth my fellow members, and of all the blessings which God bestowes on them. This will make vs in all our troubles to say with Elisha, Feare not, for they that be with vs are more then they that be with them. 1. king 6. 16. Whē the people of Israel had sinned in worshipping the golden calfe, the wrath of the Lord was kindled and made a breach into them, as cannon shot against a wall: but Moses the seruant of God stood in the breach before the Lord to turne away his wrath, least he should destroy them. Psal. 106. 23. And the praier of Moses was so effectuall that the Lord said, Let me alone, as though Moses by praier had held the hand of god that he could not punish the people. Exod. 32. 10. And some thinke that Steuens praier for his enemies when hee was stoned was a means of Pauls conuersion. And surely though there were no other reason, yet this were sufficient to moone a man to imbrace Christian religion, considering that being a mēber of the Church he hath part in all the praiers of the Saints through the world, and of the blessings of God that come thereby.

The third part of this communion is in temporall things, as goods and riches: whereby I meane, no [b] Anabaptisticall communion, but that which was vsed in the primtiue Church, when they had all things common in respect of vse: & some solde their goods and possessions & parted them to all men, as euery one had need. Act. 2. 44. And by their example we are taught to be content to imploy those goods which god hath bestowed one vs, for the good of our fellowe members within the compasse of our callings, and to our abilitie, and beyond our ability, if neede require. Paul saith, Doe good to all but specially to them which are of the housholde of faith. Gal. 6. 10.

[b] Spirituall communiō doth not barr a mission of temporall goods 2. Cor. 8. 1.

The communion of the liuing with the dead standes in two things: the one is, that the Saints departed in the Church Triumphant doe in generall pray for the Church militant vpon earth, desiring the finall deliuerance of all their fellow members frō all their miseries. And therefore in the Apocalyps they crie on this manner, How long Lord holy and true, doest not thou iudge and auenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? Rev. 6. 10. I say in generall, because they pray not for the particular conditions and persons of men vpon earth considering they neither know, nor see, nor heare vs: neither can they tell what things are done vpon earth. The second is, that the godly on earth doe in heart and affection conuerse with them in heauen, desiring continually to be dissolued and to be with Christ. Nowe whereas the Papists doe further inlarge this communion, auouching that the Saints in heauen doe make intercession to Christ for vs, and impart their merits vnto vs; & that we againe for that cause are to inuocate them, and to doe vnto them religious worshippe, we dissent from them, beeing resolued that these things are but inuentions of mans braine, wanting warrant of the word.

Lastly, to conclude, a question may be demanded, how any one of vs may particularly know and be assured in our selues, that we haue part in this communion of Saints. Answ. Saint Iohn opens this point to the full, when he saith, If we say that we haue fellowship with him, and yet walke in darknes, we lie: but If we walke in the light, as he is light, then we haue fellowship one with another, and the blood of Christ purgeth vs from all our sinnes. 1 Ioh. 1. 6. In which wordes he makes knowledge of Gods will ioyned with obedience, to be an infallible marke of one that is in the communion: as on the contrary, ignorance of Gods will, or disobedience, or both to be tokens of one that hath neither fellowship with Christ, or with the true members of Christ. And therefore to ende this point, if we would haue fellowship with Christ, let vs learne to know what sinne is, and to flie from the same as from the bane of our soules, and to make conscience of euery euill way.

The duties to be learned by the communion of Saints are manifold. And first of all if wee doe beleeue the fellowshippe which which all the faithfull haue with Christ & with themselues; and be resolued that we haue part therein, then must we separate and withdraw our selues from al vngodly & vnlawfull societies of men in the world whatsoeuer they be. Vnlawfull societies are manifold, but I will onely touch one, which euery where annoyeth religion, & hindreth greatly this communiō of Saints, and that is, when men ioyne themselues in company to passe away the time in drinking, gaming, &c. Behold a large fellowship which beareth sway in al places: there is almost no towne but there is at the least one knot of such companions: & he that will not bee combined with such loose mates he is thought to be a mā of no good nature: he is foisted forth of euery company; he is no bodie: and if a man will yeelde to runne ryot with them in the mispending of his time and goods, he is thought to bee the best fellowe in the world. But what is done in this societie? and how doe these cuppe-companions spend their time? surely the greatest part of day and night is vsually spent in swearing, gaming, drinking, surfetting, reuelling, and railing on the ministers of the word, and such as professe religiō; to omit the enormities which they procure to themselues hereby: and this behauiour spreads it selfe like a canker ouer euery place, and it defiles both towne and countrey. But we that looke for comfort by the communion of Saints, must not cast in our lot with such a wicked generation, but separate our selues from thē. For vndoubtedly their societie is not of God but of the deuill: and they that are of this societie, can not be of the holy communion of Saints: and surely except the magistrate by the sword, or the church by the power of the keyes doe pull downe such fellowship, the holy society of Gods Church and people must decay. Excommunication is a censure ordained of God for this end, to banish them from this heauenly communion of the members of Christ, that liue inordinately & haue communion with men in the workes of darknesse.

Secondly by this we are taught, that men professing the same religion, must be linked in societie and conuerse togither in Christian loue, meeknes, gentlenesse, and patience: as Saint Paul taught the Philippians, If there be any fellowship of the spirit, if there be any compassion and mercie, fulfill my ioy, that we may be like minded, hauing the same loue, being of one accord and of like iudgement. And againe, Keepe (saith he) the vnitie of the spirit in the bond of peace. Why? marke how his reason is fetched from this communion: Because there is one bodie, one spirit, euen as you are called into the hope of your vocation, one Lord, one faith, one hope, one baptisme, one God and father of all, which is aboue all and in all. And no doubt the same reason made Dauid say, All my delight is in the Saints which be vpon earth.

Phil. 2. 1.

Eph. 4. 3.

Pſal. 16. 3.

Thirdly euery Christian man that acknowledgeth this communion, must carrie about with him a fellow feeling, that is, an heart touched with compassion in regard of all the miseries that befall either the whole Church or any member thereof, as Christ our head teacheth vs by his owne example, when he called to Saul, & said, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? giuing him to vnderstand that he is touched with the abuses to his Church, as if they had directly beene done to his owne person. The prophet Amos reproueth the people, because they dranke wine in bolls, and annointed themselues with the chiefe oyntments: but why? was it not lawfull for them to doe so? yes: but the cause for which they are reproued followeth: No man (saith he) is sorrie for the affliction of Ioseph. In the middest of their delights and pleasures they had no regard of the miseries of the poore church and seruants of God elswhere in affliction, which euery man ought to shew forth in the practise of all duties of loue: and therfore Paul saith, Pray alwayes with all manner of prayers and supplications in the spirit, and watch thereunto with all perseuerance and supplications for the Saints. And he highly commendeth the Philippians for communicating to his afflictions. And further he biddeth Philemon to comfort Onesimus his bowells in the Lord. And Saint Iohn saith, If a mans life would saue his neighbours soule, he must lay it downe, if neede require. We haue all of vs daily occasion to practise this dutie towardes the afflicted members of Gods church in other countries. For howsoeuer wee enioy the Gospell with peace, yet they are vnder persecution for the same: and so oft as we heare report of this, we should suffer our hearts to be grieued with them, and pray to God for them.

Amos. 6. 6.

1. Ioh. 3. 16

We must here be admonished not to seeke

ſeeke our owne things, but to referre the labours of our callings to the common good eſpecially of the Church wherof we are members. As for them that ſeeke for nothing but to maintaine their own eſtate and wealth, and therefore in their trades vſe falſe waights and meaſures, the ingroſſing, corrupting, mingling of wares, glozing, lying, ſmoothing, ſwearing, forſwearing, diſſembling, griping, oppreſſing of the poore, &c. they may plead for themſelues what they will, but in truth they neuer yet knew what the Communion of Saints meant.

Laſtly, conſidering we are all knit into one myſticall bodie, and haue mutuall fellowſhip in the ſame, our duty is both to redreſſe the faults of our brethren & to couer them, as the hand in the bodie layes plaiſter vpon the ſore in the foote or in the legge, and withall couers it. Loue couers the multitude of ſinnes. And when men diſgrace their brethren for their wants, and blaſe them to the world, they doe not the dutie of fellow-members.

Thus much for the firſt benefit beſtowed on the Church: the ſecond is, Forgiueneſſe of ſinnes: which may be thus deſcribed, Forgiuenes of ſinnes is a bleſſing of God vpon his Church procured by the death and paſſion of Chriſt, whereby God eſteemes of ſinne as no ſinne, or, as not committed. In this deſcription I haue touched fiue points, which we are ſeuerally to conſider. The firſt, who is the author of forgiueneſſe of ſinnes? Anſ. God, whoſe bleſsing it is: for ſinne is onely committed againſt God, and the violating of his lawes & commandements are properly ſinnes. And the offence done to any man or creature is no more in it ſelfe but an offence or iniurie: yea the breach of mans commandement is no ſinne, vnleſſe it doe implie withall the breach of Gods commandement. Therefore it is a prerogatiue belonging to God alone to pardon ſinne: and when we are taught to ſay, Forgiue vs our treſpaſſes as we forgiue them that treſpaſſe againſt vs, the meaning is not, that we forgiue ſinnes as they are ſins, but onely as treſpaſſes, that is, loſſes, hurts, & damages done vnto vs by men. It may be further ſaid, God hath giuen this power and commandement to his Miniſters to forgiue ſinnes, ſaying, Ioh.20.23 Whoſe ſinnes ye remit, they are remitted. Anſ. Gods miniſters doe not properly forgiue ſinnes, but onely in the name of God according to his word pronounce to a penitent ſinner that his ſinnes are pardoned and forgiuen of God: and therefore it is a moſt certen truth that none can forgiue ſinnes but God onely: it was auouched by the Phariſies and not denied by Chriſt, Mark.2.7. Hence it followes that remiſsion of ſinne, beeing once graunted remaines for euer, becauſe Gods loue vnto the Elect is vnchaungeable, and his decree concerning their ſaluation can not be altered. The ſecond point is, to whome remiſsion of ſinnes is giuen? Anſ. To the Catholicke Church, that is to the whole companie of men predeſtinate to ſaluation: as Eſai ſaith, The people that dwell therein (that is, the Church,) ſhall haue their ſinnes forgiuen. Eſa.33.24 And, They ſhall cal them the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord: and thou ſhalt bee named, a citie ſought out and not forſaken. Eſa.62.12. And if there had beene an vniuerſall remiſsion of ſinnes to all men, as ſome doe dreame, it ſhould not here haue beene made a peculiar prerogatiue of the Church. The third point is, what is the meanes whereby pardone of ſinne is procured at Gods hand? Anſ. The death and paſſion of Chriſt: ſo Paul ſaith, Chriſt died for our ſinnes: that is, Rom.4.25 Chriſt died to be a payment and ſatisfaction to Gods iuſtice for our ſinnes. And S. Iohn ſaith, The blood of Ieſus Chriſt his ſonne 1.Ioh.1.7. cleanſeth vs from all ſinne. And Peter ſaith, Knowing that yee were not redeemed with 1.Pet.1.18 corruptible things, as ſiluer and gold from your vaine converſation, &c. but with the pretious blood of Chriſt as of a lambe vndefiled and without ſpot. The fourth point is, after what manner ſinne is forgiuē? Anſ. By an action of God, whereby for the merit of Chriſt, he eſteemes and accounts ſinne as no ſinne, or, as if it had neuer beene committed. Therfore Dauid ſaith, Bleſſed is the Pſal.32.2 man to whome the Lord imputeth no ſinne. And in Eſai the Lord ſaith, I haue put away Eſa.44.22 thy tranſgreſsions like a cloud, and thy ſinnes as a myſt. Now we know that clouds and myſts which appeare for a time: are afterward by the ſunne vtterly diſperſed. And King Hezekias when hee would ſhewe that the Lord had forgiuen him his ſinnes, ſaith, God hath caſt them behinde his backe, alluding to the manner of men, who when Eſa.38.17. they will not remember or regard a thing, doe turne their backes vpon it. And Micheas ſaith, that God doth caſt all the ſinnes Mich.7.19 of his people into the bottome of the ſea, alluding to Pharao, whom the Lord drowned in the bottome of the redde ſea. And Chriſt hath taught vs to pray thus: forgiue

vs our debts, as we forgiue our debtors: in which wordes is an alluding to creditours, who then forgiue debts, when they account that which is debt, as no debt, and croſſe the booke. Hence it appeares, that damnable and vile is the opinion of the church of Rome, which holdeth that there is a remiſſion of the fault without a remiſſion of the puniſhment: and here withall fall to the ground, the doctrine of humane ſatisfactions, and indulgences, and purgatorie, and praier for the dead, built vpon this foundatiō, which are of the ſame kind.

Moreouer, we muſt remember to adde to this clauſe, I beleeue, and then the meaning is this: I doe not onely beleeue that God doth giue pardon of ſinne to his Church and people (for that the very deuills beleeue) but withall I beleeue the forgiuenes of mine owne particular ſinnes. Hence it appeares, that it was the iudgement of the Primitiue Church that men ſhould beleeue the forgiueneſſe of their owne ſinnes.

By this prerogatiue we reape endleſſe comfort: for the pardon of ſinne is a moſt wonderfull bleſſing, and without it euery man is more miſerable and wretched then the moſt vile creature that euer was. We loath the ſerpent or the toad; but if a man haue not the pardon of his ſinnes procured by the death and paſſion of Chriſt, he is a thouſand fold worſe then they. For when they die, there is the ende of their woe and miſerie: but when man dieth without this benefit, there is the beginning of his. For firſt in ſoule till the day of iudgement, and then both in bodie and ſoule for euermore, he ſhall enter into the endleſſe paines and torments of hell; in which if one ſhould continue ſo many thouſand yeares as there are drops in the Ocean ſea, and then be deliuered, it were ſome eaſe: but hauing continued ſo long (which is an vnſpeakable length of time) he muſt remaine there as long againe, and after that for euer and euer without releaſe: and therefore among all the benefits that euer were or can be thought of, this is the greateſt and moſt pretious. Among all the burdens that can befall a man, what is the greateſt? Some will ſay, ſickeneſſe, ſome ignominie, ſome pouertie, ſome contempt: but indeed among all, the heauieſt and the greateſt, is the burden of a mans owne ſinnes, lying vpon the conſcience and preſſing it downe, without any aſſurance of pardon. Dauid beeing a king had no doubt all that heart could wiſh, and yet he, laying aſide all the royalties and pleaſures of his kingdome, ſaith this one thing aboue all, that he is a bleſſed man that is eaſed of the burden of his ſinnes. A lazar man full of ſores is vgly to the ſight and we can not abide to looke vpon him: but no lazar is ſo loathſome to vs, as al ſinners are in the ſight of God: and therefore Dauid counted him bleſſed, whoſe ſinnes were couered. It may be ſome will ſay, there is no cauſe why a man ſhould thus magnifie the pardon of ſinne, conſidering it is but a common benefit. Thus indeede men may imagine, which neuer knewe what ſinne meant: but let a man onely as it were, but with the tip of his finger haue a little feeling of the ſmart of his ſinnes, he ſhall finde his eſtate ſo fearefull, that if the whole world were ſet before him on the one ſide, and the pardon of ſinnes on the other, he would chooſe the pardon of his ſinne before ten thouſand worlds. Though many drouſie Proteſtants eſteeme nothing of it, yet to the touched conſcience it is a treaſure, which when a man findes, he hides it, and goes home and ſels all that he hath and buies it. Therefore this benefit is moſt excellent, and for it the members of Gods Church haue great cauſe to giue God thankes without ceaſing. Pſal 32.1.

The duties to be learned hence are theſe. And firſt of all here comes a common fault of men to be rebuked. Euery one will ſay, that he beleeueth the remiſſion of ſinnes, yet no man almoſt laboureth for a true and certen perſwaſion hereof in his owne conſcience: and for proofe hereof, propound this queſtion to the common Chriſtian: Doeſt thou perſwade thy ſelfe, that God giues remiſſion of ſinnes vnto his Church? The anſwer will bee, I know & beleeue it. But aske him further: Doeſt thou beleeue the Pardon of thine owne ſinnes? and then comes in a blinde anſwer, I haue a good hope to God-ward, but I cannot tell, I thinke no man can ſay ſo much: for God ſaith to no man, thy ſinnes are pardoned. But this is to ſpeake flat contraries, to ſay they beleeue, & they cannot tell: and it bewraies exceeding negligence in matters of ſaluation. But let them that feare God, or loue their owne ſoules health, giue all diligence to make ſure the remiſſion of their owne ſinnes: withal, auoiding hardnes of heart, & drouſines of ſpirit, the moſt fearful iudgemēts ſeeke our owne things, but to referre the labours of our callings to the common good eſpecially of the Church wherof we are members. As for them that ſeeke for nothing but to maintaine their own eſtate and wealth, and therefore in their trades vſe falſe waights and meaſures, the ingroſſing, corrupting, mingling of wares, glozing, lying, ſmoothing, ſwearing, forſwearing, diſſembling, griping, oppreſſing of the poore, &c. they may plead for themſelues what they will, but in truth they neuer yet knew what the Communion of Saints meant.

Laſtly, conſidering we are all knit into one myſticall bodie, and haue mutuall fellowſhip in the ſame, our duty is both to redreſſe the faults of our brethren & to couer them, as the hand in the bodie layes plaiſter vpon the ſore in the foote or in the legge, and withall couers it. Loue couers the multitude of ſinnes. And when men diſgrace their brethren for their wants, and blaſe them to the world, they doe not the dutie of fellow-members.

Thus much for the firſt benefit beſtowed on the Church: the ſecond is, Forgiueneſſe of ſinnes: which may be thus deſcribed, Forgiuenes of ſinnes is a bleſſing of God vpon his Church procured by the death and paſſion of Chriſt, whereby God eſteemes of ſinne as no ſinne, or, as not committed. In this deſcription I haue touched fiue points, which we are ſeuerally to conſider. The firſt, who is the author of forgiueneſſe of ſinnes? Anſ. God, whoſe bleſsing it is: for ſinne is onely committed againſt God, and the violating of his lawes & commandements are properly ſinnes. And the offence done to any man or creature is no more in it ſelfe but an offence or iniurie: yea the breach of mans commandement is no ſinne, vnleſſe it doe implie withall the breach of Gods commandement. Therefore it is a prerogatiue belonging to God alone to pardon ſinne: and when we are taught to ſay, Forgiue vs our treſpaſſes as we forgiue them that treſpaſſe againſt vs, the meaning is not, that we forgiue ſinnes as they are ſins, but onely as treſpaſſes, that is, loſſes, hurts, & damages done vnto vs by men. It may be further ſaid, God hath giuen this power and commandement to his Miniſters to forgiue ſinnes, ſaying, Ioh.20.23 Whoſe ſinnes ye remit, they are remitted. Anſ. Gods miniſters doe not properly forgiue ſinnes, but onely in the name of God according to his word pronounce to a penitent ſinner that his ſinnes are pardoned and forgiuen of God: and therefore it is a moſt certen truth that none can forgiue ſinnes but God onely: it was auouched by the Phariſies and not denied by Chriſt, Mark.2.7. Hence it follows that remiſsion of ſinne, beeing once graunted remaines for euer, becauſe Gods loue vnto the Elect is vnchaungeable, and his decree concerning their ſaluation can not be altered. And if there had beene an vniuerſall remiſsion of ſinnes to all men, as ſome doe dreame, it ſhould not here haue beene made a peculiar prerogatiue of the Church. Hence it appeares, that damnable and vile is die opinion of the church of Rome, which holdeth that there is a remiſſion of the fault without a remiſſion of the puniſhment: and here withall fall to the ground, the doctrine of humane ſatisfactions, and indulgences, and purgatorie, and praier for the dead, built vpon this foundatiō, which are of the ſame kind.

Moreouer, we muſt remember to adde to this clauſe, I beleeue, and then the meaning is this: I doe not onely beleeue that God doth giue pardon of ſinne to his Church and people (for that the very deuills beleeue) but withall I beleeue the forgiuenes of mine owne particular ſinnes. The duties to be learned hence are theſe. And firſt of all here comes a common fault of men to be rebuked. Euery one will ſay, that he beleeueth the remiſſion of ſinnes, yet no man almoſt laboureth for a true and certen perſwaſion hereof in his owne conſcience: and for proofe hereof, propound this queſtion to the common Chriſtian: Doeſt thou perſwade thy ſelfe, that God giues remiſſion of ſinnes vnto his Church? of god which euery where take place. The foolish Virgins went forth to meete the bridegroome with lamps in their hands as well as the wise, but they neuer so much as dreamed of the horne of oyle, till the comming of the bridegroome. So many men liue in the Church of God as members thereof, holding vp the lampe of glorious profession: but in the meane season they seeke onely for the things of this life, neuer casting, how they may assure themselues in conscience touching their reconciliation with God, till the day of death come.

Secondly, if we be here bound to beleeue the pardon of all our sinnes, then we must euery day humble our selues before God, and seeke pardon for our daily offences: for he giues grace to the humble or contrite; he fills the hungrie with good things, whē the rich are sent empty away.

1. king. 20. 31. When Benhadad the King of Syria was discomfited and ouercome by the King of Israel, by the counsell of his seruants, who told him that the kings of Israel were mercifull men, he sent them cloathed in sackcloath with ropes about their neckes to intreat for peace and fauour. Now when the King saw their submission, he made a couenant of peace with him. We by our sinnes most iustly deserue hell, death, and condemnation euery day, and therefore it standeth vs in hand to come into the presence of God and to humble our selues before him in sackcloath & ashes, crauing and intreating for nothing in the world so much as for the pardon of our sinnes; and that day by day without ceasing till the Lord giue this blessed answer to our conscience, that al our sinnes are put out of his remembrance. We must not thinke that God putteth grace into mens hearts when they lie snorting vpon their elbowes: and either not vse or despise the meanes: but we must first vse the meanes partly by making confession of our sinnes to God, and partly by crying to heauen for pardon: & then when by his grace we begin to desire grace, he giues further grace.

Lastly, if we beleeue the pardon of our sinnes then we must chaunge the tenour and course of our liues, and take heed of breaking Gods commandements by doing any of those things, whereof our consciences may accuse vs, and tell vs, that by them we haue displeased God heretofore. A man that for some misdemeanour hath beene cast into prison and lien there many yeares winter and sommer in cold yrons, when he obtaines libertie, he will often bethinke himselfe of his old miserie, and take heede for euer least he fall into the same offence againe: and he which hath seene his owne sinnes and felt the smart of them, and withall by Gods goodnes obtained assurance touching the pardon of them, will neuer wittingly and willingly commit the like sinnes any more, but in all things change the course of his life. As for such as say; that they haue the pardon of their sinnes, and yet liue in them still; they deceiue themselues, and haue no faith at all.

Thus much for the second benefit which God bestoweth on his Church, namely remission of sinnes: now followeth the third in these words: The resurrection of the bodie. In the handling whereof sundrie points must be considered. The first, whether there be a resurrection or no? This question must needes be handled, because Epicures and Atheists in all ages, and at this day some doe cal this article into question. Now that there is a resurrection of the bodie after death, it may be prooued by many arguments, whereof I will onely touch the principall. The first is taken from the worke of redemption. Saint Iohn writeth, that Christ came to dissolue the workes of the deuill: which are sinne, and by sinne death: and hence I reason thus: If sinne and death are to be dissolued vtterly, then the bodies of the faithfull which are dead in the graue, must needes bee made aliue: otherwise death is not abolished: but sinne and death must be vtterly abolished: therefore there shall be a resurrection. Secondly, God had made a couenant with his Church, the tenour whereof is this, I will be thy God, and thou shalt be my people. This couenant is not for a day or an age, or for a thousand yeares or ages, but is euerlasting and without end, so as Gods people may say of God for euer, God is our God: and likewise God will say of his Church for euermore, this people is my people. Now if Gods couenant be euerlasting, then all the faithfull departed from the beginning of the world must be raised againe of life. And if God should leaue his people in the graue vnder death for euer, how could they be called the people of God? for he is a God of mercie and of life it selfe: & therfore though they abide long in the earth, yet they must at length bee reuiued againe. This argument Christ vseth against the Sadduces, which denied the resurrection: God is not the God of the dead

Math. 22. 32. but of the liuing, but God is the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, which are dead, and therefore they must rise againe. The third argument must be taken from the tenour of Gods iustice. It is a speciall part of Gods glorie, to shew forth his mercie on the godly, and his iustice vpon the wicked in rewarding them according to their works, as the Apostle saith, God will reward euery man according to his workes: to them that
Rom. 2. 6. by continuance in well doing, seeke glory, and honour, and immortality, life eternall: but vnto them that disobey the truth, that be contentious and obey vnrighteousnes, shall bee indignation and wrath. But in this life God rewardeth not men according to their doings: and therefore Salomon speaking of the estate of all men in this world, saith, All things come alike to all, and the same condition to the iust and vniust, to the good and Eccles 9. 2. badde, to the pure and polluted, to him that offereth sacrifice, & to him that offereth none. Nay, which is more, here the wicked flourish, and the godly are afflicted. The vngodly haue hearts ease and all things at will, whereas the godly are oppressed and ouerwhelmed with all kind of miseries, and are as sheepe appointed for the slaughter. It remaines therefore that there must needes be a generall resurrection of all men after this life, that the righteous may obtaine a reward of Gods free mercie, and the wicked vtter shame and confusion. But some will say, it is sufficient that God doe this to the soule of euery man, the bodie needeth not to rise againe. I answer, that the vngodly man doth not worke wickednesse onely in his soule, but his body also is an instrument thereof: and the godly doe not onely practise righteousnes in their soules, but in their bodies also. The bodies of the wicked are the instruments of sin, & the bodies of the righteous are the weapons of righteousnesse: and therefore their bodies must rise againe, that both in bodie and soule they may receiue a reward, according to that which they haue wrought in them. The fourth argument, which is also vsed by
1. Cor. 15. Paul is this: Christ himselfe is risen, and therefore all the faithfull shall rise againe: for he rose not for himselfe as a priuate man, but in our roome and stead, and for vs. If the head be risen, then the members also shal rise againe: for by the same power whereby Christ raised himselfe, he both can and will raise all those that be of his mysticall bodie, he beeing the first fruits of them that sleepe. The fifth argument is taken frō expresse testimonie of Scripture. Iob hath an excellent place for this purpose: I am sure (saith he) that my Redeemer
Iob. 19. 25 liueth, and he shall stand the last on the earth, and though after my skinne wormes destroy this bodie, yet I shall see God in my flesh, whom I my selfe shall see and mine eyes shall behold, and none other for me. And Saint Paul to the Corinthians auoucheth and proueth this point at large, by sundrie arguments which I will not stand to repeat; this one remembred: If (saith he) the dead rise not vers. 14 & 18. againe, then your faith is vaine, our preaching is in vaine, and the godly departed are perished. The sixth argument may be taken frō the order of nature, which ministreth certaine resemblances of the resurrection; which though they be no sufficiēt proofes, yet may they be inducements to the truth. Both Philosophers and also Diuines haue written of the Phœnix, that first shee is cōsumed to ashes by the heat of the sunne, & that afterward of her ashes riseth a yōg one: and on this manner is her kind preserued. Againe swallowes, wormes, & flies, which haue lien dead in the winter season, in the spring, by vertue of the sunnes heat, reuiue again: so likewise men fall in sownes and trances, beeing for a time without breath or shew of life, and yet afterward come againe. And (to vse Pauls example) before the corne can grow and beare fruit, it must first be cast into the ground and there rotte. And if this were not seene by experience, men would not beleeue it. Againe euery present day is as it were dead and buried in the night following, and yet afterward it returnes againe the next morning. Lastly we read how the old Prophets raised some from death: and our Sauiour Christ raised Lazarus among the rest, that had lien foure daies in the graue and stanke: & why then should any thinke it impossible for God to raise al mē to life?

But let vs see what reasons may be alleadged to the contrarie. First it is alleadged that the resurrection of bodies resolued to dust and ashes, is against common sence and reason. Ans. It is aboue reason but not against reason. For impotent and miserable man, as experience sheweth, can by art euen of ashes make the curious worke manship of glasse, why may we not in reason thinke, that the omnipotent and euerliuing God is able to raise mens bodies out of the dust. Secondly it is saide, that mens bodies beeing dead are turned into dust, and so are mingled with the bodies of beasts and other creatures, and one mans bodie with another, and that by reason of this confusion, men can not possibly rise with their owne bodies. Ans. Howesoeuer this is impossible with men, yet it is possible with God. For he that in the beginning was able to create al things of nothing, is much more able to make euery mans bodie at the resurrection of his owne matter, and to distinguish the dust of mens bodies from the dust of beasts: and the dust of one mans bodie from another. The goldsmith by his art can sunder diuers mettals one from another: and some men out of one mettal can drawe another, why then should we thinke it vnpossible for the almightie God to doe the like? It may be further obiected thus: A man is eaten by a woolfe, the woolfe is eaten of a Lyon, the Lyon by the foules of the aire, and the foules of the aire eaten againe by men: againe one man is eaten of another, as it is vsuall among the Cannibals. Nowe the bodie of that man which is turned into so many substances, especially into the bodie of another man, cannot rise againe: and if the one doeth, the other doeth not. Ans. This reason is but a cauill of mans braine: for we must not thinke, that whatsoeuer entreth into the bodie, & is turned into the substance thereof must rise againe and become a part of the body at the day of iudgement: but euery man shall then haue so much substance of his own as shal make his bodie to be entire and perfect: though another mans flesh once eaten bee no part thereof. Againe it is vrged, that because flesh & blood cannot enter into the kingdome of God: therefore the bodies of men shall not rise againe. Ans. By flesh and blood, is not meant the bodies of men simply, but the bodies of men as they are in weakenesse, without glorie, subiect to corruption. For flesh and blood in Scripture, signifies sometime the originall sinne and corruption of nature, and sometime mans nature subiect to miseries & infirmities, or the bodie in corruption before it be glorified, and so it must be vnderstood in this place. Lastly it is obiected, that Salomon saith, The condition of the children of men, and the condition of beasts are euen as one condition. Nowe beasts rise not againe after this life: and therfore there is no resurrection of men. Ans. In that place Salomon expoundeth himselfe: They are like in dying: for so he saith, as the one dieth, so dieth the other: hee speaketh not of their estate after death.

1. Cor 15. 50.

Eccl. 3. 19.

The second point to be considered, is the cause of the resurrection. In mankinde we must consider two parts, the Elect and the Reprobate; and they both shall rise againe at the day of iudgement, but by diuers causes. The godly haue one cause of their resurrection, and the vngodly an other. The cause why the godly rise againe, is the resurrection of Christ, yea it is the proper cause which procureth and effecteth their resurrection. In the Scripture Adam and Christ are compared togither, and Christ is called the second Adam: these were two rootes. The first Adam was the roote of all mankind, and hee conueieth sinne, and by sinne death to all that sprang of him, Christ onely excepted: the second Adam which is the roote of all the Elect, conueieth life both in bodie and soule to all that are vnited to him: and by the vertue of his resurrection they shall rise againe after this life. For looke as the power of the Godhead of Christ when he was dead in the graue, raised his bodie the third day: so shall the same power of Christ his Godhead, conuey it selfe vnto all the faithfull, which euen in death remaine vnited vnto him, and raise them vp at the last day. And for this cause Christ is called a quickning spirit. Now the cause why the wicked rise againe, is not the vertue of Christs resurrection, but the vertue of Gods curse, set downe in his word: In the day that thou shalt eate of the tree of the knowledge of good and euill, thou shalt die the death, that is, a double death both of bodie and soule. And therefore they arise onely by the power of Christ as he is a iudge, that this sentence may be verified on them; and that they may suffer both in bodie and soule eternall punishment in hell fire.

Furthermore S. Iohn setteth downe the outward meanes whereby the dead shall be raised, namely the voice of Christ: The houre shall come (saith he) in which all that are in the graue shall heare his voice, and they shall come forth. For as he created all things by his word, so at the day of iudgement by the same voice al shal be raised againe. This may be a good reason to moue vs to heare the ministers of God reuerently: for that which they teach, is the very word of God: and therefore wee are to pray that it may be as effectuall in raising vs vp from the graue of sinne in this life, as it shal be after this life, in raising vs vp from the graue of death vnto iudgement.

that

Thirdly, we are to consider what manner of bodies shall rise at the last day. Ans. The same bodies for substance: this Iob knew well, when he said, I shall see him at the last day in my flesh, whome I my selfe shall see and none other for me, with these same eyes. Neuertheless the bodies of the elect shall be altered in qualitie, being made incorruptible and filled with glorie.

Iob. 19. 27.

1. Cor. 15. 43.

The last point to be considered, is the end why these bodies shall rise againe. The principall end which God intendeth is his owne glorie, in the manifestation of his iustice and mercie. Now at the last day, when all men shall be raised to iudgement by the voyce of Christ, the godly to life, and the wicked to condemnation; there shall be a full manifestation both of his mercie and iustice: and therefore by consequent a full manifestation of his glory.

Thus much for the doctrines touching the Resurrection: now follow the vses. First it serueth wonderfully for the comfort of all Christian hearts. Dauid speaking not onely of Christ, but also of himselfe, saith most notably: Mine heart is glad, my tongue reioyceth, and my flesh also doth rest in hope. Why so? For (saith he) thou shalt not leaue my soule in graue, neither wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption. Though the dayes of this life be dayes of woe and miserie, yet the day of the resurrection shall be vnto all the children of God a time of reioycing and felicitie, and as Peter saith, It is the time of refreshing. Whosoeuer is now an hungred, shall then eate and be filled with the fruit of the tree of life: and whosoeuer is now naked, shall be then cloathed with the white garments dipped in the bloud of the Lambe: and whosoeuer is now lame, shall haue all his members restored perfectly. And as this day is ioyfull to the godly, so on the contrarie it is a day of woe and miserie to the vngodly: as Saint Iohn saith, They that haue done euill shall come forth to the resurrection of condemnation. If they might cease to liue after this life, and dye as the beast doth, o then it would be well with them: for then they might haue an ende of their miserie: but the wicked must after this life rise againe to condemnation, which is the accomplishment of their eternall woe and wretchednes; a rufull and dolefull case to consider, and yet is it the state of all vnbeleeuing and vnrepentant sinners. If a man were bidden to goe to bed, that after hee had slept & was risen againe, he might go to execution, it would make his heart to ake within him: yet this, yea a thousand fold worse is the state of all impenitēt sinners: they must sleepe in the graue for a while, and then rise againe, that a second death may be inflicted vpon thē in bodie and soule, which is the suffering of the full wrath of God both in body and soule, eternally. This being so, let vs imbrace the good counsell of S. Peter, who saith, Amend your liues and turne, that your sinnes may be done away when the time of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord. If a man die repentant for his sinnes, it is a day of refreshing; but if he die in his sinnes, impenitent, and hard hearted, it is a day of eternall horrour, desperation, and confusion.

Psal. 16. 9.

Act. 3. 19.

a Aug. in Enchir. cap. 91.

Ioh. 5. 29.

Act 3. 19.

Againe, if we beleeue that our bodyes shall rise againe after this life, & stand before God at the last day of iudgement, we must daily enter into a serious consideration of this time, and haue in minde that one day we must meete the Lord face to face. A traueller comes into an Inne hauing but a penny in his purse, he sits down and cals for all store of prouision & dainties: now what is to be thought of him? surely in the iudgement of all men his behauiour betokens folly, or rather madnes. But why? becaus̄e he spends freely and hath no regard to the reckening which must follow: how foolish then and mad is the practise of euery man that liueth in his sinnes, bathing himselfe in his pleasures in this world, neuer bethinking how he shal meete God at the last day of iudgment, and there make reckening for al his doings? An ancient diuine writes of himselfe that this saying ran in his minde, and sounded alwaies in his eares: Arise ye dead and come vnto iudgement. And this ought alwaies to be sounding in our eares, that while we haue time we should prepare our selues to meete God at the last day. Hierome.

Thirdly, if we beleeue the resurrection of the bodie, wee are not to weepe and mourne immoderatly for our friends deceased. Our Sauiour Christ did weepe for Lazarus, and when Steuen was stoned to death, certaine men that feared God buried him, and made great lamentation for him: and therefore mourning is not condemned: and we must not be as stockes, that are bereft of all compassion: yet remember we must, what S. Paul saith to the Thessalonians: I would not, brethren, haue you ignorant concerning those which are asleepe, that yee sorrow not, as others which haue no hope. For the godly man properly dyeth not, but layes himselfe downe to take a sleepe after his manifold labours in this life; which being ended, he must rise againe to ioyes euerlasting: and therefore we must needes moderate and mingle our mourning for the deceased, with this and such like comforts,

2. Thes. 4. 13.

Fourthly, wee are taught hence to labour and striue against the naturall feare of death: for if there be a resurrection of our bodies after this life, then death is but a passage or middle way from this life to eternall life. If a beggar should be commanded to put off his olde ragges, that he might be cloathed with rich and costly garments, would he be sorrie because he should stand naked a while till he were wholly bestripped of his rags? No surely: well, thus doth God when he calls a man to death: he bids him put off his olde rags of sinne and corruption, and be cloathed with the glorious robe of Christs righteousnes: and our aboad in the graue is but for a space, while corruption be put off. This is Pauls argument, saying, We know that when our earthly house of this tabernacle shall be dissolued, we haue a building giuen of God, which is an house not made with hands but eternall in the heauens.

Fiftly, whereas the godly are subiect to manifold afflictions and miseries, both in body and minde in this life, here they shall finde a sufficient stay to quiet and calme their minds, if they consider that after this short life is ended, there will ensue a ioyfull resurrection. Iob in the extremitie of all his temptations, made this the comfort to his soule, that one day he should rise againe, in which he should enioy the glorious presence of his Creator. And the holy Ghost saith, that the seruants of God in the dayes of Antiochus were racked and tormented, and would not be deliuered: why so? because they looked for a better resurrection.

Heb. 11. 35

Lastly, the consideration of this point serueth to be a bridle to restraine a man from sinne, and a spurre to make him goe forward in all godlines of life and conuersation. Saint Paul had hope toward God, that the resurrection of the dead should be both of the iust and vniust. Now what did this mooue him vnto? Marke: Herein (saith he, [a] that is, in this respect) I endeauour my selfe alwayes to haue a cleare conscience towards God and towards men. And let vs for our parts likewise remember the last iudgement, that it may be a meanes to mooue vs so to behaue our selues in all our actions, that we may keepe a good conscience before God and before men: and let it also be a bridle vnto vs to keepe vs back from all manner of sinne. For what is the cause why me daily defile their bodies & soules with so many damnable practises, without any remorse of conscience? Surely they neuer seriously remember the day of the resurrection after this life, wherein they must stand before Christ to giue an account of that which they haue done in this life, whether it be good or bad.

Act. 24. 16

[a] Or, in the meane season.

Thus much of the duties: now marke it is further said, The resurrection of the bodie. If the body rise, it must first fall. Here then this point is wrapped vp as a confessed truth, that all men must die the first death And yet considering that the members of the Church haue the pardon of their sinnes which are the cause of death, it may be demanded, why they must die? Ans. We are to know that when they die, death doth not seaze vpon them, as it is in his owne nature, a curse: for in that respect it was borne of Christ vpon the crosse, and that for vs: but for two other causes, which we must thinke vpon, as being speciall meanes to make a man willing to die. I. They must die that originall corruption may be vtterly abolished: for no man liuing on earth is perfectly sanctified; and originall sinne is remaining for speciall causes to the last moment of this life, and then it is abolished and not before. II. The godly die that by death as by a strait gate they may passe from this vale of miserie to eternall life. And thus Christ by his death makes death to be no death, and turnes a curse into a blessing.

And to proceede: It is not here said, the resurrection of the soule, but of the bodie onely: what then (will some say) becommeth of the soule? Diuers haue thought, that the soules then, though they doe not die, yet are still kept within the bodie (being as it were asleepe) till the last day. But Gods word saith to the contrary. For the soules of the godly lie vnder the altar, and crie, how long Lord Iesus? Dives in soule did suffer the woe and torments of hell: and Lazarus had ioy in Abrahams bosom. Againe gaine some others thinke, that mens soules after this life doe passe from one mans bodie to another: and Herod may seeme to haue beene of this opinion: for when newes was brought him of Christ, he saide, that Iohn Baptist being beheaded was risen againe, thinking that the soule of Iohn Baptist was put into the body of some other man. And for proofe hereof, some alledge the Example of Nabuchadnezzar, who forsaking the societie of men, liued as beastes, and did eate grasse like a beast: & they imagine that his owne soule went out of him, and that the soule of a beast entred into the roome thereof. But this indeede is a fond conceit: for euen then hee had the soule of a man when he liued as a beast, being onely stricken by the hande of God with an exceeding madnesse, whereby he was bereft of common reason, as doth appeare by that clause in the text, where it is said, that his vnderstanding, or knowledge returned to him againe. Againe, some other think, that the soule neither dieth nor sleepeth, nor passeth out of one body into another, but wandreth here on earth among men, and oftentimes appeareth to this or that man: and this is the opinion of some Heretickes, and of the common people, which thinke that dead men walke: and for proofe hereof some alleadge the practise of the Witch of Endor, who is said to make Samuel to appeare before Saul: but the trueth is, it was not Samuel indeede, but onely a counterfeit of him. For not all the witches in the worlde, nor all the deuils in hell are able to disquiet the soules of the faithfull departed, which are in the keeping of the Lorde without wandring from place to place. For when men die in the faith, their soules are immediately translated into heauen, and there abide till the last iudgement: and contrariwise if men die in their sinnes, their soules goe straight to the place of eternall condemnation, and there abide as in a prison, as Peter saith. In a word, when the breath goeth out of the bodie, the soule of euery man goeth straight either to heauen or hell; and there is no third place of aboad mentioned in Scripture.

Rev. 6. 9.

Luk. 16. 23

Mat. 14. 2.

Dan. 4. 33.

To conclude, the resurrection of the bodie is expresly mentioned in the Creed, to shew that there is no resurrection of the soule, which neither dieth, nor sleepeth, but is a spirituall and inuisible substance, liuing and abiding for euer as well foorth of the bodie as in the same.

Thus much of the third prerogatiue or benefit: now followeth the fourth & last, in these wordes, And life euerlasting. To handle this point to the full, and to open the nature of it, as it deserueth, is not in the power of man. For both the Prophet Esai & Saint Paul say, that the eye hath not seene and the eare hath not heard, neither came it into mans heart to thinke of those things which God hath prepared for those that loue him. Againe, Paul when hee was rapt into the third heauen saith, that he sawe things not to be vttered. Neuertheless we may in some part describe the same, so far forth as God in this case hath reuealed his will vnto vs. Wherefore in this last prerogatiue, I consider two things; the first is, Life it selfe, the second is the Continuance of life, noted in the word euerlasting. Life it selfe, is that whereby any thing acteth, liueth, and moueth it selfe: and it is twofold, vncreated or created. Vncreated life is the very godhead it selfe, whereby God liueth absolutely in himselfe, from himselfe, and by himselfe, giuing life and beeing to all things that liue and haue beeing: and this life is not meant here, because it is not communicable to any creature. Created life is a qualitie in the creature, & its againe two-folde: naturall, spiritual. Natural life is that whereby men in this worlde liue by meate and drinke, & all such meanes as are ministred by gods prouidence. Spirituall life is that most blessed and happie estate, in which all the elect shall raigne with Christ their head in the heauens after this life, and after the daie of iudgement for euer and euer. And this alone is the life which in the Creed we confesse & beleeue: and it consisteth in an immediate coniunction & communion or fellowship with God himselfe: as Christ in his solemne praier to his father a little before his death, signifieth: I pray not for these alone, but for them also which shal beleeue in me through thy word, that they all may be one as thou, O father art in me and I in thee, euen that they may be one also in vs. And whē S. Iohn in the Reuelation saith, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himselfe shall be their God with them: he sheweth that the very foundation of that happines which God hath prepared for his seruants stāds in a societie between God and them, whereby God shall dwell with them in heauen, and they againe shall there enioy his glorious presence.

2. Cor. 12. 4

Ioh. 17. 21

Reu. 21. 3.

Touching this cōmunion, three points must muſt be conſidered. The firſt is, in what order men ſhall haue fellowſhippe with God? Anſ. This communion ſhall be firſt of all with Chriſt as he is man; and by reaſon that the manhood of Chriſt is perſonally vnited to the godhead of the ſonne, it ſhal alſo be with Chriſt as he is God; and conſequently with the father and the holy Ghoſt. The reaſon of this order is, becauſe Chriſt, though he be the author and the fountaine of eternall life as he is God, yet he conueies the ſame vnto vs onely in and by his fleſh or manhoode. Yet muſt wee not here thinke that life proceedeth from the manhood it ſelfe, as from a cauſe efficient: for the fleſh quickeneth not by any vertue from it ſelfe, but by the word to which it is perſonally vnited; it beeing as it were a pipe eternally to conueie life frō the godhead vnto vs,

The ſecond point is, in what thing this communion conſiſteth? Anſ. Saint Paul openeth this point to the very full, when he ſaith, that after Chriſt hath ſubdued all things vnto him, then God ſhall be all in all, that is, God himſelfe immediately ſhall be all good things that heart can wiſh to all the elect. But ſome may ſay, What? is not God all in all vnto vs euen in this life? for whatſoeuer good things we haue, they are all from him. Anſ. It is true indeede god is all in all euen in this life: but howe? not immediately but by outward meanes; and that alſo in ſmall meaſure. For he conueies his goodneſſe and mercie vnto vs ſo long as we liue on earth, partly by his creatures and partly by his word and Sacraments: but after this life is ended, all helpes and outward meanes ſhall ceaſe: Chriſt ſhall giue vp his kingdome, and as he is Mediatour ſhall ceaſe to put in execution the office of a prieſt, a prophet, or a king: all authoritie and power ſhall be aboliſhed: and therfore all callings in the three maine eſtates of the Church, the Commonwealth, the familie ſhal haue an ende; there ſhall be no more magiſtrate and ſubiect, Paſtour and people, maſter and ſeruant, father and ſonne, husband and wife: there ſhall be no more vſe of meate, drinke, clothing, reſpiration, phyſicke, ſleepe: and yet for all this, the condition of men ſhall be many thouſand-fold more bleſſed then euer it was. For the Godhead in the Trinity immediately without all meanes ſhall bee all things to all the choſen people of God in the kingdome of heauen, world without ende. This may ſeeme ſtrange to mans reaſon, but it is the very flatte trueth of the word of God. Saint Iohn in the deſcription of the heauenly Hieruſalem, ſaith that there ſhall bee no temple in it. Why, howe then ſhall God be worſhipped? marke what followeth, the Lord God almightie and the Lambe are the temple of it. Reu. 21. 22. Wherby it is ſignified, that although now we vſe the preaching of the word, and the adminiſtration of the Sacramēts, as meanes of our fellowſhip with God: yet when this life is ended, they muſt all ceaſe, God and Chriſt beeing inſtead of all theſe meanes vnto vs. And he adds further, the citty hath no neede of the ſunne, nor of the moone to ſhine in it. What then will ſome ſay, muſt there be nothing but darkenes? Not ſo. For the glory of God doeth lighten it, and the Lambe is the light of it. verſ. 23. Againe he ſaith, that in the paradiſe of God, there is the riuer of Water of life, Chap. 22. 2 and the tree of life bearing fruite euery moneth, and that is Chriſt. And therefore we ſhall haue no neede of meate, drinke, apparell, ſleepe, &c. but Chriſt himſelfe our head and Redeemer ſhall bee in ſtead of them all vnto vs: on whome, al the elect ſhall feede, and by whome both in bodie and ſoule they ſhall be preſerued euermore. If a man would haue glorie, the Father, ſonne, and holy Ghoſt ſhall be his glorie: if a man deſire wealth and pleaſure, God himſelfe ſhal be wealth and pleaſure vnto him, and whatſoeuer elſe the heart of man can wiſh. Hence it appeares, that this communion is moſt admirable; and that no tongue can tell, nor heart conceiue the leaſt part of it.

1. Cor. 15. 28.

The third point is, touching the benefits or prerogatiues that proceede of this communion, and they are in number ſixe. The firſt is, an abſolute freedome from all wants. In the minde there ſhal be nō ignorance, no vnbeliefe, no diſtruſt in God, no ambition, no enuie, anger, nor carnall luſt, nor terrour in conſcience, or corrupt affection. In the body there ſhall be no ſoare, no ſickneſſe, nor paine: for God ſhall wipe away all teares from their eies, nay then al defects or wants in bodie or ſoule or in both ſhall be ſupplied, and the whole man made perfect euery way. Reu. 21. 4.

The ſecond is perfect knoweledge of God. In this life the Church and all the ſeruants of God knowe him but in part. Moſes would haue ſeene Gods face, but he was permitted to ſee onely his hinder parts; and as Paul ſaith nowe we know in part, and darkely at through a glaſſe. In 1. Cor. 13. 12.

this life we can no otherwise discerne but as an old man through spectacles: and the creatures, but specially the worde of God and the Sacraments are the spectacles of our minde, wherein we behold his iustice, mercie, loue, &c. and without them wee can discerne litle or nothing: yet after this life, whē that which is perfect is come, and that which is imperfect is abolished, we shal see God as he is to be seene, not as through a glasse, but face to face, and wee shall knowe him as we are knowne of his maiestie, so farre forth as possibly a creature may. God indeede is infinite; & therefore the full knowledge of his maiestie cā no more be comprehended by the vnderstanding of a creature, which is finite, then the sea by a spoone. yet neuertheless God shal be knowne euery way of man, so farre forth as a creature may know the Creator. Now vpon this that the elect haue such fulnesse of knowledge, it may be demaunded, whether men shall knowe one another after this life or no. Ans. This question is oftener mooued by such as are ignorant, then by them that haue knoweledge: and oftentimes it is tossed in the mouthes of them that haue little religion in their hearts: and therefore I answer first, men should rather haue care to seeke how they may come to heauen, then to dispute what they shal do when they are there: the common prouerb is true, it is not good coūting of chickins before they be hatched. Secondly, I say that men in heauen shall knowe each other: yea they shall knowe them which were neuer knowne or seene of them before in this life: which may be gathered by proportion, out of Gods word. Adam in his innocencie knew Eue, whome he had neuer seene before & gaue her a fit name so soone as she was created. And when our Sauiour Christ was transfigured in the mount, Peter knewe Moses and Elias, whome before he had neuer seene: and therefore it is like that the elect shall knowe each other in heauen where their knowledge and their whole estate shall be fully perfited. But whether they shall knowe one another after an earthly manner, as to say this man was my father, this was mine vncle, this my teacher, &c. the word of God saith nothing: and therefore I will be silent, and wee must be content a while to be ignorant in this point.

Gen. 2. 23.

Matth. 17. 4

The third prerogatiue of euerlasting blessednes is, that the Elect shall loue God with as perfect loue as a creature possibly can. The manner of louing God is to loue him for himselfe, & the measure is to loue him without measure: and both shall be found in heauen. For the Saints of God shall haue an actuall fruition of God himselfe, & be as it were swallowed vp with a sea of his loue, and wholly rauished therewith: for which cause, as farre as creatures can they shal loue him againe. Againe, the loue of a thing is according to the knoweledge therof, but in this life God is known of man onely in part, and therefore is loued onely but in part: but after this life, when the Elect shall knowe God fully, they shall loue him without measure: and in this respect loue hath a prerogatiue aboue faith or hope, howesoeuer in some respects againe they goe beyond loue.

The fourth prerogatiue is, that the saints of God keepe a perpetual Sabbath in heauen. In this life it is kept but euery seauenth day, and when it is best of all sanctified, it is done but in part; but in heauen euery day is a sabboth: as the Lord saith by the Prophet Esai, From moneth to moneth, and from Sabbath to Sabbath, all flesh shall come and worship before me: and therefore the life to come shall be spent in the perpetuall seruice of God.

Esa. 66. 23. Heb. 4. 9.

Fifthly, the bodies of the elect after this life in the kingdom of heauen shall be like the glorious bodie of Christ: so Paul saith, Christ Iesus our Lord shal change our vile bodies that they may be like his ghorious bodie. Now the resembance betweene Christs bodie and ours, standeth in these things: as Christs bodie is incorruptible, so shall our bodies be voide of al corruptiō, as Christs bodie is immortall, so ours in the kingdōe of heauen shall neuer die: as Christs bodie is spirituall, so shal ours be made spiritual, as the Apostle saith, It is sowen a naturall bodie, it is raised a spirituall bodie; not because the bodie shall be chaunged into a spirit (for it shall remaine the same in substance, and that for euer: but because it shall be preserued by a spiritual and diuine manner. For in this life it is preserued by meate, drinke, cloathing, sleepe, phyficke, rest, and diet, but afterwarde without all these meanes the life of the bodie shall bee continued, and bodie and soule keepe together by the immediate power of Gods spirit for euer and euer. Thus the bodie of Christ is now preserued in heauen, and so shall the bodies of all the elect be after the day of iudgement. Furthermore as Christs bodie is now a shining bodie, as doeth appeare

Phil 3. 21.

1. Cor. 15. 44.

peare by his transfiguration in the mount, ſo in all likelihood after the reſurrection the bodies of the elect ſhall be ſhining and bright, alwaies remaining the ſame for ſubſtance. Laſtly, as Chriſts body after it roſe againe from the graue, had this propertie of agility beſide ſwiftneſſe, to paſſe from the earth to the third heauen, beeing in diſtance many thouſand miles from vs, and that without violence: ſo ſhall the bodies of the Saints. For beeing glorified, they ſhal be able as wel to aſcend vpward as to goe downeward, & to mooue without violence, and that very ſwiftly.

The ſixth and laſt prerogatiue, is an vnſpeakeable and eternall ioy, as Dauid ſaith: In thy preſence is fulneſſe of ioy: at thy right hand there are pleaſures for euermore. Pſal. 16, 12

It is ſaid that whē Salomon was crowned kmg, the people reioyced exceedingly. If there were ſuch great ioy at his coronation which was but an earthly prince, what ioy then ſhall there be when the Elect ſhal ſee the true Salomon crowned with glory in the kingdome of heauen? It is ſaid that the wiſe men which came from the Eaſt to worſhip Chriſt, when they ſawe the ſtarre ſtanding ouer the place where the babe was, were exceedingly glad: howe much more ſhall the elect reioyce, when they ſhall ſee Chriſt not lying in a maunger, but crowned with immortall glory in the kingdome of heauen? Wherfore this ioy of the elect after this life is moſt wonderfull, and cannot be vttered. 1. kin. 1. 40

The property of life eternall, is to bee an inheritance which God beſtoweth on them which are made his ſonnes in Chriſt, who is the only begotten ſonne of the father. Hence it followes neceſſarily, that in the Scriptures it is called a reward, not becauſe it is deſerued by our workes, as the Church of Rome erronioufly teacheth: but for two other cauſes. Firſt becauſe life eternall is due to al that beleeue by vertue of Chriſts merit. For his righteouſneſſe is made ours by imputation, ſo conſequently the merit thereof is alſo ours: and by it, (all perſonall merits in our ſelues vtterly excluded,) we deſerue or merit eternall happines as a reward; which neuertheleſſe in reſpect of our ſelues is the free & meere gift of God. The ſecond is, becauſe there is a reſemblance betweene eternal life and a reward. For as a reward is giuē to a workeman after his worke is done; ſo euerlaſting life is giuen vnto men after the trauails and miſeries of this life are ended. Mat 25. 34 Rom 8. 17 Rom. 6, 13

The degrees of life are three. The firſt is in this life, when men beeing iuſtified and ſanctified, haue peace with God. Many imagine, that there is no eternall life till after death: but they are deceiued, for it beginnes in this world: as our Sauiour Chriſt teſtifieth ſaying, Verely, verely I ſay vnto you, he that heareth my wordes, and beleeueth him that ſent me, hath euerlaſting life, & ſhal not come into condemnation, but hath paſſed from death to life. This beeing ſo, we are hence to learne a good leſſon. Conſidering we looke for life euerlaſting after this life, we muſt not deceiue our ſelues, lingring and deferring the time till the laſt gaſpe; but we muſt lay the foundation of life eternall in our ſelues in this world, and haue the earneſt thereof laid vp in our hearts againſt the daie of death. But howe is that done? we muſt repent vs heartily of all our ſinnes, and ſeeke to be aſſured in conſcience that God the father of Chriſt is our father, God the ſonne our redeemer, and God the holy Ghoſt our comforter. For as Chriſt ſaith, this is life eternall to knowe thee the onely God, and whome thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt. And we muſt goe further yet, endeauouring to ſay with Paul, that we liue not, but that Chriſt liueth in vs: which whē we can ſay, we haue in vs the very ſeede of eternall life. The ſecond degree is in the ende of this life, whē the bodie freed from all diſeaſes, paines, & miſeries is laid to reſt in the earth, and the ſoule is receiued into heauen. The third is after the day of iudgement, when body & ſoule reunited ſhall be both aduanced to eternall glorie. Ioh. 5. 24. Ioh. 17. 3. Gal. 2. 20.

Againe in this third degree of life, there be in all likelihood ſundrie degrees of glory. Daniel ſpeaking of the eſtate of the elect after this life, ſaith, They that be wiſe ſhall ſhine as the brightneſſe of the firmament, and they that turne many to righteouſnes ſhall ſhine as the ſtarres for euermore. Nowe wee knowe there is difference betweene the brightneſſe of the firmament and the brightneſſe of the ſtarres. Againe there be degrees of torments in hell, as appeares by the ſaying of Chriſt, It ſhall be eaſier for Tyrus and Sydon in that day then for this generation: and therefore there be proportinall degrees of glorie. And Paul ſaith, There is one glorie of the ſunne, another glorie of the moone, another glorie of the ſtarres: for one ſtarre differeth from another in glorie: ſo is the reſurrection of the dead. In which wordes he applies the differences of excel- Dan. 12, 3. Math. 11. 22. 1. Cor. 15. 41.

cellencie that be in the creatures, to set forth the differences of glory that shall be in mens bodies after the resurrection. Furthermore, (if we may coniecture) it may be, the degrees of glorie shall be answerable to the diuers measures of gifts and graces bestowed on men in this life, and according to the imployance of them to the glory of God and edification of the Church. And therefore the twelue Apostles who were exceedingly enriched with the giftes of the spirit, and were master-builders of the Church of the newe Testament, shall sit on 12. thrones and iudge the twelue tribes of Israel. But it may be obiected, that if their bee degrees of glory in heauen, some shall want glory. Ans. Not so: though some haue more, and some lesse, yet al shal haue sufficient. Take sundry vessels whereof some are bigger, and some lesse, and cast them all into the sea: some will receiue more water and some lesse, and yet all shall be full and no want in any: and so likewise among the Saints of God in heauen, some shall haue more glorie, some lesse, and yet all without exception full of Glory. And whereas it is alleadged that al the labourers in the vineyard receiue each of them a penny equally for their hire; the answer is, that our Sa-
Math. 20. 9 uiour Christ in that Parable intends not to set foorth the equalitie of celestiall glorie, and what shall be the state of the godly after this life: but the verie drift of the parable is to shewe, that they which are called first, haue no cause to brag or insult ouer others which as yet are vncalled, considering they may be made equall or be preferred before them.

Thus much of life it selfe; now followes the continuance thereof, which the Scriptures haue noted in calling it eternal or euerlasting. And to this ende Paul saith,
2. Tim. 1. 10 that Christ hath abolished death, & brought not only life, but also immortalitie to light by the Gospell. And this very circumstance serues greatly to commend the happinesse of the godly: in that, after they haue made an entrance into it, they shall neuer see tearme of time or end. Suppose the whole world were a sea, and that euery thousand yeares expired, a bird must carry a way, or drinke vp one onely drop of it: in processe of time it will come to passe that this sea though very huge, shal be dried vp, but yet many thousand millions of yeares must be passed before this can be done. Nowe if a man should enioy happinesse in heauen onely for the space of time in which the sea is in drying vp, he would thinke his case most happie and blessed: but behold the Elect shall enioy the kingdome of heauen not onely for that time, but when it is ended, they shall enioy it as long againe: and when all is done, they shall be as farre from the ending of this their ioy, as they were at the beginning.

Hauing thus seene what life euerlasting is, let vs nowe come to the vse of the article. And first of all, if we beleeue that there is an eternall happinesse, and that the same belongs vnto vs, then we must vse this present worlde and all the things therein as though we vsed them not: and whatsoeuer wee doe in this world, yet the eies of our mindes must be alwaies cast toward the blessed estate prepared for vs in heauen. As a pilgrime in a strange land hath alwaies his eies toward his iourneyes ende, and is then griued when by any meanes he is out of the way: so must we alwaies haue our mindes and hearts set on euerlasting life, and be grieued when we are by any way hindred in the straight waie, that leadeth therunto: we haue a notable patterne of this dutie set out vnto vs in the Patriarke Abraham, who beeing called of God, obeyed to goe out into a place, which he should afterward receiue for inheritance, and he went out, not knowing whither he went: and by faith aboade in the land of Canaan, as in a straunge country, and as one that dwelt in tents. Nowe the cause that mooued him was life euerlasting: for the text saith, He looked for a cittie hauing a Heb. 11. 8. foundation, whose builder and maker is GOD. And we ought euery one of vs for our parts to be little affected to the things of this life, neuer setting our hearts vpon them, but vsing them as a pilgrime doth vse his staffe in the way: so long as it is an helpe and stay for him in his iourney, he is content to carrie it in his hande; but so soone as it beginneth to trouble him, hee casteth it away.

Secondly, all that professe the Gospell of Christ, may hence learne to beare the crosses and afflictions which God shall lay on them in this world. It is Gods vsuall manner to beginne corrections in his owne familie vpon his owne children; and as Peter saith, Iudgement beginneth at gods house. Looke as a mother that weanes her child, laieth wormewood or some other bitter thing vpon her breast, to make the child loath the milke: so likewise God makes vs often feele the miseries and crosses of this life, that our loue and liking might be turned from this world and fixed in heauen. As raw flesh is loathsome to the stomacke; so is euery sinner and vnmortified man loathsome vnto God: till the Lord by afflictions mortifie in him the corruptions of his nature, & spetially the loue of this world. But when a man is afflicted how shall he be able to endure the crosse? Surely by resoluing him that the Lord hath prepared life euerlasting for Heb.11.24 him: Thus we read that Moses by faith when he was come to age, refused to be called the sonne of Pharaohs daughter, & choosed rather to suffer aduersitie with the people of God, then to enioy the pleasures of sinne for a season, esteeming the rebuke of Christ greater riches then the treasures of Egypt. But I pray you: what mooued Moses to be of this minde? The reason is added: Because he had respect to the recompence of reward, that is, he had alwaies a speciall regard to life euerlasting, and that was it that made him content and willing to suffer affliction with the people of God. Here then behold a notable president for vs to followe. In which we are taught that the best way to endure afflictions with patience, is to haue an eye to the recompēce of reward: this is it that makes the yoke of Christ easie and lightsome. When it shall please God to bring vnto vs a cup of afflictions and bid vs drinke a draught thereof to the very bottome, the meditation of life eternall must be as sugar in our pockets to sweeten the cuppe withall.

Lastly, if this be true, that God of his goodnesse and endlesse mercie towards mankinde, hath prepared life euerlasting, yet not for all men, but for the elect whose names are written in the booke of life, we must aboue all things in this world seeke to be partakers of the same. Let vs receiue this as from the Lord, and laye it to our hearts, whatsoeuer we doe euening or morning, day or night, whether we be young or olde, rich or poore; first we must seeke for the kingdome of heauen and his righteousnesse. If this benefit were cōmon to all and not proper to the Church, lesse care might be had: but seeing it is proper to some alone, for this very cause let all our studies be to obtaine the beginnings of life euerlasting giuen in this life. For if we haue it not, whosoeuer we be, it had bin better for vs that we had neuer bin borne or that we had bin borne dogs and toades then men: for when they die, there is an end of their miserie; but man, if he loose euerlasting happinesse, hath ten thousand millions of yeares to liue in misere and in the torments of hell: and when that time is ended, he is as farre from the ende of his misery as he was at the beginning. Wherefore I pray you, let not the deuill steale this meditation out of your hearts, but be carefull to repent of all your sinnes and to beleeue in Christ for the pardon of them all; that by this meanes ye may come to haue the pawne and earnest of the spirit concerning life euerlasting, euen in this worlde. What a miserable thing is it, that men should liue longe in this worlde, and not so much as dreame of another till the last gaspe? Let vs not suffer Satan thus to abuse and bewitch vs: for if we haue not eternall life in this worlde, we shall neuer haue it.

Hitherto by Gods goodnesse I haue shewed the meaning of the Creede: nowe to draw to a conclusion, the generall vses which are to be made of it, followe. And first of all we learne by it, that the Church of Rome hath no cause to condemne vs for heretikes: for we do truly hold & beleeue the whole Apostolicall Symbole or Creede, which is an epitome of the Scriptures and the very key of faith. It will be said, that we denie the Popes supremacie, iustification by workes, purgatorie, the sacrifice of the Masse for the sinnes of the quicke and the dead, the inuocation and intercession of Saints, &c. which are the greatest points of religion. It is true indeede, we denie and renounce them as doctrines of deuills: perswading our selues that if they indeed had beene Apostolicall, and the very groundes and pillars of religion, as they are auouched to be, they should in no wise haue beene left forth of the Creede. For it is an ouersight in making a confession of faith, to omit the principal points & rules of faith. It wil be further said, that in the Creede we beleeue the Church, and so consequently are to beleeue all these former pointes which are taught and auouched by the Church: but this defence is foolish. For it takes this for granted, that the church of Rome is the Church here meant which we denie, vnlesse they can proue a particular Church to be vniuersall or Catholike. Nay, I adde further, that the principall groundes of popish popish faith, for which they contend with vs as for life and death; are not mentioned in any other Creeds which were made by the Churches and Councels for many hundred yeares after Christ.

Secondly the Creede serues as a storehouse of remedies against all troubles and temptations whatsoeuer. I. If a man be grieued for the losse of earthly riches, let him consider that he beleeues God to be his Creatour, who will therefore guide and preserue his owne workemanship, and by his prouidence minister all things needefull vnto it. And that he hath not lost the principall blessing of all: in that he hath God to be his father, Christ to be his redeemer, and the holy Ghost to be his comforter: and that considering he lookes for life eternall, he is not to be ouermuch carefull for this life: and that Christ beeing our Lord will not forsake vs being the seruants in his owne house, but will prouide things needfull for vs. II. If any man be grieued in respect of outward disgrace and contempt, let him remember that he beleeues in Christ crucified, and that therefore he is to reioyce in contempt for righteousnesse sake. III. They which are troubled for the decease of friends, are to comfort thēselues in the communion of Saints, & that they haue God the Father and Christ and the holy Ghost for their friends. IV. Against bodily captiuitie, let men consider that they beleeue in Christ their Lord, whose seruice is perfect liberty. V. Against the feare of bodily diseases, we must remēber the resurrection of the body, in which all diseases and infirmities shall be abolished. VI. If a man feare death of the body, let him consider that he beleeues in Christ which died vpon the crosse, who by death hath vanquished death. VII. The feare of persecution is restrained, if we call to remembrance that God is a Father almighty, not onely able but also willing to represse the power of the aduersarie, so farre forth as shall be for the good of his children. VIII. Terrours arising of the consideration of the last iudgement are delaied by remembrance of this, that Christ shall be our iudge who is our redeemer. IX. Feare of damnation is remedied by consideration that Christ dyed to make satisfaction for vs, and now sits at the right hand of his father to make intercession for vs: and by the resurrection of the body to life euerlasting. X. Terrours of conscience for sinne are repressed, if we consider that God is a Father, and therefore much in sparing, and that it is a prerogatiue of the Church to haue remission of sinnes.

Trin-vni Deo gloria.

TO THE RIGHT

Honourable Edward, Lord Russell Earle of

Bedford: Grace and peace be multiplied.

RIght Honourable, if you consider what is one of the chiefest ornaments of this Noble state, vnto which God hath aduanced you: it will appeare, that there is none more excellent then [a] the spirit of grace and prayer. For what doeth your heart affect? would you speake the languages? Behold, by prayer you may speake the most heauenly tongue that euer was, [b] euen the language of Canaan. Would you haue the valour of Knighthood? By prayer you may stand in place where Gods hand hath [c] made a breach, and doe as much as [d] all the chariots and horsemen in a kingdome. Would you enioy Gods blessings which you want? By praier you may (as it were) put your hand into the cofers of Gods treasures [e] and inrich your selfe. Doe you desire the fauour of Monarkes and Princes? By prayer you may come in presence and haue speech with Iehouah the King of heauen and earth. Lastly, would you know, whether now liuing you be dead, that being dead you may liue for euer? By praier a man may know, whether he be dead to sinne, dead to the world, liue to God, liue to Christ and liue eternally.

[a] Zach. 12 12.
[b] Esa. 9. 12 Rom. 15. 6
[c] 1 Sal. 109 22.
[d] Isa. 19. 16 2. King. 2
[e] Mat. 7. 7.

Praier then, being so excellent a point of religion: I am imboldened then to commend this small treatise to your Honour: not so much for it selfe, as because it doth set out the matter and true maner of inuocation of Gods holy name. And I hope for your fauour in accepting of it, the rather, because I doubt not but your desire is to be answerable to your most honourable, and for religion most worthy auncestors, in the care of maintaining & countenancing any good thing that may any way serue for the furthering of the Gospell of Christ.

Now Iesus Christ our Lord, and God euen the Father which hath loued vs, and giuen vs euerlasting consolation, and good hope through grace, stablish your Honour in euery good word and worke to the end.

Your H. to commaund,

William Perkins.

An aduertiſement to the reader.

Good Reader, there was a booke of late publiſhed in London vnder this title, PERKINS, vpon the Lords praier. In it I haue double iniurie, First it was printed without my knowledge or conſent. And ſecodly the booke is faulty both in the matter and manner of writing. In the matter, theſe things are not well ſet downe.

First the commandement of prayer, very eaſily to be kept. p. 3. b.

2. Prayer is the reſtauration of the Goſpell. 7. b.

3. The three firſt petitions concerne Gods glory; the three latter, the meanes of Gods glorie. 1. b.

4. Gods name taken for his deitie, and not for his attributes or titles. 15. b.

5. A man muſt pray for the day of his death. 26. a.

6. Repentance is ſufficient not onely to bring a true faith, but alſo to renewe it. 34. a.

7. A leſſon in the Lords praier taken out of Popery. 45. a.

8. The doctrine of ſatisfaction for ſinne is a moſt vile doctrine. 52. b.

9. God and the deuill agree in the manner of temptation. 61. b.

10. God offereth men the occaſion to ſinne. 62. a.

Likewiſe the manner of writing hath other faults.

First, in the middle of the Lords prayer there is placed a diſcourſe of the Lords ſupper.

2. The ende of the Lords prayer is not expounded at all but friuolouſly.

3. There are very many places, which haue no common reaſon in them, as

First, Gods angels doe his will in countenance. 39. b.

2. Our daily bread is communicating bread. 45. b.

3. To walke before God in the trueth of the ſatisfaction of Gods iuſtice. 51. a.

4. To purge a cleare conſcience. 51. b.

5. The pages 65, 66, 67 are ſo penned, as the reader cannot know what was my meaning.

Now, conſidering by this vngodly practiſe, Chriſtian and well diſpoſed people are much abuſed, to omit the iniurie done to my ſelfe, I thought it my dutie to make a redreſſe by publiſhing this treatiſe according as the points therein were deliuered: otherwiſe I was not willing to haue ſet downe any thing in the way of Expoſition of the Lords prayer: becauſe it is already ſufficiently performed by others.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE LORDS PRAYER, in the way of Catechisme: ſerving for ignorant people, by W. Perkins.

Matth. 6. v. 9.

After this manner therefore pray ye:

Our Father, &c.

THe occaſion, and ſo alſo the coherence of theſe wordes with the former is this. The Euangeliſt Matthew ſetting downe the ſermons and ſayings of our Sauiour Chriſt, keepes not this courſe to propound euery thing as it was done or ſpoken; but ſometime he ſets downe that firſt, which was done laſt, and that laſt which was done before: according as the ſpirit of God directed him. Which thing is verified in theſe words, where the prayer is mentioned; yet the occaſion wherefore our Sauiour Chriſt taught his Diſciples to pray, is not here ſpecified. But in S. Luk. 11. 1. the occaſion of theſe words is euident. For there it is ſaid that the diſciples of our Sauiour knowing that Iohn taught his diſciples to pray, made requeſt to their maſter that he would do the ſame to them likewiſe.

Theſe fewe words ſet before the praier are a commandement, and it preſcribes vnto vs two duties: the firſt, to pray: the ſecond, to pray after the manner following. Touching the firſt point, conſidering very fewe among the people know how to pray aright, we muſt learne what it is to pray.

To make prayer is to put vp our requeſt to God according to his word from a contrite heart in the name of Chriſt, with aſſurance to be heard.

For the better opening of theſe words, we are to conſider ſixe queſtions. The firſt is, to whome we are to pray. The anſwer is, to God alone. Rom. 10. 14. Howe ſhall they call on him in whome they haue not beleeued? &c. Marke how inuocation and faith are linked togither. And Pauls reaſon may be framed thus: in whome wee put our affiance or beleefe, to him alone muſt we pray: but wee beleeue onely in God: therefore we muſt onely pray to him. As for Saints or angels, they are in no wiſe to be called vpon, becauſe not the leaſt title of Gods word preſcribes vs ſo to doe: becauſe they cannot heare our prayers, & diſcerne what are the thoughts and deſires of our hearts: and becauſe inuocation is a part of diuine worſhip, and therefore peculiar to God alone.

Obiect. What neede any man pray vnto God, conſidering he knowes what we want before we aſke, and is ready and willing to giue that which we craue? Anſw. We pray not for this ende to manifeſt our caſe to God, as though he knew it not, or to winne and procure his fauour & good will, but for other weighty endes. Firſt, that we might ſhew our ſubmiſſion and obedience to God, becauſe he hath giuen vs a direct commandement to pray, and it muſt be obeied. Secondly, that we may by inuocation ſhew forth that we doe indeed beleeue and repent: becauſe God hath made the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes and of all good bleſſings to ſuch as doe indeede repent and humble themſelues vnder the hand of God, and by true faith apprehend & apply the promiſes of God vnto themſelues. Thirdly, we pray to God that we may (as our dutie is) acknowledge him to be the fountaine, author, and giuer of euery good thing. Laſtly, that we might eaſe our minds by powring out our hearts before the Lord: for to this ende hath he made moſt ſweete and comfortable promiſes. Prou. 16. 3. Pſal. 37. 5.

Obiect. What neede men vſe praier, conſidering God in his eternall counſell hath certenly determined what ſhall come to paſſe? Anſw. As God determines what things ſhal come to paſſe: ſo he doth withall determine the meanes wherby the ſame things are effected. Before all worldes God decreed that men ſhould liue vpon earth, and he decreede likewiſe, that meate, drinke drinke and cloathing ſhould be vſed that life might be preſerued. Nowe prayer is one of the moſt excellent meanes whereby ſundrie things are brought to paſſe: therefore Gods eternall counſell touching things to come, doth not exclude prayer and like meanes, but rather include and implie the ſame.

The ſecond queſtion is, what kind of action prayer is? Anſ. It is no lip-labour: it is the putting vp of a ſuit vnto God, and this action is peculiar to the very heart of a man. Rom. 8. 26. The ſpirit makes requeſt for vs. But how? with groanes in the heart. Exod. 14. 15. the Lord ſaith to Moſes Why crieſt thou? yet there is no mention made that Moſes ſpake any word at all: the Lord no doubt, accepted the inward mourning and deſire of his heart for a cry. Pſal. 38. 10. and 11. 4.

The third queſtion is, what is the forme or rule according to which we are to pray? Anſ. It is the reuealed will and word of God. A man in humbling his ſoule before God, is not to pray as his affections carry him, and for what he liſt: but all is to be done according to the expreſſe word. So as thoſe things which God hath commanded vs to aske, we are to aske, and thoſe things which he hath not commanded vs to aske, we are in no wiſe to pray for. 1. Ioh. 5. 14. This is the aſſurance which we haue of him, that if we aske any thing according to his will, he heareth vs. This then is a ſpecial clauſe to be marked, that men muſt pray in knowledge, not in ignorance. Here waie the caſe of poore ignorāt people: they talke much of praying for themſelues & others, they imagine that they pray very deuoutly to God: but alas they doe nothing leſſe, becauſe they know not what to aske according to Gods will. They therefore muſt learne Gods word, and pray according to the ſame, els it will prooue in the ende that all their praying was nothing but as mocking, and flat diſhonouring of God.

The fourth queſtion is, with what affection a man muſt pray? Anſ. Praier muſt proceed from a broken & contrite heart. This is the ſacrifice which God accepteth. Pſal. 51. 17. When Ahab abaſed himſelfe, though he did it in hypocriſie, yet God had ſome reſpect vnto it. 1. King. 21. 29. ſaith the Lord to Eliah, Seeſt thou how Ahab is hũbled before mee? This contrition of heart ſtands in two things. The firſt of them is a liuely feeling of our owne ſinne, miſerie, & wretched eſtate, how that we are compaſſed about with innumerable enemies, euen with the deuill and his angels, and within abound euen with huge ſeas of wants and rebellious corruptions, whereby we moſt grieuouſly diſpleaſe God, and are vile in our owne eies. Beeing therefore thus beſet on euery ſide, we are to be touched with the ſenſe of this our great miſerie. And he that wil pray aright, muſt put on the perſon and the very affection of a poore wretched begger, & certenly not beeing grieued with the rufull condition in which we are in our ſelues, it is not poſſible for vs to pray effectually. Pſal. 130. 1. Out of the deepes I called vpon thee ô Lord: that is, when I was in my greateſt miſerie, and as it were not farre from the gulfes of hell, then I cried to God. Iſa. 26. 16. Lord in trouble haue they viſited thee, they powred out a praier when thy chaſtening was vpon them. 1. Sam. 1. 15. I am a woman (ſaith Anna) of an hard ſpirit: that is a troubled ſoule, and haue powred my ſoule before the Lord. Hence it appeareth, that the ordinarie praiers of moſt men grieuouſly diſpleaſe God, ſeeing they are made for faſhion only, without any ſence and feeling of their miſeries: commonly men come with the Phariſie in oſtentation of their integritie, and they take great paines with their lippes, but their hearts wander from the Lord. The ſecond thing required in a contrite heart, is a longing deſire and hungring after Gods graces and benefits whereof we ſtand in neede. It is not ſufficient for a man to buckle as it were, and to goe crooked vnder his ſinnes & miſeries; but alſo he muſt haue a deſire to be eaſed of them, and to be enriched with graces needefull.

Thus Hezekias the King, and the prophet Iſaiah the ſonne of Amos prayed againſt Senacherib, and cried vnto heauen, 2. Chron. 32. 10. where we may ſee what a marueilous deſire they had to obtaine their requeſt. So alſo, Rom. 8. 16. The ſpirit maketh requeſt with grones, ſo great that they cannot be vttered, as they are felt. Dauid Pſal. 143. 6. ſaith, That he deſireth after the Lord, as the thirſtie land. Now we know that the ground parched with heate, opens it ſelfe in rifts and cranies, and gapes towards heauen as though it would deuoure the cloudes for want of moiſture, and thus muſt the heart be diſpoſed to Gods grace, till it obtaine it. The people of Iſrael beeing in grieuous affliction, howe doe they pray? They powre out their soules like water before the face of the Lord. Lament. 2. 19.

The first question is, in whose name prayer must be made. Ans. It must not be made in the name of any creature, but onely in the name and mediation of Christ. Ioh. 14. 14. If you aske any thing in my name I will doe it. A man is not to present his prayers to God in any worthines of his owne merits. For what is he to make the best of himselfe, what can he make of himselfe? by nature he is no better then the very firebrand of hell, and of all Gods creatures on earth the most outragious rebell to god, and therefore cannot be heard for his owne sake. As for Saints, they can be no mediatours, seeing euen they themselues in heauen are accepted of God not for themselues, but onely for the blessed merits of Christ. If any man sinne (saith Saint Iohn 1. epist. chap. 2. 1.) we haue an aduocate with the father Iesus Christ. But howe prooues he this? It followes then, And he is the reconciliation for our sinnes. His reason stands thus: He which must be an aduocate, must first of all bee a reconciliation for vs; no saints can be a reconciliation for vs; therefore no Saints can be aduocates. Therefore in this place is manifest an other fault of ignorant people. They crie often, Lord helpe me, Lord haue mercie vpon me. But in whose name pray they? poore soules like blind bayards they rush vpon the Lord, they knowe no mediatour in whose name they should present their praiers to him. Litle do they consider with themselues, that God is as well a most terrible Iudge, as a mercifull father.

The sixt question is; Whether faith be requisite to praier or not. Ans. Prayer is to be made with faith, whereby a man must haue certen assurance to be heard. For he that praieth must steadfastly beleeue, that God in Christ will grant his petition. This affiance being wanting, it maketh praier to be no praier. For how can he pray for any thing effectually, who doubteth whether hee shall obtaine it or no?

Wherfore it is an especiall point of praier, to be perswaded, that God to whome praier is made, not onely can, but also will grant his request. Mar. 11. 24. Whatsoeuer ye desire when ye praie, beleeue that yee shall haue it, and it shall be done vnto you. Here we see two things required in praier: the first, a desire of the good things which we want: the second is faith, whereby we beleeue that God will grant the things desired. The ground of this faith is reconciliation with God, and the assurance thereof. For vnlesse a man be in conscience in some measure perswaded that all his sinnes are pardoned, and that he standes reconciled to God in Christ, he cannot beleeue any other promises reuealed in the word, nor that any of his praiers shall be heard.

Thus much of the definition of praier: nowe let vs see what vse may be made of this commandement, Pray ye thus. Seeing our Sauiour commands his disciples, and so euen vs also to pray to god, it is our dutie not only to present our praiers to god, but also to doe it cheerefully & earnestly. Rom. 15. 30. Also brethren I beseech you that ye would striue with me by praiers to God for me. What is the cause why the Lord doeth often defer his blessings after our praiers? No cause, but that he might stirre vs vp to be more earnest to crie vnto the Lord. Exod. 32. 10. When Moses praied to God in the behalfe of the Israelites, the Lord answers, Let me alone as though his praiers did bind the Lord, and hinder him from executing his iudgements: wherefore this is good aduise, for all christian men to continue and to be zealous in praier. If thou be an ignorant man, for shame learne to praie, seeing it is Gods commandement, make conscience of it. We se that there is no man, vnlesse he be desperately wicked, but will make some conscience of killing and stealing: and why is this? Because it is Gods commandement, Thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not steale.

Well then, this also is Gods commandement, to pray. Let this consideration breed in thee a conscience of this dutie, & although thy corrupt nature shall draw thee away from it, yet striue to the contrary, and know it certainly, that the breach of this commandement makes thee as well guiltie of damnation before God as any other. Furthermore, this must be a motiue to pricke thee forward to this dutie, that as God commands vs to pray, so also he giues the spirit of praier, whereby the commandement is made easie vnto vs. If the Lord had commanded a thing impossible, then there had bene some cause of discoutagement, but commanding a thing through the grace of his spirit verie easie and profitable: how much more are we bound to obedience of the same? Againe gaine, praier is the key whereby we open the treasures of God. and pull downe his mercies vpon vs. For as the preaching of the word serues to declare and to conuey vnto vs Gods graces: so in praier we come to haue a liuely feeling of the same in our hearts. And further, this must mooue vs to praier, seeing in that wee haue familiaritie with Gods maiestie. It is an high fauour for a man to be familiar with a prince; howe much more then to be familiar with the king of kings the mightie Iehoua? This then can be no burthen or trouble vnto vs, beeing one of the many prerogatiues that God bestowes on his Church. For in the preaching of the word, it pleased God to talke to vs, and in praier, God doth vouchsafe vs this honour, to speake and as it were familiarly to talke with him, not as to a fearefull Iudge, but as to a louing and mercifull God.

Consider also that praier is a worthy meanes of defence, not onely to vs, but also to the Church and them that are absent. By it Moses stood in the breach, which Gods wrath had made into the people of Israel, and staied the same, Psal. 106. 23. By this, Christian men fight as valiant champions against their owne corruptions, and all other spirituall enemies, Eph. 6. 18. Infinite were it to shewe how many blessings the Lord had bestowed on his seruants by praier. In a word, Luther, whome it pleased God to vse as a worthie instrument for the restoring of the gospell, testifieth of himselfe, that hauing this grace giuen him to call vpon the name of the Lord, he had more reuealed vnto him of Gods truth by praier, then by reading and studie.

The second point of the commandement, is to praie after the manner propounded in the Lords praier. Where it is to be noted, that the Lords praier is a direction, and as it were a samplar to teach vs how & in what manner we ought to praie. None is to imagine that we are bound to vse these words only, and none other. For the meaning of Christ is not to bind vs to the word, but to the matter and to the manner, and to the like affections in praying. If this were not so, the praiers of gods seruants set down in the bookes of the old & new Testament, should all be faultie, because they are not set downe in the very same words with the Lords praier, nay this praier is not set down in the same words altogither by Matthew & Luke.

And whereas sundrie men in our Church, hold it vnlawfull to vse this very forme of wordes as they are set downe by our Sauiohr Christ for a praier; they are far deceiued, as will appeare by their reasons. First (say they) it is Scripture, and therefore not to be vsed as a prayer. I answer, that the same thing may be the scripture of God, and also the prayer of man, els the praiers of Moses, David, and Paul, beeing set downe in the scriptures, cease to be praiers. Againe (say they) that in praier we are to expresse our wants in particular, and the graces which we desire: now in these words all things to be praied for, are onely in generall propounded. I answer, that the maine wants that are in any man, and the principall graces of God to be desired, are set downe in the petitions of this praier in particular. Thirdly, they plead that the patterne to make all praiers by, should not be vsed as a praier. I answer, that therefore the rather it may be vsed as a praier, and sure it is that ancient and worthie Diuines haue reuerenced it as a praier, choosing rather to vse these wordes then any other, at Cyprian. Serm. de orat. Dominic. And Tertullian. lib. de fuga in persequutione. And August. Serm. 126. de tempore. Wherefore the opinion is full of ignorance and errour.

Well whereas our Sauiour first giues a commandement to pray, and then after giues a direction for the keeping of it, this he doth to stirre up our dulnes, and to allure vs by al meanes to the heauenly exercise of praier: wherefore still I say, imploy your selues in praier feruently and continually, and if you can not doe it, learne to pray. Thus much of the commandement of our Sauiour Christ; now follow the words of the praier.

Our Father which art, &c.
